Notices.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION of the National' Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

THE MISSOURI State meeting will be held on the 16th and 17th of October in some town on the Hannibal and St. Joseph railroad not fixed upon at our latest information.

ELDER D. I. RATHBUN announces that he has returned to Iowa to remain until after the State Convention, the Lord willing. His address will be Clarence, Cedar County, Iowa, are Alvin Hall. Arrangements can also be made for lectures with James McCleey of Marshalltown. Let Iowa be thoroughly canvassed this winter. Send for Bro. Rathbun.

MICHIGAN.

Friends of reform in Michigan will please take due notice that the State meeting will be held about the third week in November. Place to be agreed upon after hearing from our friends. Jackson City does not afford us a suitable house, none but Free Methodist church, and inasmuch as we want Ronayne to work the degrees, we think it best to have a large hall. Let us hear from all.

E. MATHEWS, Sec'y.

Brooklyn, Mich.

INDIANA.

The Sixth Annual State Convention of Indiana opposed to secret societies, will meet at Spiceland, Henry county, Oct. 9, 1878; commencing on the evening of the 9th and closing on the evening of the 11th. Elder D. P. Rathbun and other prominent speakers are expected to be present. We greatly desire and fondly hope that there be a full representation from both county associations and all Christians, who are workers in this cause, and who sympathize with this work, and are friendly to the reform.

And dear brethren, remember this is for Christ, no sacrifice should be deemed too great made to honor him and his cause.

Delegates to the convention coming by way of railroad will be met with conveyances at both Newcastle and Dunreith.

Signed on behalf of the executive committee.

DR. G. W. CHAMP, Chairman.

—Bro. Isaac Hyatt, of Ea Hamlin, New York, wishes copies of the Cynosure of January 8, 1878, for a special and good use. Any friends having copies will confer a favor on him and aid the reform by sending them.

WISCONSIN.

To the friends of Christian reform in Wisconsin:—The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will, D. V., hold its annual meeting at Waupun, to commence Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and to continue through Wednesday and Thursday, the 30th and 31st. It is expected that Past Master Ronayne will work the degrees of Masonry, and other speakers will be in attendance. Entertainment will be provided for those from abroad. J. W. WOOD, Pres.

H. H. HINMAN, Agent for Wis.

PAST MASTER RONAYNE will speak at Norwalk, Iowa, Oct. 3d, 4th and 5th.
Atlantic, 8th, 9th and 10th.
Winfield, 14th, 15th and 16th.
New Sharon, 17th, 18th and 19th.
Wyanet, Illinois, 21st, 22nd and 23rd.

TO ALL BAPTIST MINISTERS in Illinois and Iowa who are opposed to secret societies, please address a card and state whether you are in the pastoral work.

Address, Elder Joel H. Austin,
Box 1092, Burlington, Iowa.

Topics of the Time.

The citizens of New Haven have done their city and the nation an honor in turning back the usurpations of infidelity and worldliness and putting back the Bible into the schools by a vote of 4,881 to 1,963. The Bible-excluders, not only of that city but every other, have thus received a proper rebuke, and we predict the time will come when Chicago and Cincinnati will be eager to follow the example. The efforts made by the better classes of New Haven to counteract and revoke the dangerous decision of their school board would be a profitable study for other cities that labor under a similar trial.

While President Hayes was in Pittsburgh, on his return to Washington, he was waited on by a delegation from the United Presbyterian Ministerial Association, which had, at the suggestion of Rev. A. M. Milligan of the Covenanter church, adopted a memorial, asking for the appointment of a day of humiliation, fasting and prayer to be observed by the nation in view of the desolations of the Southern pestilence. The President received the delegation courteously, but made no promise of complying with the request. Several ministerial associations of Philadelphia have also adopted and sent to the President a memorial on the same subject, which it was urged should receive immediate attention, since rarely in our national history has such an occasion been so widely demanded. We hope President Hayes will not be so occupied with fall elections as to disregard so earnest and Christian a paper as this which was sent from Philadelphia: "To His Excellency, the President of the United States: The conviction grows deeper with thoughtful men that 'the Lord has a controversy with the inhabitants of the land.' On the very threshold, as we had flattered ourselves, of returning prosperity, we find the whole country plunged into mourning, and the wished for revival of business seriously delayed by the alarming pestilence which ravages our Southern border. This is but the last of a long series of calamities which reaches back to the very beginning of our civil war. That these facts attest the displeasure of the Supreme Ruler of the world against this nation we are profoundly convinced; and also, that our only hope of escape from still sorer retributions lies in a diligent inquiry into the causes of God's anger and in a speedy and heartfelt repentance and reformation. That the mind of the people may be turned to these momentous considerations, and that united prayer for the grace of repentance and for the removal of His heavy judgments, may ascend to the Father of mercies through our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, we, the citizens of Philadelphia and vicinity, respectfully ask you to appoint in your wisdom, an early and convenient day to be observed by the whole nation as a day of fasting, humiliation and prayer."

It must have been remarked by every one how generally President Hayes and his cabinet are taking part in the political discussions this fall. To be sure no one could wish Hayes' speech at St. Paul, or Sherman's at Toledo, or Schurz' last Saturday at Cincinnati wiped out of our campaign literature. They are replete with information at this time most necessary for the voter who would be called intelligent. But these efforts, which all the cabinet but Post-master General Key are sharing, mark a kind of new departure on the part of the President, an unbending of his neutrality, and participating in the partisan feeling of the season. A Washington correspondent says of the subscriptions to the campaign fund in the departments at Washington: "The Treasury statisticians have been busy for weeks furnishing information for campaign documents, and official postage stamps have been used to send thousands of reports and other publications through the mails to show the people of the country what has been done by the Republican party during the last seventeen years for the public good. Thousands of sheets of statistics have been printed on the Treasury presses, all intended to emphasize the arguments that the Republican party is best fitted to govern the country, and, under Secretary Sherman's personal directions, information has been furnished to every Republican campaign speaker or writer who has asked for it."

The pestilence shows hardly a sign of withdrawing yet its remorseless visitation from the Sonth. The physicians and members of the Howard Association overworked, are many of them yielding to the fatal fever, while from many remote places comes a despairing cry for help. Gov. Shepherd of Washington, assisted by a merchant of that city, has started on a mission of mercy for these places. Assisted from Chicago and other cities, he has chartered and loaded a boat at St. Louis which will proceed down the river, stopping at every unfrequented point, leaving supplies and rendering any other aid he may be able. Other expeditions like this will follow in due time. At New Orleans a terrible danger is confronting the authorities. Large classes of poor, thrown out of work by the plague, are in great destitution, and are not reached by contributions designated for "the yellow fever sufferers." Of this class an Inter-ocean correspondent says: "With the vast majority of them, white as well as black, a few weeks of idleness means hunger. The number of unemployed laborers now in this situation has been estimated at 10,000; with those dependent upon them it is believed that 45,000 persons are now in this condition, a very large proportion of whom are not eligible for relief under the terms in which the generous contributions of the North have been usually made." To meet all these wants relief must be sent from the North for weeks to come, and probably there will be necessity for it all winter.

—The Odd-fellows' Bank at Sacramento, California, closed its doors last week and made an assignment. The whole institution of Odd-fellowship will wish for a re-enactment of the bankrupt law before long.

Breakers Ahead.

BY ALEXANDER THOMPSON.

III.—INTEMPERANCE.

Our North and South, our East and West alike,
Who shall build up a race-protecting dyke
To guard our people from the damning rills,
That dribble from a hundred thousand stills,
And in one turbid river all unite
To bear our manly freedom out of sight?

See where you bloated vendor of despair
Leers grimly from his soul-destroying lair,
Or boldly looks with unaffected eyes
And callous heart upon his tattered prize:
As some proud tyrant from his steed looks down
Upon the smoking ruins of a town.
Is he alone? No, fifty thousand more
Day after day the damning currents pour,
Till crime, red-handed, wildly reels abroad,
Till justice from her fingers drops the rod,
Till raves the teacher in his little school,
And champions of the Senate play the fool.

We had a TRIBUNE once, a spirit high,
Whom hoarded wealth of ruffians could not buy;
The noble Greeley—blessed be his name!—
Who wrote for virtue first and then for fame,—
But, 'neath the power his shining genius made
The polished scoundrel plies his deadly trade.

See you poor voter with a soul on fire,
Mad with the fever of a base desire,
For one debauch, for one wild, reckless spree
He'd sell his vote, the guard of liberty.
His honor drowned, the die of ruin cast,
He drives, a human wreck, before the blast;
Unhappy wretch, he for a glass would sell
His right to heaven at the doors of hell;
Himself a slave, he is the tyrant's tool,
His step to power, his agent in misrule.

IV.—THE JESUITS.

Thou worst of all, and strong as all the rest,
What vast ambition moves thine iron breast?
Relentless Rome, within thy cloistered wall
What kingdoms rise and bannered empires fall.
Till in thy fancy, proud and unconfined,
Rome rules as queen unquestioned of the mind.
O church once bright with apostolic grace,
Now grand in gold and glorious in lace!
O fallen church! by thy misguided zeal
How many a heart has felt the fatal steel!
How many a hero swung beneath the tree
Who dared in freedom's name to question thee!
And still the same, impervious to the light,
A rampant show of everlasting night,
Extending far thy hidden batteries lie,
Flower-decked, unnoticed by the general eye,
But ready still at freedom's trial hour
With deadly skill to pour the fatal shower,
And while she struggles all begirt by foes,
Raise thy dark arm and rain thy lightning blows.

What rights have we by Freedom's children nursed,—
What holy rights that Rome has never cursed?
Our chainless press, our Bible and the school,
Those lusty foes to Ultramontane rule,—
Had she the power not for a single day
Could that brave trio hold the blissful sway,
But from their seats by popish malice hurled
Would sink those triple guardians of the world.

Then, sons of Freedom, watch her long and well,
A fallen angel is a fiend of hell;
Immense her power, and all that power immense
Against our progress and our common sense.
Her iron purpose still to fuse the whole
And make one body with a papal soul;
And, while she pulls our civil fabric down,
Bear on its smoking pile the Roman crown.
Then farewell progress, farewell every plan
To lift the burden from the back of man,
Round slaughtered Freedom see the vultures fly
With bloody claws, red beak and hungry eye.

WHEATON, Ill.

The Christian Advocate of New York speaks thus wisely on the subject of secret organizations and our present troubles: "In the decade before the war we heard the mutterings of disturbances to come. The air was full of great talk about secession. The ground trembled beneath the tread of drilling soldiers. The South was converted into a hostile camp, where negroes must have passes and Yankees, shrouds. The party in power legislated against the army, removed all arms South, and all arsenals that could be moved, and stopped others. Still we slumbered and ploughed and built and went to church, till we heard the guns of Sumpter; then we awoke to a struggle that startled the world. Now we hear sounds of alarm. Communist heresies are publicly taught and disseminated [illegible]izations. We hear the sound of foreigners drilling in our cities. We are standing in the ashes of cities burned by these men. All this goes on about us, while Congress as of old legislates the army down to the lowest point, and tries to starve the remnant. What does this mean? Can we never learn from experience?"

Masonic Baptism.

BY T. HODGE.

We find a full description of this ceremony in the "Book of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry," published by the Masonic Publishing Company, New York, 1873. The description fills twenty-two pages of that work, and would be amusing if it was not melancholy. It is quite a literary curiosity in its way, but at the same time will be regarded as an outrageous parody, in some respects, upon the ceremony as performed by the churches which require god-fathers and god-mothers. We confess to some degree of surprise that this god-father style of baptism should have have been prescribed by the "Scottish Rite," for the prevalent religion in Scotland has no god-fathers in it. The warning is given on page 568: "Let none here mistake it for a religious ceremony or accuse us of irreverence." This caution is printed in italics, and shows that there was imminent danger of the reader making such a "mistake."

On the authority then of Chas. I. McClenahan, "33d degree Past Grand Master of Ceremonies of the Supreme Council, Northern Jurisdiction, United States," we tell our readers that "The ceremony being a public one, public notice may be given," (page 586) and that it "is frequently performed in Europe but has not been generally adopted in the United States." (Page 555.)

Not a religious ceremony, indeed! What then is it? For some Masonic authors tell us plainly that Masonry is a religion. But this author says (page 558) Masonry is no religion. However, when a child is to be baptized the lodge will proceed to select a brother of the lodge to be its god-father, and the wife or sister of a Mason to be its god-mother. The dresses are also prescribed and the ceremony is declared to be a "symbol of the purification of the soul," as it was used in the ancient "mysteries and solemnities of India, Egypt and Greece.... The candidate at Eleusis purifying himself before entering into the mysterious temple by washing his hands in holy water was admonished to present himself with a mind pure and undefiled.... Such only is the sense of our baptism."

Thank you, Mr. McClenahan, for your frank avowal that you are imitating a paganism from the religions of India, Egypt, etc. How your heart must rejoice at the great revival of such mysteries in these United States through Masonry! We cannot give in detail the directions about the altar, the colored, lighted candles, the trumpets, the blue silk cushions, the sword and the music, the procession three times around the lodge, with the sun, but our readers must imagine how devoutly the minds of the Christians among these gentry must be impressed and peculiarly prepared for for such language as we find in the chants, e. g., "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God.... Whosoever shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me but him that sent me."

Who thus speaks? The name of the Lord Jesus Christ is not once given in the ceremony, but who appropriates his language? Who usurps his place? Who or what is this mysterious character? Is it a hybrid descendant of pagan parentage, or an upstart adventurer, one of the many anti-Christs foretold who utters the sacred words of our Lord Jesus Christ, the enthroned Lord of all? Verily we have come to perilous times when professing Christians unite in such services. But here we come to prayer on bended knees, a hymn, instructions—prayer again. Then the table with its water, oil and salt. Then the Master lights three vessels of incense, (see Numbers 16:35) lifts the child's left-hand into a basin of perfumed water and the Worshipful Master says, "I wash thee with this pure water;" adds a little prayer, then with the little finger of his right hand marks a delta (symbol of Deity) on the forehead of the child; then prays and sings, and all take a vow. Then he takes the salt and kneels again, and in avowed imitation of the "wild Arab of the desert," places a little salt on his tongue, and the Worshipful Master says, "With this salt I confirm my vow," and puts some salt on the lips of the child. Then a little three-cornered white apron, edged with blue ribbon is put on the child—a song—an address and verses which close thus:

"Masonry at last shall conquer,
And its altar be the world."

Then little presents are given by the lodge, and the Worshipful Master proclaims "these children to be purified by Masonic baptism and anointed with the oil of consecration to Masonic duty."

Then three times three raps and three huzzas, followed by speeches; and then two young ladies pass the box for contributions and the Worshipful Master says, "I declare this lodge at refreshment;" which means, I suppose, that they have a fine feast at the close of this fine ceremony. Those eligible for Masonic baptism are girls up to eighteen and boys twelve and under.

Such proceedings read more like those of ancient superstition than of things taught and done by citizens of these United States in the year of our Lord 1878. Certainly this Masonic baptism is not the baptism which Christ ordered for his people, and its imitation of some of the inventions adopted by Romanism is not such an outrage on Christianity as Masonry commits by dethroning the Lord Jesus Christ from its Scriptural extracts and appropriating his words as its own, as given in Mackey's Ritualist and other Masonic works. To the Christian people who are snared by Masonry we would recommend the study of Numbers 16th chapter. Korah's rebellion against the true worship began by the partial avowal of a truth, but ended in an earthquake and fire from the Lord to destroy these false worshipers.

God in providence is ruler of the nations now as in the past, and as he has lately delivered a nation from our Southern bondage by a journey through the Red Sea of blood which swallowed up our thousands, shall we doubt that his hand shall now also deliver his own people from the dangers of the wilderness journey, whether these dangers spring from among themselves or their outward surroundings. But what may be the fate of the present generation?

Separation under Moses was then the duty of the Jews; so separation under Christ is the still more paramount duty of every one of his people now.

Masonry as a Missionary.

BY ELDER J. L. BARLOW.

The above is the heading of an article in the Voice of Masonry, by Wm. Rounseville, a somewhat prolific writer on subjects pertaining to the craft. With him, if Masonry is not the first it is at least the equal of the first of all associations; as it is in the estimation of almost all "good Masons." The pious Rob. Morris after establishing or assisting to establish that ancient lodge in a "rat hole" under the city of Jerusalem, gave out in his newly inspired zeal the idea that hereafter Masonry was to be the "John the Baptist of the missionary reform," and now Mr. Rounseville makes a full-fledged missionary of the craft, and claims that it must go before, and pave the way for the church missionary in order to the latter's success!

He says, "It used to be said, with a grain of truth, that the soldier first visited an outpost on the Western frontier, that he was soon followed by the whisky barrel, while closely in the rear of that came the missionary." He next says that Masons are already at work in the Black Hills and that parties have been in the city contracting for furniture for a lodge and chapter "away beyond Deadwood," and further says: "We are not sure that the missionary Mason may not do as much good as his more pretentious companion of the church!"

He then speaks of the class who usually pioneer civilization on the frontier as being made up of those who "do not take kindly to the dogmas of the church," and looks upon them as "a class that a sacerdotal envoy cannot reach nor influence," who, while they "have little respect for the doctrines of theologians might be brought to believe in God, a future life and the value of good works! They would not join a church if they could, and probably could not if they would. * * * Hence we find this class almost invariably working in the interests of society through the lodges. And we believe that Masonry is peculiarly adapted to the wants of a new community."

Again he tells us that all "subjects about which men dispute and quarrel and fight," are strictly excluded from the lodge room. "No man's religious faith is questioned, for the lodge does not prescribe his religion further than on points on which there are no controversies!" That is, he may hold what opinions and practice what religious rites he pleases outside the lodge so long as he worships in the Masonic formulas inside.

And this is the John the Baptist of the missionary reform, offered us by the lodge in these modern times! This is the "Handmaid of Christianity" with a vengeance. About as fitting helper for the modern missionary as the whisky barrel above spoken of for the earlier. Verily, "Bro." Rounseville in his assimilation of forces planned better than his wont.

Two Causes of Evil in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

BY REV. J. T. MICHAEL.

It is very easy to see defects in the working of the church, but not so easy to discover their causes. Frequently we try hard to remove what we suppose to be the cause of a particular trouble, and when it is removed we are surprised to find the evil still remaining, and that what we were working upon had no connection with it whatever. I do not belong to that class of persons who claim that the Methodist Episcopal church is thoroughly corrupt; that its methods are suited only to the past,and that its vast machinery will soon fall to pieces. Nor am I one of another class who always fail to to detect any thing wrong. History proves, if it proves anything, that when the church has become wealthy, and when the world acknowledges its power and asks its sanction, then there is great danger of evils coming in, and that very particular attention should be given to the discovery and destruction of their causes. It is proposed to speak in this article of two things which seem to me to be working harm, and which may be productive of much injury in the future should they be allowed to remain.

1. We are apt to put too low an estimate upon those mental faculties which are essential to the preacher in forming in his own mind clear and correct ideas of Bible doctrines.

It is of great importance that there be in the church a true conception of the qualifications of a minister of the Gospel. All the elements of this conception may even be present, but if they are wrongly arranged and thus made to sustain wrong relations to each other, the whole will be very imperfect. Should the conception be wrong, the minister must either fall below the true standard or be out of harmony with the church. In ascertaining the fitness of a candidate for the ministry, one of the first questions to be asked is, "Has he those mental endowments which are necessary to his forming clear and correct views of Bible doctrines?" Social qualities, business qualities, power of adaptation, self-confidence and the like cannot readily be dispensed with, but when we stretch them to fill a mental vacuum in order that a man may enter the ministry, we try to do in a very poor way what God has agreed to do in a very good one. Because a theological student can sell a hundred copies of an illuminated Bible; because, during his vacation, he can make scores of friends by his self-possession or social ability, it must not be supposed that sufficient proof has been given of his call to preach. Even should a minister be greatly in demand on account of qualifications other than those of which we are treating we cannot conclude from this alone that he has been divinely chosen to enter the pulpit.

Education can neither create nor take the place of these faculties; its work is to train, to develop, to inform, not to create. By sharpening you cannot make an iron knife do the work of a steel one. A young man who was spending several years in preparing himself for the Methodist itinerancy, refering to an eminent divine, once said: "See what a preacher Mr. B. is. He passed through a course of study much like the one I am now pursuing." The young man seemed to think that education would make him what Mr. B. was, overlooking the fact that it operated in the one case upon powers of mind that were absent in the other. The object of the preacher's work is to save men, to inspire them with a longing for what is pure, ennobling and refining. Being intimate with God, with his help, he is to raise the people to the same fellowship. But how can all this be done without accurate and vivid conceptions of the doctrines of the Bible? and how can he have these without the faculties capable of forming them?

It is not only important that these doctrines be in the Scriptures, that they be formulated in the books upon his shelves, and that they are explained to him by competent teachers; patterns of them must be made by himself. There is a great difference between believing in any doctrine and having a correct idea of it in one's own mind. A very close connection exists between all kinds of preaching and the preacher's doctrinal ideas. His idea of the Atonement must effect his preaching upon the subject of salvation, those of regeneration and entire sanctification will have a bearing on what he says about the Christian life. The character of his instructions concerning the observance of the Sabbath, will to a large degree, be determined by what he conceives to be the doctrine of the Bible in reference to that day. I fear that many of our young men are entering the work without attending as they should to this important matter. Indeed, in conversation with several, I found that their doctrinal conceptions were quite indistinct. Some have even confessed that such was the case. Now, when this is the result of deficiency in natural, mental endowments, the candidate and those who possess the power of putting him in the ministry, may seriously doubt the validity of his call.

Fighting on High Ground.

"When high ground is chosen, it is easy to make a good fight," says one with much wisdom. The men of God in all ages, no matter how few or unpopular they were, made noble fights and were really unconquerable. They fought on high ground. They were sometimes asked, "Art thou he that troubleth Israel?" But they knew where to lodge the blame, as Elijah did. They fought upon the elevated position that if the Lord be God he should be followed. It is not hard to fight against great odds with such a basis. In all moral issues the ease with which men fight depends upon the ground they take. The abolitionists of this country fought well, though they "threw their votes away" for many years. It is worth while to ask whether it is as bad to throw a vote away on a party that is right and therefore sure to succeed at some time, as to vote with a party based on no high moral principle, and at the same time know that if the party is not successful in the election the vote is lost. Every man throws his vote away when his party is defeated, and if he voted without a regard for moral issues it is doubly lost. In one sense a vote is lost every time it is cast for a party that is a mere political machine. Prohibitionists may console themselves that they are fighting on high ground, and that if the end they seek is reached in fifty years from now, they are voting to good purpose. The men who kept voting the abolition ticket were wise voters, because they succeeded in the highest sense when the great party of freedom sprung as by divine energy from their long-cherished little party.

Men are weak who take the wrong side of great questions. They fight in the bogs and marshes. The ground gives way beneath their every step. But what must be said of men who go out to make history and to build up an important work, taking as their corner-stone that they will ignore moral questions? Feeling the force of an issue all about them, they seek to dash it away by calling it a "mooted" question, or a "vexed" question, and attaching a pretended disgrace to its consideration. Can such men fight well? Have they anything higher to sustain them in battle than prejudice and desire for peace at any price? A man will never appreciate a moral issue so long as he takes his cue from those who are on the defensive. Rumsellers take delight in telling how prohibitionists desert the great political parties which are so highly honored as to receive the votes of saloonists themselves. Better men take up the words of reproach and seek to fasten a stigma upon the so-called deserter.

It is easy to cry out that it is of no use to be everlastingly clubbing popular evils. Do not the patrons of these evils say the same thing? When a man once rises to the high ground where he can see the true nature of a question, he is not at all afraid of the radicalism that time-servers see in him.

There are some men who are very much afraid that matters will be hurried too much, and that popular evil will be overthrown before their time. They have great faith in the ultimate triumph of the right, and are very willing to give all evils plenteous time to get out of the way by the operation of moral forces. It is easy to forget that moral forces work only as men suffer and toil for principle.

Some excuse themselves for not taking higher ground on moral questions by accepting the fatalism of the Pharisees as expressed on one occasion by Gamaliel: "If this counsel or this work be of men, it will come to naught; but if it be of God, ye can not overthrow it." This is the fallacious let-alone policy, and as Dean Alford says of the position of Gamaliel, "It serves to show how low the supreme council of the Jews had sunk both in their theology and their political sagacity, if such fallacious laissez-aller view of matters was the view of the wisest of them." It is recorded (Acts v. 40) that the Jews agreed to this advice; that is, that they should not molest the apostles for their preaching. But look how these sneaking Jews took the advice of their wisest men. After agreeing to let the apostles alone, they beat them and commanded them not to speak in the name of Jesus. This is about the way policy-men always let radical opposers of sin alone. One minute they say they will not molest them, and the next moment they abuse them and command them to be quiet. Gamaliel with his let-alone sagacity, and the Jews with their broken promise, are excellent representatives of men of the present day.—Religious Telescope.

Why not Let it Alone?

What an easy way of pushing on a reform it is to just let the sin alone, ignore it, talk of something else. Yet this was not the course of those who under God have rescued the church from the power of evil. "Cry aloud, spare not," has been the watchword of reformers from the time of Isaiah till now. Christianity is God's spirit reforming the world. The church is God's organization to push on every reform. Ministers are God's heralds to point out every sin and urge the church to oppose it. It is then the work of the ministry to espouse every good cause, to oppose every evil, and ignore nothing good or evil. Freemasonry is a widespread organization, full of evil, both in its original constitution, and in its practical fruits. It stands right in the way of the progress of the kingdom. To prove this, let us consider:

I. Freemasonry is a religion. It has its confession of faith (pure theism), its ritual, prayers, and burial service. It proposes to regenerate and save men. (Witnesses, Mackey, Sickels and Webb.)

II. It is a false religion.

(1) It purports to save men without Christ.

(2) Its ceremonies are composed of ancient sun worship, with enough garbled Scripture thrown in to catch the unwary.

(3) It requires no conversion. (Witnesses, Morgan, Bernard, Finney.)

III. It imposes obligations inconsistent with duty to country and family. One obligation is to "keep the secrets of a worthy Master Mason.... murder and treason excepted, and them only at my own option." A similar obligation in the seventh degree is "murder and treason not excepted," or "without exception." (Witnesses, Ronayne, Rathbun, and two hundred others, who have seceded and have published their names.)

Now, if we will give half the attention to this false religion that we do to Mohammedanism, Mormonism or Judaism, we may be convinced of its true character. It is not difficult to obtain light respecting it. Most of the ministry in our own denomination agree, essentially, with the above statement. Then, brethren, how can we, how dare we, let it alone? If we are watchmen shall we not study the third chapter of Ezekiel's prophecy, and act according to its teachings? Ought we not to accept our responsibility, utter faithful warnings to our churches, and take the consequences? If all who agree unite in the warning, our churches will be relieved of a great burden. This burden is in the form of an irresponsible organization, dictating to churches what ministers to employ, to ministers what they shall say, and to courts what decisions shall be given.

Are we doing our duty? Are we even trying to inform ourselves on this subject, that we may know how to treat it, or are we persistently letting it alone, for fear of disturbance in the church, or a breaking up of the pastoral relation, or because some prominent advocate of Anti-masonry has been indiscreet? Will any of these pleas release us from our responsibility. Let us think of Christ and Paul and Luther and act with decision and boldness.—H. A. in the Advance.

An Anti-masonic Sermon.

The following is from a letter of explanation by Rev. D. B. Turney of Grafton, W. Va., appearing in the Wheeling, Va., Intelligencer of September 2nd, ult. It represents an interesting case of conscience on the part of a local editor:

I find some statements in the Grafton Sentinel which seem calculated to cause and to foster a false impression among those who were not present at my church on Sunday evening last. The Sentinel says: "Rev. D. B. Turney announced from his pulpit, in the M. P. church, last Sunday evening, after the close of an Anti-masonic sermon, that he would shortly issue a call for an Anti-masonic mass meeting at Grafton." My hearers will doubtless be astonished at reading that paragraph. It will be news to them. They will be much surprised to learn that my sermon on that occasion was Anti-masonic, as I certainly did not mention the cable-towed craft at all. I preached on "Rival Religions"—the God-given as contradistinguished from the man-made—showing that revealed religion teaches salvation to be only in Christ through faith, while the man-made article claims to secure salvation without Christ by good works which every person can do in and of himself. This the Sentinel man calls "an Anti-masonic sermon." Well, maybe he knows. During the discourse I drew contrasts between Christianity in its worship of Christ, and heathenism in its devotion to Baal or to allegorical sun-worship, sometimes styled the service of Apollo, in whose temples were offered corn, wine and oil, and occasionally human sacrifices. Yet the editor of the Sentinel calls it "an Anti-masonic sermon," thereby teaching his readers that Masonry is only Baal-worship under another name. Is that it? The fact is, that I did not mention the Masonic fraternity at all. I simply held up Christ as the only great light and pointed out the absurdity of man-made substitutes for the truth as it is in Jesus, neither more nor less.

My announcement after the sermon is also perverted. In view of considerable complications which were existing, I stopped the audience before dismissing and said: "There is an announcement which I wish to make. In case I find it necessary, I shall issue at the proper time, through the local papers, as a matter of self-defence, a call for an Anti-masonic mass-meeting in Grafton to transact any business which may need notice." This announcement, as I have here quoted it, was the only mention made that evening or on that occasion of either Masonry or Anti-masonry.

Yours in Christ,
D. B. Turney,

Reform News.

To the Friends of Christian Reform in Wisconsin.

It is proposed to hold the State meeting of our Christian Association at Waupun in Opera Hall, October 29th to 31st. The past year has been one of decided progress in our reform. The Grand Lodge report for the past year shows that the increase of Masonry in Wisconsin was but 114, or about one per cent., while the increase of population was doubtless three or four per cent. In Illinois Masonry diminished by 563. The National Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows shows considerable falling off both in numbers and income. The outlook is full of hope. Let us have a rousing meeting and show the powers of darkness that we are deeply in earnest. It is expected that Bro. Ronayne will attend and work the degrees, and that other able speakers will be present. It will be necessary to meet the expenses of the convention to raise not less than eighty dollars. The friends in Waupun will do their part, but they are neither many nor rich. They will afford ample entertainment, but the friends in other places should come prepared to do their part in payment of expenses. Let those who can aid in this matter write to me at Wheaton, Illinois, or to Mr. Dudley Andrews, of Waupun, Wisconsin.

An Appeal!

Bro. Rathbun has determined to move his family to Clarence, Iowa, (instead of Missouri) and is dependent upon the sympathy of the friends of reform. A liberal subscription is being given here. We wish to receive from all, especially from Iowa. Let there be no delinquency. Provide for God's true men.

Let all donations be sent by post-office order or registered letter, to Rev. D. P. Rathbun, Clarence, Iowa, in care of Alvin Hall.

Alvin W. Hall.

Massachusetts—From the General Agent.

Spencer, Mass., Sept. 25, 1878.

Dear Bro. Kellogg:—I left Worcester at 9 A. M. and have just arrived here, where I am to speak this evening. I am told that quite an interest has already appeared on the bare announcement that the secrets of Masonry are to be exposed and the morality of the system discussed. This of course helps to advertise our meeting and as the weather is very fine I am hoping for a good attendance. Outspoken friends of our cause here are not numerous, but many like Nicodemus are willing to express their sympathies in confidential conference. Bros. Tower and Hinkley stand boldly and firmly by the truth.

This is said to be the largest city in the United States without a railroad, and to contain the most extensive exclusive boot manufactory in the world. The surroundings, and the style of architecture are emphatically New England, and the type of thought and action among the people Puritanic. The lodge element here is chiefly gathered in the younger orders, but there are enough Masons to set the craft at work and superintend their labors. I was received very cordially on my arrival by the pastor of the M. E. church who invited me to fill his pulpit Sabbath morning last.

Sept. 26th.—At the above point I was interrupted by a question by a Mason which led to an earnest but pleasant discussion of over an hour in which Masons and Odd-fellows participated freely.

Last evening I spoke in the Grand Army Hall and my anticipations of a good audience were realized. I spoke for an hour and a half very plainly. It was a new thing in Spencer, and the craft winced at first, but finding that the secrets were bound to come out, after asking a few questions they relapsed into silence and took it quietly.

I had expected to remain for another lecture but as the hall could not be had to-night, further meetings were postponed. An expression taken by Bro. Tower at the close resulted in a two-thirds vote in favor of a course of three lectures, and I am to return on the third of October to resume the discussion.

Worcester, 10 A. M.—I shall resume my work here to-day, calling on clergymen and others. To-morrow evening we meet at Bro. Pratt's to decide about the National Convention. On Saturday I go to Auburndale near Boston for three or four meetings.

All New England needs is the facts, to be active and zealous. It requires work to reach the people here, and neither a lazy, timid or easily discouraged man has any business in New England at present. I feel, however encouraged and believing, as I firmly do, that God has called me to this field at this time, I expect to accomplish a good work and see our cause go forward.

J. P. Stoddard.

Rathbun's Iowa Campaign.

THE NAIL DRIVEN IN A SURE PLACE.

Editor Cynosure:—Allow me a place in your excellent paper to make a report of the lectures made by Bro. Rathbun on his return to us. The first time the beast got terribly angry and threatened terrible things. I think he must have gone away in a rage as the three lectures delivered by Bro. Rathbun on his return were undisturbed. We had a good audience, that came to learn and were instructed, as those anxious to learn can be when they have a skilled teacher whose logic and impressive manner taught lessons much needed and never to be forgotten.

On the second night the first degree was to be worked. It had been hinted pretty credibly that the opposers were organized, and were to break up the meeting, and, as we believed that longer forbearance would not be a virtue, we acted on the suggestion of the trustees that we should be ready to receive any, and all sorts of company. There were several Masons present, and some that had made disturbance before, but when I announced my vigilance committee they seemed to understand that we meant business and kept quiet. The lodge was opened in due form, and well officered. We had a good candidate and a fine audience to witness his entrance on his apprenticeship to the Freemason craft. It was amusing to sit in front of the large audience, and witness the gaping curiosity, and the fiery indignation of Masons; and as Bro. Rathbun would stop to explain, to see them turn pale as he dealt the truth in such a way, and with such Gospel force that they could hardly keep still.

Thus closes the second night's lecture with a wonderful interest in poor Hiram Abiff, to be killed the next night.

THIRD DEGREE.

Notwithstanding the appearance of rain the house was filled in good season. The lodge opened in due form on the third degree for labor, and on inquiry Rev. Stephen Jones was announced in the ante-room. The idea of a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ, attaching himself still more strongly to a Christ-denying God-defying institution, Bro. Rathbun explained as a strange and contradictory condition of things, and showed with impressive force the wickedness of the relation thus formed. It was plain to be seen that the mightiness of truth was prevailing, and all that the masses want is light on the darkness, and they got it here.

After the usual ceremonies, Rev. Stephen Jones was brought in, attired I think as he would not like to be seen by his congregation, and after certain perambulations, he arrives at the altar of solemn and awful covenant. We feel sorry for the reverend gentleman. He is blindfolded, a rope around his body. He seems like some felon about to be executed, and we think of his sorrowing congregation he is leaving, and of the precious souls he may have led to Christ, and now he himself going to the devil. Poor fellow, he has already given two mortgages on that which was not his own and is certainly guilty of fraud. O! what a hardening process! O, how it sears conscience! No wonder it prepares for further crimes when it is begun with the crime of fraud. In selling himself and ratifying the sale by a blood oath such as highwaymen take, such as robbers and murderers only use. Do you ask can a man be a Christian and a Freemason? Let an enlightened conscience answer. Can a man, even a minister, that binds himself to do murder, and to have it done, to put evil for good and good for evil be accepted of God? The Bible answers, no! Conscience answers, no!

There he stands before the little altar, on which rests the Holy Bible, on which lay the little square and compass—O sacred volume how desecrated! The candidate begins, "I, of my own free will and accord"—I do not wonder that Christian men and women shudder as they listen. I did not wonder that some of the good people shook their heads and said, "We'll never have a Masonic preacher; they can never administer the communion to us again." I said amen. But this Rev. candidate was informed that he was to be raised. In this scene ruffians are personated—and murder is planned and Hiram is to be killed. Now can any professor of religion say after considering that here is a drill given in planning a murder, that Masons do not teach murder; and a further drill is given in carrying it out—do you say it's only sham? But what do soldiers fire blank cartridges for and drill, that their minds and nerves may become prepared for the real work of shedding blood, certainly the killing of Hiram cannot be very refining! There are four murder drills by Masons in every entrance to the third degree. And now let none say that Masonry does not teach the taking of life contrary to the law of the land. It drills men for it. It educates them to it. It is true all do not practice it—all do not use this part of their education.

Finally the great supreme head of Masonry succeeds in resurrecting him to life; and we see him locked in the five points of fellowship, with him whom Masonry awards the power to raise, from death to life, from corruption to incorruption, and we hear that mysterious word "Ma-hah-bone." And now what has been done for this reverend? He has learned to mortgage that which was not his own. He has promised to kill people without the sanction of law. He has learned to shun the light, to hate—yea, to fear the light. He has learned to climb up another way to obtain heaven; also that man by works of Masonic tools has his heart purified. He has been taught that the Bible is a lie, a fraud, and that there is salvation without Jesus Christ; that Masonry is all the religion a man needs to make him happy in this life—and after this life—and this man is the Rev. ———, to lead the church, to instruct your sons and daughters. Is it any wonder that the churches are cold and formal; that the Spirit's power is wanting? O Christian! can you, dare you, longer keep silent? "Shall I for fear of feeble man the Spirit's course in me restrain?" How can I, how can you, and not become partakers of other men's sins? "Courage, my soul, on God rely." I dare believe his promise true, "Lo I am with you always to the end of the world." Our warfare must be aggressive. Then gird the armor on and go forth strong in the strength which God supplies.

JOEL H. AUSTIN.

RATHBUN IN MISSOURI.

Elder Rathbun's first visit to Missouri was a brief one, but the friends in that State will be cheered with the promise of future help from this able speaker made in the following note from the Albany Freeman:

If any are disappointed in not having a visit from Mr. Rathbun and of hearing his masterly lectures and still more superb manner of working the degrees of Masonry, they can only blame themselves for it. It is true his illness from sunstroke deranged our plans in Missouri, but he came on as soon as practicable and was anxious for work. In a short stay he gave us an exhibition of lodge labor; the Masonic way of regenerating souls. He showed to fifty persons, perhaps, how the rough ashlar is polished and fitted for the Masonic temple. Bro. R. has been secured as lecturer for Missouri and Iowa, and will be ready to give us a more lengthy visit soon. He has at present some pressing invitations in South Iowa and has gone for the present to fill them. He will visit Burlington, where the friends of the mystic tie made a raid on his candidate and broke up his lodge. He will work the degrees at every hazard. The Masons helped him amazingly to convince the people of the truthfulness of the expose. Ocular demonstration carries a convincing power that oratory does not. The expose becomes a mathematical solution of what has been held by many as an awful and sacred mystery; too sacred even to be imparted to female relatives.

LETTER FROM DR. BINGHAM.

Previous issues of the Gazette have been favored with communications from Dr. J. A. Bingham who was among the foremost leaders of the early anti-slavery movement. Mr. Bingham sends us the following communication for the present number from which it will be seen that, though he is now in old age, he still retains that earnest purpose which has given his moral convictions so large an influence. He speaks out with utterances that have a ring to them, as sound principles coming from a man who dares to express his sentiments, seeking the good of "his generation," with faith in the God whom he serves.

MALLET CREEK.

To the Editor of the Gazette:

We have had Rev. Mr. Stoddard here from Chicago. He is general agent and secretary of the Christian Association opposed to secret societies—and a splendid lecturer he is. Few such public speakers. His candor and truthful utterances are remarkable. His position is bold, defiant, impregnable—sustained by facts and arguments unquestionable and irresistible. His lectures on the 18th and 19th inst., were a rich treat to those that heard them. It is to be regretted that the audiences were so small, owing mostly to the excitement of our county fair. We were glad to see our clergymen both present, and giving the attention due to a subject so important. Vastly better would it be for the church and the world, if all our ministers would heed the truth on so vital a matter, and give utterance to their convictions. Strange indeed, that watchmen set upon Zion's walls should heed not the approaching sword, or warn the people of the evident destruction hastening to overwhelm both church and state through Satan's secret combinations!

This same Mr. Stoddard is a remarkable man. You have seen him and heard him in Oberlin. He is a thorough Christian, a perfect gentleman, always at work, never tired, voice and words distinct, never hoarse, never hesitates, memory perfect, full master of his subject, his manner pleasing and convincing. He is clearly one of God's chosen instruments to do his work upon earth. As much so as was Elijah the Tishbite, or Luther, or Wesley. They made their mark upon the earth for God and humanity. This man and his associates are making indelible lines upon this generation of mind. Thirty years ago a few of God's people could see with prophetic eye away in the dim distance, the sure destruction of American slavery and called it doomed. So these can now see the certain doom of this worse system of iniquity, secret combinations with which Satan has honeycombed the whole earth. It must die. It will die. God is stronger than Satan. Let the saints rejoice.

* * * * * *

The lecture was especially interesting and important as exhibiting the satellites of Masonry. A term admirably fitted to describe the lesser secret societies. My teacher in philosophy used to impress upon his pupils the true physical powers that equally balance each other, by a bullet tied to a string swung rapidly round a common center. Here were the centripetal and centrifugal forces, equally balanced. I do not say the lecturer used this illustration, but it struck the mind and impressed the idea of satellites. Masonry the common center; temperance orders, Odd-fellows, Knights of the Golden Circle, grangers, Knights of Industry, Ku Klux Klan, Molly Maguires and the numberless others of whatever name, the satellites—all swinging like the bullet around the common center. If the string breaks, what then? The common center gives way, what then? The satellites fly off in a tangent. Masonry gives way, her attachment, the string, breaks, away go the satellites. Hence the objects, interests, aims, all go. No cohesion; no attraction left. * * * *

Mr. Stoddard on Friday, left for Massachusetts where he is now laboring. B.

—Rev. H. W. Hampe of Crawford county, Pa., has sent for constitutions of auxiliary societies which he expects to use this week in Venango county, where he speaks at Nicolville on Saturday evening. He hopes to form a local society of forty or fifty members from several religious denominations.

SANCTIFICATION.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I believe that much of the current teaching on this subject is unphilosophical, unscriptural and to some extent misleading, and hence desire to make clear some things that have been made doubtful and obscure.

It is held by all who deny the doctrine of entire sanctification in this life and by most of those who admit it, that there is a marked distinction between a regenerate state and a state of entire sanctification; that the one does not imply the other, and that most believers while partly sanctified are not wholly so. Hence we are told that we need an additional work of grace to cleanse and purify the already regenerate heart, in order that we may be holy. Several passages of Scripture are adduced in proof of this. I wish to examine the most important of them.

"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly, and I pray God that your whole spirit, soul and body be preserved blameless until the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ" (1 Thess. 5: 23).

It is assumed that this prayer implies that the members of the church in Thessalonica were as individuals not wholly sanctified, and that Paul prayed that they might become so. I answer, not necessarily. It may be that the apostle prayed for the church that all of its members might be sanctified. There were, perhaps, some of the members of the church in Thessalonica that were not in a believing state, and of course not sanctified, and that Paul in writing to the church prayed that they mght be sanctified wholly as a church.

2d. The Bible nowhere speaks of believers—those in the exercise of living faith as being partly sanctified, but it invariably represents our justification and sanctification as equally complete. Note some familiar passages: "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things have passed away. Behold all things have become new. And all things are of God. (2 Cor. 5:17, 18.) This teaches the entire sanctification of all who are "in Christ," for if "all things are of God" they are all holy. "But now being made free from sin and become the servants of God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." (Rom. 6:22.) This implies that believers are free from sin. "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin—for he cannot sin for he is born of God." (1 John 3:9.) "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not, but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself and that wicked one toucheth him not." (1 John 5:18.)

3d. This doctrine is contrary to conditions of pardon promised in the Gospel. No intimation is given that we can be pardoned without entire consecration to God. Jesus said, "he that cometh to me and forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be my disciple." The promise is that "if we confess our sin he is faithful and just to forgive us our sin and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." (1 John 1:9.) When will he forgive us our sins? When we confess them. When will he cleanse us from all unrighteousness? When we confess, repent and believe; i. e., repentance, justification and sanctification or cleansing are at the same time. "If we say we have fellowship and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth; but if we walk in the light as he is in the light we have fellowship one with another and the blood of Christ cleanses us from all sin." (1 John 1:6, 7.) This passage teaches that to profess faith in Christ and not walk in the light, is to "lie and do not the truth," and that all who walk in the light as he is in the light are cleansed by the blood of Christ from all sin, and hence all true believers are cleansed from sin. But did not the apostle pray that these brethren might be sanctified in their whole spirit, soul and body; and would he have made this prayer if they had been already sanctified? I answer, that he made no such prayer. His prayer was that their spirit, soul and body might be preserved blameless, and that such a prayer necessarily implies that they were blameless, or how could they be so preserved? The whole passage so far from proving that believers are only partly sanctified, proves that these brethren were wholly sanctified, i. e., they were blameless, and Paul prayed that they might continue so.

But are all believers preserved blameless? Manifestly not, for all believers do not continue to believe, and hence they fall into sin. Are not some believers preserved blameless? I believe they are, for "he that abideth in Him sinneth not."

If there are two classes of Christians and two types of Christian experience, by what terms are they to be distinguished? I answer, that one class has real, though weak and vaccilating faith. While it exists like all true faith it "works by love and purifies the heart." Peter's faith was of this kind. The Lord said to him, "Now ye are clean through the word that I have spoken unto you. Abide in me." Had he continued to abide in Christ, he would not have sinned, but his faith was weak and it failed. The other class have a faith that is permanent and abiding. They are rooted and grounded in love, and like the tree planted by the river, their leaf does not wither. In the one case the heart is wholly clean while it abides in Christ, but the life, taken as a whole, is not wholly sanctified, for it is marred by more or less lapses into sin. In the other class the heart is truly sanctified and the life is wholly so, since they abide in Christ, and "in him there is no sin."

Is it our privilege to be preserved blameless to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ? I answer, Yes. This was what the apostle prayed for and he prayed in the Holy Spirit.

May we have an assurance that this prayer will be answered in us and that not our hearts simply, but our lives shall be sanctified wholly? I answer, Yes; for faith is the substance of things hoped for and the evidence of things not seen.

Notes from Crawford County, Pennsylvania.

Linesville, Pa., Sept. 11, '78.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Not having corresponded with the Cynosure for some time, on account of pressing labors, I now send you the first one of a number of notes. The anti-secret cause is slowly taking root in this county. In our last county election, three years ago, there were forty-six votes polled for the county ticket, and the State ticket in connection with the prohibition ticket eighty-six. In the presidential campaign there were seven votes given for Walker in our county; an ominous number! The same number were given in this county for the first anti-slavery ticket in 1848. In 1856 the county gave a majority of several thousand for Fremont, and in 1860 gave 2,800 for Lincoln. So there is no reason why anti-secret principles should not get the majority inside of twelve or fifteen years from now.

Since our general election there has a flood-gate been opened by the "old handmaid" on the community of this county, as elsewhere. First came grangerism in, and then the Murphy movement, led and worked by members of the craft; thus they took hold of the prohibition movement and throttled it as a distinct party. Now comes the greenback movement, which is led on by members of the O. M. to drown out what is left of anti-secret principles; but this will fail, as did Knownothingism in drowning out anti-slavery principles from the country formerly. The seed of our final victory has been sown by the "old handmaid" herself engraved upon our courthouse, which has resulted in the sifting of our county treasury to such an extent that we have an enormous county debt; and the people are burdened with taxes to pay the interest, besides the other expenses, which is causing wide dissatisfaction among the people. But when will they open their eyes and search out the cause? The popular churches are under the power of the lodge, and the smaller churches who oppose these things are under the ban of her priesthood; for it is a fact that the ministry of those churches, with few exceptions, are the main demoralizing power of the lodge among the people to hinder and destroy the vital power of the church. It is often referred to in common conversation, Why is it that the churches are so dead and demoralized? We answer, Can it be otherwise when the leading men there belong to those who work abomination in the sight of God in the dark, "in chambers of their imagery," of whom God speaks to the prophet Ezekiel, "Who say in their hearts the Lord seeth us not; the Lord hath forsaken the earth;" with Jaazaniah, the son of Shaphan, standing in their midst (Ezekiel 8) acting out the abominable infidelity of their hearts with a censer full of their incense of abominations before the Lord. But God says, "Therefore will I also deal in fury; mine eye shall not spare; neither will I have pity; and though they cry in mine ears with a loud voice, yet will I not hear them." This is the fearful judgment which came over them, and will it be lighter in our day? The greater the light and privileges abused and trampled upon the surer the judgment. We hear these men often say, Let us be popular, therefore we belong to these orders; and, Let us bar every element out of our churches which will disturb our peace. Thus they drive out of the different churches men who have become old and grey-headed in the work of the Gospel, and who have warned the churches against this abominable lodge idolatry. Christ says of such, "Verily I say unto you, they have their reward." Fearful consequences are coming on these men unless they repent. But will they repent as a body? We answer, No. We do not find that a church body, or a fallen ministry have ever repented as a body, even not those churches in Minor Asia, to whom Christ himself speaks and calls to repentance. If they had repented they would have stood to this day; but their light has gone out in everlasting darkness and their candlestick is forever removed.

Will the churches of our day take warning? for this is a warning of the Great Shepherd to the hirelings, that lord it over God's heritage for the interest of Satan's kingdom. Ominous rolling thunders are heard beneath our feet and over our head. Who will take heed? Communism, the legitimate fruit of lodgism is now raising its head in a threatening aspect, and may soon fall upon those popular churches and their leaders as they did in France in the last century. Will God send the nation such a judgment and afterward allow a monarchy to rise on the ruins of this Republic, with a Masonic state church without the name of Christ in it? Who can tell?

LESSON II.—October 13.—THE GOSPEL FEAST.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 14: 15-24.

15. And when one of them that sat at meat with him heard these things, he said unto him, Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God.

16. Then said he unto them, A certain man made a great supper and bade many:

17. And sent his servant at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come; for all things are now ready.

18. And they all with one consent began to make excuse. The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and see it; I pray thee have me excused.

19. And another said I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

20. And another said, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come.

21. So that servant came, and showed his lord these things. Then the master of the house being angry said to his servant, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor, and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind.

22. And the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room.

23. And the Lord said unto the servant, Go out into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in, that my house may be filled.

24. For I say unto you, that none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper.

Explanatory Notes from the Evangelical Repository.

1. The occasion on which this parable was spoken claims a brief notice. It was uttered at a sumptuous entertainment given by a leading man among the Pharisees. From the exhibition given on that occasion of the eagerness to appropriate the best rooms, or rather the most honorable seats at table, it may be presumed that the guests were, in general, of the wealthier class, and this conjecture receives countenance from the counsel which Christ gave to his host, to entertain the needy and wretched, rather than his relatives and rich friends, vs. 12, 13.

Charmed, perhaps, by the Saviour's discourse, and congratulating himself on the prospect of sharing in the festivities of that carnal kingdom which the Jews expected the Messiah to establish, one of the guests, addressing himself to Christ, enthusiastically exclaimed, "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God." And then was pronounced the parable of the "Great Supper" by him who never lacked in simple yet vivid illustrations, to whose thoughtful mind the scenes of earth, while real, were yet pictorial and symbolic of a world beyond.

2. The general design of the parable.

First. It was meant to enlighten him whose remark called it forth. That remark was, "Blessed is he that shall eat bread in the kingdom of God," v. 15. To him and others who might concur in his utterance, our Lord virtually says, "It is indeed a blessed thing to eat bread in the kingdom of God; but of the nature of that banquet you have little conception. Many, and you perhaps, among the number, so far from desiring to share in it, will, even when invited, refuse to come to it."

Second. It was meant to hint that those classes of the Jews which might have been thought the most likely to gain acquaintance with the truth of the Gospel and to embrace it, would reject it. The wealthy, the learned, the influential classes were, with a few exceptions, the haters and persecutors of him in whom alone the blessings of salvation are to be found.

Third. It shows, moreover, that the purpose of God in preparing the Gospel feast shall not be frustrated; that when the invitation would be declined by the great ones among the Jews, he would gather in a goodly number of their despised fellow-countrymen (v. 21), and not of them only, but also of the Gentiles (v. 23) whom the Jews at that time considered beyond the pale, actual or possible, of salvation, unless they became duly proselyted.

Fourth It exhibits the urgency of God in calling sinners to partake of the spiritual entertainment he has provided for them.

Fifth. It reveals the aversion of our fallen race to the great salvation which is announced and offered in the Gospel. This, indeed, as already intimated, is the fundamental thought of the parable.

3. A few expressions occurring in the parable may require some explanation.

(1) "And bade many," v. 16. To "bid" is used here and throughout this section to mean "to invite." This is the old, and perhaps, primary, meaning of the word; but at present it is used chiefly in the sense of directing or commanding.

(2) "Supper." This, among the Jews, was the chief meal, and was eaten late in the afternoon, or early in the evening.

(3) "And sent his servant at supper time," etc., v. 17. It appears from this verse that there was a double invitation given—first, a general one (v. 16), intimating that about a certain time a supper would be given, and requesting the attendance of those addressed; then, when the supper was actually prepared, a special and precise one, requesting the company immediately of those previously invited. This custom seems still to linger in the East. The discourtesy and duplicity of those who began to make excuse appear in a stronger light when it is remembered that they had been previously invited, and had then allowed it to be understood that, when final notice would be given, they would attend.

(4) "Compel them to come in." Augustine, the most distinguished, or, at least, one of the two most distinguished, of the so-called "Christian Fathers" (Athanasius, in our judgment being the other), fell, through his zeal against heretics and sectaries, into the grave mistake of supposing that this expression warrants resort to physical force in order to bring men to, or keep them in, the fellowship of the church. He did not teach that heathens, or such as had never been baptized, should be thus coerced, but that those who had professed the true faith, or who had been enrolled as baptized members of the church should be subjected to civil penalties, if they proved recreant or refractory. This melancholy part of Augustine's teaching Rome did not forget, as she did so much of his wholesome doctrine. It is hardly necessary to say that the "compulsion" meant here is that of argument and persuasion. We often speak of being "forced" or "compelled" to do certain things, or to believe some proposition, when the idea of rude compulsion by physical force is most remote from our minds. Indeed, in this very parable we find that the purchaser of a piece of land excuses himself on the ground that "he must needs go and see it," or, literally, "that he has a necessity to go," etc.: and in this case he certainly did not mean that he was driven by sheer force.

LESSONS.

1. Salvation is here set forth under the figure of a feast. The figure is one which all can understand. Eating and drinking are processes by which human life is in this world supported, and in his word God sets forth by means of a figure founded upon these operations the blessings of his grace. Christ calls himself "the bread of life," and among the closing sentences of the Book of Revelation is an invitation to men to take of the water of life freely. Rev. 22: 17. It might be no unprofitable exercise to seek out every passage of the Scriptures which presents salvation under the figure of food, or of drink, or of the kindred figures of eating and drinking.

God alone has the right to call guests to this feast. It is his feast, and he exercises his sovereign prerogative in the matter of inviting to it. He calls outwardly by the Gospel proclamation whom he will and he calls inwardly, or effectually, whom he will. Fallen angels are not called to this feast. For them it was not provided. Multitudes of fallen men have not been called to it. Many of them have died without hearing of it. Many who have heard of it and been outwardly invited to it, have not been effectually called to it, or drawn by the grace of God to it.

Yet God employs men in calling their fellow-men to this feast. This duty he imposes, this honor he confers upon his church. Especially does it devolve on ministers of the Gospel to say to men, "Come;" but at the same time all who know the Gospel are authorized and enjoined to spread the glad tidings. Rev. 22: 17. He has not organized his church on the principle of a secret society, forbidding her to divulge the truth committed to her, unless to those who should bind themselves to secrecy; but he commands her to "preach the Gospel to every creature."

While the excuses which men offer for declining the Gospel call may vary, the spirit from which the excuses proceed is the same in all. In this sense they begin "with one consent." Aversion to the feast and the love of something else lie at the root of all these excuses.

The sin of refusing God's invitation to this feast should not be overlooked. That declaration, "Then the master of the house being angry," shows the earnestness of God in this matter, and the sin they commit who slight his gracious advances. He who declines thereby declares that he has no desire for friendly intercourse with God; that he cares not to what expense he has gone in providing the feast, and that he desires that the whole plan of salvation should prove a failure; or else that there is no such plan and no need for it, thus making God "a liar." 1 John 5: 10.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCT. 3, 1878.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION will be held November 13th, 14th and 15th in the same grand hall in Worcester where we met seven years ago. Bro. Stoddard is hard at work preparing in every way possible for the success of the meeting. If local and State conventions and individual friends do their proportion it will never be said that the meeting was a failure. Let delegates be appointed on every suitable occasion, and let every one who has a suggestion that may help on send it to this office.

"BREAKERS AHEAD."—The poem under this title in last week's paper, completed in this, is by Mr. Alexander Thompson, a soldier-farmer who has frequently written for the Cynosure and always well. But this poem evinces a force of genius and taste far above ordinary newspaper writing, and if Mr. Thompson can have leisure and means for literary pursuits he may become a popular writer.

THE Religious Telescope is uncovering its shotted batteries. May we be permitted to give our new best bow to the Telescope and Wesleyan and assure them that they and some other prints which God has set down in the forefront of the hottest of this battle are henceforth to have weekly one reader who will keep step to their music. See the Telescope's "Fighting on High Ground," in this number.

THE Advance, too, has an excellent article, "Why not Let it Alone?" though "some prominent advocates" of the let-alone policy, and some "reformers of reformers" who are not much wiser or more successful than their brethren "have been indiscreet."

HAIL! READERS OF THE CYNOSURE!

In a few months the Cynosure will be ten years old, and I have passed for editor-in-chief from the first number, but have in fact been little more than editorial correspondent, while Mr. Kellogg has edited the paper, and Mrs. Cook has conducted the business department, and touched with her woman fingers the hearts of the volunteer agents who have sustained the list against the "rulers of the darkness of this world."

God has provided for the entire extinction of our College debt by little short of a financial miracle. Prof. C. A. Blanchard has relieved me partly of my duties in the College. The Carpenter Building and fund are secured by the blessing of God on the agency of Mr. Stoddard; and the College debt paid by your prayers and your benevolence; the deck is clear for action, and now let us ask God for ten thousand subscribers to the Cynosure, and WE SHALL HAVE THEM: and from the hour when one more than 9,999 paying subscribers are on our list, as saith the prophet on a far different occasion, "Hell from beneath will be moved" for us. The country will bend under your thoughts and emotions as a forest reels in the wind.

Mr. Kellogg is now relieved of the treasury by Mr. Hildreth's election, for whom Mr. Carpenter stands square at his back. Already the Cynosure gracefully bends to the increased weight of his (Mr. Kellogg's) hand He has begun correspondence with ministers of Christ's churches which are the "pillar and ground of the truth." Read, henceforward the "news from the churches." As letters from correspondents increase, they must be condensed to get them into the paper. Heretofore these correspondents have been "bright particular stars;" we must now condense them into a galaxy. Farmers, you put your hay into a hay-press and squeeze it into bales before sending it into Chicago. Put your letters to the Cynosure into press, so that every reader will wish they were longer, every article they read.

As to politics, God is somewhere training a Salmon P. Chase to give law and sound practical policy to our cause. The first speech I heard from Mr. Chase on slavery was in Henry Lewis's pork house, Cincinnati. He died Chief Justice of the United States, after putting into Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation the words, "As a measure of justice."

The rod of God now lies heavy on the South and we are assured by his prophet that "When thy (his) judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." (Isa. 26: 9.) Surely this is the time to move on Satan's works in the South. Abraham believed God, yet he lived and died in the land of promise as in a strange land; even his posterity did not get a title to the soil until four centuries afterward. The prayers of George Bourne, Dyer Burgess, and of the sainted Feemster, are yet to rise from their graves. The gory beds of the thousands of Uncle Toms, like the voice of Abel's blood, have long cried to God, and that voice is heard and is now being answered "by terrible things in righteousness!" Let us, like the penitent King David go down to their cotton fields as to the threshing floor of Ornan; and pour out our prayers and our offerings as he did, that the pestilence may be stayed. We must save the freedmen from popery and the lodge which is its "image."

READERS OF THE CYNOSURE, HAIL! If you ask in faith for 10,000 subscribers you will have them. For He saith, "Open thy mouth wide and I will FILL it."

Gentlemen of the press, we thank you that the fashion of snubbing the anti-secrecy reform is about played out and relinquished. "Be courteous," is a Bible command. Let us seek to heed it. There are not two interests for Americans touching the secrecy question; and there ought to be but one opinion. Let us see if we can, together, make a cataract of public sentiment pure as the waters of Niagara, and as powerful as its current.

INADEQUATE.

Dr. D. A. Wallace, late President of Monmouth College, Illinois, gives, in the United Presbyterian, an able but inadequate view of college secret societies. His personal experience had taught him that they are needless, prejudicial to study, morals and religion; and he gives his judgment in condemnation of them, though they exist "in the large majority of the older colleges." All this is good and sound; and the United Presbyterian deserves thanks for printing it in the face of the practice of the leading colleges of our land. We respectfully ask the learned and good men who conduct that paper to procure from Dr. Wallace, or give themselves answers to the following questions:

1st. Is not the principle of college secret societies combination for taking secret advantages of our neighbors, and so plain immorality, which should be subject to church discipline?

2nd. Are not the "oaths" mentioned by Dr. W. worship? and unlawful worship? and so idolatry without the presence of an idol? and consequently, like the Jewish traditions, subversive of the law and worship of God? (Mark 7: 7, 9.)

We shall be grateful to the United Presbyterian, Rev. S. Collins or Dr. Milligan of the R. P. church, if one of them will bring this subject before the Pittsburgh ministerial association, so that it may be thoroughly sifted, and the true nature of these secret college fraternities settled. For if they include the same principle with seances in modern spiritualism, conjuring and the like; that is to say, if they are in the words of Dean Trench, "self-projected worships," they must affect the moral nature of the students as Rev. Mr. Collins once said of Masonry, as "the milk sickness affects the human body, leaving a virus in it ever after, which will cause the symptoms to reappear in certain circumstances."

If "the large majority of the older colleges" are training schools for idolatrous worship, and that fact can be made clearly to appear, Christian parents will not trust their children in them and purification will become essential to their existence as colleges.

We shall await answer to the above queries with interest.

THE CURRENCY.

The platform of the American party on currency, adopted some six years ago, holds this honest and direct language:

"9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable."

Gold was then at a heavy premium. Now specie payment is virtually resumed; and sounder, safer, more sensible words have not been uttered since the adoption of our platform.

The N. Y. State Republican and Democratic conventions have just issued the last editions of their money platforms. The Republicans say: "Standing unalterably for the constitutional principles of hard money, we insist that instead of the greenback being dishonored and depreciated shall be made as good as honest coin." This at Saratoga.

The same day, Sept. 26, the Democrats met at Syracuse and resolved, "That gold and silver coin and paper convertible into coin at the will of the holder, should be the only currency of the country," etc.

Now if any expert can discover any difference between these two great parties on the currency, we shall thank them for the discovery. The difference does not equal that between tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee. Yet the above are the first and leading ideas of the platforms on which these parties ask the votes of the country; while the steady march toward the destruction of the Sabbath and our national free school system by taking out of it its only standard of law and morals, is wholly unnoticed by them, as is also the degrading our courts and destroying justice by Masonic oaths and the heathenizing our nation by sworn secret clans. It is a curiosity of our political history, too, that since the days of Webster, Benton and Calhoun, the two parties have changed sides. The Democrats under Jackson relied on coin and the Whigs on bank paper for political capital. Now it is the reverse. And while the Republicans have set by law a time to resume specie payments and the Democrats have been seeking the repeal of the resumption act, resumption has come, or nearly so, regardless of both.

If in 1880 enough voters can be pledged to the American platform to secure a balance of power between these parties, the American people will thenceforth give their profound attention to the question whether ours is a heathen or a Christian country.

[NOTE.—The article below was read by appointment (Sept. 24,) to the Wheaton Ministerial Association meeting at Turner Junction, by the editor of this paper. The object is two-fold: 1st, To give the history of the Commune; and 2d, To show its identity with the whole lodge system. The remainder of the article will appear next week.]

COMMUNISM.

This word, derived from con and munis, seems originally to have meant a community or clan dwelling together within walls, but, like other words, it has varied its meaning to suit its diversified applications.

The commune was a constituent element in the early government of France, named, perhaps, by the Latin conquerors of Gaul,or the Franks. In the fearful revolution of 1790, the leaders divided the territory of France into 1,720 square districts called communes, each having its Assembly of Deputies, chosen by still smaller districts, called cantons. But in the convulsions following this arrangement was changed, so that a few years later, viz., 1793, there were 44,000 communes which, by their deputies, accepted the constitution of the republic. And the commune has now (1878) changed places with the canton and become the political unit of the French system, every canton being subdivided into communes, each governed by its mayor and municipal council.

But the communism assigned me as a topic by the Ministerial Association is social, not political; and has borrowed little from the old political commune of the Roman conquest except, perhaps, the name and the general arrangement of owners and underlings; where leaders control every thing, manage every thing, own every thing, and where every community dwelling within walls was a clan, with something like a community of goods.

The Hebrew community was established by God, upon the doctrine of a Mediator represented by a lamb suffering for sins. It was not a commune but a commonwealth; modified, it is true, by the darkness of the age and the "hardness of men's hearts," yet dealing out justice by "one manner of law" to prince and peasant alike; and guarding so jealously the rights of the poor,that a servant who wished to live with his master over seven years, was not allowed to do so by private contract, lest the master should oppress him. The transaction must be by free and full consent in open court, and the ear of the servant bored in presence of the judge; and fugitive slaves were received by law, sheltered and allowed to live in Palestine where and as long as they pleased. While the human race outside of Palestine were in a civil condition resembling that of convicts under keepers, the runaway slave even once in Palestine, had his rights of person and property guarded as carefully as those of a king. It was national death to oppress him. "I will kill you with the sword," was the threatening, and your wives shall be widows and your children fatherless." The theory of the system was, that the pagan slave became Hebrew by circumcision, and his rights henceforth sacred. The slave beacme a man.

The Christian community, based like the Hebrew on the laws of nature and of God, was a freer system still. It was a "perfect law of liberty," based on the domestic affections, between husband and wife, parent and child, as contrasted with concubinage and force; while general philanthropy was confirmed and strengthened in the Christian by the precept requiring us to love our neighbors as ourselves. This Christian civilization to-day crowns our globe.

But the methods of God, like the processes of nature, are evermore from particulars to generals; from individuals to the mass. Thus, in constructing both the Hebrew and Christian communities the Creator began by regenerating men; circumcising and changing their hearts.

And I need scarcely remark in passing, that the end and method of the Puritan settlers of this country, were an exact transcript of the Divine; a Christian Commonwealth, founded for, and by regenerate men. Their object was, in the oft-quoted words of the loved and lamented Winthrop: "Through a more than ordinary approbation of the churches of Christ, to seek out a place of cohabitation and consort-ship, under a due form of government both civil and ecclesiastical." (Palfrey's New England Vol. I. p. 313.) And I now proceed to show that the modern Commune is simple rivalship of and antagonism to

THE DIVINE AND AMERICAN IDEA OF HUMAN SOCIETY.

In short the Commune is a church without Christ or regeneration; and a state without a family, or even property to maintain one. It must therefore subsist, while it lasts, by superstition and plunder. For as men, by the weakness of their condition and the religious force of their nature, must ever believe in something beyond their sight, and as no stimulus ever did or can produce healthy and regular industry but the love of home, "wife, children and friends;" history, and the moral chart of our globe, prove, that without Christianity, men are the children of superstition; and that aversion to regular industry is the parent of piracy and plunder; so true is it, that, without Christ we "can do nothing" even in politics.

Chambers' Cyclopedia defines Communism, as, "The name given to one class of the arrangements by which certain speculators have proposed to dispense with those laws of social and political economy which are supposed to keep society together through the influence of the domestic affections and the spirit of competition, and to substitute in their stead, a set of artificial rules for the government of mankind."

—The Freeman at Albany, Mo., is much strengthened by the addition of Mr. J. D. Nutting to its editorial staff. Such ringing editorials as that in the last number, against the gambling and betting on the county fair grounds, are sure to demand public attention in all the vicinity.

—The Indiana State Convention meets next week at Spiceland. We hope the warm-hearted friends of reform in that State will realize more even than they have hoped in the success and influence of the meeting. It will be a temporary disappointment to know that neither Rathbun or Ronayne can be with them. Both have been announced, on the authority of the State Agent and committee, as expected. Let the Indiana brethren rally and make the meeting resplendent with their eloquence and zeal. They do not lack for eminent ability; now is the time to bring it out, and make it felt for God and truth.

—The expositions of Bro. Ronayne are rousing the good people of Adel, Dallas county, and Norwalk, Warren county, Iowa, this week. Next week he visits Atlantic and the week following Winfield. Arrangements are made at Wyanet, Bureau county, Ill., for work on his return. He expects to be at home again Oct. 24th. All the Iowa meetings have been very successful and we look for stirring accounts next week.

—A failure in railroad connections on Monday gave us the pleasure of a call from Bishop Wright who was returning to his home in Iowa from the Rock River United Brethren Conference, which met last week near Joliet, Illinois. With him were Rev. M. S. Drury, agent of Western College, and Rev. S. M. Hippard, who bears a like relation to the Union Biblical Seminary at Dayton. The conference remembered the reform and its agencies with a kindness and enthusiasm born of a Christian spirit.

—Hiram Barber, Esq., who is nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Second Illinois District is a Freemason. The first time we saw him was with his hat on, sitting "in the East" in H. W. Bigelow lodge, of this city, on the occasion of a long, lean, lecture by Dr. B. P. Reynolds. H. W. B. lodge is now defunct.

TREASURER.— Rev. E. Hildreth, 292 Randolph St., Chicago.

The object of this Association is:—

"To expose, withstand and remove secret societies, Freemasonry in particular, and other anti-Christian movements, in order to save the churches of Christfrom being depraved; to redeem the administration of justice from perversion, and our republican government from corruption."

To carry on this work contributions are solicited from every friend of the reform. All donations, (drafts or P. O. orders) should be sent to the Treasurer; general correspondence, etc., direct to the Corresponding Secretary.

October.

The month of carnival of all the year,
When nature lets the wild earth go its way,
And spend whole seasons on a single day.
The spring-time holds her white and purple dear;
October, lavish, flaunts them far and near.
The summer charily her reds doth lay
Like jewels on her costliest array;
October, scornful, burns them on a bier.
The winter hoards his pearls of frost. In sign
Of kingdom. Whiter pearls than winter knew,
Or empress wore in Egypt's ancient line,
October, feasting neath her dome of blue,
Drinks at a draught, slow filtered through Sunshiny air, as in a tingling wine!

God's Thunder.

Though some people are afraid of lightning and thunder, yet we need thunder-storms to agitate and purify the atmosphere.

There are also many who are afraid of the thunder in the moral heavens. They tremble, like Felix, at the thunder of the truth. But the truth does thunder. God intends that it shall thunder in the moral heavens, and has made preparations to this end. Among the twelve two were expressly called "sons of thunder." Spiritual atmosphere needs agitation. We need the lightning and the thunder of the truth to purify the atmosphere. We need something effective, sharp, piercing, flashing, powerful, which will make every sandy foundation of false hopes and theories tremble and quake to the depths.

"But do we need thunder?"

"Yes, the thunder."

"But it is the lightning that kills, not the thunder."

True, but then the lightning which does not thunder does not kill either. It may appear beautiful as with its broad wings of fire it seems to fan the evening breezes, but it does no execution, it does not strike. We the need that lightning strikes and does execution, even if it does thunder.

This, however, is the lightning of which so many are afraid. As long as the truth is presented in a general way, sheet-lightning style, doing no execution, many look on and say, "beautiful!" "splendid!" "fine!" "elegant!" but when it is presented pointedly and in power, doing execution, striking through the ranks of Satan, slaying sin to the right and left, thundering so that the very gates of hell tremble, then they grow pale and quake with fear. But this is the lightning which does the execution.

Some are easily alarmed, and become nervous when it thunders a little in the church-heavens.

There are lightning and thunder in God's throne, in the Holy of Holies, and the Lord sends them forth. We need more of them in the church, to agitate and purify the atmosphere. Let not man be blamed for presenting the truth pointedly, fully and powerfully, insisting on making a full surrender, and being fully saved now. Let the lightning of the truth flash, and the thunders peal in their divine power. "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Should there be little commotion, and some grow a little pale, or become somewhat alarmed, and feel nervous, do not be dismayed or discouraged, or turn aside from the truth and path of duty. Trust in God. If he gives you the power to proclaim the truth with its thunder, shake the church and the world. If God fill you with the electric current from his throne, you must let it strike, or it will destroy you. Should any become offended at the truth, still proclaim it in love; let it flash and thunder till hypocrites stand blanched. and lukewarm professors tremble. Get a fresh baptism of electric fire from on high, and renew your work. Hold up Christ as our sanctification. Teach holiness as the Bible teaches it. There are lightning and thunder in the truth. God has placed them there and he is wonderfully in earnest that we should proclaim the truth in simple earnestness.—Living Epistle.

Romanism in Central Africa.

The following interesting letter was written to the New York Evangelist, suggested by the mention of the fact that the church of Rome is making an imposing movement on Central Africa. The fact, says the writer, should surprise no one acquainted with the history of papal missions. Their whole policy and practice would lead us to expect just such a rush for Central Africa as is now talked of. Let me give a few facts.

The Church Missionary Gleaner for 1850 had occasion to say: "Rome has been busy in New Zealand. A Romish bishop reached those islands just as the natives were beginning to improve and open to Christian instruction. The missionaries had at that time about 35,000 under their teaching. The Romish bishop in his letters set them all down to his own account, saying 'Almost all the natives belong to the Catholic Church.'" But the Gleaner goes on to say that the bishop found it much easier to write them down Catholics than to make them so. They had learned to read, had been supplied with Bibles by the British and Foreign Bible Society, and thus fortified, prove more than a match for the priest. True to facts is the Gleaner's pointed remark, that "The little gardens which Protestant missionaries have fenced from the wilderness seem in a special manner to attract Rome's attention. There her priests are sure to come. She thinks it well for us to do the rough work, dig out the roots, remove the stones, and bring the ground into order, and then she steps in, calls the work all her own, and claims the field."

In the same style the Catholic priests went into the Sandwich Islands, and the way they took to make proselytes is set forth by a missionary of the American Board in the Missionary Herald for 1842: "The priests impose few restraints; they promise eternal life to the most vicious and profligate; gambling, card-playing and horse-racing on the Sabbath are not criminal, and to show it the priests do these things themselves; adulterers and drunkards are all admitted to their church, and all apostates from our churches, even the vilest, are admitted by thousands and counted as their best converts. Such is the good news which is carried to the heathen by this class of missionaries."

Many years ago a united mission was established at Fernando Po, West Africa, by English Baptists, United Presbyterians, and others. The place belonged to Spain, but was never visited by any Catholic priest till the Protestant missionaries had labored there several years, and the field became very promising. Rome had bided her time. Says the Scotch Presbyterian for 1856: "In May last a Spanish schooner, direct from Cadiz, arrived with no less than thirty-two Roman Catholic missionaries. They consisted of five priests, nine catechists, eight sisters, and ten artisans and agriculturists." The Presbyterian adds: "So long as there were no missions and no attempts to introduce civilization, popish Spain left these islands to the dominion of heathen darkness; but now that the Bible and the missionary and the merchant have begun to develop the resources of these important regions, the Man of Sin, ever watchful, sends his confederated bands to arrest or mar the good work and cover over the field with a layer of glittering crosses. But this movement of the papists, though threatening in appearance is in keeping with their whole line of conduct, and does not in the least discourage the missionaries of the Cross."

I could give many other such reports from Protestant missionaries, but these may be taken as sample cases. Rome has indeed sent her priests into every corner of the globe, but they have gone to proselyte in evangelical fields, not to convert from heathenism. Rome cannot point to a single spot in all heathendom where she has ever been first on the ground, led the way from the start, and brought a pagan people up into civilization and religious and social order. Her one and only mission has been to enter Protestant vineyards, sow seeds of discord, corrupt converts, and make more and worse opposition to the Gospel than even idolatry itself. Says the Rev. Myron Winslow, forty years a missionary of the Board at Madras, southern India: "Mobs, threats and brickbats are the arguments of Romish missionaries at Madras." Speaking of an out-station which they had established, he says: "The Romanists threw stones in times of meeting and at other times disturbed us with bells and other instruments, and threatened our lives, and finally burnt the bungalow and the furniture in it. Such was the mission of Rome's hirelings in that place." A missionary of the American Board says in the Missionary Herald for 1842: "The hostility of the Romanists to the education of the people is more apparent in heathen than in Christian lands. The priests do all in their power to check the progress of knowledge and of truth among the people." For three hundred years Rome has been doing this sort of missionary work among people of sixty or seventy different languages, and yet not a single instance is known of her having translated the Scriptures into any one of these languages. Not to increase light, but to hinder it, is her mission everywhere and always.

Papal emissaries would belie their whole history if they did not pitch into Central Africa just as soon as they see Protestant Christians breaking ground there and sowing good seed. And we know what they will do when they get there. But the Bible and Christian teachers will be more than a match for them if only they are on hand in season. No panic or fear is called for, but only a rapid movement of the Lord's forces. To know an enemy and his tactics is half the battle.

Keeping the Tongue.

Keep it from unkindness. Words are sometimes wounds. Not always very deep wounds, and yet they irritate. Speech is unkind, sometimes, when there is no unkindness in the heart. So much worse that needless wounds are inflicted; so much the worse that unintentionally, pain is caused.

Keep it from falsehood. It is so easy to give a false coloring—to make a statement that may convey a meaning different from the truth, while there is yet an appearance of truth—that we need to be on our guard. There are many who would shrink from telling a lie, yet, who suffer themselves in such inaccurate, exaggerated, or one-sided statements, that they really come under the condemnation of those whose "lying lips are an abomination to the Lord."

Keep it from slander. The good reputation of others should be dear to us. Sin should not be suffered to go unrebuked; but it should be in accordance with the Scripture method: "Go and tell him of his faults betwixt thee and him alone." And it should be borne in mind that what is too often considered as merely harmless gossip, runs dangerously near, if its does not pass, the confines of slander. A reputation is too sacred to be made a plaything of, even if the intent be not malicious.—Selected.

Use Time Right.—He who cannot find time for religious reading and the study of God's Word, will find some day that he has time to be sick; he who has no time to pray, must find time to die. He who can find no time to reflect, is most likely to find time to sin; he who cannot find time for repentance will find an eternity in which repentance will be of no avail.

Childrens' Corner.

Getting Paid in One's Own Coin.

After Peter's mother died, he had been sent to live with his grandmother, for he had a quarrelsome, fretful temper, and his old aunt could not manage him with the other children. His grandmother dealt kindly and patiently with him, and helped him to improve.

Peter now had a new mother, and his father had sent for him to come home. But he did not want to go. He felt sure he should not like her, and that she would not like him.

"That depends on yourself, Peter," said grandmother. "Carry love and kindness in your pocket, and you'll find no difficulty."

The idea struck the boy favorably, and he said he could.

"And the best of it is," said grandmother, "if you once begin paying it out, your pockets will never be empty, for you'll be paid in your own coin. Be kind, and you'll be treated kindly; love, and you'll be loved."

"I wish I could," said Peter.

All the way home he thought of it. I do not know about his welcome home, or what his father or new mother said to him. The next morning he rose early, as he was used at grandmother's and came down stairs where, every thing being new, he felt strange and lonely.

"I know I shan't like it here," he said to himself; "I know I shan't. I'm afraid there's not much love in my pocket."

However, in a little while his new mother came down, and Peter went up to her and said:

"Mother, what can I do to help you?"

"My dear boy," said she, kissing him on the forehead, "how thoughtful you are! I thank you for your kind offer, and what can I do to help you? for I am afraid you will be lonely here at first, coming from your dear grandmother."

What a sweet kiss was that! It made him so happy.

"That's paying me in more than my own coin," thought Peter.

Then he knew he should love his new mother; and from that good hour Peter's pockets began to fill with the beautiful, bright coin of kindness, which is the best coin in the world. Keep your pockets full of it, and you will never be in want. —Selected.

Sweet Home.

"There is one spot upon the earth
Far sweeter than the rest;
There is one spot we all must own,
The brightest and the best."

Little readers, have you a home—pleasant, peaceful, happy? Oh! what a blessing! Do you realize it—are you thankful for it? Multitudes of little folks have no place they can call home. Others, again, have a place of turmoil and wretchedness, poverty and ruin. But a home that is a home in very deed is a heaven on earth, a little paradise. Was there ever a word that fell more delightfully on the ear than "Home, sweet home?"

"What thronging memories come!
Again that little group have met
Within the walls of home."

No spot on earth has charms like those of home. Friends may be kind and minister to our necessities, our physical wants may be cared for; but still the heart longs for the sympathies of home.

"But there's a home, a happy home,
Where wayworn travellers meet."

O glorious home, the home of heaven, the Christian's home, where sorrow and sighing, sickness and death, and, best of all, sinning, can never come. There the saints of God shall meet, and part no more forever. "There we shall see Jesus," and be like him, for we shall see him as he is. Though the weary heart may find no resting place on earth, "There's rest in heaven," when the toils and labors of earth are ended.

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

There is a magic power connected with the name of home that floods the mind with sad or pleasing thoughts, and thrills the soul with inexpressible emotions.

How numerous the objects of interest around which the mind clusters! Every countenance, father, mother, husband, wife, brothers, sisters, and children; every room, picture, piece of furniture; together with all the surroundings—the gardens, walks, meadows, fields, and pastures; the great rock, the mountain, the hill, and the murmuring stream, the cooling spring and old well with its wooden bucket, the stately elm and grand oak; and there is the orchard, too, with its choice trees of peach, pear, cherry, apple and plum.

But all these objects of fascination are changing. Parents, husbands, wives, brothers, sisters, and children die. Happy homes are broken up. Those who enjoy the solace of home to-day, may be tossed upon life's surging billows to-morrow, pilgrims and strangers, without friends or a home, sad, lonely and dejected. Happy for such if they possess an unshaken evidence of their acceptance with Christ, that he has gone to prepare a mansion for them in glory.

"A home in heaven, what a joyful thought!"

Reader, have you a home in heaven? Have you been laying up for yourself a treasure there, against the time when pleasures fade, when wealth and fame vanish, and when your poor body in the dust is laid? —Editor "Golden Rule."

Palestine, or the Holy Land, is a small spot of earth. From Dan in the north, to Beersheba in the south, it is a little less than two hundred miles in length; while the average breadth, from the Jordan to the Mediterranean is not more than sixty or seventy miles, making the area about 11,000 square miles—being only one fourth as large as Pennsylvania. But though so small what wonderful things have taken place there! Only look at the few places here named! Here are Jerusalem, Hebron, Bethlehem, Cæsarea, Nazareth and others. Every one of them reminds us of remarkable histories. Over a large portion of this ground the blessed Saviour trod when he was here in our world for our sakes. I think every one of my readers must feel like saying with myself, "How I would like to see those old Bible places!" But if we never should see them, there is still something we can do in the way of informing ourselves concerning them. As we read our Bibles, we can take up a map and trace out the different places referred to, and we can read the accounts of travelers, and study the manners and customs of the people, together with many other things that will aid us in understanding the Holy Book. Such exercises you will find to be among the most interesting and instructive in which you can possibly engage. —S. S. Herald.

Disinfectants and Deodorizers.

Infection and ill smells cause a great variety of diseases; they both arise from decomposition and decay of vegetable or animal matter, or both. To deodorize is to take away the bad smell. To disinfect is not only to do this, but to arrest the progress of decay, and thus cut off the supply of bad odor. Our grandmothers thought they got rid of the ill odor of a sick room by sprinkling brown sugar on live coal or burning tar; this gave a strong and more agreeable odor; it overpowered the other, so that it was not perceived, but it did not destroy it; both odors were really present, and the air was doubly impure, only more agreeable to the senses. Hence to deodorize an ill-smelling room or locality intelligently, substances must must be used, which, by causing a new chemical combination, destroy the odor altogether; but if the decomposition continues to go on, other odoriferous particles begin to arise requiring a new application of the deodorizer; on this account all deodorizers are efficient only temporarily; hence, the only rational method is either to remove the offending material or employ disinfectants which arrest further decay. If the material both arrests the decay and destroys or absorbs the ill smell, then it is doubly valuable. Two hundred grains of chloride of zinc in an ounce of water is a powerful agent in neutralizing bad smells, and in arresting both animal and vegetable decomposition, in ships, hospitals, dissecting rooms, cellars, privies and water-closets, without having any ill smell of its own. For disinfecting purposes, mix one pint of the above fluid to four gallons of water.

There are three powerful disinfectants: carbolic acid, but its smell is objectionable, chlorine and permanganate of potash; these last two are quite expensive. These disinfectants act by combining with deleterious substances and rendering them harmless. while antiseptics prevent and arrest the decomposition of animal substances.

The only perfect disinfectant is habitual cleanliness and thorough ventilation; next to that is a dry heat of two hundred and fifty degrees.

The most common and available disinfectant and deodorizer is copperas, crude copperas, sold by druggists at a few cents a pound, under the name of sulphate of iron, one pound to two gallons of water, to be used as is necessary to render all odors imperceptible, acting at the same time as an antiseptic, deodorizer and disinfectant, and if instantly thrown over what passes from the body in cholera is one of the cheapest and best means known for preventing its communication to others.

[The above is a valuable article and should be preserved. There is far too great neglect of disinfectants and deodorizers. For many purposes the information here given is invaluable. But for all out-door uses, earth—dry earth is altogether the best. The only difficulty there seems to be in introducing it into use is that it does not cost anything and is found every where ready for application. If it were found only in certain localities, and to be bought at a price, its merits would soon be recognized. For cesspools or outbuildings nothing else should be used. Yet often do we see people going to a distance to buy lime, when three steps would take them to good, loose earth all ready for use.]—The Health Reformer.

Many persons are in the habit of freshening mackerel or other salt fish, and never dream that there is a right and wrong way to do it. Any person who has seen the process of evaporating going on at the salt works, knows that the salt falls to the bottom. Just so it is in the pan where your mackerel or whitefish lies soaking; and, as it lies with the skin down, the salt will fall to the skin and there remain, when, if placed with the flesh side down, the salt falls to the bottom of the pan, and the fish comes out freshened as it should be. In the other case it is nearly as salt as when put in.

To prevent moths in carpets, wash the floor, before laying them, with spirits of turpentine or benzine.

Beets are excellent prepared in the following manner: A small teacupful of vinegar (if very strong reduce with water), a tablespoonful of butter, the same of white sugar, a little salt and pepper, a heaping teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in water and added. Stir all together until thickened by boiling; it should be like thick cream when done. Have the sliced beets in a small saucepan, on the stove. Pour the dressing over, stirring carefully. Send to table very hot, in a covered dish.

Concerning the treatment of scarlet fever an eminent physician says that he does not fail in effecting a cure more than once in a hundred cases, by giving the patient warm lemonade with gum arabic dissolved in it. A cloth wrung out of hot water and laid upon the stomach should be renewed as rapidly as it becomes cool. To this simple treatment the most obstinate cases seldom fail to succumb.

To Rid a House of Rats.—Wet a few pounds of unslacked lime with a strong lye made from potash; let it be quite soft; spread it around the holes so that the rats cannot avoid treading in it; let it remain a week or so, and if it gets dry, scrape it off and moisten again. The mixture burns their feet, and they will not be likely to make a second visit. Do not let it come in contact with oil-cloth or paint.

Unfaithful Shepherds.

There is a wide difference between the Christian church and the Masonic lodge. There is more difference between them than there is between a meeting house and a grog-shop. It was in the latter that the lodge took its rise; and it not only teaches and practices grog-drinking, but it mingles infidelity and blasphemy with it. As true Christians mingle a tender faith in Christ with the last supper, so true Masons mingle infidel skepticism with their champagne suppers. The early Christians often, if not generally, held their suppers in upper chambers: the Masons do the same with their champagne feasts. The lodge, in attempts at rivalling the Christian church in every thing, have this in common that both have made use of upper chambers in their ceremonies.

But the Christian church is very different, in every essential point, from the Masonic lodge. The church is made up of families whom the Saviour has purchased to himself at the great cost of his own blood; while the Masonic lodge is a wicked collusion, made up entirely of oath-bound men, many of whom either know nothing of the Saviour, or else they reject both him and his blood. The church teaches good works in the name of the Saviour; Freemasonry teaches good works in the name of the lodge. The church receives its merits from Christ; the lodge receives its merits from the men who make it up. The Saviour of mankind comes from God, and cannot be sanctified or rendered good by the works of men's hands; while all the sanctity the lodge possesses comes entirely from men's good works. But men's good works can no more make the lodge holy, or righteous, or honorable, than they can make a brazen image holy or honorable. If all the good works that Masons ever did were brought together in a bundle, and fashioned into the likeness of any thing whatever, imaginary or real, it could never give any moral weight or sanction to any action. All the good precepts that the lodge may have, do not belong to the lodge any more than they do to a brothel, where, doubtless, they may often be repeated with just as much force, virtue, and sincerity as they are in the lodge.

The lodge is the worst idolatry that has ever existed in any age of the world; because, while entirely the work of men, it is claimed to be divine, and is set up not in ignorance of Christ, but as a declared rival of Christ. It is claimed by many to be better than Christ; and is cunningly devised for the purpose of deceiving. The ancient idolater was an honest, self-deceived man; this modern Masonic idolater tries to deceive others, like the common thimble-rigger.

The church compares its members to flocks, and its leaders to shepherds; while the members of the lodge are called the fraternity, or members of the sly craft, and their leaders are Masters, Grand Masters, etc., terms forbidden by the church.

There is, in short, nothing in common between the church and the lodge. There is nothing between them but antagonism. How then, with what consistency can a shepherd of the church lead his flock into the lodge, or go there himself? When he calls to his flock in the language of the lodge, in such terms as Boaz, Jubelum, Mahabone, the level, the compass and square, the gavel, the due guard, etc., how are his flock to recognize his voice? How can a shepherd lead his flock up to Christ while teaching them idolatrous practices of the lodge? How can he impress his flock with a sense of the merits of a Saviour's blood, while he himself relies upon the merits of wicked, blasphemous men as embodied in the Masonic lodge?

The Freemasons, as if sensible of their want of Christian virtue, lay great stress upon the honor and the antiquity of their institution.

There was a lodge of ancient Freemasonry at Ephesus, which was presided over, as the lodge in the United States may be, at the present day, by a vagabond Jew. St. Paul had a long conflict with these ancient Freemasons of Ephesus, and was finally driven out from that city by them. He went to the northward; and on his return to Jerusalem, he determined not to stop at Ephesus; but he stopped at a point some twenty miles, or so, from there, at Miletus, and from there sent to the shepherds of the flock at Ephesus to come and see him. He gave these shepherds of the church his final charges and admonitions; for they were never to see his face again; and there is nothing more pathetic and tender in the whole Bible than this closing scene of Paul's labors for the good of the people of Ephesus. He reminded the shepherds, or elders, that he had ever taught openly, in public, from house to house, and had kept back nothing, though at the expense of being persecuted by the Jews.

Among his closing remarks he said: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing, shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves [that is, these elders, shepherds, overseers, or bishops] shall men arise, speaking perverse [or crooked] things, to draw away disciples after them."

Now to whom were these words addressed? to shepherds of the Christian flock, which Paul had gathered and separated from the lodge of mystification worshipers of Ephesus, or to the Masters and Grand Masters of those wolves which had shouted in his ears for two hours in succession, the exceeding great glory of the great lodge of the city, whose presiding deity had come down from heaven, etc., etc.? It is evident that St. Paul was speaking to Christians and not to Masons; and that he was warning them against precisely such crooked characters as now, calling themselves bishops, try by forcible violence to draw away their flocks with them into the Masonic lodge.

Alas! what a sad fate has lately befallen one of these bishops, here in "the West," who, while preaching Christ's blood with his lips, was leading the way for his flock to practice the crooked, perverse things of Freemasonry! O how our common humanity is depressed and humbled by this bishop falling from that grace, which, as a covert worshiper of the lodge, he had already made a burlesque of! Between two stools (to use a homely phrase) he has come to the ground before the whole world. We do not say this might have happened to any other bishop, who was not a Mason. We do not say that Bishop Onderdonk and all the other bishops who have fallen were Masons; but what we would say is this, viz., where a bishop is at one and the same time a shepherd of a Christian flock and a Master of a Masonic lodge, it is a miracle of mercy if he does not fall. He is in fact fallen already.

To a Christian, crimes may possibly be forgiven; but to an idolater no crime can be forgiven, because idolatry is itself unrepented crime and the source of crime. It makes a merit of the good works of men instead of a merit of the blood of a Redeemer. The attempt to deprive the Saviour of his merit and give that merit to the lodge, or to mingle the merits of the lodge with those of the Saviour, so as to confound the two, is the wickedest act that perverse and crooked men ever did.

Let us suppose the case of a young man reared in the bosom of a Christian family, with a Christian mother and Christian sisters, who, at the age of twenty-one, is set upon by crafty Masons and cajoled into the lodge. We may easily comprehend what must be his feelings on finding himself so ignominiously dealt with as he is, stripped half naked; blindfolded; a halter put around his neck as round that of an ass, while his ears are stunned with the sounds and voices of mingled terror, sacredness, and burlesque. We can easily understand how all his Christian teaching, and all his sense of republican manhood resents this unworthy, un-Christian, unmanly treatment; and that he may resolve, within himself, that, if once freed from their contemptable proceedings, he will declare against them and their "ancient and honorable" institution forever. But at last, when the bandage is finally lifted from his eyes, and his vision is restored, what does he see among the faces of the knaves who have thus made a mockery of all that is most sacred? Reader, would you believe that this young man sees there among the faces of vagabond Jews, infidels and drunkards, the solemn visage of his own bishop—the shepherd of his own soul?

If you doubt the seeming enormity of this statement, let me recommend you, for its verification, to Bishop McCoskry, of Michigan, who is said to be one of those VERY "good" men of whose membership the very good Masonic lodge boasts so much.

While we would go backward, and drop a blanket of charity over a fallen Christian brother (for in our common weaknesses of humanity we, ourself, may need that service even now, or some day hence) why should we render that service to a man over whom the Masonic lodge had already thrown a blanket that is designed to hide the devil himself? Why should we, who are no Mason, do the dirty work of the Masonic lodge?

But the American clergy are something more than shepherds in the church of Christ. They are, from the nature of the case, a conservative body of men who, from their supposed excellence of character, should be regarded as a substitute for a titled aristocracy, upon whom depends in a very especial degree the conservation of our republican institutions against the violence and eccentricity of extreme democratic action. They are the last men in the country who are excusable for running into such heedless, popular errors as that of the Masonic lodge, even when regarded in a political point of view alone. By doing that, they prove false not only to the Christian church, but they become Jesuitical conspirators against the Republic, and sap the very foundations of the government instead of sustaining it.

AMERICAN.

OBITUARY.

MULENHOUR. — Elizabeth Jane, wife of G. W. Mulenhour and daughter of James and Sarah Wilkison, of Champaign county, Ohio, departed this life Sept. 6, 1878, aged twenty-nine years six months and five days. She embraced religion in her eleventh year and was a faithful Christian and true friend of our reform work. She died in great peace, leaving a kind husband and two promising little boys to mourn her loss.

JAMES WILKISON.

—The sixth annual meeting of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is being held at Milwaukee this week. It is not expected that any special questions of interest will be discussed. Perhaps the principal topic will be the advisabilty of accepting the offer made by the liberal English gentleman who has pledged $5,000 for the founding of missions in Central Africa.

Religious Intelligence.

PROTESTANT METHODIST.--Rev. D. B. Turney, of Grafton, West Virginia, is now on a visit in Streator, Illinois, where friends may address him. He hopes ere long to return to Grafton and establish more firmly the reform work already begun, and asks the prayers of all God's people in his behalf. His reported resignation is a mistake. There is a more cold-blooded method sometimes practiced. The last annual conference of West Virginia was controlled by the grip and square and compass, and the Masons had Mr. Turney left without an appointment "in the hands of the president." The conference also failed to pay him the amount of missionary money due him, over a hundred dollars.

UNITED BRETHREN.—Prof. W. J. Ham, who was elected to the position of financial agent and treasurer of Western College, has resigned, and Rev. M. S. Drury, corresponding secretary of the Iowa State Association, has been chosen to fill the place.—The financial agents of Union Biblical Seminary at Dayton, are having good success, and the prospects for the permanent success of that institution are encouraging. —The late Central Ohio conference meeting in the college chapel at Westerville, while recommending the Religious Telescope to every family gave this opinion of its conduct on the great issue now troubling the denomination: "We believe, divided in opinion as the church is on important matters of polity, the Telescope should be conducted on a lofty, non-partizan plane, recognizing the fact that those who dissent on these matters of polity are such in character, number, and service as to entitle them to courteous treatment and a fair hearing. We express our deliberate conviction that the use or permission in its columns of harsh epithets and abusive language is ill-advised, mischievous and wrong." The editors respond kindly and manfully: "The Telescope has been conducted purely on a religious, churchly and conservative basis. The action of the conference referred to impliedly condemns such a basis as being improper for a church paper, and recommends that an unmentioned but vaguely-defined party recognition should be the basis of the church paper. The Telescope cannot descend to such a plane. It can only, in the nature of things, be religious, churchly, conservative. It is for no part of the church, but for the entire church. May some prophet pray for Gehazi. Then, 'let there be no strife between thee and me.' More church, brethren, and less of the party. We do not claim perfection, but forgetting the things which are behind we press to those things which are before."

GERMAN BAPTIST.—This people commonly known as Dunkers, had twenty-six years ago in the United States but eight small churches and five ministers. Now they report one hundred and fifteen churches and one hundred and thirty ministers, with one hundred and twenty-five Sunday schools and twelve hundred and sixty-eight teachers. They are each year making progress in various departments of Christian work. In respect to the origin of the Dunkers in this country it is said by a good authority that after many and severe persecutions, a company emigrated from Schwartzenau, Germany, 1719, under the pastoral charge of Alexander Mack, Sr. In this country their numbers were gradually increased by accessions, mostly from the German-speaking colonists who had previously settled in America. And to this day, in many settlements of Pennsylvania, they have no language but the Pennsylvania Dutch dialect. But of late years they have given more attention to the education of their children in the higher branches of English literature. The have now in operation a college at Huntingdon, Pennsylvania.

WESLEYAN.—Rev. D. S. Kinney, business agent of the churches, called at the Cynosure office last week on his way from Michigan to the Kansas conference at Topeka. He had been suffering from illness resulting from overwork, which rendered him unable to attend the Illinois conference at Harmon, Lee county. He has measurably recovered and hopes to complete the round of conferences.—A great revival has been experienced in North Carolina under the labors of Rev. D. C. Linville. One hundred have been added to the church within six weeks.—The evangelist of the connection, Rev. N. Wardner, is holding holiness meetings in Iowa.—A fine portrait of Adam Crooks, by Miss Emma E. Canfield of Parma, Mich., has been purchased by Harry Wilcox of Jackson, and donated to the new Publishing House at Syracuse.

FRIENDS. — The report of the Western Yearly meeting shows that the number of meetings or congregations is 84; members, 12,153; families who read the Scriptures daily, 963; occasionly, 1,149; neglect this duty, 388; use tobacco, 1,070.—Benjamin Frankland, Superintendent of the Seamens' Bethel in this city was one of the prominent speakers at this meeting.—A Friends' college was opened last month in Pickering, province of Ontario, Canada.

—Mr. George Muller's work at Ashley-Down, Bristol, is in a flourishing condition. The annual report just published states that after meeting the year's expenses, amounting to $210,000, the accounts have been closed with a small balance in hand. Since the founding of the institution $3,920,000 have been received without any one having been appealed to personally, 66,600 children and adults have been taught in the various schools, and tens of thousands of Bibles have been circulated. The present attendance at the schools exceeds 10,000, and 2,193 orphans have been sheltered during the year.

—The Synod of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church met at New Lebanon, Monroe county, Virginia, on Thursday, the 15th of August. Nearly all its ten Presbyteries were represented. The various operations of the church seemed in good condition. From the report of the Treasurer of the Synod the endowment fund of Erskine College, at Due West, South Carolina, amounts to $79,222.72. The Theological Seminary, also at Due West, had six students during last year, four of whom completed their course, and have entered upon the public service of the church.

—Mr. Spurgeon replied to the inquiry of an American as to whether he had heard of Colonel Robert Ingersoll: "O, yes; I have heard of your Robert Ingersoll. I should do nothing to convert him. He is a green watermelon. The more he abounds the sooner the public will turn from him."

News of the Week.

—Lomer Griffin, the oldest man in the United States, died at his residence in Lodi, Ohio, last Monday evening, aged 106 years.

—The American schooner, Jere Simonson, Captain Crawford, which arrived at Trieste, France, September 22d from Philadelphia with 2,969 casks of petroleum, took fire and burned with her whole cargo.

—The news of the reciprocal treaty between the United States and Japan produces a remarkable sensation at Yokohama, especially among the British legation, where it is felt that a great advance in American interests has thus been made, and that British influence must correspondingly decline.

—The London Times gives three columns of description and two columns of editorial characterization of the American mechanical display at Paris. It declares that "the activity and insight of the American inventive genius develops more that is new and practical in mechanism, than all Europe combined."

—The Norwalk and New York steamer Adelphi burst her boiler when a mile from her dock at Norwalk, Conn., at eight o'clock Saturday morning, on her way to New York. The Adelphi had on board about 200 passengers at the time of the disaster, twelve of whom were killed and twenty injured. Great blame is attached to the inspection of the boat, which was an old one.

—For the last fortnight several bands of hostile Cheyennes having left their reservations have been marauding in southwestern Kansas and the adjoining part of the Indian Territory. A decisive victory was on Saturday last gained over these bands by detachments of the Fourth Cavalry and the Nineteenth Infantry, though at the cost of the life of a gallant officer, Lieut. Col. William H. Lewis, of the Nineteenth Infantry, who died from wounds received in the fight.

—The prevailing fever is evidently on the decline. The "Howards" have already given notice that no further contributions will be needed by them. The "Peabodys" are supposed to be fairly supplied. The secretary of war has made a second liberal assignment of rations for the benefit of "yellow fever sufferers." At Memphis there is less hope. Since the beginning of the epidemic 22 volunteer physicians have died, and although there are fewer fever cases it is because there is little material to work on. At Vicksburg numbers of refugees who have returned are coming down with the fever.

—The Hungarian Radicals held a mass meeting at Pesth on Sunday to protest against the occupation of Bosnia. Deputies Helfy and Simonye, the leaders of the movement, and many other members of the Hungarian Diet, were present at the meeting, which was largely attended. Resolutions were unanimously adopted, declaring that the occupation of Bosnia by Austria is fatal to the Hungarian nation, protesting against the sacrifice of blood and money and Hungarians against their wish, and demanding the withdrawal of the army from Bosnia. The resolutions will be forwarded to the ministers and Parliament will be asked to pass a vote of want of confidence in the Cabinet.

—The British Government has ordered the emancipation of all slaves on the island of Cyprus.

—The largest cotton mills in the world are those at Narva, in Russia on the Gulf of Finland, eighty-one miles from St. Petersburg. One company there owns 400,000 spindles. The Harmony Mills, Cohoes, New York, having 275.000 spindles, are the largest in the United States.

—A correspondent at Constantinople states that the project of the treaty proposed by Russia, for enforcing those portions of the treaty of San Stefano which were not abrogated by the Berlin Congress, fixes the amount of the war indemnity to be paid by Turkey, exclusive of territorial cessions, at 310,500,000 francs.

—Deadwood, D. T., Sept. 27.—The treasure coach of the Cheyenne and Black Hills stage line, that left yesterday morning, was stopped by five armed men at Canon Springs, forty-five miles south of here, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Two messengers, Captain Smith and Gale Hill, were seriously wounded, and one passenger, H. O. Campbell, a telegraph operator, killed. The treasure taken amounted to between $20,000 and $30,000. Ten armed men have started from here in pursuit of the robbers.

—A Vienna dispatch says the approach of bad weather, which has set in in various quarters, and the fact that the organized bodies of insurgents are retiring toward Novi-Bazar, cause the the Austrians grave apprehensions. Many of the insurgents now in the Novi-Bazar district served in the Ottoman army, and are known to have formidable artillery. The question arises whether it will be safe to withdraw any considerable number of troops from the province so long as Novi-Bazar is occupied by an imposing hostile force. On the other hand, the bad weather has overtaken the army of occupation ere the work of pacification can be considered as commenced. The insurrection has been subjugated, but a very difficult portion of the Austrian task yet remains to be accomplished.

—Telegraphic dispatches from India leave little room for hope that the Afghan difficulty will be arranged peaceably. The government is hastening on military preparations. Troops are being collected from all sides and sent to various points on the northwest frontier of India.

A correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs as follows: The government will make Lahore its headquarters for the winter, and will not return to Calcutta. The foreign office has received orders from the camp at Lahore. This looks as if the Viceroy entertained no hopes of peace. The government is anxious to avoid acting harshly. The Ameer has still the choice of submission open to him. In any event, I doubt whether an attempt to invade Afghanistan on a large scale will be made until spring. Accurate information regarding the Ameer's strength is wanting, but it is known he has a well-equipped standing army after the European model, besides irregular levies. The most difficult question to be encountered is the possible hostile attitude of the border tribes. The faintest mistake in tact or error of judgment might excite a blaze of warfare along the whole frontier of 800 miles. It is estimated that these tribes can easily turn out 100,000 fighting men.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D.L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

TRACT NO. 1.

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each.
TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entitled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."
TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY."
TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 2.

MASONIC MURDER.

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken seventeen degrees. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 3.

SECRETS OF MASONRY.

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is an Illustrated tract, showing the signs, grips and passwords of the first three degrees. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 4.

GRAND! GREAT GRAND.

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This tract calls the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry, a long list of which are given.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 5.

EXTRACTS FROM MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES,

As Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a re-print of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 6.

HON. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' LETTTER,

Giving his and his Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831).

—AND—

HON. JAMES MADISON'S LETTER,

Giving his opinion of Freemasonry (1832.) Both of these letters in one 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge—and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 12.

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry. An 8-page tract.

TRACT NO. 13.

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY

AND

HOWARD CROSBY, D.D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 14.

GRAND LODGE MASONRY,

Its Relation to Civil Government and the Christian Religion.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PREST. BLANCHARD of Wheaton College. A 16-page tract.

TRACT NO. 15

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By Rev. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A. Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract,

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World.
This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract,

TRACT NO 1, IN SWEDISH;
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, of the National' Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

Notices.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

WISCONSIN.

To the friends of Christian reform in Wisconsin:—The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will, D. V., hold its annual meeting at Waupun, to commence Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and to continue through Wednesday and Thursday, the 30th and 31st. It is expected that Past Master Ronayne will work the degrees of Masonry, and other speakers will be in attendance. Entertainment will be provided for those from abroad. J. W. WOOD, Pres.
H. H. HINMAN, Agent for Wis.

MICHIGAN.

Friends of reform in Michigan will please take due notice that the State meeting will be held about the third week in November. Place to be agreed upon after hearing from our friends. Jackson city does not afford us a suitable house, none but Free Methodist church, and inasmuch as we want Ronayne to work the degrees, we think it best to have a large hall. Let us hear from all.

E. MATHEWS, Sec'y.
Brooklyn, Mich.

DES MOINES COUNTY, IOWA.

There will be a mass convention of the people of Des Moines county, Iowa, opposed to secretism in general and Freemasonry especially, at the Bethel Baptist meeting-house, six miles west of Burlington, November 6th and 7th, 1878. The object of the convention is the organization of a County Christian Association, auxiliary to the State and National Associations. Every lover of true freedom is invited to attend, ladies as well as gentlemen. Let this be a grand rally for the cause of Christ and civil and religious liberty. Neighboring county Christian associations are invited to send delegates. Public lecturers who are in the field against the great secret foe of Christianity are expected to be present. We will receive delegates coming from abroad at the Lawrence House, at Burlington, Iowa. Conveyance and entertainment free. The convention will meet at 10 o'clock, Nov. 6, and continue two days.

By order of the Spring Creek Baptist church.

S. A. FLANDERS,
JOHN STORER,
T. L. STEPHERD,
Committee of Arrangements.

ELDER D. P. RATHBUN announces that he has returned to Iowa to remain until after the State Convention, the Lord willing. His address will be Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, care Alvin Hall. Arrangements can also be made for lectures with James McCleery of Marshalltowa. Let Iowa be thoroughly canvassed this winter. Send for Bro. Rathbun.

PAST MASTER RONAYNE will speak at Atlantic, Iowa, 8th, 9th and 10th.
Winfield, 14th, 15th and 16th.
New Sharon, 17th, 18th and 19th.
Wyanet, Illinois, 22nd, 23rd and 24th.
Hickory Grove W. M. church, 7 miles northwest of Wyanet, Oct. 25th and 26th.

TO ALL BAPTIST MINISTERS in Illinois and Iowa who are opposed to secret societies, please address a card and state whether you are in the pastoral work.

Address, Elder Joel H. Austin,
Box 1092, Burlington, Iowa.

—Bro. Isaac Hyatt, of East Hamlin, New York, wishes copies of the Cynosure of January 8, 1878, for a special and good use. Any friends having copies will confer a favor on him and aid the reform by sending them.

—Rev. W. W. Ames, Secretary of the Wisconsin State Association urges all who pledged aid for the State work to pay the sums promised at the State Convention at Waupun or as much sooner as possible. M. R. Britten, Vienna, is State treasurer.

CALIFORNIA.—The meeting which was advertised to be held at Woodbridge, Cal., September 16th, was postponed for good reasons, to be held in Woodland or Sacramento, at some future date.

WORCESTER, NOVEMBER 13TH.

New England is famous for being the cradle of American liberty, and yet it is in fact the head-center of one of the most absolutely despotic systems in existence. So potent has the lodge power become that ministers and men generally tremble and fear to utter words against it. For years it has been girding itself for pronounced action, and while the mass of the people have been silent it has sworn over half a million of able-bodied men into its secret service. Self-reliant and confident of success, it has of late been more exacting upon its own members and more demonstrative in attacks upon others. Lodge oppression is making many of its deceived victims mad; and its imperious bearing toward the church of Christ and the really pious ministry is engendering a sentiment of distrust among its members and a feeling of holy resentment in the church and among the ministry.

Not less than a score of clergymen since I came to New England have expressed to me their detestation of the whole lodge system, while I have not found one to speak or act in its favor. Why it is I can not tell, but these good brethren say they "don't know what to do." They want to act wisely, judiciously, etc., and seem to have been waiting for years to determine what is wise and judicious; and while they have been halting scores have been snared and lost, who, had they been faithful, might have been saved. Some are beginning to see and confess their error and to bring forth fruit meet for repentance, and I have faith to believe that this number will be largely increased through the work of our approaching Convention. To me it seems strange—indeed, a thing almost incredible—that a minister should see the wolf slaying the sheep and lambs of his flock and not know what to do. Yet I suppose it is so, for ministers often and repeatedly tell me that Masonry, Odd-fellowship, etc., are robbing their churches and prayer-meetings of some of their once most active and efficient workers, and they don't know what to do. They are afraid of being injudicious. May God pity and have mercy on these judicious, well-meaning brethren who don't know what to do. Possibly if they would ask him who says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God," their minds would receive light. Of course these men are doing nothing, for they don't know what to do. In this they are consistent. How can they teach or lead others except they themselves know the way. Blind leaders of the blind meet a common and inevitable fate. One "DITCH" for both. Poor men, how we ought to pity and pray for them. Followers of the light of the world and teachers of men see the wolf enter and take one choice sheep after another from the fold over which the "Holy Ghost has made them overseers," and the process goes on year after year with increased frequency, and yet they get no more light on the momentous question, and so "don't know what to do." It will be one part of the convention's work at Worcester to help these brethren out of their trouble and show them just what Masonry is, and then if they don't know what to do they are not fit to teach or to preach, themselves being judges.

I have been looking over the ground and praying over the approaching Convention, and have come to look upon it as second in importance to no convention ever held in this city in its influence on the cause of Christ, and on the churches in New England especially. The issue is made between the church and the lodge, between the the ministers of Christ and the "Worshipful Masters" of secrecy, between the "Bride of Christ" and the Apocalyptic "mother of harlots," spoken of in Rev. 17:5. In this issue is to be decided whether men who swear to conceal the crimes of their fellow-men in the lodge shall be esteemed worthy of Christian fellowship in the church. Whether the man who takes his child to the altar of Masonic baptism, and has it there anointed with the "oil of consecration," placed under the care of a god-father and god-mother and then endorses the the Worshipful Master's proclamation, "In the name and under the auspices of the Supreme Council of Sovereign Grand Inspectors-General of the thirty-third and last degree, I proclaim this child to be purified by Masonic baptism and anointed with the oil of consecration to Masonic duty," may bring that same child to receive the sacred rite of Christian baptism at the hand of God's appointed minister, and whether a Knight Templar who takes the fifth libation from a human skull, is, while unrepentant, a fit person to receive and partake of the "cup of the Lord," with the approval of the church.

These, along with other questions equally vital to the Christian religion, are pending, while other scarcely less momentous in their results as touching the civil liberties of the people are directly involved in this discussion, and no Christian or patriot can long be indifferent or remain neutral.

November, 13th to 15th, is the time and Worcester the place, when, in Mechanics' Hall, the death-knell of lodge supremacy in New England ought to be struck; and it may, and by the help of God will be, if all who know what to do will do as well as they know. No friend who can reach this meeting can afford to be absent. Strange to say New England has lagged behind hitherto in this reform. Brethren, let it not be so any longer. Come, trusting not in Ronayne, in Stoddard or even in Moody or Phillips, if they should consent to speak to us of their convictions, but trust in Jesus. Your brother in Christ.

J. P. STODDARD.

No Jesus There.

I saw a neat, well-furnished room,
And many gathered there;
Midst rites and forms of various kinds,
They had a form of prayer;
God they addressed as he who built
This universe so fair,
But did not own his blessed Son,
They had no Jesus there.

Yet in that room a master sat,
They homage to him paid,
As "Noble, Grand," or "Worshipful,"
They recognized their head;
And titles which belong to God,
They with a mortal share,
But they ignore the Saviour's blood,
And have no Jesus there.

A simple Christian man was asked
To join this pompous throng,
To learn their art, their secrets gain,
To join their prayer and song.
"No, no," said he; "'tis Christ I love,
His honors none can share
With my consent. No; never, sirs,
You have no Jesus there."

A weary stranger hailed near,
Wayworn was he and sad;
For him no fellowship had they,
No word of comfort had;
He did not have their grip, their word,
Their bounty might not share.
A Christ-bought soul! they knew him not,
They had no Jesus there.

O, hour sublime! when God's great trump
The universe shall shake,
When stars shall fall and suns die out
And all the dead awake,
Thousands who learned the mystic art
And had a standing fair,
Will hear the word, "Depart! depart!
You had no Jesus there."

The Beast and his Image.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

"Little children it is the last time: as ye have heard that anti-Christ should come, even now there are many anti-Christs, whereby we know that it is the last time." (1 John 2:18)

Of the many forms of anti-Christ which show that these are indeed the last days, two are especially prominent, and, though hostile to each other, are alike hostile to Christ and his cause. They are Romanism and Freemasonry, or the Beast and his Image, as described in Rev. 13th chapter.

Assuming that the opinion of Protestant commentators that the Beast meant Rome, pagan and papal, is correct, I propose to show that organized secretism of which Freemasonry is at once type and pattern is the very image of the Beast.

First, both are essentially pagan in their origin. Romanism, though embodying the great truths of Christianity was engrafted on the ancient paganism. Its saints take the place of the subordinate deities. Its saints days are fixed on the old heathen festivals. The Virgin Mary is her Queen of Heaven, which title the old heathens gave to the moon and worshiped it as Romanists now do the Virgin. Freemasonry while claiming a Jewish origin and embodying some facts of Jewish history, is actually patterned after the old heathen sun-worship. Dr. Mackey calls the ancient mysteries (the secret pagan worship of the ancients,) "truly Masonic institutions." (Mackey's Lexicon, page 35). The ceremonies of initiation in Freemasonry are patterned after these ancient mysteries so that they really reproduce them. Masons celebrate the death, burial and resurrection of Hiram the Builder. Of the old mysteries says Mackey (Lexicon, page 35), "In all of them was a legend in which by the dramatic representation of a violent death and a subsequent restoration to life of some distinguished personage, the doctrine of the resurrection and the soul's immortality was emblematically illustrated." In all of this system of mystery the real worship was paid to the sun. And of this system of sun-worship the same author says that "Masonry is its philosophical development." (See Mackey's Ritualist, page 114.")

Second; they are alike in the respect paid to tradition. Romanism is founded partly on history and partly on tradition. Masonry is founded wholly on tradition, though it embodies some facts of history; and both hold their traditions as equally binding with the revealed Word.

Third; both are systems of mystery. On the "old harlot" is written her name which is "Mystery, Babylon, the mother of harlots and the abominations of the earth." Masonry claims to be such a mystery that no one can reveal it. (Landmark 23d, Mackey's Ritualist, page 242.)

Fourth; both claim infallibility. Masonry says that it is not in the power of man to make any innovations on the body of Masonry. (Ritualist page 243). Rome holds that the Pope is the head of an infallible church.

Fifth; both repudiate all responsibility to public sentiment. The decrees of the Romish church must be accepted without qualification or examination. It admits of no discussion. You may go all over the world and speak in favor of Romanism but you cannot speak against it where it has power to prevent it. This is equally true of Masonry. It favors no discussion; admits of no investigations; nor will it permit its character to be considered if it has the power to prevent it.

Sixth; both deny the right of private judgment. Romanism says its authority must not be questioned. The authority of the Master in the lodge is as despotic as the sun in the firmament. (Mackey's Lexicon, page 331.) "If we would be Masons we must yield private judgment." (Pierson's Traditions of Masonry, page 30.) This spirit of obedience runs through the whole system. The Mason is obedient to the Master, the Master to the Grand Lodge, and the Grand Lodge to the "Old Charges." (Mackey's Lexicon, page 331.)

Seventh; both profess to regenerate the soul and make it holy by initiatory ceremonies. Romanism professes that its members have been regenerated in baptism by which they were initiated into the church. Masonry has other ceremonies of initiation in which it claims to regenerate the candidate, make him holy and prepare him for heaven. The candidate for initiation into the lodge, says Dr. Mackey (Ritualist page 23), "Having been walking in darkness and covered over with the pollutions of the outer and profane world, he comes to our doors seeking the new birth, and asking the withdrawal of the veil that conceals Divine truth from his uninitiated sight." "By its ritual it is implied that we have been redeemed from the death of sin and the sepulcher of pollution." "It represents a man saved from the grave of iniquity and raised to the faith of salvation." (Mackey's Ritualist page 109). "In the third degree we are admitted to the Holy of Holies; we view the cherubim in all their brightness and are blessed with a foretaste of heaven through the resurrection of the dead." (Oliver's Signs and Symbols, page 41).

Eighth; both teach that membership will secure salvation. It is the church that saves; there is no salvation out of the church. So says Rome. Masonry says, "Darkness reminds the candidate of his ignorance, which Masonry is to enlighten; of his evil nature, which Masonry is to purify; of the world in whose obscurity he has been wandering, from which Masonry is to rescue him." (Mackey's Ritualist, page 44.)

Ninth; both dishonor Christ. Romanism by putting saints in the place of him who is the only mediator and advocate with the Father. The Virgin Mary is made to be an intercessor, but Christ says, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." (John 14:6.)

Masonry knows no mediator. It requires all its members to pray, but presents them with Christless prayers. "The religion then of Masonry is pure theism on which its different members engraft their own opinions, but are not permitted to introduce them into the lodge or to connect their truth or falsehood with the truth of Masonry." (Mackey's Lexicon, page 402.) It ignores Christ, not only in all its ritual, but also in the burial service, in which it is assumed that the dead Mason has entered heaven. Masonry does not honor Christ and hence dishonors the Father. "He that honoreth not the Son honoreth not the Father that sent him." (John 5:23.) Now that this is anti-Christ we know because "Every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God and this is that spirit of anti Christ whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now is in the world." (1 John 4:3.)

There are other points of resemblance between these two great systems of anti-Christ. I have indicated a few. If the one is the Beast is not the other the Image? If there is danger that the one will subvert our civil and religious liberty is there not equal danger from the other? What though they are in antagonism; did not Herod and Pilate alike reject Christ while they hated each other? Pure Christianity has nothing to gain from the opposition of Romanism and Freemasonry. Both must be destroyed. "Then both (the Beast and his Image) were cast alive in the lake of fire burning with brimstone. (Rev. 19:20.)

Two Causes of Evil in the Methodist Episcopal Church.

BY REV. J. T. MICHAEL.

2. There is a tendency with some to judge the work of a minister, especially a young minister, by the wrong moral standard.

God is the author of the correct moral standard of Gospel preaching, and he has given it to man in the Bible and in the ethical intuitions of the mind. In every congregation there is a standard more or less resembling this. When there is an exact pattern, and when the preaching to the congregation to which it belongs answers the demands of the true standard, it will answer the demands of that congregation as far as morals are concerned. When there is a difference the same preaching will fail to satisfy in proportion to the degree of dissimilarity. There are two ways then of making the morals of preaching acceptable to the people. One is to make them conform to the defective standard of the people, the other is to make the preaching and the people's standard conform to God's standard. The first is dishonorable to the Christian ministry, the other is the way chosen by the Master to bring the world to himself.

It is not, however, always the easier way. In following it every one must run the risk of meeting opposition; and this opposition is often from those in the church. The most superficial student of church history ought to know that both nominal and unenlightened Christians have frequently opposed the preaching of the Gospel simply on account of the moral truths it contained. The preaching being what it should, opposition may be expected until the true standard exists in every mind. Now, it is undeniable that in a large number of churches the standard needs elevating, but for a minister, especially a young minister, to attempt to do this work in many of them, is to make opposition almost certain. Still, he must do it, for there can be no compromise with sin or ignorance either in or out of the church.

It is better to have a congregation of ten who will receive the pure word, than with a thousand hearers to be compelled to lower the standard in order to retain them. The church can never conquer the world in this way, but the world will surely degrade the church.

Our bishops and presiding elders

then should be very careful (and I believe they generally are) in putting an estimate upon a minister who has met with opposition in his field of labor. This is especially true in reference to those young men who have appointments in which the standard needs improving. The statement that a preacher met with no opposition on this charge might be the worst thing that could be said about him, while the fact that he had been opposed might be greatly in his favor. A bishop after speaking of the benefits of hard fields for young men, will sometimes fire an entire conference by a powerful description of his correct and noble conception of ministerial duty. This is all good, but will not the bishop remember that in many of these fields there is a standard differing materially from the one in his mind? The young man sent to one of these may very soon learn that he must either alter the standard he got from the bishop, or meet with opposition. Of course he must hold on to his standard and enter the battle, but it is very probable that his presiding elder will be informed by persons with whose unenlightened spiritual condition he has little or no knowledge, that their preacher has become unpopular and that they should have a change. In this way the presiding elder may get altogether wrong views, and he will be apt to give them to the bishop at the next session of the conference. A fear that the presiding elders and bishops may be misled in this way exists in the minds of many of the younger ministers, and is productive of bad results.

While the bishops are giving their conceptions of the true standard of ministerial work, let them convince their brethren, especially the younger ones, that they will always honor the man who does his duty, even when it produces opposition, and this fear will vanish, and in its place a stronger and healthier determination to preach an uncompromising Gospel will appear.

A Tribute to Reformers.

If reforms were left to thinkers and scholars, and the wise and prudent, they would never be undertaken at all. The grandest efforts of heroic virtue can only be inspired by that supreme devotion to a holy cause which amounts to fanaticism, and nothing less than this can call forth the enduring admiration and perfect love of mankind. This truth is illustrated in the lives of all the world's great martyrs to liberty and high-priests of reform. If no hazards are to be braved, nothing will be attempted. None of the great agitations of the world could have passed muster if they had been compelled in advance to go to trial on a cool calculation of the chances of success and the sacrifices involved. The reformer feels that if he would save his life he must be ready to lose it. He sees the particular cause he espouses with such vividness, from his mount of vision, and embraces it with such unreserved ardor that its service is accepted as a divine command. The light which points his way casts all else into the shade. He accepts the philosophy embodied in Mr. Lincoln's motto of "one war at a time." The very one-sidedness of reformers, their readiness to die for what they believe to be the truth, and that element of exaggeration which so often enters into their conceptions, thus become providential guises, for which the world has reason to return thanks.—Hon. Geo. W. Julian.

The Tree Known by its Fruit.

Ye shall know them by their fruit.—Matt. vii. 6.

In this declaration of Jesus we have the true method to determine the character of all individuals, systems and theories. If the fruit they bear tends to make men better, holier, less selfish and worldly, they are of God and have his sanction. If, however, they tend to worldliness, selfishness and sin, they are evil and disapproved by God. "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

Let us test secret, oath-bound societies by this standard. Their fruits are evil, as the following will show:

1. All these associations, from Masonry down to its latest born child, purposely, and as a bond of union, rule out the Lord Jesus Christ from their rituals. Every individual entering these associations becomes a party to this rejection of Christ, and must come under the malediction of Matt. 10: 33.

2. The principle of secret clanism originated in paganism, and is entirely contrary to the spirit of the Gospel.

3. The parade and display as well as the high sounding titles of the lodges, is altogether of the world, and at complete variance with the spirit of the Gospel.

4. Association with the lodges brings professors of religion into improper intimacy with the enemies of their Lord, contrary to express Scriptural prohibition.—2 Cor. 6: 14–18.

5. These associations falsely claim to be founded upon benevolence, while they practically exclude the aged, the infirm, and the poor—the true objects of benevolence. Besides this, all their pretended benevolence is only that of an insurance company, and no one gets more than the payment of his dues entitles him to receive, and many less than this.

6. In some cases they blasphemously assume the functions of the church and the ministry, in burying the dead, and otherwise. This, too, by men who are not professors of religion, and sometimes by licentious and profane unbelievers.

7. In many cases they are placed above the church and the Gospel, and some are led to trust to their relation to these associations for salvation instead of Christ. Then, members of these societies will do for one another what they will not do for a Christian, or a member of their own church. Said a chaplain in the war of the rebellion, "Masonry is a good thing. Many a poor wounded, sick, or dead soldier has been cared for by his society, who would have been left without this attention had he not been a member."

"Did you ever see a member of your own church suffer without this attention?"

"Oh yes, many a one."

"Then you did for men, because they belonged to your secret lodge, what you refused to do for others because they were Christians and members of your own church." The Lord deliver us from such pretended benevolence.

8 The evil results of association with these lodges is seen in the following: In over thirty years' observation I have repeatedly noted the following: Persons presenting themselves as seekers of religion, or as candidates for church membership, and members of some secret lodge, and unwilling to sunder their relations thereto, have never been of much advantage to the church in helping forward its interests. Others who were led into these associations, after uniting with the church, usually, if not universally, become estranged from the church, neglected its meetings for those of the lodge, often fell into bad habits by reason of the unfavorable associations they were led into, and, in many cases brought reproach upon the church, causing their expulsion.

Preachers who unhappily became entangled in the meshes of the lodge became inefficient, inconsistent and unreliable, and more of politicians and scheming place-seekers than ministers of Christ and shepherds of the flock. And, in many cases, the mantle of charity had often to be enlarged to cover apparent discrepancies between some of the actions and words and consistency and truth.

In our solemn judgment no one will enter into any of these worldly associations who is in a healthy spiritual condition. And it is only when grace is waning, and some selfish purpose is to be gained, that a follower of Christ can be seduced into associations where his divine Master is kept out.

But is the church justified now in making membership in these lodges a test membership in her fold? Yes, as much so as any other evil. For many of the most prosperous years of her history the M. E. church made attendance upon class meeting a test of membership, and who had a right to question her prerogative to do so? The making of spirituous liquors, or counterfeiting the currency of the country, is not expressly forbidden in the Scriptures. Yet who would question the church's right to rule out of her communion all who would engage in either?

The fruit of all these associations is bad; therefore they are enemies of God, and the disturbers of his church, as is too sadly evident in many places when they have united their forces for this unholy purpose. —J. Hoke in Highway of Holiness.

Competent Witnesses.

In the old Roman law it was said that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word should be established. But it is well known that the weight of testimony depends on the character of the witnesses.

First, do they understand the case pending? Are they competent to give testimony?

Second, are they truthful? Can we give credit to what they say?

Third, are they impartial? Are they enemies or are they special friends to either party? If neither friends nor enemies, and are otherwise competent to give testimony, the evidence is received and considered. Should it be found that the witnesses are voluntarily testifying against their own interest and are likely to receive damage in person, property and character by giving such testimony, it at once fills such evidence with the purest gold in the estimation of every candid thinker. Hence when lodge men under the influence of God's Spirit and Gospel, without human counsel, are known to come out boldly at all hazards, with their eyes wide open to the danger threatening them under such circumstances, and give public testimony against the foul, dishonest influence of the lodge; none but the wilfully blind will throw it away. I desire, in a brief way, to give a few cases which came under my observation in a revival meeting in the city of G.

Case No. 1 was a man of talent and culture; treasurer of one of the lodges of the city. After a long resistence he yielded to God and came trembling to the altar of prayer, where, on his knees, he pleaded for mercy. Close by his side was a brother of the same craft who was convicted of sin. The former remarked to his lodge friend, "John, we must leave that institution. You know we cannot be Christians and do as we do there." This gentleman did leave the brotherhood of grips and signs—went down from that temple justified and an heir of God, while "John" refused to give up his idol, and became more filled with his own devices than ever.

Case 2nd. A young man of promise came many times to the altar of prayer, apparently in great distress on account of his sins. He remarked to a lady friend: "I have gone as far as I can in this matter. I can not move another peg until I give up secretism."

Case No. 3 was marvelously wrought upon by the spirit of truth, but was unyielding for many days. However, his friends continued to pray for him. At a late hour in the night he aroused a good brother who was sleeping near by saying: "Oh, I am dying. Will you pray for me. I'm lost! I'm lost!" The friends were soon called in. Fervent prayer was offered for him. On his knees, by the bedside apparently in great agony, and feeling in his heart that without salvation he must soon sink into hell, he confessed one sin after another. At last with upturned face he cried with a loud voice, saying: "Lord, I give them all up and secrecy, too." I need scarcely add that soon after that consecration to God, peace, love and joy sprang up in that soul till praises filled the house, making it a Bethel to all the redeemed present.

These are but few of the many renunciations and testimonials we have known to be voluntarily hurled against this Babylon of iniquity, whose grips, signs, and lying wonders have blinded the minds of so many who might otherwise have been burning and shining lights in the world. How long, O Lord, how long!—N. E. Gardner, in the Am. Freeman.

—The Presbyterian Journal puts some points before its readers that deserve a wider reading:

1. If a professing Christian pays five dollars a year toward supporting his church, and twenty-five toward the Masonic institution, which does he love the most, religion or Masonry?

2. If he pays nothing for the church, on the ground that all he can spare from necessary expenses must be paid to the Young Men's Christian Association, which does he consider of the greatest importance, that Association or the church?

3. If he pays ten dollars for the church, and twenty for tobacco, are we to understand that tobacco is worth just twice as much as religion?

4. If he practices strict economy only in curtailing his church-expenses, what inferences can we justly draw?

Reform News.

The Way Opening for the National Gathering. Ben. Butler on a High Horse with A. H. Quint "on Behind."

FROM THE GENERAL AGENT.

NEAR AUBURNDALE, Mass., October 2, 1878.

DEAR K.—I came to this region on Saturday last, P. M., and have found ample opportunities for work. Sabbath I preached in the Orthodox Congregational church in Wayland and in the Wesleyan Methodist church at Cochituate. Monday and Tuesday evenings I lectured at Cochituate to good audiences, and have an engagement at Wayland Congregational church this evening, Thursday and Friday at Spencer and Saturday at Willimantic, Conn.

Further investigation may change my opinion, but at present New England appears to be ripe and ready for action upon the anti-secrecy reform. I visited Boston yesterday and called on a few of our friends there, Bros. Hastings, Mc Fall and Langworthy, included, and am glad to say that the "Hub" will be represented at our Worcester meeting, November 13th, 14th and 15th.

While in the city I obtained a copy of the "Proceedings of the Massachusetts Council of Deliberation Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite," held at Boston, June 30, 1874. On the 36th page of this report I find the following which will be of interest, especially to friends in Massachusetts, where Bro. B. F. Butler is figuring so prominently in politics:

After due inquiry among many brethren of the Rite who were attached to the same bodies with Gen. B. F. Butler prior to the time he claims to have received the degrees of Ill.·. Inspector-General, and after duly consulting the Sov.·. Inspector-General, by whose authority he claims to have been raised to the thirty-third degree, the committee are satisfied that Gen. Benjamin F. Butler of Lowell, Mass., was duly raised to the degree of Ill.·. Inspector-General of the New York Supreme Council, prior to the union of the two Supreme Councils; that the obligations of the grade were conferred on him according to the direction of the commander of said council, and were taken by him in March, 1864, and that under the articles of union he is entitled to be recognized as an honorary member of the Supreme Council. * * * Your committee recommend that the Council of Deliberation petition the Supreme Council to grant to Gen. Benjamin F. Butler permission to sign the oath of fealty and renew his allegiance.

CHARLES LEVI WOODBURY, 33°,
MARSHALL P. WILDER, 33°,
Com. on the state of the Rite.

In looking over the list of the members' names in this official document, I find on page 96 the name "Alonzo H. Quint, New Bedford," entered as a member of the Massachusetts Consistory, S.·. P.·. R.·. S.·. 32°, from which it appears that A. H. Quint was only one degree below his loving brother B. F. Butler in 1874, and as he has shown some zeal for the craft it is not improbable that ere this he stands on a "Masonic level" with brother Benjamin. Butler is an aspirant for the office of Governor in Massachusetts, and should the people of this State elevate him to that position they will, in my judgment, do an act less reprehensible than the action of the Congregational Council in electing A. H. Quint to the office of secretary of that body. I am glad to obtain, especially at this time, the official document that lies before me. It will be of great service to me while in New England by giving the names of all the high Masons of 1874, as well as other valuable information. I shall have something to say to your readers next week about the approaching anniversary at Worcester. Meantime let every friend be girding on the armor and getting ready for the conflict.

SPENCER, Mass., Oct. 3d.

I have had a day of blessed and precious experiences, but not unmingled with disappointments. I took leave of Bro. Leadbetter and family at an early hour this morning and felt that my labors in his neighborhood had not been in vain. Bro. L. is encouraged and will henceforth have warmer friends to cooperate with him.

I gave in the Congregational church at Wayland last evening a partial expose of the ceremonies of Masonry and after my lecture one young man came forward and subscribed for the Cynosure, and another said he knew from experience that I told the truth. He was initiated in England, but had never before heard a lecture on the subject and has no love for the order.

I reached Worcester at nine o'clock A. M. and found letters awaiting my arrival. One from my dear boy Willie, speaking of his Christian experience, made me especially glad. Bro. Jackson, of Harrison, Maine, has appointments for me there, beginning with October 19th. At Worcester I met Bro. Perry from Thompson, Connecticut, asking for help and reporting the field ripe and ready for the harvest, and later in the day Rev. Bro. Wing of E. Douglas, who had come with his horse and carriage sixteen miles to see about getting help in his town. Three other calls for work by letter indicate an encouraging degree of interest in New England. With God's blessing we may look for the grandest convention we have ever held. All with whom I have spoken or communicated on the subject desire to have Bro. Ronayne present and work the degrees, and I think the way will be open and his very reasonable terms complied with. As yet I have found only four places where the thirty dollars necessary to secure the working of the three degrees can be relied on, but hope to find the other four in time to secure his attendance. If once here he would be received with enthusiasm and liberally sustained I have no doubt.

I came here expecting to speak this and to-morrow evenings, but no suitable hall could be obtained and Bro. Tower's letter notifying me of the fact not being received, I find myself disappointed. I have had a blessed evening at class-meeting in the M. E. church, so it is doubtless all for the best.

J. P. STODDARD.

Work for Connecticut.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I would suggest to the friends of reform in Connecticut the importance of availing for ourselves and the cause the greatest amount of service from Bro. Stoddard, who has signified his willingness to labor in our State; and for this purpose we need concert of action and preparation for the work. If those who want lectures will write to J. A. Conant at Willimantic, it will save time and help the work. With the help of God I hope to arrange for three or four lectures in as many different places. I hope Bro. Stoddard will be able to visit all sections of our State and stir up the people and thus prepare the way for a glorious State meeting this fall, and that we may receive a great blessing from the meeting to be held at Worcester. The ground must first be prepared to receive the seed if we would reap an abundant harvest.

Yours for the truth,

P. BACON.

The Great Work to be Done—From Past Master Ronayne.

ADEL, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Since my arrival in Iowa about a month ago, it gives me the greatest pleasure to report that everywhere I have had the most unbounded success. The greatest enthusiasm has everywhere been manifested, and in most instances men have come a distance of fifteen to twenty miles to witness the inner workings of Freemasonry and listen to its philosophy examined and explained.

Before I seceded from the institution and repudiated its blasphemous and unholy obligations, some four years ago, I became convinced of the fact that Freemasonry had borrowed ALL its rights, symbols and ceremonies from the secret worship which was practiced among the pagans of antiquity, and all my researches into the nature and the origin of the Masonic philosophy since then only confirms the conclusion which I at that time arrived at. The worship of Freemasonry to-day is, without any doubt, the very self same worship which Ahab and his wicked wife Jezebel established in Israel three thousand years ago, and which was originally borrowed from Egypt through Phœnicia when the the children of Israel forsook the true God and wandered after the host of heaven and worshipped Baalam. It is not enough that we expose the grips, signs and passwords of Masonry, or that we perform correctly the various foolish ceremonies of any one particular degree, we must also explain the origin, the meaning the nature and the design of these ceremonies, and having done this we have established beyond the power of controversy that the Baal of Samaria, the Bacchus and the Dionysius of Phœnicia, the Osiris of Egypt and the Brahma of India are identical in every single particular with the Hiram Abiff of the Masonic institution. We must oppose and expose Masonry because Masonry is the old Baal worship revived and I believe in my soul if we do this God will always crown our efforts with success and we shall be the instruments in his hands of freeing his church from the terrible nightmare under which she is now laboring in consequence of her connection with the notorious demon-worship of the Masonic lodge. Every Anti-masonic lecturer ought to prepare himself so as to be thoroughly posted in regard to this essential phase of the subject and the degrees ought to be worked with the sole object of establishing this undoubted fact.

I cannot leave Iowa yet for some time. It will be the 25th of this month at least before I return to Chicago and then I must prepare at once to attend the Wisconsin State meeting at Waupun on the 30th. I wish in this public manner to return my hearty thanks to all the friends in Iowa for their confidence in my humble efforts to bring Freemasonry into merited contempt and the very liberal support they have given me one and all. I have been unable to visit several important points from want of time although urgently requested to do so but at the very first opportunity I shall again return to this State when I hope to have more time to give it a more thorough canvass, and pay my respects more fully to Most Worshipful T. S. Parvin and his numerous hosts of goat-riders.

Enclosed I send you a corrected list of appointments for October which you will please publish and oblige.

Very sincerely yours,

EDMOND RONAYNE,

Another State Wheeling into Line.

KEARNEY, Neb.

EDITOR CYNOSURE, Dear Brother in Christ: — You may doubtless think it strange that I have not hitherto answered your letter of July 31st. My reasons are that I was in attendance at our annual conference, and it being the time of the organizing of a new conference, viz., the West Nebraska, and having been chosen secretary and then presiding elder of this entire field I found very active employment for all my time, but did not forget the interests of your cause. Bro. Stoddard said that either the first or fourth week in December would be a favorable time when he could attend. The conferences set a time to consider this matter and the following is the result. Elders Austin and Caldwell were appointed in behalf of the East and myself in behalf of the West Conference, a committee to select a place, and Omaha and Lincoln, etc., were suggested, as it was considered best to hold it in the eastern part of the State. Also a delegation of five from each conference were appointed to attend. In behalf of the East: S. Austin, W. P. Caldwell, J. L. St. Clair, and two others, names forgotten. In behalf of the West: W. S. Spooner, J. Belknap, C. G. Bowers, C. C. Kellogg, and O. Knepper. I have a desire that E. Ronayne or some other competent lecturer be present to work the degrees, as I have a candidate now ready. There are many true and enthusiastic anti-secrecy men and women in the State of Nebraska and if they can be induced to act in unison the day of the domination of the lodge in Nebraska is past. Already I hear the notes of alarm, although no special action has been taken by the anti-secrecy friends. Yet it seems that to be known as opposed to secrecy is to subject one's self to their public and private insult. A Baptist secrecy divine took the trouble to visit a small church that I lately formed and inform them that they were not members of the church, as their pastor at the time of their joining the church did not ask them if they were connected with any secret society. They invited him to attend more strictly to his own business, and assured him that they understood the rules of the church they had joined and were satisfied with them. When I returned home my neighbors had a harvest home and old settlers' reunion in a grove near my residence. A reverend secretist belonging to the M. E. church was among the speakers. He spent his strength to extol the principles of secrecy, telling us there was secrecy in the family, in the army, in the church and the government; and exhorted all to stick to their lodges as the sheet anchor of safety, etc. This taught me that the lodges were alarmed and omit no opportunity to strike a blow for their lives.

As soon as I am advised as to a suitable place to hold the State Convention I shall write you again. I am confident that among the intelligent people of Nebraska the lodges and their works are a great and growing abomination and if we do our duty we can gain a victory for right.

Since writing the above I have received a letter stating that the other members of our committee have been invited to hold our first anti-secrecy State Convention at York Center, York county. This is a good and central selection. York county is one of the best in the State and York Center is a thriving town the present terminus of the Midland Pacific Railroad. I commend the selection and it will be held the 3d and 4th of December, 1878, at the town of York in York county. Now, brethren Blanchard, Stoddard and all others of the National Christian Association, we ask your co-operation and assistance in arranging for this State meeting. My brethren also say to me that they wish a competent lecturer to be present to work the degrees of Masonry at that meeting and we intend that the financial matters shall all be right. Please send to me the names and postoffice address of all the Cynosure subscribers in the State of Nebraska as I wish to correspond with them.

WARDVILLE, Ont., Sept. 11, '78.

Elder Barlow, the eloquent Anti-masonic orator, visited Canada as the pastor of a small congregation, who agreed to give him $600 salary per annum. A compromise was effected by which the Masons already in the church could remain if no more were introduced into its fellowship by him. Having forgotten the command to "cast out the old leaven," the whole lump has become sour and unfit for use, as the batch has cast out the new and true leaven.

An opportunity was given Mr. Barlow to defend himself and expose Masonry before his church and the public. No Baptist clergyman or other member of his church would take the stand with him. He therefore wrote for a minister of the Canada Presbyterian church to come and take his stand on the platform with him. The minister of Wardville Presbyterian church, at his own expense, went to Ridgetown and opened the meeting with prayer and sustained him.

After several evenings' discussion of Freemasonry an opportunity was given the Freemasons to defend themselves. Not one appeared. The congregation then passed the resolution that no more Freemasons be fellowshiped by this church. The Masons within the church uniting with those without resolved to dismiss their pastor and recall their excluded brethren. The "unclean swine" of Masonry, who call all not of their fraternity "dogs" or "cowans," are recalled by the dogs and both are now wallowing in the same puddle! A Christian (?) church has excluded Christ.

A deputation of the Presbyterian church at Wardville waited on their pastor last Monday evening and surprised him by informing him that the congregation, by a vote of eight to one, had resolved to invite him to resign his charge, on the ground that they were unable to raise his salary. Another member of the church was conversing with the minister's wife at the same time that the deputation were talking to her husband, and telling her that this had happened to her husband "because he had said things in the pulpit and in private that were disparaging to Freemasonry, and that he must learn in future to let it alone or he is a ruined man." It was thus a polite invitation to get out into the street as soon as possible. Yet there are due over two hundred dollars of salary unpaid. Pity those Christians could not be just before being GENEROUS! It is a poor prospect before winter to be sent away by his debtors. Bad pay! Poor debtors!

Julius Cæsar could say of Gaul, "I come, I saw, I conquered." So could Bro. Barlow of Canada. Cæsar always had his army with him in the field in the hour of victory, but Bro. Barlow lost his supporters when victorious. We saw him for a moment or so standing on the platform at Ridgetown, as the train stopped for a few minutes to exchange passengers. He was without a charge, or home, or visible means of support, and with cancer in thee ye, yet noble even in his trials! What a blessed privilege to grasp his hand ere he left our land.

May the champion of Lockport, N. Y., who so gallantly struck dumb the choice of the Knights Templar and took them all prisoners in our sight and hearing at the Anti-masonic convention, in the winter of 1873, still live to meet the common foe on Canadian soil.

The enemy here has gagged the pulpit and the press, the senate and the forum, the bar and the bench. Theology, medicine, law and physics lie equally at its feet. The Imperial Prince is at its head, but the sword of truth must conquer. Come again, brave Barlow! You shall yet (D. V.) have a noble opportunity to measure swords with your secret foe. He may have bitten your heel; thank God he has not yet destroyed your head in fair fight. Come back to us; we need your aid. We hate U. S. Fenians. We love and welcome your honest men, valiant in fight, and lovers of the truth. Come one, come all, brothers in a common cause.

JAMES DONALDSON.

[The above statements, so far as I am concerned, are, in the main correct; yet perhaps a little explanation may not be amiss. If any "compromise" was made it was only a tacit one. When I visited the church with a view to settlement, at the request of the church, I had no desire to take a pastorate in Canada, and was therefore specially careful to tell those with whom I came in contact, that while I would make no efforts to get rid of such Masons as were already in the church I would never consent to the admission of any more, in any way. I then told them plainly if they did not want a man of such principles, not to call me, and left the field, with very little idea that a call would be extended. I, however, speedily received a unanimous call with a paper signed by six brethren, pledging me the full salary. Among these six were the names of the two Masons who were afterward so earnest in endeavoring to drive me from the pastorate.

So much for the "compromise." Bro. D. speaks of the "returning" of the Masons to the church. Some might infer that these had been expelled. They left of their own accord as soon as my lectures were given, and did all in their power to destroy the church; and at my last advices, were not yet satisfied to take their places, until the church had humbled herself a little more before the lodge.

My sympathies are with Bro. D. in his trials. May the good Lord send him speedy deliverance.

Organize.

NORTH ROBINSON, Ohio.

Bro. Barlow's letter in the Cynosure of September 26th, is a wise one. It raises an important inquiry. My answer to his question as to "How?" is, organize. Nothing else will do. We must concentrate in every community the anti-lodge sentiment into an organized working force. Without this it is, in a large measure, lost labor. "The fowls came and devoured them up." We must husband our forces. Men who leave the lodge, who oppose the lodge, must have association; they must have help; they must have something to fall back upon. Our foe is a compact one. Their organization in form is of the closest order. We cannot expect to meet and overcome them with scattered forces. We must concentrate and then bear down on the enemy in the name of our God. Order is God's law. This is but another name for system. This is also but another word for organization. This then must be regular, systematic, connected, open, with a view to work. Give the system, and the labor and the money will be forthcoming. "The gold and the silver are the Lord's." If it be his cause, and we pursue the right course, the money will come. It is a matter of faith and activity, of business tact. Experience proves its necessity and its truth; reason utters her voice and approves.

JOHN V. POTTS.

A VETERAN OF TWO WARS.

WAUSEON, Ohio.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—In your issue of August 29th allusion is made to me as having been a member of the M. E. church. Please allow me to correct that mistake, by saying that I gave my heart to God and my hand to the church of the United Brethren in Christ in the spring of 1830, and never was a member of any other. I went with this church into the war against the sin of American slavery; have been in many engagements face to face with the enemy; contesting the battle ground inch by inch, step by step, until amid the shouts of triumph victory was proclaimed over the "sum of all villainies."

Flushed with this victory I was ready for another engagement with the same enemy, the devil, who has inaugurated another and greater war than the former; greater, because of its location. The headquarters of slavery were located in the Southern States. Our present enemy is strongly entrenched in nearly every village, town and city in every State and Territory in the Union. The present war is greater also because of the secretiveness of the enemy. It is seldom we can get this potent foe to God and man in open conflict.

I was glad to see in the Religious Telescope and also in the New York Independent a call for Christians to meet in Aurora, Illinois. It was my happiness to meet in that city nearly one hundred intelligent, matured Christians from ten or eleven States, representing about as many Christian denominations, all of one mind and one heart touching the great evils of oath-bound secret societies. It was there in the great city hall packed to its utmost capacity that President Blanchard, as he arose to make his great speech, had the holy daring to invite Masons to front seats and be sworn, and in case they should deny anything he should say on that occasion he could put them into the penitentiary for perjury, by competent witnesses then present. A large number of Masons were present but they dared not accept the issue. From that time to the present I have been operating in much weakness by various means and methods in this good cause.

As I am just now passing into my seventieth year I cannot go out to battle with my comrades in distant fields. I have therefore erected a little church across the way, just before my door, comfortably seating over a hundred persons, for religious and reformatory purposes; and now I hope some faithful soldiers who are not afraid to stand up for Jesus will come this way and help us in this home field. Pro-masonry U. B. preachers need not call; the door will not open to such of its own accord, and I would as soon open to Jeff Davis, a traitor to his country, as to a traitor to his church.

We have had several meetings, all very interesting. The first and most noted was the dedication meeting when about two hundred and fifty were present, one-half in the church and the remainder in the bower comfortably seated and shaded by the generosity of Bros. K. C. Skeals and C. & A. Gould. As the little church was paid for when completed the people were not called on for money. We therefore had time after the dedicatory services for a speaking meeting. The occasion from beginning to end was very enjoyable, everybody seemed to be happy.

J. MILLER.

"WHAT ART THOU DOING?"

DAYTON, W. Terr'y.

The wisdom of man alone cannot fully answer this important question. So deep are the plans and schemes of secrecy laid that none but God can fully see the effect and end of its dangerous workings.

Secrecy has shed the blood of the innocent. Secrecy has suppressed the liberty of conscience, and has silenced "free press and free speech." Secrecy allows no repentance for sins against the "order," and if candid men do repent they are forever branded as "infamous perjurers." Secrecy rules our government. Secrecy controls our courts and elevates unmerited men to posts of honor. Secrecy, in many instances, rules the visible church of Christ. Secrecy elects presiding elders, stations preachers, fixes salaries, and undermines and destroys the influence of "God-sent men" who cry out against the enemies of the church of Christ. Secrecy makes its own laws, executes its own judgments, and extends neither mercy nor justice to those over whom it has control; and many who are blindly led captive at its will would gladly be relieved from the power of its meshes.

As a proof of the above stated fact we extract the following from the Dayton News:

"There is considerable excitement in some localities in this county about 'claim jumping.' Secret societies have been formed, and there are indications that trouble is brewing. The following is one of the several notices which have been posted up:

"To J. M. Sparks:—You will be waited upon by our executive committee and summarily dealt with if you make any further demonstrations on the land of Mr. Minick or any other citizen of this neighborhood. We make our own laws; we execute our own judgments. You have done enough. Desist.

By order of the 10 to 1 settler's protection committee. February 25, 1878."

Secrecy buries the dead, and exhibits great pomp and show over the remains of men, where the most profound solemnity should be seen. As an evidence we need but refer to the following: There was a little girl of twelve years of age, an heir of glory, died in our community this winter, near Dayton, Washington Territory. The parents' heads were blooming for the grave. But instead of having a solemn funeral service conducted, the "Grange Ceremony" was conducted in full. The procession was led in grange order, to the grave. But, sad to relate, for fear some reproach would be brought upon the noble (?) order, by the intrusion of religious service, before the grave was closed the parents left the ground and returned home. Well may it be asked, O secrecy! what hast thou done? These things are the "seen." God alone knows the "unseen." O when will Christians of all denominations arouse from their lethargy? God hasten the time!

OUR MAIL.

F. W. Merrick, Steuben, N. Y., writes: "Quite a sensation was started here last spring on the subject of Masonry, because a minister that is a Mason was sent to preach for us. A strong opposition was then and is now made against him."

J. K. Glassford, Carthage, Mo., writes: "The Cynosure is the only paper that I read clear through. I can't well do without it. I read all the copies and then give them away to be read by others. My prayer is, God bless the paper."

Rufus Northway, Orwell, O., writes: "Orwell is filled with secretists, Masons, Odd-fellows, Good Templars, and almost every secret society that can be named, and but few Anti-masons. There are a few tried persons here who are opposed to secrecy and are doing all they can to put it down. We would like to have a lecturer here to work the degrees."

Mr. H. C. Hayden, Harmon, Illinois, writes: "I see the battle grows more and more fierce. The Lord help us to stand firm The news in the Cynosure grows more and more interesting."

J. A. Learn, Point Abina, Ont., writes: "I wish God's richest blessing to rest upon you and your efforts to break down the strongholds of the devil."

A. M. Paull, Providence, R. I., writes: "My heart leapt for joy when my eye caught sight of the notice that the National Convention was to be held at Worcester. I am holding the fort, waiting for reinforcements, and I thank God they are on the way."

E. Darling, Paint Creek, Mich., writes: "Why is the religious press so silent on grangeism? Swindling fraud goes merrily on. To my mind it seems as though the pulpit and the press were unconcerned in the fraud."

Geo. W. Holstead, Vienna, N. Y., writes: "This reform is a needed work and must be performed ere Christ's coming I wish I had much money to help along with it. My father kept a station on the underground railroad (so-called) and wintered one of the down-trodden race."

Pres. S B. Allen, Westfield, Ill., writes: "The prompt response to the call of Wheaton College for funds to liquidate its debt, is a most cheering fact, speaking nobly of a hearty zeal for anti-secrecy forces as well as contempt for the assaults upon Pres. Blanchard. We are in need of a visit from some of our lecturers. Indeed, the cause needs more active agitation all over these counties. Funds used to that end, and used persistently would produce rich fruit."

Wm. Machemer, Constantine, Michigan, writes: "There are too many Achans in Israel, and our ministers will not put away the cursed thing."

Thos. Woodmansee, College Springs, Ia., writes: "Mr. Ronayne has been here working the three degrees of Masonry, with large and attentive audiences, and gave general satisfaction with all friends of Christianity and reform, a few croakers who are never satisfied with anything being the exception."

Joshua Harrison, Ames, Story Co., Ia., writes: "I think the reform is gaining ground in Story county. I have not heard of an upright, honorable man joining them since Ronayne was here. We have a local Association auxiliary to the State Christian Association six miles southeast of Ames, which is the only one in the county. We hold meetings every four weeks. We expect to get Ratnbun here soon if we can. We have some opposition, but we have concluded to fight it out on the Anti-masonic line if it takes a life-time to do it."

LESSON III.—October 20.—THE PRODIGAL SON.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 15: 11-24.

Memorize 17-20; Primary verse, 24.

11. And he said, A certain man had two sons:

12. And the younger of them said to his father, Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living.

13. And not many days after the younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance in riotous living.

14. And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want.

15. And he went and joined himself to a citizen of that country; and he sent him into the fields to feed swine.

16. And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat: and no man gave unto him.

17. And when he came to himself, he said, How many hired servants of my father's have bread enough and to spare, and I perish with hunger!

18. I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and before thee,

19. And am no more worthy to be called thy son: make me as one of thy hired servants.

20. And he arose, and came to his father. But when he was yet a great way off, his father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him.

21. And the son said unto him, Father, I have sinned against heaven, and in thy sight, and am not worthy to be called thy son.

22. But the father said to his servants, Bring forth the best robe, and put it on him; and put a ring on his hand, and shoes on his feet:

23. And bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat, and be merry:

24. For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. The Home Readings.
2. The parable of the lost sheep.
3. Of the pieces of silver.
4. Jewish laws of inheritance.
5. Jewish feelings and laws as to swine.
6. The "husks," "ring," "robe," "shoes."
7. The classes denoted by the two sons.
8. The sins denoted.
9. Exemplification of the parable in actual life.
10. The motives which influence prodigals to return.

INTRODUCTORY.

This has been called "the crown and pearl of parables." The Pharisees and scribes complained of Jesus because he associated with publicans and sinners. They did not see that he went down to their level in order to lift them up. Our lesson serves a double purpose, as it was spoken to two classes: namely, (1) to show that it is fit and becoming for the Saviour to seek and save the lost; and (2) that there is hope for the lost. Any man, Jew or Gentile, in pride and self-righteousness, may play the elder son's part. The younger son stands for any man, Jew or Gentile, who goes into sin and consequent misery.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. The nature of sin. (Departure from God.)
2. The miseries of sin. (A mighty famine.)
3. The nature of repentance. (Returning to God with sorrow and confession.)
4. The sovereign grace of God. (Restoration to the son's place.)
5. The privilege of adoption.
6. But if the son had not repented and returned—What?

[From the S. S. Journal.]

Verse 11. AND HE SAID. He has already addressed two parables to the crowd of publicans and sinners around him, those of the "lost sheep," and the "lost piece of money," both expressing the Father's willingness to seek and save the lost, and his rejoicing over the redeemed. He now intensifies the same truth by this most precious of all parables, the prodigal son.

A CERTAIN MAN. God represents himself throughout this parable as a loving father, even to those who rebelled against him. We realize that God loves his saints; let us not forget that he loved them while they were yet sinners.

TWO SONS. These may represent the classes of the Pharisee and the publican; or the Jewish and Gentile races, or, in the larger view, those who are moral and those who are wicked. Out from the same hearthstone and the same home influence two sons may go forth, one good and the other evil. Every soul makes its own choice of character.

12. GIVE ME THE PORTION. By the custom of Oriental nations the younger son's share was half as great as the older's in the division of the property. Among some ancient peoples the son could claim this, or a certain proportion of it, at his majority. But the claim shows an unfilial, cold-blooded selfishness. See in this request the root-sins of 1.) Selfishness; 2.) Ingratitude; 3.) Rebellion; which have ever been the deepest blots on the record of our race. Every sinner seeks to grasp all that is possible for himself, regardless of others; and aims to be his own master, forgetting that in casting off the yoke of God he binds around his neck the harder yoke of Satan.

13. NOT MANY DAYS. Though the sinner's will does not at once reveal itself as apart from God's, yet the separation between the two is inevitable and speedy.

TOOK HIS JOURNEY. He who has no love for his father soon finds the restraints of home irksome. Already separated in heart, he soon separates in life.

FAR COUNTRY. A picture of the soul that has thrown off all restraint, and placed a great gulf between itself and God. Every sinner is homeless and restless.

WASTED HIS SUBSTANCE. It is the characteristic of sin to live for the present moment only, regardless of future needs, and to consume in pleasure the good gifts of God. "There is no such waster as the sinner."—Abp. Trench. [Teacher, call attention to the sinner's waste of 1.) Money; 2.) Mental vigor; 3.) Moral power; 4.) Influence; 5.) Time; 6.) Opportunity.]

RIOTOUS LIVING. The Greek word here is that from which the word "sot" is derived. There are pleasures in sin, but they are degrading and destroying of the nobler part of the nature.

14. FAMINE. Famines occur frequently in the East from the crowded population, want of rain and consequent failure of crops, and especially the improvident character of the people. Often millions are swept away by them. The land of sin is a land of woe. "There is always a famine in that land."—Stier.

BEGAN TO BE IN WANT. Every sinner is in want, for the spiritual nature suffers when it is denied sustenance. There may be in God's service a little pain mingled with great pleasure; Satan gives only a brief moment of pleasure followed by life-long, and eternity-long pain. How soon the adversary of souls, who has deluded and misled his victim, casts off the mask of pleasure and begins his torments.

15, 16. JOINED HIMSELF. The sinner who has begun to taste the bitter dregs of his cup does not at once turn back to his Father. He tries to assuage his misery, and find some comfort in the world, by plunging into some new way of living.

CITIZEN. Some think that by citizens of that country must be meant evil spirits.

FEED SWINE. As swine were legally unclean and forbidden as food, a Jew would be disgraced by keeping them. Swineherds were an outcast class, generally idolaters. There are those who feed the swine of debased appetite and fleshly lust.

HE WOULD FAIN. Would have been willing; glad enough to get the opportunity.

HUSKS. Pods of the carob tree, containing a sweetish pulp and brown seeds, food now given to swine, and still sometimes eaten by the poorest people. These would deaden hunger, but not satisfy his needs.

NO MAN GAVE. Not that the pods were denied him; these he could eat, feeding among the swine, but his wants were unsupplied, and his hunger unsatisfied. In a land of sin every man is selfish, and no man cares for the hungry ones around him. [Teacher, call attention to the miseries of the sinner's life: 1.) Degradation; 2.) Enslavement; 3.) Need; 4.) Helplessness.

HE CAME TO HIMSELF. The first step in the way of salvation is to realize the condition of sin. The prodigal now begins to realize his own wretched state. The mask is torn off; the glamour of his sin's enchantment is broken. Every child of sin is beside himself; he is blinded to his real condition and true interests.

HIRED SERVANTS. He begins to realize that those in the lowest state of Gospel grace are far above the highest in Satan's service; that to be doorkeeper in God's house is better than to dwell in the tents of wickedness.

ENOUGH AND TO SPARE. Those lack for nothing who labor for God.

I PERISH. Even in this life sin gives but a barren, unsatisfying recompense, and what of the life to come? [Teacher, note the steps of the prodigal's return: 1.) The awakening; 2.) The resolution; 3.) The action; 4.) The confession.

18, 19. I WILL ARISE. The will fixes the character. That "I will" at once transforms him from a prodigal to a penitent.

AND GO. There must be the action as well as the determination.

I HAVE SINNED. The hardest words in the language to utter sincerely. Nothing so well becomes a sinner as the humble and hearty confession of his sins.

AGAINST HEAVEN. The wrong to the Heavenly Father and his law is deeper and more guilty than that of the earthly parent.

NO MORE WORTHY. One of the tokens of a true repentance is a deep consciousness of unworthiness. Those who feel themselves to be the least worthy God deems most worthy of his favor.

MAKE ME. He asks for the lowest place within the walls of his father's house.

20, 21. HE AROSE. He did not, as many, cling to the pods and pigs awhile after this resolution was formed. He turned from his slavery at once toward his home. A good resolve should have a prompt execution.

A GREAT WAY OFF. God sees the first steps of a returning sinner.

HAD COMPASSION. He forgave him in heart long before the confession passed the prodigal's lips. So God has the forgiving spirit towards his lost children.

RAN. The seeking son is met by the seeking father. [Teacher, show your class how God treats those that seek him.]

THE SON SAID. The resolution was fulfilled, the humbling confession was made; but the acceptance, the pardon, and the kiss of peace, came too soon for him to utter his request for a servant's place.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCT. 10, 1878.

We will next week publish from the Philadelphia Press an article on the disruption of the Masonic brotherhood. It is interesting only as showing the fires of malice and hate burning in the Masonic volcano. The press generally, except the Cynosure, predicted the disbandment of Mormonism at the death of Brigham Young. Young is dead. Is Mormonism disbanded?

DARKEST BEFORE DAWN.—It is an old familiar adage that the "darkest hour is just before day." I believe that is true in the natural world. It is certainly so in the spiritual. A great horror of darkness came on Abraham before his great and precious promises. Job, too, went through unutterable darkness before finding Christ and returning prosperity. Every Christian remembers his utter and hopeless dejection and darkness before finding light and love and joy in Christ. And the bliss of the young convert consists not so much in joyous emotions produced in him by supernatural means, as in discovering and entering into an everlasting covenant with a faithful, unchangeable friend who has "all power in heaven and earth." It is light springs from darkness and hope from despair. And the very darkness, wickedness and confusion which now infest the churches of Christ though sad in themselves are a bright augury of glory and deliverance soon to appear.

THE NATIONAL CONVENTION, WORCESTER, MASS.

The Worcester meeting, Nov. 13th, 14th and 15th prox., has been appointed after much deliberation and prayer, and Secretary Stoddard writes encouragingly concerning it. He writes that there is a marked improvement in the tone of persons and things since he was in New England some two years ago. Seven years ago not one Congregational pastor ventured into our meetings, or invited the agent of the National Association to occupy their pulpits. Now Secretary Stoddard is speaking from Congregational, Methodist and other pulpits, and calls on him are numerous.

The mass of New England church-members were always opposed to slavery, and as soon as they could do so without, as they thought, endorsing the no-Sabbath, no-voting, non-resistant views held by many of the first abolitionists, the New England Christians went for abolition in Massachusetts. They even gave up their political idol, Daniel Webster, and voted solid for Sumner, Wilson and the anti-slavery leaders. Old Massachusetts Whigs mourned over Mr. Webster's famous 7th of March speech, in which he advised them to "conquer their prejudices" against slavery, as at the funeral of a child. No alleged extravagances of the kind exist to keep back New England Christians from opposing the lodge. Let us hope and pray that they may soon go solid for this reform. Let all who possibly can attend the Worcester meeting, and let all pray for it.

THE CYNOSURE: A TALK WITH OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

The first number of the Cynosure, was issued as the Christian Banner, July 25, 1868, ten years ago last July.

There were, at that time, a few papers representing churches opposed to secret societies; but their utterances against the lodge, were "Like angel-visits, few and far between."

Indeed the subject was not well understood. Masons had stolen and burned the books and prints which filled the land fifty years ago; the old Anti-masons were weary, dispirited and hopeless; the war of the Rebellion had deluged the land with Masonry, our Northern soldiers being led by the minions of the lodge to hope for safety and favors from the rebels by that very Masonry which had organized the Rebellion; the lodge had recovered more than its former power, and, to quote my own words in the Aurora Convention, "Brave men stood silent, and timid men quailed before it."

The scene is changed. The United Presbyterian, Reformed Presbyterian, Christian Instructor, The Journal, Christian Worker, Watch Tower, The Primitive Christian, Religious Telescope, Missionary Visitor, Christian Radical, American Freeman, Free Methodist, Earnest Christian, American Wesleyan, Banner of Holiness, Highway of Holiness, Our Banner, Associate Presbyterian, Gospel Banner, Shibboleth, (Swede), Augustana, (Swede) Lutheraner, Lutheran Standard, Church Messenger, Boedberen, (Norwegian), Christian Press, Evangelical Repository, Bible Banner, Catholic Review, Sabbath Recorder, Herald of Gospel Freedom, Christian Ensign, Pacific Telescope, Little Preacher and Sandy Lake News. These papers, thirty-five in all, come from nine different States to our exchange list, and all of them speak the language of the Cynosure when they say anything on secret societies.

A considerable portion of these prints have been started since the Cynosure, and have received as their subscribers many who for a time took this paper. The book-keeper estimates the number of those who have been subscribers to the Cynosure from the first, to be at least twenty thousand different persons.

Those who have toiled with unremitting self-denial to sustain our ubscription list can look with pride on the above list of papers. They have strengthened the hands and encouraged the heart of every one of these. They have cast bread on the waters which will be found after many days. And the future, in time and in eternity, only can tell the effect of their labors on the American press, outside of and beyond the above list, strengthening its tone, and thus hastening the reign of truth and light. More next week.

THE ILLINOIS GRAND LODGE.

This body which was sitting in McCormick Hall, Chicago, last week, has elected Deacon T. T. Gurney Grand Master of Masons in this State. Our readers will remember that some eleven years ago this Congregational deacon, then of the West Side Tabernacle church (Knight Templar Healy pastor, and T. M. Avery, principal patron), took the following Masonic degrees whose names constitute a blasphemous fanfaronade, enough to sicken and disgust any one in whom decency and sense are not obliterated by the lodge. The degrees petitioned for by this Congregational deacon are given in Cynosure Tract, No. 9., and are as follows:

"He now prays to be elevated to the superior grades and orders conferred in your body and to be admitted as a Grand Pontiff; Master ad-vitam Patriarch Noachite; Prince of Libanus; Chief of the Tabernacle; Prince of the Tabernacle; Knight of the Brazen Serpent; Prince of Mercy; Commander of the Temple; Knight of the Sun; Patriarch of the Crusades; Grand Elect Knight K-H; Grand Inspector Inquisitor Commander, and to be proclaimed and acknowledged as Knight of the White and Black Eagle, and Sublime Prince and Commander of the Royal Secret."

The West Side Tabernacle church to which Grand Master Deacon Gurney then belonged has passed under the care of Mr. Moody and his friends. Where does Deacon Gurney now belong? Has he gone back to Dr. Goodwin's church? And has his Congregational standing helped to elevate him to be head over the lodges of Illinois? Who can tell us?

THE EASTERN STAR BALL.

Women are ever worse or better than men. In the old idolatries the wooded hills of Attica (Greece) were nightly made horrid by "the shrilling screams and frantic dances of the furies of hell in the abused shape of the vilest of of women," who with no other covering for their persons than their long, dishevelled hair, mingled in and made the "Orgies of Bacchus;" who, according to Mackey, was the prototype of the slain Hiram, but according to truth the devil's substitute for the crucified Son of God!

We learn from the Chicago dailies that while 1,600 able-bodied Masons were meeting in McCormick's Hall, "The Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, an organization claiming distant affiliation with the Masonic body, met in annual session in Oriental Hall (Oct. 1), on La-Salle street." This is the hall where the Cheney-Bishop Fallows organized a "Lodge of Intelligence," while praying and pronouncing benedictions on Moody's anti-secret revival meetings in the great Tabernacle. The Chicago Times says this idolatrous order of women claims "distant affiliation with the Masonic body." Let us see how distant?

But, first, who are these women constituting the secret religious "order of the Eastern Star," Satan's profanation of "the Star in the East" which led to Christ as this leads from him? Their officers' names are given thus:

H. R. Kent, Prophetstown, grand patron; Mrs. L. G. Pitkin, Chicago, assistant grand matron; A. S. McWilliams, Chicago, assistant grand patron; Mrs. Eva McHugh, Chicago, assistant grand conductress; Mrs. E. H. Miner, Wyoming, assistant grand conductress.

The grand matron read her annual address, reviewing the works of her pet order, and the remainder of the day was taken up with the formalities of appointing committees, speech-making and transaction of routine business.

Here is a body of "silly women" under the patronage of H. R. Kent of Prophetstown, Ill., met for no purpose made known to the public but to rope in poor, silly, ignorant girls to dance with the 1,600 Masons met in McCormick's Hall. Of course no one dancing hall could accommodate so great a crowd of dancers; but the ball was probably made up of the "Bread or Blood" starving socialists, communists and others who with beer, whisky and tobacco on their breaths, resolved to "supply their families and send the bills for payment to the city treasury."

Now mark, we do not assail this Masonic ball, as such, any more than we do the sailors' dances along the quays at Boston and New York. But we object to these women "claiming distant affiliation with the Masonic body," being held up by the press as the guides and exemplars of our wives, sisters and daughters. We wish to have them and their male "patrons" weeded out of the "churches of the living God." One thing looks hopeful. The ball was not called in the name of Masonry (Chicago women would have shunned it), but by a stretch of impudence worthy of the cause, these Eastern Star women got up a "charity" ball for the yellow fever sufferers! and the papers announce that the net proceeds were estimated (not counted) at $300,—the joint estimated result of two idolatrous Grand Lodges!

—Elder Rathbun was last week in Marshall county speaking at Bangor, Albion and Marshalltown. Rev. E. I. Grinnell spoke also at the Albion meeting. He was giving hard blows as usual and made them felt.

—If any reader is disappointed in not finding our usual topics and editorial items this week, he will be more than repaid in reading our editorial pages, the Religious department and Bro. Stoddard's letters from the East. Let all praise God that he does not allow the hidden things of darkness and sin to be forever hidden. Now that we know that Butler and Quint are yoked together as 33 and 32 degree Masons we shall be able to speak more correctly of the forces operating in American society.

COMMUNISM.

Paper read by President Blanchard before the Wheaton Ministerial Association (concluded).

Simple outright Communism is an imaginary society advocated by St. Simon in France in 1790; and attempted to be reduced to practice by Owen, Rapp, and a few other enthusiasts in England and the United States. In its theory all is to be free to all,—goods, lands, wives, husbands, all common. The St. Simonians were Industriels, literally a working men's party. They held to an imaginary social optimism in which human wants and passions were to be left free to find their own level like fluids, without limit or restraint by religion or government.

The Old Testament Scriptures tell us that when man was placed on earth he was met by an attempt to divorce him from his allegiance to God, and a proposition to make him divine by knowledge (Gen. 3: 5), and down through the whole inspired record the same conflict continues between God's authoritative precepts and substitutes for them instigated by Satan and adopted by men. This is the ceaseless conflict between prophets and false prophets. In the New Testament the same conflict is continued between the precepts of Christ and traditions which made the law of God void and his worship vain. (Mark 7: 7, 9.) This struggle is fundamental and final. For the Saviour himself declared that every plant, in religion, not planted by God, but invented by men "shall be rooted up." (Mat. 15: 13.)

Outside of the influence of the Bible, the learned Mosheim shows, from Juvenal and Perseus among the Latin writers, and Lucien among the Greeks, that the moral state of society was one of appalling and horrible debasement; as shown by gladiatorial shows, sodomy and unnatural lusts, the facility of divorce among Greeks and Romans, exposing of infants and procuring abortions, and public stews consecrated to the gods. (Mosh. I. 31.) And when men of common discernment exposed these religious shams, priests stood ready to murder them by the hands of a superstitious and enraged multitude. And Mosheim abundantly shows that in five centuries from Christ Christianity, was so overlaid and corrupted by the infiltration of these human systems, that its worship was sunk to "mimic shows and trifling," landing society in one thousand years of moral darkness in which vice was universal and religion sanctioned crime.

In 1517 the night of the dark ages was broken by the attempt of Luther to restore the authority of God against that of priests; but only twenty-three years later (1540), as soon as the Reformation was fairly established, Ignatius Loyola, under the name of "The Society of Jesus," invented a system which claimed to make a man a saint by oaths and ceremonies in fourteen days. This dreadful order was neither more nor less than the Mormonism, Communism, Socialism, and Freemasonry of all ages. It is a state of society where God is suppressed and man supreme. In the words of a vigorous writer, "Every member of the order, the instant he entered its pale, surrendered all freedom of thought and action, and every personal feeling was superceded by the interests of that body to which he had attached himself. He went wherever he was ordered; he performed whatever he was commanded; he suffered whatever he was enjoined; he became a mere passive instrument incapable of resistance. The gradation of ranks was only a gradation of slavery; and so perfect a despotism over a large body of men, dispersed over the face of the earth, was never before realized." Their proposed end was universal dominion, and their means included every deception from lying to perjury, and every crime from slander to assassination. They were banished in turn by the governments of Europe, and finally suppressed by Pope Clement XIV. in 1773, who was said to have been assassinated by them three years before the American declaration of Independence. Forty-one years later this terrible order was restored by Pope Pius VII. (1814), and all Catholic princes enjoined to afford them protection. It is to-day in its protean forms, but with the same spirit, intent and object, operating as the adversary of God and man.

During the suppression of the Jesuits (in 1780) a German enthusiast, Baron Knigge, projected and procured a congress from all Masonic societies in Europe and America. During this convention, which sat at Willemsbad six months, Baron Knigge was introduced to and joined the Illuminati, a secret order invented by a Masonic adept, Dr. Adam Weishaupt, Professor of Canon Law in the University of Ingoldstadt, four years before the Masonic congress at Willemsbad. Like the order of Loyola, this new order of Weishaupt was secret, under a constitution completely despotic, and like it also sought to subordinate all government and all religion to itself, which, of course, can be effected in no way but by setting aside and completely annihilating all government and religion ordained of God. In the account of the Illuminati given in Johnson's Cyclopedia, the writer says: "As in all mysteries of old, Weishaupt led his disciples through different grades of free thought up to complete emancipation." The order spread with the rapidity usual to such secret inventions, through Germany, Holland and Italy, and in ten or twelve years had so penetrated and possessed the mind of the French people as to realize its conception in the demolition of their government and religion, and the reign of pillage and assassination.

The encylopedia above quoted says, "It is said that Illuminati still exist; if so, they are probably to be found in the ranks of the COMMUNISTS."

Let us see what reason the cyclopedists have for regarding the modern commune as identical with the anti-Christian and anti-social conspiracies of the past, and

1st. They are identical in their doctrines. These were two: A skeptical philosophy which taught that men are free to do what they please; and the other an occult philosophy by which they learned that they might become whatever they would without help from God. One rejects all restraint upon their passions by law or religion: the other, salvation by ceremonies and perfectability by conjuring and superstition.

2nd. Again all these strange orders are all alike atheist. The Commune of 1790 put the proposition over the gate of the principal cemetery at Paris: There is no God. Others mistaking bewilderment for trust, lost themselves in the mazes of miscalled philosophy, or the rites of superstition, but, practically, all were atheists. Each did what Satan attempted in Eden, viz, divorced the heart from its hope by divorcing man from his God.

Then also all these schemes are atheist by putting the true God on a level with the false deities of polytheism, treating all religions alike. For as the army which has degraded the commander-in-chief to a level with all other officers has no commander-in-chief, so a society which treats, or affects to treat all religions alike, has no God, but denies him; is simply atheist.

Then all these strange orders are atheist by excluding Christ as the one only mediator, as God is available to mortals only through him. The Jesuits denied Christ by multiplying mediators; Mary, saints, relics, etc., etc., were so many media or mediums by which to get to God. But putting Christ on a level with other objects is deposing and denying him altogether. For the army which has cashiered its commander-in-chief will not recognize him in any other capacity but will hate him.

The encyclopedists who did most to alienate the mind of France from religion and government were Voltaire, Diderot, D'Alembert, Rosseau, Condorcet and others, whose animus toward Christ was the intensest and most malignant hatred, uttered in Voltaire's favorite phrase, "Crush the wretch." And the same malignant spirit of the world against Christ is the secret momentum, the driving wheel of all these strange orders.

3. These schemes too are alike immoral and vicious, and especially in the vice of hypocrisy. Weishaupt debauched his sister-in-law; and, quarreling with Baron Knigge, his secret correspondence came out in which he conspired the murder of her child. Rosseau lived in open profligacy of a similar kind, and Lasalle, the father and founder of the present phase of German Communism, fought one duel at sixteen on account of one woman and died at forty from wounds received in a duel on account of another. Saint Simon who founded a sect called "Industriels," or the working-man's party, was an indolent Count in the prime of life during the reign of terror. Francis A. Hoffman who led the Communists of Chicago in their cry for "Bread or blood," was reared in Dupage county, Illinois, in the utmost neglect of labor, and his brother Julius, when a student at Wheaton, when a child of twelve years old, said "he considered Jesus Christ as the greatest of the magicians." Karl Marx is the most prominent successor of Lasalle, who is said to have now a vote in the Reichstag of the German Empire of 485,000. He derived his ideas from the writings of Lasalle, who while deprecating the miseries of the poor and denouncing property as a crime, lived in extreme luxury in rooms adorned with elegant hangings, vases and furniture; and his followers imitate his vices and copy his tastes. Both Lasalle and Marx were Jewish adventurers, and retain, in all their fortunes, the Jew's hatred of Christ.

But all other exploits and phases of the Commune are outdone and distanced by the Commune of Paris, at the close of the recent Franco-German war. These cosmopolites, in whom pretended love of the world of mankind has extinguished all love of their country, seized Paris, in an hour of weakness, while the present French government was being settled. They took up their quarters in Montmartre, and lived according to their ideas and instincts on plunder and by murder for some sixty days, till vanquished and many of them executed by French and German troops united. When the Archbishop of Paris, Darboy, was brought before them and asked his occupation, he answered, "I am a servant of God." "Where does your Master live?" the court inquired. "Everywhere" was his answer. The presiding officer then turned to the clerk, "Make out a process to arrest one God who lives everywhere;" was the characteristic reply. The man who uttered this blasphemy is now in New York, sheltered by our laws and government which he is plotting to overthrow.

Home Circle.

A Hymn for Aged Christians.

BY REV. STEPHEN WRIGHT.

Weary and worn by life's long race,
We faint to see the Saviour's face;
Waiting by faith, we hope to be
From pain and sorrow soon set free.
Life's battles fought—its conflicts o'er,
We gladly hail the other shore,
Beyond the stream so many dread,
Where we may lay our weary head.

The blind will see—the lame will walk—
The deaf will hear—the dumb will talk.
And all adore the Saviour's face,
Who saves them by his matchless grace.
Such hope we owe to Jesus' love,
Who came to save us from above,
Who died on Calvary's cross, to win
Salvation full from all our sin.

For this we long, for this we wait,
For this we linger near the gate,
While angels beckon us to come
And enter our eternal home,
Then let us here with patience stay,
And faithful serve our working day;
For Jesus labor in good cheer,
Since our reward is very near.

And when we hear his royal voice
Bid us among the saved rejoice,
With glad accord we'll rise and sing
The triumphs of our Saviour king.
To be forever with the Lord
And share the glory of his word,
Will make the heaven of saints above,
Where all is light and life and love.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y.

"I Have Kept the Faith."

Paul kept the faith at Antioch, even when the infatuated crowd attempted to drown his voice in clamor, and interrupted him, contradicting and blaspheming. He kept the faith at Iconium, when the envious Jews stirred up the people to seize him. He kept the faith at Lystra, when the fate of Stephen almost became his, and he was dragged, wounded and bleeding, outside the ramparts of the town, and left there to languish, and for aught they cared, to die. He kept the faith against his erring brother Peter, and withstood him to the face, because he was to be blamed. He kept the faith when shamefully treated at Philippi, and made the dungeon echo back the praise of his God. He kept the faith at Thessalonica, when lewd fellows of the baser sort accused him falsely of sedition. He kept the faith at Athens, when to the world's sages he preached of him whom they ignorantly worshipped as the unknown God. He kept the faith at Corinth, when compelled to abandon that hardened and obdurate city, and to shake off the dust from his garments, as a testimony against it. He kept the faith in Cæsarea, before the trembling Felix, when he reasoned of righteousness, temperance, and judgment to come. He kept the faith before Agrippa, and by his earnestness compelled the king to say, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian;" and even in the closing hours of his life, when the last storm was gathering over his head, when lying in the dark and dismal Roman cell, he wrote these triumphant words, "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept my faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only but to all them also that love his appearing."—Macduff.

Mothers and Children.

As the babe grows out of the nurse's arms, its will, which never has been wisely controlled, is manifested in almost every act; but its little dainty, imperious ways are pronounced, "So charming! Too 'cunning' for anything!" And, doubtless, they are so, if any one looks at the present, with no foreshadowing of whereunto these "cunning" ways may lead it in after life. It may be laughable just for once, to see this small specimen of humanity stamp its small foot, or strike with its pretty dimpled hand, when denied some article of food or deprived of something unsafe for it to handle.

In a few months the child enters another stage of child life. That which at twelve months or two years was "so cute!" "so smart!" that the mother had not the heart to check it was but the beginning of insubordination to parental control, or to trespasses and infringement upon the comfort of others, will fast become intolerable, even to the partial eyes of the parents. Now let them attempt to tighten the reins or exercise proper authority. Will it prove an easy task? Will they succeed in straightening the "twig" which their own folly or neglect has permitted to "bend" so far beyond their reach?

Where lies the blame? The mother, who suffered herself to be conquered by an infant's puny resistance, must answer. The parents who, later, saw without rebuke or prevention the small child abuse or destroy choice books, destroy valuable articles of furniture, or strike the nurse, or torture menials, without one resolute effort to subdue or teach it better, must appeal to their own consciences to decide this question. They who winked at the child's youthful misdeeds, proud of its "smartness" will suffer the most for this wicked indulgence when they see what the little one, so loved and indulged, is fast becoming—ungovernable, insubordinate, impertinent, yielding to to no authority that is not brought to bear on them through punishment or force. The "twig," twisted and bent by over-indulgence or neglect, has become a branch or limb, distorted, unsymmetrical, a disfigurement, not a thing of beauty that should have been a joy forever.

A child indulged in every caprice, whose wrong-doings are a source of merriment and openly repeated as something wonderfully brilliant in the presence of the culprit, must be but little lower than the angels if it does not in a few years bring its parents to grief, and become the torment of the whole household and a nuisance to the neighborhood.

We have only space to speak of the great wrong done children by over fondness and unregulated indulgence, but quite as much harm, of which we have not now time to speak, springs from the heartless neglect of those parents, and particularly the mothers, who for the pleasures of fashionable life, and their own selfish enjoyments, leave their children to the unsafe guidance and imperfect judgment of hirelings while they look only to their own ease and pleasure. Such mothers ignore any responsibility, every duty, until at last they are roused to the knowledge that their neglected children are now utterly ungovernable and vicious, going in ways that have every promise of bringing their parents' gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.—Christian Union.

The Economy of Cremation.

From an orthodox stand-point, the present mode of disposing of the dead is an offense against the doctrine of Christian stewardship, as developed and enjoined in Holy Writ. We are but sojourners in this world, and stewards only of the means entrusted to our care by Divine Providence. We are commanded to enlarge the boundaries of our successful stewardship in all rightful ways, and are held strictly accountable for the wise and judicious expenditure of our acquisitions. We are positively forbidden to expend any portion of our rightfully gotten accumulations for useless or criminal purposes, and when we devote portions, and often large portions, of these accumulations to provision for expensive funerals or costly monuments, we directly transgress the rule by which our stewardship is to be guided. While great masses of the earth's population are living in heathenish darkness, how dare Christian men devote so much of their income to the gratification of their own pride and vanity in aiding and abetting the evils of this sinful custom? In illustration of this wicked extravagance, we take the liberty to allude to the waste of money which has occurred in Washington cemetery. Though the company is of comparatively recent organization, their financial agent informs us that upwards of $250,000 have been already expended in it, some single enclosures with their monuments costing more than $10,000. Many of the lot holders are members of Christian churches, who acknowledge in theory their duty as religious stewards.

The aggregate of such questionable expenditures over the United States would amount to billions of dollars, a sum truly alarming in size; and this criminal expenditure has been an important factor in conducing to the monetary panic still prevailing. This is one of the many extravagances which account in a great degree for national financial difficulties. The average expenditure for each body by the system of inhumation may be placed at $100. The average expense by the cremation plan would not exceed $20, showing what an immense national saving would be gained by substituting cremation for interment.—Dr. LeMoyne.

Every day should be commenced with God. The busiest and best man in Jerusalem was wont to say, "In the morning I direct my prayer unto Thee, and will look up." "I will sing aloud of Thy mercy in the morning." Daniel, too, saluted his God with prayer and praise at early dawn. We begin the day unwisely, and at great risk to ourselves, if we leave our chamber without a secret conference with our Almighty Friend. Every Christian, when he puts on his clothes, should also put on his spiritual armor. Before the day's march begins he should gather up a portion of heavenly manna to feed the inner man. As the oriental traveler sets out for the sultry journey over the burning sand, by leading up his camel under the palm tree's shade, and fills his water flagons from the crystal fountain which sparkles at its roots, so doth Christ's pilgrim draw his morning supplies from the exhaustless spring.

The Peony.

Still shines that Sabbath morn for me,
Its breeze still whispers low;
'Twas yesterday; it cannot be
'Twas thirty years ago,
A little girl, in broad-brimmed hat,
In the old meeting-house I sat;
The south wind through the doorway blew,
And the old deacon, in the pew
In front, looked back and gave to me,
Full blown, a crimson peony.

What sudden sense of wealth was mine!
To my delighted eyes,
It seemed a blossom such as might Have grown in Paradise.
So wide its silken petals spread,
So rich its robes of royal red,
Pinks, roses, lilies, violets, all
My garden blossoms, great and small,
Seemed poor, pale, common things to me,
By that resplendent peony!

In what serene content I spent
That oftimes weary hour,
My little head in rapture bent
Above that matchless flower!
The prayer and hymn were both unheard;
I lost the sermon, every word;
But oh, what charms, unseen before,
For me, that gray, old deacon wore!
The best of men I thought must be
The giver of that peony.

Time flies with swallow's wings away;
I count the years and know
That Sabbath was not yesterday,
But thirty years ago;
The very meeting-house is gone,
We gathered in that summer morn;
The preacher's voice is hushed, and wave
The daisies o'er the deacon's grave;
But, fresh and fragrant, still for me
Unfading, blooms that peony—

Still bright, as when, above its breast
That happy day I smiled;
O, blest, for aye the gift is blest
Bestowed upon a child!
It has a charm beyond its own,
A charm to all things else unknown!
How perfect is the joy it gives!
How long in memory it lives!
And childhood's spell yet makes for me
A flower of flowers, the peony!

—Sunday Afternoon.

"For Jesus' Sake, Amen."

In the Helping Hand Miss E. E. Johnson tells the following stories:

"I know of a little girl who promised the Lord all the paper-rags she could find; and her mother told her that her carpets were never so neat before, for not a scrap or raveling escaped that rag-bag. Every month the rags were sold, and the proceeds went to the Sabbath-school mission-fund.

"Another little girl had the greatest dislike for sewing. She had commenced a bed-quilt, but was not likely to finish it. One day she came home from Sabbath-school, burning with missionary zeal, and asking for work. 'Well, Lizzie, I'll pay, if you will piece a block every other day.' Poor Lizzie! Her missionary spirit threatened to depart. But finally she said, solemnly, 'Yes, grandma, I'll piece blocks, or anything else, for Jesus' sake, amen.' That bed-quilt is finished now; and there is an earnest little worker for missions in that home."

Would that some older children who shrink from laborious and disagreeable work would get a little more of this spirit, and say, "I'll do anything for Jesus' sake, amen."

Lost in the Cornfield.

"Come to dinner, Doc. Jump, little girl!" Papa held out his arms. Little Doc jumped right into them like a grasshopper, and straight on through the cornfield papa tramped, with tired little Doc on his shoulder. Such a cornfield! Did ever any of you see a real Iowa cornfield? Corn to the right of them, corn to the left of them—ten broad acres; and high above papa's head waved the silky corn-tassels. How the wind kept whispering secrets there! Well, there were plenty of ears to listen.

"Me dump down, papa!"

"Keep close to papa, then," he said, putting her down. And then he fell into a brown study, and never noticed that the little feet went straying off after silk to line burr-baskets.

"Where's Doc?" said mamma, as she poured the coffee.

"Doc! Isn't she here? Oh, she's coming right along, I guess. She came out to see me in the cornfield, and I brought her part of the way," said papa. But little Doc didn't appear.

"Johnny, run and meet her," said mamma. "Her dinner will be cold."

"She isn't anywheres," reported Johnny, fifteen minutes later. And then papa rose in haste and went after her himself. He ran down the little path from the house; he entered the cornfield, and found the place where he had put her down; he hallooed in every direction, "Doc! little Doc!" All the neighbors came to help. All through the great cornfield that rustled mysteriously as if it knew all about it, around the edge of the black piece of woods that lay dark and silent away on the north side of it, they searched, and called, and listened. The news spread, and every hour some new additions came to the little band of discoverers. Before night a hundred men were hunting for little Doc. They surrounded the great field, and worked their way toward the center, consulted, and were sent off again in new directions. But Doc was such a little thing, and the cornfield was so wide! It was growing dusk, and they all met in the edge of the great dark woods.

"She is lost—my little Doc!" said papa. "It is too dark to see now. We shall never find her." There were tears on a good many other faces at that cry; but what could they do? Hadn't they hunted everywhere?

"Me tan fin' Docsie!"

All the men turned to hear that small voice, and there, with her little white sunbonnet in one hand and a tiny shoe in the other, was Nanny Bunn, Docsie's little friend and playmate.

"Me tan fin' Docsie!"

"Somebody take that child home," said one of the men hastily. "One's enough, I should think."

"Docsie!" cried little Nannie as loud as she could. "Tum to supper! It's all weddy!"

"He' I be!"

Somewhere in the woods a sweet, faint little voice answered them. Nannie clapped her hands. The men listened.

"Docsie! Fere is you?"

And then they heard it again, as faint and sweet, but in Docsie's own dear little voice.

"He' I be!"

All the men ran in the direction of the voice. Docsie wasn't lost quite. It took a little hunting, but at last they found her; and oh! I wish I could make you see the picture (for it is a true story, you know). The men all huddled close to get a glimpse of her, clapsed close in papa's arms, the little tired face all scratched with briars, the pretty clothes in tatters, the poor feet half bare and bleeding.

"Fy din't you fin' me?" she asked with her face in papa's neck. "I is so tired, an' my s'oos weared out, an' the bliars sclatched me. I 'ant my mamma!"

And her mamma wanted her! Dear little Docsie! They hurried home with the glad, glad news; and papa said he wished she was twice as heavy, he liked to feel his arm ache. And Nannie rode home, too, in triumph. How the men hurrahed for Nannie Bunn.

Docsie felt "all tired to deff" for a day or two, and lay on the lounge where everybody could look at her; but she was soon out playing with Nannie again as bright as a button. —Youth's Companion.

Good Morning.—Don't forget to say "Good morning." Say it to your parents, your brothers and sisters, your schoolmates, your teachers, your servants—and say it cheerfully, and with a smile. There is a kind of inspiration in every "good morning" heartily and smilingly spoken, that helps to make hope fresher and work lighter. It really seems to make the morning good, and to be a prophecy of a good day to come after it. And if this be true of the "good morning," it is true of all kind, hearty greetings. They cheer the discouraged, rest the tired one, and somehow make the wheels of life run smoothly.

Home and Farm.

Hearty Breakfasts.

In a large majority of cases, says the Journal of Health, it will be found that the best and heartiest meal of the day should be eaten in the morning. If the closing repast of the day has not been eaten too late, or has not been excessive in quantity or indigestible in quality, the stomach will be rested and active in the morning after the individual has enjoyed a cool bath. The stomach will then respond quickly with the necessary gastric juice for the solution of food, and, if a fair amount of exercise is taken during the day, a large mass of food will be assimilated and converted into blood and tissue. With a good, substantial breakfast no great amount of food will be required during the remainder of the day. One further meal will be ample, and that might better be taken at from 2 to 3 o'clock in the afternoon than at any period, if business engagements only permitted it.

The breakfast may be made from any kind of wholesome food, and the fewer kinds the better. The dinner should be light and readily digested, if sound sleep is desired and strong appetite and perfect powers of digestion next day. If hunger comes, a bowl of sweet milk and well-cooked mush of Indian meal, or other unbolted grain, will allay it, and will digest quickly. One "square meal" in every twenty-four hours is all that can be taken care of by many weak stomachs, and more than this is an excess and induces headache, nausea and distress. If dinners were abandoned, and especially late and heavy dinners, myriads of dyspeptics would be cured. But under the exigencies of city life a late dinner cannot well be avoided. This need not be the tremendous meal it is customary to make it, if the breakfast be substantial and nutritious, and not a thing of slops and biscuits, as it too often is.

Gossip about Window Gardening.

A correspondent of the Ladies' Floral Cabinet says: I have some hints on window gardening which will probably prove of some value to those that are always trying to find out different ways of growing and arranging flowers. First, procure a wooden box, quite shallow, and about twelve inches long and eight inches wide, and if convenient line it through the inside with zinc, and punch about four holes in the bottom of the box for drainage. Then proceed as follows: Fill the box with rich dirt—I think what is called chip dirt is very good, as I have used it for growing plants and they seemed to thrive splendidly—then mix with this chip dirt some leaf mold, if it can be procured, and if not, just a little sand and dirt will do; now you have your box ready to plant your flowers; so you may choose just what flowers you like. I have a box in which is planted coleus, ivy, verbenas, portulaca, Wandering Jew, and thus they form a miniature window garden. I think that if one would plant in a box a row of hyacinths, a row of tulips, and a row of crocuses, and have them all bloom at the same time, it would be a beautiful sight, and in winter who would not enjoy them? I think it is so cheerful to see flowers in winter—even green leaves are pretty in winter. I would advise every one to grow the green Wandering Jew, and keep it through the winter, as it is quite easily kept; if watered occasionally with ammonia water it will keep green and grow luxuriantly through the winter, We have some growing in a hanging basket that has grown to the length of six feet and nine inches, and every one that sees it admires it; it is the longest one I have ever seen. When you have your box all filled with plants you can ornament it on the outside by covering it with rough bark, which can be procured by taking a walk in the country around the woods, and then when it is covered varnish it with Damar varnish and it will be quite pretty. another pretty ornament is to take a bowl of water and put in two sweet potatoes, and in several weeks they will sprout and throw out their green leaves, and it will be a beautiful vine, and can be trained in any manner which the taste of the person may desire.

And still another window ornament is to have a Wardian case filled with calla lilies and water lilies and lycopodium. A good way to make a Wardian case is to procure a common table, and then to take off the top and turn it up (the wrong side up) and line it with zinc; then get four window-sashes, one for each side and one for each end, and also one for the top, and it makes a very cheap ward case; and as ward cases are very expensive, this will not exceed, I think, more than five dollars, if it does that much; and you cannot get one all ready made for less than twenty-five or thirty dollars; so I think this information will be prized very highly. Another ornament is to get a large white sponge and plant in it wheat, grass, flaxseed or rice, and place it in a saucer or plate filled with water. and immerse it daily, and in a week or two it will become green, and then it can be suspended in a window with a picture or common cord run through it.

The Farmer's Home.

A correspondent writes the following to a western newspaper: "It seems to me as though farmers as a class do not pay sufficient attention to their homes. How often we hear farmers say, 'My sons are of no account; they will not stay at home, but spend their time (when not at work) at the nearest town.' Now there is a remedy, and a simple one for all this, and it is within the reach of all farmers. Make the home on the farm pleasant and agreeable for your children, and they will devote their spare time to reading, pleasant games and profitable conversation. Treat them kindly, praise them for what they do, furnish them with good family newspapers and books, and there will not be so many fathers left uncared for in their old age. Try this remedy for one year, and see if I am correct. Send for at least two good papers, and your boys will soon get in the habit of reading them, and they will always be found at home in the evening. On the other hand if you do not follow this course, or one similar to it, you will soon find that your boys will not remain at home, but will grow up poor, ignorant creatures, and too often their destinies will be the State Prison or the paupers' home. Farmers take your choice. You must follow one or the other of these rules, and results will be just as I have stated."

THE UNITED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Congregational church, Hamilton, Miss, August 25th, 1878.

Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Miss., September, 1878.

What name shall be next?

—The College Church at Wheaton observed last Thursday as a day of fasting and prayer in preparation for the communion of the Lord's Supper on Sabbath and the annual business meeting and election of officers on Saturday. Meetings were held in the afternoon and evening which were greatly blessed to the church. Hopeful conversions have begun among the students and others are inquiring after Christ.—Members of the church and students preached last Sabbath in the churches at Streator, Union, Crystal Lake, Lisle, York and Big Woods and at Pleasant Hill school house. The Streator and Union churches were supplied by students connected with the Wesleyan church.—At the annual meeting letters of great interest were read from Pres. S. B. Allen of Westfield College, and Rev. Eli Tapley of Columbus, Miss., and the following invitation to the Illinois State Christian Association was voted:

To the Illinois State Christian Association.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—If consistent with other arrangements we desire, and hereby invite you to hold your next annual convention with us in Wheaton.

Our request is on these grounds:

1st. Since your last meeting we have passed through a severe and unusual struggle with our common foe, the lodge power; and God has graciously heard our united prayer in giving us victory and peace. We desire that you should unite with us in praising God for this providence.

2nd. Our State lecture work has been declining, so that for the past year we have had no agent in the Illinois field. We believe that a meeting in Wheaton would be better attended than at almost any other point, and an opportunity thus be given for raising a large subscription which would revive this necessary part of your work.

3rd. We desire that churches which sympathize in our reform principles should form an alliance against the false worship of the lodge. We hope that such a union may be formed in connection with the meeting of the State convention; and we believe that at no other point in the State can such an organization be formed more satisfactorily than at Wheaton.

CHURCH OF GOD.

—Elder I. W. Lowman, editor of the Herald of Gospel Freedom, has been preaching on Yellow Lake circuit the past year. He turns over the work to a successor this year.

—It is under discussion to make the Herald a semi-monthly instead of monthly, as now. The paper was started last year as the organ of the Northern Indiana eldership, a body opposed to secret orders, whose members were greatly persecuted for their steadfastness to their principles, and who separated from the main body on account of its lodge fellowship.

—The Christian Harvester has the following interesting item regarding this eldership and its work. Bro. Warner writes: "The editor of the Herald of Gospel Freedom, with several others, were refused license by the 'Church of God,' because they refused to fellowship men in secret societies. Accordingly they formed themselves into an independent eldership, to work for the Master, since which their labors have been signally blessed, their numbers increased, and most of them entirely sanctified, Bro. I. W. Lowman being the first fruits of my visit there last May." This work lies in Indiana.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. J. M. Snyder began his labors with the church in Wheaton last Sabbath. Mr. J. N. Bedford of the College, who has been preaching for this church has occupied the pulpit of the Independent church in Streator, Ill., for two Sabbaths.

—Rev. J. W. Robb of Middleburgh, Neb., gave an address on the lodge question at his quarterly conference. He says in the Wesleyan: "Some of the craft were present. While quoting Morgan, Barnard and Finney, as our authors for some of our proof, they were quite ready to make light of the same; but when we called for an affidavit to the untruthfulness of the above books, they put on long faces. We occupied most of the hour on the question. The attention was good. There was some squirming among the dark lantern brotherhood. We are in great need of anti-secret workers in this western field. May the good Lord raise up and send them to us." It was expected that Rev. J. C. Kiggins wouldto speak at this meeting.

—Rev. N. Warduer, whose recent labors as evangelist have been blessed in Iowa, will probably relieve Rev. D. S. Kinney, the publishing agent, at the Minnesota and Wisconsin conferences. The latter has not entirely recovered from his fever attack in Michigan.

—A plan is afoot for Rev. E. I. Grinnel of Iowa, to travel with Elder Rathbun in their own conveyance, lecturing and publicly working the degrees of Freemasonry all over Iowa and Missouri. Like the two sent out by Christ these forerunners of his kingdom will rejoice to tell of the great work wrought through the name of the Master.

—J. D. Sanders, a young man connected with the Lockport conference, was lately proceeding to his day's work when he was met by some villains, knocked down, gagged, taken into the woods, tied to a tree, drugged, robbed of a coat and month's wages, left all dayand the following night was liberated and made his way in a famished condition to the house of a neighbor, and so injured as to be unable to work. No assignable cause is given for the inhuman act, whether plunder or revenge. He expected soon to go to Wasioja to school.

FRIENDS.

—The Yearly Meeting at Oskaloosa, Iowa, has just closed with grand success. Ministers were present from England, Ireland, and several of our Yearly Meetings in the United States. Much work is being done on the temperance and tobacco questions. The addition to the membership and progress of the Sabbath-school work were very encouraging.

—The Indiana Yearly Meeting held its 58th annual gathering a fortnight since for the first time in their spacious new building on Main and Twelfth streets, in Richmond, Ind., erected in the past two years. The former fifty-seven years it was held in the old building, within the city limits, which was erected and the first Yearly Meeting held in it in the year 1821. The new building is somewhat modern in style, yet plain and neat, erected at a cost of near $30,000 and seating about 2,000. Among the foreign persons in attendance are J. B. Braithwait, John Joseph Dymond and Richard Littleboy, ministers, and George Latham, an elder, of London Yearly Meeting, who are a deputation sent out by that meeting to restore a breach made in the Western Yearly Meeting on account of such innovations as singing, mourners' bench, ministers accomplishing marriages, etc. Besides this deputation, Helen Balkevill, a minister, also from London, and Susan Doyle, an elder, from Ireland, were in attendance from the Yearly Meetings on the continent; Albert Peele, from North Carolina Yearly Meeting; Axum Cox and William G. Johnson, from Western Yearly Meeting and Edward Young, from Ohio Yearly Meeting. The clerk, Charles F. Coffin, on behalf of the meeting, extended a cordial welcome to the English delegation and all others in attendance. Thirty thousand people attended the divine service of the meeting on Lord's Day, September 29th.

—At the last Indiana Yearly Meeting a large committee was appointed to revise the book of discipline, and the result of their labors was taken up in joint session this year and paragraph after paragraph deliberately read and discussed, both sexes taking part in the discussion. On some points there was a difference of sentiment, but a good degree of harmony and consideration was shown. The subjects of the testimony against secret oath-bound societies and the use of tobacco were the points prepared by the committee that brought Friends to their feet. The final result was that it was pronounced a disownable offense for any member to join, march or participate in any way with any secret, oath-bound society, and that any habitual user of tobacco was not a fit subject to be promoted as a minister or elder, or to occupy any prominent position in the church.

BAPTIST.

—The trial of Rev. W. W. Ames, of Menominee, Wisconsin, on charges trumped up by his lodge enemies, has resulted in his virtual acquittal, the district attorney having entered a nolle prosequi. All true men rejoice with the brother in his victory.

—Elder Barlow has been helping Father Stratton in the Exposition work. Both he and his wife have suffered some illness since removing to Chicago, but have recovered. He has much hope of a good work yet springing from his reform instructions in Canada. He attended the Indiana State convention this week at Spiceland, Ind.

—Dr. W. W. Evarts of the First Baptist church in this city resigned his pastorate last Sabbath morning. The church has had a good deal of financial trouble, losing $20,000 through the failure of a contractor and as much by shrinkage of other property. The church under Dr. Evarts has been a mother of Baptist churches in Chicago and the Northwest, and was at one time among the wealthiest in this region. It has ever been noted for its liberality. Dr. Evarts has been its pastor for than 20 years. He is known as a man of great ability and energy and has done much to impress his character upon the denomination. His efforts in maintaining the educational institutions of the church, the Chicago University and Baptist Theological Seminary are well known. He has also been pronounced on reform questions, delivering an able argument before the National Reform Convention here over a year ago and keeping his church prayer-meeting free for testimonies against the lodge.

News of the Week.

—The London correspondent of the Liverpool Post affirms that purchases are being made along the Euphrates Valley Railway route, on behalf of the Duke of Sutherland and his co-directors, who are negotiating this great enterprise. The English engineers who are surveying the track have left Racca, near Aleppo, and are engaged in mapping the levels along the left bank of the river to Anbar, the route being continued thence to Bagdad. He adds, "I have reason to know that the Duke of Sutherland is determined to prosecute the scheme, and the investing public in this country may expect to have the prospectus placed before them early next year." The Duke of Sutherland, one of the wealthiest of British peers, has money enough at his command, if he wishes so to employ it to pay for the construction of the whole line.

—The centennial of the discovery of the Sandwich Islands by Captain Cook in 1778 is to be commemorated by a bronze statue, heroic size, of Kamehameha, the conqueror and organizer of the islands. This famous Pacific hero was an ancestor of King Kalakua, who visited us in 1875.

THE YELLOW FEVER.

The report of the New Orleans Board of Health for the twenty-four hours ending at noon, Oct. 6 is as follows: Deaths, 59; new cases 182; total cases, 10,485; deaths 3,171.

The government has ordered Collector Smith at New Orleans to distribute 40,000 rations to the needy and suffering.

Reports from towns adjacent to Memphis continue to be received which are startling in their nature. The fever has appeared at every point on the line of the Memphis and Charleston road, even as far as Chattanooga, Tenn., to which city the Howard Association to-day sent nurses. The development of one case of fever at any of the small towns has the effect to create a stampede, and reminds one of during the war, when the Federa, forces were marching through this section of the country.

CAIRO, Ill., Oct. 6.—Many families are leaving the city by trains and wagons. Four deaths from black vomit occurred to-day, and two others were attacked who will probably die to-night.

—The subscriptions in Paris for the yellow fever sufferers in the United States have reached $12,000.

—The hostile Cheyennes who have been raiding through western Kansas crossed the Kansas Pacific railway Sunday morning, Sept. 29, going north. When about twenty-five miles north of Buffalo Station they commenced killing settlers, and so far, seventeen dead bodies have been found along Jappa creek. The Indians do not go out of their way to kill white people, but if they meet a man on horseback they kill him and take his horse. They killed no women or children, and have not thus far mutilated the bodies of victims. The Indians crossed the Union Pacific road five miles east of Ogallalla, Neb., Oct. 4. A party of scouts followed up their trail and overtook a small party of Indians in the rear of the main body, with whom they exchanged a few shots, the Indians then fleeing and abandoning a few head of stock. The scouting party estimated the number of Indians at between 150 and 200. Major Thornburgh, who was was waiting at Sidney to move at a moment's notice, was advised of their crossing, and immediately started with his command, numbering 150 mounted men, but through some delay did not reach Ogallalla until 4 o'clock. This gave the Indians six hours start of him. Major Thornburgh started immediately for the trail and pursued as rapidly as possible.

—The following official telegram has been received at Vienna:

SERAJEVO, Oct. 4.—The Austrians entered Visegrad this morning unopposed. The insurgents evacuated their intrenchments, abandoning tents, cannon and ammunition. The Austrians entered Gorazda yesterday unopposed, and to-day occupied Cajnica. The district of Tocha is cleared of insurgents. Thus the whole of Bosnia and Herzegovina is subdued, and the country is in our hands.

—A dispatch from Bombay says: "Four of the Ameer's infantry regimentals and six guns are stated to have arrived in front of Ali Musjid, a short distance up the Khyber Pass, and have advanced within three miles of Jamrud, at which place a detachment of British troops has arrived. Much larger bodies of Afghan troops are on their way down. These threaten to attack the Khyberees for having allowed the British mission to penetrate the pass."

—The Bank of Glasgow, Scotland, suspended last week with liabilities estimated at $50 000,000. It had a large number of branch houses and 1249 stockholders. The ship-building and East India trade will be seriously affected, but American trade will be little troubled. It is believed that criminality and recklessness in the management is the cause of this disaster.

FOREIGN.

—Official information has been received at Washington relative to the existence of the insurrection at Santa Cruz, but the advice says nothing regarding the number of lives supposed to be lost. The island of Santa Cruz is embraced in the consular district of St. Thomas, under the jurisdiction of Consul V. V. Smith. According to the latest reports received by the State department, the mob have succeeded in capturing and destroying the town of Frederiksted. There is a United States consular agent residing there and it is supposed his house has been destroyed, with others. In addition to the squadron sent this afternoon from Portland, Me., to the protection of American citizens in Santa Cruz, the navy department also sent a vessel from the West India station, the one nearest to the disturbed region, to hasten on the same mission. Christiansted, the only town on the island in addition to Fredericksted, is well fortified and, it is supposed, can withstand attack.

Political.

PLATFORM OF THE AMERICAN PARTY.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

THE THREE CLASSES IN POLITICS.

YORK, Pa., Sept. 1, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—The political papers have much to say about Republicans, Democrats, Greenbackers, Prohibitionists, Labor Reformers, etc., but the truth is there are only three elements in our political world. These are the Masons, the working class and the Americans.

By Americans I mean not only those who claim to be anti-secret reformers, but all who still believe in the Constitution and the laws; by the working class I mean all the secret organizations of laboring people who strike, riot or sympathize with laborers acting secretly; and by the Masons I mean all who belong to the order or vote for Masons.

Now, the secret labor organizations were started by rich Masonic capitalists, so as to control working men; but all of these societies are now led by communists, and are antagonistic to Masonry.

The communists are more powerful in the United States than many intelligent persons are aware of. I am not a communist, but do not intend to serve, either in the Pennsylvania militia or United States army against them, if the Masons are in power. Indeed, I would sooner die than fight to uphold a Masonic monarchy under any circumstances. It is true the communists desire a share of our property; but the Masons are now taking our property by high taxes, by ring and class legislation, and by frauds of all descriptions.

Now, are there not enough sensible people in the United States to organize a true American party that will be strong enough to stop the communistic revolution on the one hand, and the Masonic ring and class thieving on the other? Can we not muster sensible and honest men enough to have a republic in which all men will be free and independent in fact? Did all the noble soldiers and sailors who fought for freedom in the late war die, or are they only stopping to rest and to eat a few hard tack? Yours for the war, E. J. CHALFANT.

PERJURY.

The Masonic lodge tries to look big and make a great bluster about perjury, as if it had a right to punish men for that crime.

Now the American citizen recognizes three powers which may deal with him for perjury, viz.: 1st, God; 2nd, public opinion, and 3rd, the law of the land.

What right has this barbarous old foreign institution, the Masonic lodge, to administer oaths to men, and punish them for committing perjury? They who make the charge of perjury ought to prosecute it before the courts of the land, or else pass as wicked maligners and slanderers. The lodge puts itself in the place of the courts of law, and thunders forth worse terrors against perjurers than the law itself! And in this way it hopes to intimidate American citizens against exposing ring frauds! Such men are traitors as well as perjurers in the eyes of "Masonic law."(!)

Is it a crime for the American citizen to vote against the lodge as well as commit treason and perjury against it? Shall we be hushed down by being told that we shall endanger the Republican party, or the Democratic party, and thus ruin the country if we vote against Masonry?

For my part, I will never knowingly vote for a Mason, or a Masonic minion for office, though the heavens should fall.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A. Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION.

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion. An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced. A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Ahiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each. A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good. A 4 Page Tract,

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract,

The New State Capitol of Michigan.

It is said this new and elegant building at Lansing is now almost ready for occupancy by the State officers. The insult imposed upon the intelligence and civilization of the people of this State at the laying of the corner-stone of this new edifice is undoubtedly not yet forgotten by the people, when the public authorities suffered the Masonic fraternity to perform their heathen ceremonies and deposit in this same corner-stone some of the emblems of their pagan rites.

The question now remains will the people of this State suffer this insult to be again heaped upon us at the dedication of this building—which without doubt will sooner or later come off. A. Oldfield.

—A policeman was shot dead on State street last Friday evening while arresting two thieves who were unloading plunder at a pawnshop. The assassins escaped.

When a steel pen has been written with and appears spoiled, place it over a light (a gas light for instance) for a short time—say a quarter of a minute—then dip it in water, and it will again be in good condition to write with.

Notices.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

of the National' Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

WISCONSIN.

To the friends of Christian reform in Wisconsin:—The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will, D. V., hold its annual meeting at Waupun, to commence Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and to continue through Wednesday and Thursday, the 30th and 31st. It is expected that Past Master Ronayne will work the degrees of Masonry, and other speakers will be in attendance. Entertainment will be provided for those from abroad. J. W. WOOD, Pres.
H. H. HINMAN, Agent for Wis.

MICHIGAN.

Friends of reform in Michigan will please take due notice that the State meeting will be held about the third week in November. Place to be agreed upon after hearing from our friends. Jackson city does not afford us a suitable house, none but Free Methodist church, and inasmuch as we want Ronayne to work the degrees, we think it best to have a large hall. Let us hear from all.

E. MATHEWS, Sec'y.
Brooklyn, Mich.

DES MOINES COUNTY, IOWA.

There will be a mass convention of the people of Des Moines county, Iowa, opposed to secretism in general and Freemasonry especially, at the Bethel Baptist meeting-house, six miles west of Burlington, November 6th and 7th, 1878. The object of the convention is the organization of a County Christian Association, auxiliary to the State and National Associations. Every lover of true freedom is invited to attend, ladies as well as gentlemen. Let this be a grand rally for the cause of Christ and civil and religious liberty. Neighboring county Christian associations are invited to send delegates. Public lecturers who are in the field against the great secret foe of Christianity are expected to be present. We will receive delegates coming from abroad at the Lawrence House, at Burlington, Iowa. Conveyance and enterainment free. The convention will meet at 10 o'clock, Nov. 6, and continue two days.

By order of the Spring Creek Baptist church.

S. A. FLANDERS,
JOHN STORER,
T. L. STEPHENS,
Committee of Arrangements.

ELDER D. P. RATHBUN announces that he has returned to Iowa to remain until after the State Convention, the Lord willing. His address will be Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, care Alvin Hall. Arrangements can also be made for lectures with James McCleery of Marshalltown. Let Iowa be thoroughly canvassed this winter. Send for Bro. Rathbun.

PAST MASTER RONAYNE will speak at Wyanet, Illinois, 22nd, 23rd and 24th. Hickory Grove W. M. church, 7 miles northwest of Wyanet, Oct. 25th and 26th.

TO ALL BAPTIST MINISTERS in Illinois and Iowa who are opposed to secret societies, please address a card and state whether you are in the pastoral work.

Address, Elder Joel H. Austin,
Box 1092, Burlington, Iowa.

—Rev. W. W. Ames, Secretary of the Wisconsin State Association urges all who pledged aid for the State work to pay the sums promised at the State Convention at Waupun or as much sooner as possible. M. R. Britten, Vienna, is State treasurer.

—Bro. Isaac Hyatt, of East Hamlin, New York, wishes copies of the Cynosure of January 31, 1878, for a special and good use. Any friends having copies will confer a favor on him and aid the reform by ending them.

NOTICE!

The author of the "Temperance Songster," "Liberty Minstrel," "Harp of Freedom," "Songs of the Free," etc., has been repeatedly urged to publish another Reform Song Book, containing pieces suitable to be sung in aid of the objects of the "National Christian Association opposed to secret societies," "orders," "cabals," "rings," etc.

All persons anxious to aid such an object should send to Geo. W. Clark, Dansville, Livingston county, New York, Box 15, such odes, hymns, songs, etc., either original or selected, as would be adapted to such a work. Let them be "short and sweet," pithy and to the point.

Topics of the Time.

The great Chicago Tabernacle, which was opened two years ago to receive Moody and Sankey, was last week taken down to be replaced by a block of fine stores. The Tabernacle was constructed with a view to this change and its floor was the basement while the gallery was nearly on a level with the street. The building has been used for concerts and lectures where an immense seating capacity was desired; but no audiences like those that crowded to hear Moody and Sankey have ever poured into it. There in the presence of thousands Moody gave his thrilling testimony against the lodge, to be repeated with emphasis a few days later in lower Farwell Hall. Never to be forgotten is the scene at the Friday noon meeting of the same week, when three or four reclaimed drunkards gave such a testimony to the power of Divine grace to save, that scarce one in the vast crowd could restrain his emotion. Not less wonderful was the evening sermon to the fallen women of Chicago by Mr. Moody, when the vast room was packed to its utmost and probably nine thousand people heard the wonderful Gospel message of love and salvation to the lost more tenderly preached than perhaps ever before. But the Tabernacle was of little use after Moody left, and last week the day after Senator Blaine spoke in it, workmen began its demolition.

The seventh anniversary of the Chicago fire passed last week with a simple mention from the press. The enterprise of the city has more than replaced the eighteen thousand buildings destroyed, and more than covered again the three and one-third square miles burnt over, while the population is near two hundred thousand more than then. It would be unwise to say that the one hundred and ninety-six millions worth destroyed has been replaced, but the loss was widely distributed through insurance companies, and nearly five millions in cash with another in supplies, sent by generous hearts, gave new life and hope. The past year nearly eight millions were expended in new buildings, including the magnificent court-house and post-office. Among the business buildings are two of the finest dry goods stores in the country. With prosperity returned the lessons of adversity are lightly remembered, however, and only from repeated admonitions will the people learn the wisdom of humility and obedience.

The elections in Iowa, Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia last week, and in Colorado the week before, were indicative of returning strength to the Republican party, though their majority in Congress will be slightly reduced. The National vote in Ohio will not reach it is believed thirty thousand, and the much more deserving Prohibition ticket had only about ten thousand supporters. In the five States named there are forty-six Congressmen, thirty-one Republicans and fifteen Democrats. The result of the election will probably make the numbers respectively twenty-eight and eighteen. With three or four tickets in the field there was a vast amount of independent voting indulged in, which may be disastrous to the ring politician, but is surely hopeful for the country. At the South this breaking up is not perhaps so marked, but no less beneficial. Ex-general Joseph E. Johnston, Democratic candidate for Congress in Virginia is likely to be by this means, and Wade Hampton in S. Carolina, who wants to get into the Senate, finds the same serious obstacle in his path.

The newsboys are keen tradesmen. Last week Wednesday they made the corridors of the Chamber of Commerce ring with cries of "War, war, war!" No other word was needed to sell their papers to the speculators of the Board of Trade, more than one of whom read with satisfaction the threatening dispatches from Eastern Europe. It is not easy to follow the complications of treaties by which the Russians claim to hold Roumelia, and which are likely to bring on war between Austria and Turkey. It is evident that the Berlin Congress, however good its intentions, did not reach the seat of the trouble. It could not heal the wound which was being secretly probed by Beaconsfield. The demonstration toward the north of India is surmised to be a mere stratagem of the same mind. For years there has been no communication between the Viceroy of India and the Ameer of Afghanistan, and when the latter saw the would-be visitor approaching with a small army at his back he refused his request to visit his capital at Cabul. The question is, was the viceroy's visit in good faith, or a mere pretext for declaring war and advancing the British flag through the Himalaya passes? If the latter, the indignation that will be visited upon the projector of the scheme is only delayed till the fact is known.

—Missionaries of the American Board in Austria report that they still have to work under great restrictions and amid persecution. For every meeting held in the hall the permission of the police has to be obtained, at a cost of about one dollar and twelve cents, and the privileges which were granted four years ago are refused now. The missionaries have not much of an encouraging nature to report.

Some Facts about Freemasonry without the Dross.

BY D. B. TURNEY.

Whatever is known to be immoral, unlawful and anti-Christian, should be zealously opposed.

I. Freemasonry is immoral.

1. In her associations and obvious tendencies.

2. In her impious oaths and disgusting ceremonies.

3. In her prostitutions of Scripture and her awful blasphemies and profanities.

4. In her concealing and encouraging crime.

5. In her protection of criminals who should be punished, and affording them facilities for escape from justice, particularly such as are guilty of assassination.

6. In her useless expenditure for foolish trappings, regalia, etc.

7. In her waste of time, money and manhood.

8. In her arrogant titles and false pretensions.

9. In her relation to other oath-bound conclaves.

10. In her foresworn course of blind compliance and secrecy, in the interest of her selfish and narrow schemes.

II. Freemasonry is unlawful.

1. In assuming to hold jurisdiction over the persons and lives of some American citizens.

2. In inventing and upholding extra-judicial oaths.

3. In fabricating offenses against her own foresworn system, under threats of unlawful and murderous punishment, independent of the civil authorities of the land.

4. In exacting peculiar penalties unknown to our laws, and in a manner forbidden by the Word of God, through a foresworn obligation of concealment.

5. In the adoption of titles and dignities which are not allowable in a republic.

6. In exerting a clandestine and hidden influence.

7. In having regulations, principles and measures which are not open to governmental inspection and public discussion.

8. In teaching her members treason, by claiming that the civil oath of the country has no supremacy over her own foresworn vows of concealment.

9. In requiring the concealment of crime and protecting the guilty from conviction and punishment.

10. In affording criminals facilities for the undetected commission of their evil deeds.

11. In promoting the interest of a few at the expense of the many who are equally meritorious and deserving.

12. In restricting and forbidding the principles of free inquiry and other natural and inalienable rights guaranteed to citizens of our nation.

13. In often trying to impede the due administration of law, by improperly and corruptly influencing the result of judicial investigations.

14. In the occasional abduction and murder of persons holding citizenship in this Republic. (Noah Smith, of Vermont; Wm. Ritchie, of Pa.; Oliver Gavil, of Ohio; Joab Hunter, of Mass.; Capt. Ariel Murdock; Wm. Morgan and many others, have been murdered and assassinated by Freemasons for failing to keep the secrets of Freemasonry.)

15. In the arbitrary execution of vengeance upon those who renounce and denounce the order.

16. In the extra-judicial and profane use of religious forms, fraught with many dangers to the peace and safety of our land.

17. In bidding an open defiance to the laws of country respecting the obtaining of money under false pretences, the administration and reception of false oaths, the exercise of jurisdiction, the assumption of titles incompatible with republican simplicity, and the limitations of obedience fixed by legal decisions.

Sermons by Masons.

BY THOS. HODGE.

I confess that I listen with some degree of suspicion of the soundness or of the sincerity of preachers who are also Freemasons. Like the old Scottish lady who slept during the sermons of her regular minister but kept wide awake when a stranger filled the pulpit, I have to watch them. If they are conscientious and Masonic, then I expect unsound preaching, for the authority of Christ becomes secondary to reasonings and speculations, and such so-called liberal views as acknowledge any person as an accepted worshiper if sincere, whether the worship be through Christ or any other teacher whose disciples are eligible for membership in the Masonic brotherhood.

If the preacher lacks an active conscience he may preach an unexceptionable sermon to orthodox ears in the church and crack the joke over it in his lodge among his other brotherhood.

Again there is the preacher who like the fly in the spider's web sends forth but more loudly his own sounds, as if to make up in loquacity for his unfortunate position, as also a lodgerist. Soon, however, his energies are found poisoned by the spider, and the grand virtue of Masonic silence supercedes his zeal as a preacher of the Cross, except as a means of extending the power of the lodge.

There is also the needy or unpopular preacher who has lost the confidence of the best part of his church and takes refuge in the lodge, thus securing an alliance that will strengthen him against his opponents in the church and will give him material aid, as well as proclaim his wonderfully increasing popularity. It may be that he goes to a new field, and then has a still better chance to become a star under the unsuspected patronage of the secret brotherhood. He gets appointed to lead off in popular meetings, and to be a great man among the Young Men's Christian associations, and spouts at missionary or temperance meetings, and in fact he becomes less a preacher of the Gospel than a spouter of fine things which are as nearly allied to any other as to the Christian system. His hearers become impatient under the narrow views formerly received as sound, and the charge of the apostle might be applied to them. "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you, into another Gospel." Yes, that is the secret: "Another Gospel" is the great danger and temptation in our day as in past days. The heart of man is as deceitful as ever and the agencies of the evil one are as active and numerous as ever. "What I say unto you I say unto all, Watch."

"New Elegant Extracts."

"Whatever the other [the Christian church] may do, Masonry will go forward, doing good as it may, waging no warfare, but showing its reliance upon the three primal virtues, 'the greatest of which is charity,'" etc.—Voice of Masonry, June, 1878.

"The Chicago River is notorious for impurity, and its stench often offends all who approach it; but it may be and is dredged and purified. In its worst stage it is nothing in comparison with the foulness and offensiveness of Cynosurism, which is beyond the reach of disinfectants, but still has the effrontery to proclaim itself a Christian association and a general guardian of human society.—Ibid.

"It [Cynosurism] assumes the white robe, but engenders hatred, malice, strife and crime. It imputes to others every conceivable impure motive and act, and is itself the essence of hypocrisy, deceit and sin. Its iniquities are enough to blast a world, and to put fiends incarnate to shame."—Ibid.

We give the above boast of Masonic charity and the specimens of its emanations that the "Cynosurists" may read, mark, ponder and inwardly digest the same. These words for the spirits and rotten eggs for the bodies of "Cynosurists," are the disinfectants which Masons are wont to use. No wonder we are not purified in the estimation of the craft. B.

Russian Socialism.

Russia is far from being a free country; but principles are secretly leavening society in that land, and in Germany also, which must ultimately bear fruit. The assassination of General Mesentzoff, the chief of police, has awakened much and grave apprehension. The whole social and political fabric is honeycombed with revolutionary societies. Russian officials of all grades feel at present as if they went about their business with their lives in their hands, and Russian rulers, between home and foreign troubles, must have an unenviable burden of anxiety. They have not even the hope that if they could but secure the threads and the chiefs of the great association, they could stamp out the whole danger. The indications point to the existence of scores of societies with various objects, alike only in the expression of a vague dissatisfaction, which seeks to express itself by the most desperate means with the existing order of things. Clever and enthusiastic young men in the large towns of Russia seem to go into the secret revolutionary organizations as naturally as in England they would go into debating, scientific, or other clubs. The only comfort for Russian rulers is that Germany, their educated and superorganized neighbor, has been thrown into a panic of apprehension by the murderous attempts of a couple of half insane socialists. By and by, surely, one or two statesmen will arise in Russia and Germany who can see that the most gorgeous military foreign policy will not appease the masses of the people, who groan beneath the crushing burdens of home oppression.—*Cor. The Masonic Crisis.

The actual disruption in the general Masonic brotherhood, which has been expected for some time, must soon take place. The Grand Orient of France may be credited with this disintegration. The facts of the case are not without interest. Without referring to earlier Masonic institutions in France, we may state that, in 1771, the Ancient Grand Lodge of France, declared extinct, was formally replaced by a body called the Grand Orient of France; but continued to "work" separately until June, 1798, when it was solemnly incorporated with the Grand Orient, which has continued until the present time, though it has been placed out of communication with many Grand Lodges, for some extraordinary deviations from established rule—one Dr. Mackey, a well-known Masonic author, says, being "the recent abolition of the office of Grand Master—the duties being performed by the President of the Council of the Order."

Several months ago, the French Masons (i. e., the Grand Orient of France) solemnly resolved that they would no longer recognize the existence of a God in any Masonic rites. Considering that Masonry is eminently a religious institution, wholly unsectarian (Christians and Jews being members, with equal privileges), this repudiation of the Deity was so extraordinary that the Grand Lodge of Ireland immediately severed all fraternal relations with the Masons of France. In due course, the Grand Lodges of Scotland and England, and some of the American lodges, took similar action.

The Grand Orient of France are about to issue a general invitation to their brethren in England, Ireland, Scotland, and the United States to take part in a "convent" (or secret convention) to be held in Paris, in order to revise the decision of the English-speaking lodges, which have literally read the French Masons out of all fraternity, because of their repudiation of the Deity. If the Anglo-Saxon Masons, as they are called, adhere to their resolution, or even if they decline to accept the invitation to join a secret convention, the Grand Orient of France have resolved to declare themselves independent, with power and determination to issue warrants under their separate seal, constituting branch lodges in England, the United States, and other countries. A few members, constituting the old section, will probably maintain Masonry as a religious element in France, but the new and more numerous revolters will continue to exclude all reference to the Deity in their cermonials. Such is the latest aspect of an affair which has a tendency, of course, to annoy Masons in English-speaking countries.—Philadelphia Press.

Public Schools in New Haven.

You inquire of me about "the New Haven Bible-in-school question." I should hardly have written to you on that subject had not you asked me to do so; but as I think of the matter on which our citizens voted last week in electing members of their Board of Education, and the answer which they gave to the question which they had been thinking about through a period of eight months it seems to me that the late election in our school dirtrict may reasonably be regarded as having much more than a local interest.

I know not for how long a time our public schools have been opened daily with a very brief religious service. The service has been, first, the reading of a few sentences from the Bible by the teacher, then the repetition of the Lord's prayer by the united voices of teacher and scholars, then the singing of two or three stanzas from a hymn. Some of the teachers and many of the scholars were Roman Catholics; and our Jewish families (numerous enough to have two synagogues) were as fully represented by children at school as any other class. But I have not learned that either from the Romans or from the Hebrews there had been any complaint in the namo of conscience against that method of beginning the school-day routine.

It was therefore a surprise when the people of New Haven found a little more than eight months ago that, by a vote of five to three in their Board of Education, all "religious exercises" in the public schools were thenceforth prohibited. The only Roman Catholic member of the Board voted against the prohibition, and gave his signature to the document in which the minority appealed to their constituents. The Jewish member of the Board (and that there was one is significant of the liberal spirit which our people have exercised in regard to their schools) voted with the majority. The other four of that majority are men to whom none who knew them would impute any sentiment of hostility to religion, to Christianity, or to Protestantism.

The issue was brought before the public in two reports, exhibiting, respectively, the views of the majority in making the new regulation, and the views of the minority who had voted against it. With the two documents before me I will endeavor to state the issue fairly.

On the part of the Board it was maintained (for substance) that the religious exercises in the schools must necessarily be obnoxious, and therefore oppressive, either to Roman Catholics or to Protestants, either to Jews or to Christians, either to unbelievers or believers; and that the State under whose authority the schools are established and regulated must do nothing which can be regarded as teaching any system of religion or morals. The exclusion of moral instruction and the exclusion of every religious idea or sentiment were inseparably blended in argument. There was to be no teaching of morals "other than the rules of the school as prescribed by the Board, and these could not but be moral in their ends and effect. The very necessities of school discipline"—such was the reasoning of the majority—"involve the inculcation of certain moral practices, certain virtues. We cannot have schools without truth, and self-denial, and industry, and obedience, and honesty, any more than we can have a state without them." As I understand the argument, it was assumed that because of the completed separation between church and state in Connecticut, and because of the acknowledged and guarded sacredness of religious liberty, no distinction between right and wrong was to be recognized in the public school as resting on any other basis than "the necessities of school discipline," or on any other authority than that of the Board of Education. The children must be taught that telling lies in school hours is against the regulations of the school; but let the teacher beware of intimating that "lying lips are an abomination to the Lord," or even that lying is everywhere wicked and mean. They may be taught that they must not steal each other's books or pencils while they are in school nor each other's hats as they go out, but there must be no teaching of a Divine law, "Thou shalt not steal;" no suggestion of the idea that stealing is objectionable for any other reason than because the Board of Education, in deference to "the necessities of school discipline," will not permit such doings inside of the schoolhouse. If a boy whose home reeks with the breath of blasphemy, being reproved for some school delinquency, replies with a horrible execration, there must be no suggestion to him of the sin or the immorality of such language; but if there happens to be no specific rule against cursing he may be informed mildly that when he calls on God to damn the teacher he is introducing into the school a "religious exercise" forbidden by the latest regulation.

I do not mean to imply that our schools have been conducted in this way, nor that sound moral principles—the rules and ideas of Christian morality—have not been inculcated with the approval of the Board. The contrary is true. What I mean is that if the principles on which the late majority of the Board defended their position are consistently adhered to and applied, all suggestion of an essential distinction between right and wrong must be forbidden in the schools; and the children must be trained by the state into the habit of thinking that the difference between right and wrong, instead of existing in the nature of man and of the universe, is only conventional, created by human law, and sanctioned by nothing more than human power. Who is so ignorant as not to know that schools are really valuable to the state, or really worthless, in proportion as they elevate or depress the moral character of the people, making them truthful, honest, chaste, generous and brave?

By the minority of the Board it was denied, in the statement of their views, that the religious liberty of either Jew or Romanist had been infringed by religious exercises which involved no disrespect to the religion of the Old Testament or of the Talmud, and touched no point of difference between Romanist and Protestant. It was denied that the five-minutes' religious service was what could properly be called religious teaching, or was in any sort an intrusion by the State into the province and functions of the church. A distinction was taken "between religious teaching by the State, and the recognition of religion by the State, and therefore in the school which the State establishes." It was argued that the principle on which the majority had been induced to act is of much wider application. That principle, said the minority, "requires that the State shall in all respects ignore religion, and shall suppress the voice of prayer in halls of legislation and courts of justice, shall recognize no Sabbath, shall cease to inaugurate its officers with invocation of God, or to bind the conscience of a witness by administering any oath. In other words, it requires that the State shall cease to be the civil organization and self-government, under God, of a religious people, or to know that the people who are the State are anything else than atheists. We are not prepared to admit that, in Connecticut, atheism has attained, or is likely to attain, the dignity and dominancy of a religion established by law."

Deliberately and distinctly, the minority confronted the whole argument on the other side by affirming the "historical and legal fact," and proving it, "that the State of Connecticut has always been and is now, a Christian Commonwealth." As a State, "Connecticut has never professed indifference to religion, but has always had a positive and affirmative religious character." Connecticut as a State, "in its recognition of universal religious liberty and in its protection of every man's religious rights, is not the less Christian but the more Christian. It is not Christian in any limited sense of the word, Greek, Roman or Protestant, but in that sense in which all Christian denominations are Christian."

The issue, thus defined, was before the people of the New Haven school district during a period of eight months. It was considered and talked about; and, I believe, it was pretty generally understood. Our Roman Catholic citizens understood it. They knew that their religious liberty had not been violated by the devotional exercise at the daily opening of the schools. As the time drew near for the annual election at which three new members of the Board were to be chosen, two tickets were nominated—one known as the Bible ticket; the other named by those who made it the "Anti-Sectarian" ticket; with the insulting assumption that in Connecticut, Christianity—nay, religion itself—is "sectarian." On the day before the election some of the Roman Catholic clergy addressed their congregations on the subject and frankly told them that the question was not between Roman Catholic and Protestant, but between religion and irreligion.

Your readers know the result. The Bible ticket was elected by a majority of nearly three thousand votes.

Yours truly,

Leonard Bcon.

J. R.

In the annual report of "Grand Master" Webber of Michigan, Jan. 26, 1875, occurs the following upon the religious character of the lodge:

In looking over the proceedings of sister grand jurisdictions I observe discussions which it seems to me are entirely foreign to our institution. Some seek to prove that Masonry is and others that it is not religion. Which is right depends upon the definition which is given to the term. The dispute is rather a dispute about terms than a dispute about principles. There are many different religions in the world and each adjudges all the rest wrong. Why should we dispute about such questions? Masonry has been well defined to be "a universal system which teaches the relative and social duties of man on the broad extensive basis of general philanthropy." Within that definition every lover of his kind, every one who is willing to love his neighbor as himself, or to do unto others as he would have others do unto him, can see that Masonry is right, no matter whether as a technical religionist he be a Jew, a Mohammedan, a Christian, a follower of Zoraster, Confucius or Brahma. The inhabitants of all climes and the men of every worship may join with Masons without hearing that which will conflict with their peculiar ideas. As men, as citizens, as members of ecclesiastical organizations, differences may exist between us. With those differences we, as Masons, have nothing to do, and a discussion of those differences should find no place in our lodge rooms. When we meet as Masons we meet as children of one common Father, as brothers laboring for one common end. If we are asked for our creed, we reply, "Faith, Hope and Charity." If we are asked for the tenets of our profession, we answer, "Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth." If we are asked what principles guide us in our intercourse with humanity, and in our progress through life, we answer, "Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence and Justice." If there be any who say that our creed is founded in error, that our tenets are not entitled to their respect, and that the principles guiding us through life are not well adapated to benefit humanity, we point them to the history of our institution, which ante-dates human records, and ask, Who is he that dare put his individual opinion against the experience of the past? So believing, let our practice be made to conform to our professions —we serve God best when we best serve our fellow men. "Be not weary in well doing, for in due season ye shall reap if ye faint not."

Reform News.

Preliminary Work.—From the General Agent.

Windsor, Conn., Oct. 10, 1878.

Dear K.—A hasty note while delayed for a little time here may be of interest. I find the feeling in New England so far as I can judge far less rigid than two years ago. I have thus far been received and treated kindly. There is evidence of a deep conviction among the ministry that this question of secrecy must be discussed and acted upon at no distant time. There is also evidence of unwillingness on the part of many to take an open, decided stand against the lodge at present. How far they will attend our National meeting at Worcester remains to be seen, but without question nine-tenths of the clergy are in heart with us, and would regret exceedingly to have it fail in any respect. How much they will be willing to aid in making it a success is a question of the future.

At Hartford to-day, I called on our aged friend Francis Gillett, who is quite infirm and unable to make very much effort in any cause. Financial reverses have taxed his faith to its utmost and he is seeking relief for the whole country, himself included, in helping on the greenback movement.

At Willimantic we had a fair attendance and good meeting last evening. At Putnam I met several friends the day previous and have agreed to return there for work at some subsequent time as shall be arranged.

On the 8th I attended the consociation of Windham county, Conn., and was allowed half an hour to present our work. Many questions were asked and a brotherly, Christian feeling shown, and I felt that the Lord had opened the way for doing a good work. I invited the brethren to attend our anniversary at Worcester, and suggested the appointment of representatives, but did not think it wise to press the matter or to urge the association to go farther than they felt it to be their duty.

On the evening of the 7th I spoke to a small audience at Mansfield, in the vestry of the Congregational church. At this point I met two pastors, one a Baptist and the other a Congregationalist, who had left the Odd-fellows' lodge and bade me a hearty God-speed in my work. At Willimantic, on Sabbath, I had the pleasure of listening to an admirable sermon by the pastor of the Congregational church in the morning, and spent a pleasant and profitable hour in the Sabbath school after the close of the morning service. One of the deacons of this church is engaged in a mission work in a neighboring parish and I accepted from him an invitation to preach to his people at 4 o'clock P. M. The audience was not large but the attention was all that could be asked. In the evening I preached in the Congregational church, and was much encouraged by the kind reception of the plain truths of the Gospel by attentive listeners. I am greatly indebted to the pastor for his many acts of kindness and gentlemanly treatment shown to the advocate of a confessedly much needed, but in most places very unpopular reform.

I might mention many incidents of interest and give the names of parties who have expressed to me their hatred of the lodge in private conversation, but it might, should this meet their eyes, be thought an unwarranted liberty and for this reason I have avoided speaking of names. What seems necessary here is a thoroughly devoted man of God full of faith and works to go among the people. He would be well received and I think sustained.

J. P. Stoddard.

Northeast Pennsylvania Affairs.

The annual meeting of the Northeast Pennsylvania Anti-secret Association occurred on the 27th, 28th and 29th of September, at Scott Valley Baptist church.

We were much disappointed in the absence of many whom we had fondly hoped to meet, especially the men on whom we relied mainly to speak to the people on the occasion. Notwithstanding all, the meeting was a spirited one, and, I believe, good was done and the cause of God advanced.

Elder S. E. Miller gave us on Friday evening a good logical sermon founded on God's command to "come out and be separate" from the sons of Belial, which was well done and well received.

On the 28th we convened at 10 A. M. for prayer. At 10:30 we came to order with Elder S. E. Miller in the chair. Brief addresses, followed by free conference, with some business occupied the forenoon.

At 2:30 P. M. we resumed the free conference after thirty minutes spent in prayer. Conference ended, we went to the following items of business: Re-elected the same officers for the coming year. Voted the first quarterly meeting to be at Waverly, Lackawanna county, Pennsylvania, on the last week in December, commencing on Friday evening, 7 o'clock and lasting till Sabbath evening, embracing the 27th, 28th and 29th. The evening session was occupied by a lecture by the writer of this sketch and an address by Elder S. E. Miller.

At the close of the exercises, the following was passed by a rising vote:

Whereas, Speculative Freemasonry with its kindred organizations is an anti-Christian religion, assuming to save men and land them in the "grand lodge above," therefore

Resolved, That it is inconsistent and wrong for Christians to fellowship adhering members of the lodge in our churches.

The Sabbath was occupied by the usual devotional services, attended with sermons morning and evening.

We are soon to inaugurate more active measures in this lodge-cursed region of the State. Bro. L. C. Stevens of Clifford will start the enterprise by being one of twenty men who will raise $100 to procure the services of E. Ronayne for a series of lectures in this region in December next. Let any who will pledge $5 for said enterprise send their names and pledge to me. I hereby request brethren Raynor of Montrose, Powers of Harford, S. C. Stevens of Clifford, S. A. Reynolds of Waverly, Robert Berry of Carbondale, Clark Lowry of Green Grove, and N. L. Miller of Peckville, to solicit the needed sum to put the work on foot without delay.

The secretists are spoiling for want of genuine light. Counterfeit light, such as they get in the lodge, don't stir them enough to keep them from getting rancid by inaction and bad air. When they become conscious of this themselves and call for light as they do in Carbondale, Pa., it is high time to send the poor lodge-bound souls a little real light. "So mote it be." We must have lectures in Carbondale! The Baal worshippers there are vexatiously supplicating an aged and feeble man of nearly eighty years to embark in their behalf. Though he could handle them without mittens, give him fair play, let us grant them more than they ask.

Yours for the cause,

Nathan Callender.

Notes from Venango Co., Pa.

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Having promised the friends of the reform about Nicolville to preach for them at two different places and lecture in that vicinity, and help organize an anti-secret association, I left home on the morning of the 4th of October, in my own conveyance, and reached Father Watson's on the 5th at noon. After dinner I went eight miles to Pleasant Hill, where there was an appointment given out in the M. E. Church; as it rained there were few out. After meeting I went home with Bro. S. McMurdy, one of the old veteran class-leaders of the M. E. church, whom we learned to know and love twenty-six years ago, and who is heart and hand with us in this reform.

Sabbath morning, the 6th, I preached for them in their church again to a numerous congregation, from 1 Cor. 15:25, on the reign of Christ. In the evening I preached in the Levere school-house to a crowded house and announced the lecture for the next evening. After meeting I went home with Father Watson, an old tried friend of the reform.

On Monday evening I lectured at the Levere school-house on the evil tendency of secret orders. After the lecture the friends present formed themselves in an association auxilary to the N. C. A. Four different townships in Venango and Clarion counties and five different Christian denominations are represented in the association. The leaven is there at work and will eventually permeate these two counties.

The first seed sown here for the reform was by Mr. Robert Shaw from Oil City, now of Seagertown, Crawford, Co., Pa. Eight years ago he sent a copy of the Cynosure for one year to Mr. Watson. Now there are over fifteen copies taken at different post offices in the vicinity of Nicolville. Some of the lodge ministers are taking warning and deny that they any longer affiliate with these orders, hence they take their demits that they can say they no longer belong or attend the lodge, yet they are still acknowledged members of these orders. If not why are they so shy? and why do they at certain times recommend those orders to young men? These in turn talk out of school sometimes. Not long ago a member of the lodge and also a member of the Evangelical Association, boasted that most all their preachers of the Pittsburgh conference belonged to secret orders. Or why do these men by a resolution of their conference (as is asserted by some) close the doors of their churches against sermons and lectures on this subject? We ask why? Gentlemen, why do you not stand boldly for or against these orders and their teachings? Are you ashamed of your connection with them? If so, why not come out against them? "Why limp ye on both sides? If Baal be God why serve him, but if the Lord be God serve him." It will be hard for you "to kick against the pricks." It is reported by a certain brother that the Erie conference of the M. E. church passed a resolution against secret societies at their session recently held at Oil City. Were those men sincere? The Philistine foxes will be caught hereafter. Yet straws show which way the wind blows. More anon. H. W. HAMPE.

WHO VOLUNTEERED AT PELLA, IOWA.

LYNNVILLE, Iowa, 9th Mo., 27, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—We have just closed at Pella, Iowa, one of the most interesting courses of lectures and expositions on Baal and sun-worship, latterly termed Freemasonry, that I ever attended. Bro. Ronayne seemed especially gifted and helped on this occasion by the Lord. The hall was densely crowded every evening; the last two many stood with listening ears outside to catch a passing word. It has seemed to awake a general and wide-spread interest for good that will never lose its power.

On the third evening Bro. R. called for volunteers to fill the officers' chairs, and a well-known Mason in Pella by the name of Gough, came up and filled the Junior Warden's chair, and went to work showing by the way he took hold it was no new play for him, acknowledging its correctness, and other noble-hearted Christians took Bro. R. by the hand and blessed God that such a man was raised up to expose so heinous a sin, and bid him God speed. We must give the fraternity credit for their attendance and good behavior, yet we think one main point was for their good conduct. Public sentiment here is against them; nearly all the business men of the city attended, and some of them filled officers' chairs. Bro. R. made his usual offer or challenge to pay for the hall two or three nights, if they would come out and discuss Masonry with him, or prove him an impostor as they sometimes call him. One of the Pella bankers, on the south side of the square, told some one on the street that R. was a blatherskite and liar and should not be believed; and the editor of the Pella Blade said he knew no more about Masonry than a Greenbacker does about politics. More anon. T. K. BUFKIN.

LIGHT ARISING IN A DARK PLACE.—GLORIOUS NEWS FROM THE SOUTH.

COLUMBUS, Miss.

BRO BLANCHARD:—I was glad to see the names of more seceders from Freemasonry in the last Cynosure. I send another to be added to the list, J. W. Moore, (one degree) Sanford county, Ala. He renounces Freemasonry declaring he will have no more to do with it.

Pleasant Ridge church (Congregational) resolved by a unanimous vote to keep pure from secret societies, and sends up her name as one of "The United Churches of Christ." Not long since I heard a Methodist minister preaching against secretism. He spoke of the prevalence of Masonry as one of the probable causes of the present judgments of God upon our land.

I spent some time lately in tract distribution in Alabama. The tracts were generally received with pleasure. One man speaking of a minister of that place said, "He warns us against every other sin and he ought to warn us against secret societies." While I was telling to some the way in which they are made to swear in the Masonic initiation, a lady exclaimed, "Why, it's sacrilegious; its perfectly awful! Why, my husband, why did you not tell me of this?"

I preached at a Methodist church in Sandford, Alabama at a protracted meeting and part of my discourse was upon lodgery. I requested those who were opposed to it, and would advise their preachers to preach against it to rise. Almost all the congregation rose up. Two preachers stood up signifying their readiness to do so.

In the midst of success I have also met with derision and curses, but hitherto the Lord has been my trust, my refuge and my defense, and to his name be the praise.

ELI TAPLEY.

RATHBUN IN WEBSTER CO., IOWA.

Rev. N. Wardner, general evangelist of the Wesleyan churches, notices in a late report to his church paper the good work being done by the Iowa lecturer:

On Saturday brother Rathbun came greatly to our joy. He had been to Missouri and some fears of his safety had been entertained, and his appearance was a source of great relief to our anxieties. He had worked the Masonic degrees there and through the Divine interposition had returned unharmed. Bro. Rathbun's work in this part of Iowa has dug a grave for Freemasonry more than "six feet perpendicular." His triumphs over the champions of "the works of darkness" have been most complete. Having failed to foil him in discussion, they have resorted to the basest slanders, which only return to torment the inventors. Under the light that is being shed on this blackness, many are leaving the lodge, and many good and conscientious Christians are withdrawing from churches which fellowship these abominations, and wide fields are being opened for the organization of Wesleyan Methodist churches. This is the reward of fidelity to principle. The rising tide of Gospel reform which sweeps all dark orders from God's altars can not be stayed. Monday evening I saw brother Rathbun work the third degree of Masonry at Dayton. He was perfect master of the work in hand, killing and resurrecting "Hiram" most admirably. I could but wish that he might work the degrees in every community where we have a Wesleyan church throughout the land. Masonry

"Is a monster of such hideous mein,
As to be dreaded needs but be seen."

There is no danger that seeing it often would lead to either "pity, endure or embrace."

My soul so rejoices that our churches, as far as my observation goes, are so forcibly realizing that to be false is to fail, but to be true is to succeed.

WHAT DO THEY MEAN?

SALINA, Kansas.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The enclosed clipping was taken from one of our city papers and will doubtless explain itself to you.

Will you please tell us by what authority Masons claim the true God as their "Supreme Commander," "Supreme High Priest," and "Grand Master on high?"

How do Masons know that there is a "celestial convocation of the Infinite Chapter?"

The Masons whose names are attached to these resolutions speak of their deceased brother Mason as one who "has entered the blissful abodes of the blessed," and whose "soul, freed from its shackles, will partake of eternal bliss."

Do they make these statements from the stand-point of Masonry, or the stand-point of the Gospel of Christ?

Is there anything in Masonry, apart from Christ, that is calculated to save men from sin and its eternal consequences?

More light is desirable. Yours truly, ENQUIRER.

ASYLUM OF ASKELON COMMANDERY, No 6, Knights Templar.

"WHEREAS, It has pleased our Supreme Commander to remove from among us our well-beloved friend and frater, Sir William S. Alexander.

Resolved, That in the death of our beloved frater, we have lost a true friend, and earnest, faithful and magnanimous Knight, and this city and community a valued citizen.

Resolved, That our only consolation rests in the faith that our departed friend has completed his dreary pilgrimage; has finished his warfare with the vanities and deceits of this world, and has entered the blissful abodes of the blessed."

At the regular convocation of the Salina Chapter, No. 18, R. A. M., held Sept. 9, 1878, a committee consisting of Companions Faulkner, Whitehead and Bond reported the following, which was adopted:

"WHEREAS, Our dearly beloved companion, W. S. Alexander, has been summoned by our Supreme High Priest to a celestial convocation of the Infinite Chapter. * * *

Resolved, That while we sincerely deplore the untimely death of our beloved companion, our grief is tempered by the reflection that our loss is his gain, and that his soul, freed from its shackles will partake of eternal spiritual bliss."

SALINA LODGE No. 60, A. F. & A. M.

"WHEREAS, It has pleased our Grand Master on high to call from labor in this earthly lodge, to refreshment in the lodge celestial, our worthy and much respected brother, William S. Alexander, therefore,

Resolved, That with great esteem we hold our brother in remembrance as one whose personal character was affluent in all those qualities which contribute to the formation of a perfect man.

Resolved, That in his being called from our midst, we recognize the mysterious hand of the Supreme Architect of the Universe, and submissively bow to the decree of him who doeth all things well."

AN INCIDENT.

A colored man, a member of a Baptist church in Burlington, Iowa, who had recently listened to Rathbun's expose of Masonry, said, "I went the next Sunday evening to our church, de cole'd church, and dare was our preacher he a Mason and he preachin' away as hard as he could, and when he see lots o' white folks comin' in he jus stick his thumbs together and spread his hands out right over de Bible. He want to tell de white folks he Mason. Me want no more Mason preacher for me dat take such awfu oaths. Me once goin' to join de Masons, but lacked two dollahs and they wouldn't take me. I'se glad I lacked that two dollahs. Wy, broder, a Mason has no more business in de church dan a hog has in side-saddle. De boys all round say dat Rathbun's lectures cured them of wanting to be Masons. No more Mason for them." SO MOTE IT BE.

A SYLLOGISM FOR BRO. HINMAN.

1. Ninety-nine out of every hundred of those who have been truly regenerated have felt, at times, the involuntary uprising of depravity in the shape of pride, anger, covetousness, lust or other evil propensities, even while living in a state of conscious justification by faith.

2. The stirring of these evil propensities is inconsistent with a state of entire sanctification, for the blood of Jesus "cleanseth us from all sin," and from "all filthiness of the flesh and spirit."

3. Therefore, ninety-nine out of every hundred of those who have been truly regenerated have not been regenerated at all, and are either wofully deceived or arrant hypocrites, according to Bro. Hinman's theology.

I should rather draw the following conclusion: Therefore, ninety-nine out of every hundred of those who have been truly regenerated need the cleansing blood to wash away inherited depravity, from whence spring these evil propensities. M. L. VORHEIS.

A NEW AND VALUABLE HISTORY.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa, Oct. 1, 1878.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—The following is a copy of a card sent by some Mason I presume, to Bro. Rathbun a few days ago. I hope you will give the Masons the benefit of an insertion in your valuable paper.

It is headed "Important to Masons," and is as follows:

"We have just issued a book which is a complete instructor for the Blue Lodge, containing the opening and closing and all the work and lectures, pertaining to the first three degrees.

This work is printed in cipher which is easily read by a Mason but is perfectly unintelligible to any other person. The work is called the Political History of the United States.

As the work differs somewhat in the different States, we have different books containing the exact standard work of each particular State, word for word, leaving out the signs, grips and passwords.

Masons have been so long availing themselves of the open exposes which any one can read and which are always erroneous, that it has become a necessity that a work of this kind should be within the reach of members of the fraternity, if for no other purpose than to discourage the publication of exposes which would not be published at all but for the patronage which they receive from Masons themselves.

No member who wishes to be a bright Mason can afford to be without this book. It is neatly bound for carrying in the pocket and it will give you the work as correctly as you could get it from the Grand Lecturer.

This work will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of $2.25. Liberal terms allowed to agents. Sample copies will be sent on receipt of $1 50. L. WIGHTMAN, 731 Broadway, N. Y., publisher of standard Masonic works."

The above is the card to the letter, with the publishers italics. No comments.

Yours for the information,
J. McCLERY.

ODD-FELLOW DEDICATION.

CANAL DOVER, O., Oct. 6, 1878.

BRO. KELLOGG:—Thursday, 3rd inst., was a great day for the I. O. O. F. of this place. The order have rented a hall on third story of a large brick block recently elected for a wholesale business. The dedicatory ceremonies took place on Thursday afternoon. After taking a street parade the "solemn ceremonies of setting apart this hall for the purposes of Odd-fellowship," were duly performed. Of course some "Worthy Past Master" had to be imported for the purpose. There were two on hand, one to lead off, the other to "say" the prayers. After the former had done his part he lectured to the order until train time, and the latter remained over night and delivered an address on Odd-fellowship in the M. E. church.

I assign two reasons for its being there: 1. By getting into the most popular church of course everybody would conclude it is a good thing and ought to be patronized. 2. The M. E. church has the largest audience room there is in town, and by the amount of advertising done to get a crowd, it was presumed that a vast audience would be out to "hear all about Odd-fellowship," as the posters said. The audience, however, was very small, a very fitting rebuke to the occasion.

Mr. Deuel, the man who lectured, spoke nearly an hour. The first part of his lecture was devoted to the development of the "immortal truths" that Odd-fellowship has been the means of discovering, and in the second part, he took hold of the "objections to Odd-fellowship" and exploded them. I noted down a few of his propositions which I here give to the readers of the Cynosure. They may be new to some.

1. Odd-fellowship is the miracle of the age. 2. It dispenses millions every year. (Of course the lecturer in the afternoon said the same thing. They all do that, but forget to say that all their dispensation of gifts is on the principle of a life insurance company that claim no charity in it.)

3. Odd-fellowship has gained such proportions that it demands the attention of every one. 4. It is founded on the Bible. (This must always be said to quiet all fears as to its being an immoral institution. It's a subterfuge that other wicked institutions resort to when defending themselves. The same principles are taught in the order that are taught in the Bible. Hence the Bible authorizes it.)

5. The first principle discovered and taught by Odd-fellowship is the "Fatherhood of God," the second, the "Brotherhood of Man." Through the discovery of these truths, the churches have been elevated and sectarianism abolished, he said, so that the church is indebted to their order for it. Then, growing out of these fundamental principles for the discovery of which Odd-fellowship alone must have the honor, is another leading truth of the order, viz., "The Immortality of the Soul."

Of course the members of the lodge think it was a grand effort, but I venture the opinion that the initiations will not be increased either by that lecture or the "imposing ceremonies" of dedication.

Above the entrance to the lodge room, and also above the chief officer's stand, is the inscription, "In God we trust." I met this said officer next morning, who, by the way, is a prominent member of one of the churches, and after asking me how I liked things the day before, and very openly giving him my opinion of such work, I asked him how many of their members do really and truly "trust in God." His reply was that a man could not get into the order unless he does believe and trust in God. But I know men of that order who have no regard for God, his laws, the Sabbath, religion and morality, and yet the principles of Odd-fellowship teach them that they are better than Christians and in event of death they are taken to the "Grand Lodge above," and that God is their "Great Grand Master." O, it is horrible to contemplate such doctrine! My blood chilled as I witnessed their blasphemous and heathenish ceremonies.

Canal Dover is not wholly given to Baal. Although comparatively silenced by the supremacy of the lodge influence I find some very strong opposition to secrecy. I have conversed with several good men who offer to aid me in procuring the services of Bro. Stoddard, to whom I have already written on the subject. One of the ministers here is anti-secret, but he has never investigated the matter and his convictions of the truth of the expositions of the orders are not as sound as they ought to be. I am sure that a few lectures by Bro. S. will confirm him in his anti-secret views, and make many more decided opposers of the lodge.

On Friday I was told by a man who a few years ago was a confirmed drunkard, but has since reformed, been converted. attends church and lives a Christian life, that he started to prayer-meeting the evening before, but on getting in sight of the church he discovered no light in the basement where prayer-meeting is held, but saw the audience room lighted up, and he then thought of the Odd fellow lecture, and he turned and went home. He calls secrecy the work of the devil and is very anxious to hear it exposed. Justice to this man compels me to say that he is a strong Prohibitionist and on next Tuesday his testimony will be against the unholy liquor traffic. I mention this because I like to find men right on every question. Hoping the good work may continue, I am yours for truth, C. W. KOHR.

WE MUST ORGANIZE.

The Masonic organization is the most perfect in the known world. In it every man is sworn, under penalty of death, to do his Masonic work and meet his Masonic obligations. For Anti-masons to attempt to overthrow this terrible despotism, without a systematic organization, is extremely foolish. Then let it be impressed upon the minds of all anti-secret reformers that organization is the first duty of every one anxious for the removal of the decomposing carcass of Freemasonry.

We have had many good audiences; we have given the people much light by papers, tracts, books, etc.; but we have failed to impress on the minds of the people that every man must do his duty or suffer the penalties. The penalty for the Christian is to be found in the Scriptures; and those for the freeman can easily be guessed by the thickest skulled Anti-mason.

Now, readers of the Cynosure, will you try to get along with all the wheels off your ox-cart, or will you grease them well with greenbacks and then put them on, so our lecturers can ride through the mud of secretism and the filth of Freemasonry?

The great word of the Mason is Mah-hah-bone. Let the anti-secret word be "Organization."

E. J. CHALFANT.

OUR MAIL.

Daniel F. Pratt, Reading, Mass., writes in regard to a journey in Europe:

"I found that I could get along as well without Masonry as with it. I was kindly treated by all whom I came in contact with in both England and France. I was urged to join the order before leaving, but I could have found no earthly use for it if I had, unless I wished to do some wrong."

Asa G. Cutler, Putnam, Ct., writes:

"My heart is with the Anti-masonic, also the prohibitory or anti-rum, cause."

Augustus Soper, Tilsonburg, Ont., writes:

"How is it that Masonic fathers never solicit their sons to become Masons? How is it that Masons' wives are not buried with Masonic honors? How is it that Masons' wives are not permitted when dead, to join their husbands in the Grand Lodge above?"

Will some Mason answer these questions?

J. Hunter, Freeport, Ill., writes:

"The Cynosure stands next in value to the blessed Bible in my family. God hasten the day when it may be found in every house. I read it and send it out on its mission of reform. It is growing better every number. May God make the truths it utters sharper than a two-edged sword. God bless both editor and paper."

Dr. A. Benham, Melmore, O., writes:

"Our churches in this vicinity have concluded to let the Masons run the dead river line through Dear Christian Cynosure, we have many souls to save, and if God will not take the cause in his own hands, we are in a doleful condition. Let every Christian and lover of Christ pray that God will, in his own time, send deliverance. There are a few here who say, 'Come over and help us.'"

Hope Davis, Carpenterville, Ill., writes:

"The influence of all ministers who do not come out fully on the Lord's side, is on the side of Baal. They keep back a part of the price. They regard evil in their hearts and the Lord will not bless their labors. They had better stop preaching and take hold of the plow. I believe the Lord will hear us and we will prevail."

Josiah Talbot, Pella, Iowa, writes concerning Mr. Ronayne's lectures in that place:

"We feel thankful to God that he has raised up such an able man to expose that idolatrous institution called Masonry. We enjoyed the three lectures here very much, and the people have had their eyes opened as never before. We think much good has been done."

A sensible man in Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"After a careful perusal of the 'Odd-fellowship Illustrated' obtained a short time ago from you, I think I am benefited by the exposure there made, and having been importuned to join the Masons and Knights of Pythias, I would like to know something of their doings."

LESSON IV.—October 27, 1878.—THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 16: 19-31. Memorize 22-25. Primary Verse 31.

19. There was a certain rich man, which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day.

20. And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate, full of sores,

21. And desiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover the dogs came and licked his sores.

22. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom: the rich man also died, and was buried;

23. And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments, and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom.

24. And he cried and said, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame.

25. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedst thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted and thou art tormented.

26. And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: so that they which would pass from hence to you can not; neither can they pass to us, that would come from thence.

27. Then he said, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldest send him to my father's house:

28. For I have five brethren; that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torment.

29. Abraham said unto him, They have Moses and the prophets; let them hear them.

30. And he said, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead they will repent.

31. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead.

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. Scripture references to "purple" and "fine linen."
2. Oriental "beggars" and "dogs."
3. The Jewish conception of Abraham's bosom.
4. The Scriptural teaching concerning hell.
5. The real "good things" of life.
6. The real "evil things."
7. The pleasures and pains of memory. (Son, remember)
8. Scripture examples of persons raised from the dead, and the effect upon unbelievers.
9. The teachings of this parable concerning the nature and duration of future punishment.
10. The Bible Readings.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. Consciousness and character go with us into the next life.
2. As we have been morally, here, we shall be there.
3. Ungodliness, without regard to great vices, is soul-destroying.
4. The next life is one of retribution.
5. The suffering saint will have rest and joy in the future.
6. No other means of grace than those we enjoy would avail with those who are impenitent under the present means.
7. Unsaved in life we are unsaved forever.

From the Evangelical Repository.

LESSONS.

The allotments of this life afford no certain evidence of the estimate which God puts upon us, or of our condition in the future state. We grant that godliness is profitable unto all things, and that, on the whole, the way of holiness tends even to temporal prosperity. Still, so far as individuals are concerned, the distinction is not made in the ordinary providence of God, between the righteous and the wicked which we might have expected. We need to walk here by faith and not by sight in this matter. Those dear to God may, in this world, be sorely tried, and seemingly cast off by him, while those who are his enemies may roll in affluence. This state of matters has been a puzzle and a trial to many in all ages. In Psalm 73, it is seen how it exercised and perplexed the souls of saints in ancient times. The book of Job, and, more directly, that of Ecclesiastes, deals with this problem. And in this parable our Lord sheds light upon it. Here we see that God has another world in which to rectify the inequalities and clear up the mysteries of this. It is important for the guidance and comfort of Christians, especially in dark days, to meditate upon this parable, and it may serve as a warning to any who feel emboldened to increase or continue in sin because, for the present, they are outwardly prospered.

After death men exist as conscious beings. This doctrine is palpably involved in this parable. The body of the rich man was buried, yet the lived after death and was conscious. The materialist, who says that man consists simply of matter, organized delicately, it is true, but still only matter, is at variance with the teachings of Christ here. Those also who allege that between death and the resurrection the soul exists in a condition of inactivity and stupor, would do well to meditate on this parable. It is a standing protest against the doctrines of materialism and of an intermediate state of soul-sleeping.

At death the soul passes at once either to bliss or misery. The soul of Lazarus is borne to Abraham's bosom, to the banquet of the blessed. The soul of Dives goes to the place of torment, vs. 22, 23. There is no hint given here of the Romish purgatory, a place to which, it is contended, good men go when they die to be purified by suffering from the remainder of their sins. This doctrine, derived from paganism, has deceived many, and brought vast treasure to Popish coffers; but it finds no countenance in the Word of God.

Memory survives death. "Son, remember," said Abraham to Dives, and Dives remembered his brothers and Lazarus also. Indeed, it is necessary that the wicked should remember, else they would not know why they suffer, and the righteous need to remember in order that they may be in a position to recognize the grace of God in delivering them. Memory will intensify the misery of the one and enhance the joy of the other.

The separation which takes place at death, between the righteous and the wicked shall be complete and eternal. How far they may be permitted to have knowledge of each other's condition may be a question: but that there is an impassable gulf between them we here learn. Hence those who say that in the future world the impenitent may repent and pass to heaven, come into direct collision with our Lord's teaching here. Dives does not presume to ask admission to heaven, and Abraham speaks of an impassable gulf lying between the abode of the righteous and that of the wicked.

This is the only instance in the Bible of the invocation of departed saints, but it may be noted that the invocation came from one lost, and besides was unsuccessful.

The state of mind which leads men to disregard the Bible would make them resist any evidence of a mere intellectual kind. What we need is not more external evidence, but a heart to receive what is afforded. "Because I tell you the truth ye believe not," said Christ to the Jews. Because men love darkness rather than light, the more light is shed upon them the closer may they shut their eyes. No sinners are so hardened as the gospel-hardened.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCT. 17, 1878.

OUR GREAT MEETINGS. — The Worcester National Convention and State meetings about to be held. Let us remember that we do not meet as anti-secret conventions to war on secret orders, but as "Christian associations" to turn the world from "these vanities" to Christ. A revival of pure and undefiled religion should attend every one of these gatherings. All who met in the City Hall Convention, Aurora, Ill., in 1868, remember that season as a Pentecost lit up by tongues of fire. Then all our hopes centered in God and we were not disappointed. "The Spirit was poured upon us from on high." So let it be at Worcester and the rest of our meetings near at hand.

"THE BIBLE IN SCHOOLS" is the voice and choice of the readers of the Cynosure; the sole and only standard of law and morals; and the first plank in the American platform, which declares that, "Ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation." They will read with joy Dr. Leonard Bacon's letter in the present number of this paper, on the "Public Schools in New Haven," and will notice a distinction heretofore insisted on by the editor of the Cynosure, between "religious coercion and recognizing religion." All Christ and Christianity ask of Americans, as citizens, is, not to imprison, fight for, or coerce men to accept it; but, as a nation, to continue to do as we have done from the first, viz., recognize it. Pilate must recognize Christ or crucify him. So must we: and so shall we, and "whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder." (Mat. 21:44.) Read with delight Dr. Bacon's letter and the result of the popular vote in New Haven.

A MACEDONIAN CRY comes from Columbia City, Oregon, so earnest and plaintive that we endorse and publish it, hoping that it will fall on the ears of some sleeping apostle Paul. Bro. Wm. E. Gore writes, ordering books and sample copies of the Cynosure, and adds: "I find this the best place for a lecturer. A good preacher and lecturer would be sustained and supported, and the people would rejoice to see the thing go on. If a good one can be got who is not afraid, send him on. We will stand by him to the last. This is a beautiful country and climate. If you can help us please let us know soon."

Will some one write to this brother.

THE MASONIC CRISIS, in this number, is a very important article. The persistent attacks of Abolitionists on slavery forced professing Christian slave-holders to change their ground and come out square for slavery, whereas before they had condemned while they apologized for it. Our attacks on the lodge are having the same effect. The Grand Orient of France which aspires to be head and mistress of Freemasonry, which is essentially atheistic, is alarmed that our blows are compelling professing Christian Masons to deny its atheistic character, and claim that the Bible on their altars means something more than a bauble and decoy for Christians. L'Orient therefore comes out for striking out the name of God from the ritual, and the Bible, of course, from the altar. This brings on the struggle noticed by the Philadelphia Press. Read and ponder. It points to the final struggle.

A FRIEND STATES THIS CASE: A Congregational church member, "as much opposed to Masonry as any body," but deprecating discussion, has joined "The American Order of United Workmen," secret, and meeting in the Masonic Hall. Being labored with he says he is bound to "the order" not only by his oath, but by a two thousand dollar benefit bond. So that if he must quit one he must leave his church. QUESTION: What is to be done in his case?

ANSWER. If incorrigible and irreclaimable, he should by all means be excluded from the church:

1. Because Paul commands it in Eph. 5:11. Those "unfruitful works of darkness" are reproduced in and by these modern secret orders, as can be shown by a multitude of authorities.

2. Because any person preferring his relations to the world above his relations to Christ in his church is already an apostate in his heart, and will be an Achan and curse to the church.

He should, therefore, be labored with in love and saved, if possible; but if not, cut off.

PRESIDENT S. C. BARTLETT held a meeting at the Tremont House, Chicago, Oct. 7th inst., in behalf of Dartmouth College. He said the College needed $250,000. "There was a deficit last year of $4,620, and twice as much the year before," that is the College has sunk thirteen thousand eight hundred and sixty dollars since President Bartlett went there. He has taken the course which its assailants recommended to Wheaton, viz., condemned Freemasonry in words and protected it in practice, and assailed its assailants. His policy has not brought him success. The meeting undertook to raise $1,000 from Dartmouth alumni. They reported but $650 raised; but a small part of the $250,000 called for. The above facts are from the Inter-Ocean of Oct. 8th.

THE CONSPIRATORS AGAINST WHEATON COLLEGE.—In the war on President Blanchard, Messrs. Webster, Taylor, Grassie, Hazard and others were loud in their professions of Anti-masonry. Webster attended and spoke at Anti-masonic meetings at Wheaton, and Rev. L. Taylor went down and addressed the Illinois State Anti-secret Convention at Streator. The same parties at Sycamore, in Elgin Association, voted to exclude an Anti-mason, without charges; elected a minister who was a Freemason as member of the body; and placed Gen. Dustin, Knight Templar, on its standing committee; then passed an Anti-masonic resolution to deceive the members of their churches who are opposed to Masonry.

Since then Rev. J. A. Montgomery of Morris, was advertised to read before Fox River Association, an attack on the division and reorganization of the College church. And Oct. 8th these same men, viz., Webster, Taylor, Grassie, Hazard and Hart, went down to Chicago Association, met at Lombard, Ill., where an hour was occupied in discussing "The responsibility of Congregationalists in this vicinity," in which Hazard was a leader; but no word is reported concerning secret societies. From the first the course of these men has been:

1. To condemn the lodge in words.
2. Protect it in practice; and
3. Set Congregationalism against the anti-secret administration of the College.

"THE JEWISH ADVANCE" is the name of a new Jewish weekly in the 16th number of its first volume in Chicago. The number before us has culled from a Boston book sixteen crucified Saviours and sixteen Trinities of divine persons. It is a significant fact that every system of heathenism, since Abel fell as a symbol and martyr tyr for Christ, has had its supreme god or Jupiter, and its slain mediator and prophet. Freemasonry has both. "The god of this world," Satan, is its supreme deity and the mythical Hiram its martyr mediator. Mormonism has the same. In short, Satan, as Adam Clark says, "is God's ape," or imitator, and caricatures God in his manifestations to men. In the last day all these false systems and counterfeits will be a unit against Christ. "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." (Rev. 22:20.)

TALK WITH OUR SUBSCRIBERS No. 2.

We have received responses from two good men saying that ten thousand subscribers to the Cynosure will, in their judgment, achieve the moral triumph of the reform for the cause of Christ and our beloved country. One writes from Massachusetts the other from Missouri. Our hopes and expectations for a large and powerful paper rest on the following grounds:

1. God has sustained the Cynosure through a season of financial pressure and derangement almost unprecedented since the settlement of the country. Good crops, industry and frugality among our people are already giving the wheel of business an upward turn.

2. The success and spread of our principles already attained make the Cynosure, a public necessity.

3. Since Mr. Kellogg is relieved from the care of the treasury of the National Christian Association, he is giving a large and increasing share of his time and energy to the departments of general and religious news, which will soon make the Cynosure as necessary as an almanac to all members of those churches in sympathy with the reform.

4. The working of Masonic degrees by Ronayne, Rathbun and others increases everywhere the call for intelligence on the subject.

5. The erasure of the name of God by the Grand Orient Lodge of France, and soon after by the Supreme Council of France meeting at Lausanne, has moved the order from its deepest foundations all over Europe and the United States. The Voice of Masonry (Chicago) for October, contains by much the ablest writing on the subject we have ever read from a Masonic author. Extracts from letters to the Supreme Councils of Belgium, England, Wales, Ireland, and the United Lodges of Germany insist that erasing the name of God and substituting a Force Superieure or Principe Createur (Supreme Force or Creative Principle) will utterly uproot and destroy the order in Christian, English-speaking lands, making the lodge prayers and oaths folly and absurdity. The upheaving and colliding of these masses of mind will make the discussion read and sought for like news from the Turco-Russian war.

6. Meantime, the meetings at Worcester, at Wheaton, in Nebraska, Wisconsin and Minnesota now soon to take place, and the inaugurating the United Churches of Christ, and missions in the ex-slave States, all these and many more conspiring causes unite to make the Cynosure a necessity, and will furnish our devoted and excellent volunteer canvassers with arguments sure to prevail. A better and holier set of men and women do not walk the earth, and their prayers and perseverance must surely win success. Meantime no toil shall be spared on the paper itself, and the publishers stand ready to reduce the price, as the list increases to a living figure.

THE STANNARD MYSTERY.

A few weeks since, Mary E. Stannard, of Madison, Connecticut, was found dead in the wood lot of Rev. H. H. Hayden (M. E.) in an unfrequented path, with her throat cut and arms folded across her breast. Before her death she had told her sister that Hayden had debauched her. Incipient legal measures were being taken when the State withdrew the case, and there is much popular excitement in Madison and vicinity. Hayden, to prove an alibi, alleged he was in another place throwing wood where it could be loaded upon a cart. Some aged citizens went to the spot and one old man threw the same wood in three minutes and a half which was said to have consumed an hour or an hour and a half of Hayden's time.

The prosecuting attorney, Harrison, said he had withdrawn the case because Justice Wilcox had declared he would not believe Hayden guilty or bind him over. He, Harrison, further said to the reporter of the New York Herald, that "Wilcox and Hayden are both members of the same Masonic lodge." And he further mentioned to the reporter that Rev. E. K. Avery (M. E.) who murdered Sarah Cornell and hung her up in a stack-yard in 1831 (forty-seven years ago) to give the appearance that she had hung herself, was a Mason; that he was taken before two Masonic magistrates who acquitted him; but was afterward bound over by a magistrate who did not belong to the lodge. There is talk of bringing Hayden before the court by a bench warrant.

Whatever shall prove true in this gloomy case in respect to Hayden the guilt of the lodge is apparent in both cases; that of Mary E. Stannard and Sarah Cornell. It must, we think, arouse attention in New England and Secretary Stoddard should carefully put the facts before the Worcester national meeting.

Church Shrinkage under Masonic Pastors.

The attempt to blend Congregationalism and Masonry is utter fatuity. The Puritan movement began by Hooper's "scrupling vestments," which were a plain Quaker dress compared with the toggery of the lodge. The early non-conformists shrunk from centralization, and each church ordained its own pastors. The Masonic constitution is absolute subjection to centralism. Says Professor Robison, "The principle of underling adherence to unknown superiors runs through all the lodges alike." Aside from its exclusion of Christ, the lodge is therefore simple death by chloroform to a Congregational church.

The Advance (Oct. 3,) tells us that Rev. Richard Knight was dismissed from his pastorate in South Hadley by a council week before last. And another council dismissed Rev. Geo. E. Fisher from his pastorate at South Hadley Falls. Immediate steps will be taken to consummate the union between the two churches." The Advance is mistaken as to the location of Mr. Knight's church. Both his and Mr. Fisher's are at South Hadley Falls, and both have large, fine buildings, and there is plenty of work for both.

But both Knight and Fisher are Freemasons; and the best members of their churches are opposed to the lodge. Some eight or ten years ago Fisher was Master of Holyoke Lodge of Freemasons, and invited his congregation, men and women—Proh pudor!—into the lodge-room to hear his inaugural address. The trustees of his church gave me the basement of his church to reply to his speech, which was given without prayer, and a German infidel played the melodeon accompaniment to Christless Masonic odes. Fisher told his people that the lodge was not religious but social, and he dwelt copiously on the social enjoyments afforded, from which the godly women of his church were excluded.

Rev. Mr. Knight lauded the lodge in private conversation; said that it helped him from Kansas (or Texas I forget which) to Massachusetts when Christians would not. And he boasted that Dr. Quint and other Congregational pastors were in the lodge, and "plenty more were joining!"

Is it any wonder that their two churches are shrunk to one? Unless the New England churches can be rescued from such leadership they are doomed to utter and certain extinction.

The Illinois State Convention.

By the agreement of the officers of the State Association and the friends at Westfield this meeting will be held in Wheaton the week before Thanksgiving. From the invitation voted by the College church it must be seen that the business to come before this meeting is of the highest importance to the reform. The letter of President Allen which we print herewith foretokens the work now to be undertaken in Illinois. Let every faithful child of God be instant in prayer for a meeting filled with the Holy Ghost and with wisdom to plan for the kingdom of Christ.

WESTFIELD, Ill., 10th, 1st, '78.

President Blanchard:

DEAR SIR:—I summoned our local anti-secrecy association to consult upon and decide the question of surrender of the State Association in favor of Wheaton. I was pleased to find a deep interest in the coming of the Association. Our claim would not have been yielded for your reasons first or second, but the third, viz., the prospect of an organization on Anti-masonic principles for missionary wor~, possibly foreshadowing more extended ecclesiastical union to the same end, induced a consent—reluctant—to accede to the suggestion of your letter.

The reply th en is: "Wheaton may have the Association this year (officers so arranging) with the condition that Wheaton influe nce agree now to support Westfie ld for the next succeeding meeting."

And, please, (for whatever good it may do,) have it clearly understood as above said, that the controlling factor in this consent is the expectation of such organization as you spoke of, or other of equal or greater moment. Should that not ensue, or at least be heavily essayed, we will feel, perhaps not quite aggrieved, but disappointed, to say the least.

May abiding and abounding grace ever fill your soul.

Yours in Christ,

SAMUEL B. ALLEN.

—The Freeman has begun to unveil the sophistries of the "Ancient Order of United Workmen," which is spreading over our Western prairies stealthily as miasmatic mists from a Carolina swamp. A correspondent in Warren county, Illinois, complains also of the inroads of this society on the Congregational church of which he is a member. We have printed little about this order as it has been hardly known outside Pennsylvania until a few years. Any accurate information will be gladly received respecting this order, or we will thank any friend to point out any avenue that may lead to such facts as will inform the people respecting the order.

—Bro. Needle's Freeman, at Albany, Mo., is doing a good work and doing it better all the time. Two papers are now printed at the office in good style, making 3,000 to 4,000 impressions per week, which is lively work for a country hand-press.

—The Secretary and Agent spoke to good meetings in Willimantic, Connecticut, last week and aroused the enthusiasm of the friends in that part of the State to be well represented at Worcester. He next visited Hartford and Hon. Francis Gillett, who is quite infirm, and, while his interest in the progress of the war on lodgery is unabated he can hardly expect to be at the Convention. His son was last week elected to Congress in Iowa on the Greenback ticket. Bro. Stoddard next visited Windsor and spent last Lord's day in Collinsville. He expected to reach Worcester on Thursday. He is greatly encouraged by the efforts of friends in various places to secure lectures and awaken the churches to the necessity of action against the lodge foe.

—There is an earnest corps of workers at Roney's Point, West Virginia, twelve miles east of Wheeling. They have organized a local association and arranged to hold meetings in the school-houses of the neighborhood during the winter. They want a lecturer, and one must be sent to help these brethren who are showing their faith by their works by an admirable enthusiasm.

—"Parents," says the Memphis Avalanche, in describing the terrible ravages of the yellow fever in that city, "have deserted their children, and children their parents, and husbands their wives; but not one wife has deserted her husband."

THE DAY IS DONE.

The day is done, and the darkness
Falls from the wings of night,
As a feather is wafted downward
From an eagle in his flight.

I see the lights of the village
Gleam through the rain and the mist,
And a feeling of sadness comes o'er me
That my soul cannot resist:

A feeling of sadness and longing
That is not akin to pain
But resembles sorrow only
As the mist resembles the rain.

Come, read to me some poem,
Some simple and beautiful lay,
That shall soothe this restless feeling,
And banish the thoughts of day.

Not from the grand old masters,
Not from the bards sublime,
Whose distant footsteps echo
Through the corridors of Time.

For the strains of martial music,
Their mighty thoughts suggest
Life's endless toil and endeavor,
And to-night I long for rest.

Read from some humbler poet,
Whose songs gushed from his heart,
As showers from the clouds of summer,
Or tears from the eyelids start.

Who through long days of labor,
And nights devoid of ease
Still heard in his soul the music
Of wonderful melodies.

Such songs have power to quiet
The restless pulse of care,
And come like the benediction
That follows after prayer.

Then read from the treasured volume
The poem of thy choice,
And lend to the rhyme of the poet
The beauty of thy voice.

And the night shall be filled with music,
And the cares that infest the day,
Shall fold their tents, like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away.

—H. W. Longfellow.

COTTON MATHER.

Cotton Mather was one of the most remarkable men of his age. He was born in 1662, in Boston, in what was then the province of New England. He graduated at Harvard University, at the age of sixteen. Even at that age he was distinguished for his learning. He drew up systems of sciences and made an almanac for 1683. At the age of twenty-two he was ordained minister of the North Church, Boston, as colleague with his father. He was one of the greatest workers of that or any age. In addition to his labors as a minister, which he discharged with great fidelity and zeal, he wrote, during a period of forty-one years, 283 books and tracts—some of them volumes of large size—and all showing great labor, piety and learning. He published some works in Latin, some in Spanish, and some in the Indian languages of the native tribes. He was the greatest linguist in America.

In 1692 he published his "Wonders of the Invisible World," it being his account of the witchcraft cases of the day. For this he has been charged with credulity. But that these were supernatural manifestations, not unlike in some respects those described by the spiritualists of our day, seems to be established by the strongest testimony. Cotton Mather, very properly, as we think, ascribes these manifestations to the influence of demons.

In 1710 was issued a work from his pen entitled, "Bonifacius; an Essay upon the good to be devised by those who would answer the great end of life." Dr. Franklin, when a young man, was well acquainted with Cotton Mather. In a letter written by Franklin when an old man, to Samuel Mather, son of Cotton, he says: "When I was a boy, I met with a book entitled, 'Essays to do good,' which I think was written by your father. It had been so little regarded by a former possessor, that several leaves had been torn out; but the remainder gave me such a turn of thinking, as to have an influence on my conduct through life; for I have always set a greater value on the character of a doer of good than on any other kind of reputation."

In the same letter is an account of an interview which he had with Dr. Mather, which is still as instructive as when it was first told:

"You mention being in your seventy-eighth year; I am in my seventy-ninth; we are grown old together. It is now more than sixty years since I left Boston, but I remember well both your father and grandfather; having heard them both in the pulpit, and seen them in their houses. The last time I saw your father was in the beginning of 1724, when I visited him after my first trip to Pennsylvania. He received me in his library, and on my taking leave he showed me a shorter way out of the house through a narrow passage, which was crossed by a beam overhead. We were still talking as I withdrew, he accompanying me behind, and I turning partly towards him, when he said hastily, 'Stoop, stoop!' I did not understand him till I felt my head hit against the beam. He was a man that never missed any occasion of giving instruction, and upon this he said to me: 'You are young and have the world before you; stoop as you go through it, and you will miss many hard thumps.' This advice, thus beat into my head, has frequently been of use to me; and I often think of it, when I see pride mortified, and misfortunes brought upon people by their carrying their heads too high." Wise advice; and wise are they who profit by it.

Cotton Mather was made Doctor of Divinity by the University of Glasgow, was elected Fellow of the Royal Society in London, and was held in honor by the learned men of Europe, with several of whom he held correspondence.

He died the 13th of February, 1728. The New England Journal of the 19th of February of that year, said of him: "He was perhaps the principal ornament of this country, the greatest scholar that ever was bred in it. But besides his universal learning, his exalted piety and extensive charity, his entertaining wit, and singular goodness of temper recommended him to all that were judges of real and distinguished merit. After having spent about forty-seven years in the faithful and unwearied discharge of a lively, zealous and awakening ministry, and incessant endeavors to do good, and spread abroad the glory of Christ, he finished his course with a Divine Companion and joy."—Rev. B. T. Roberts.

EXAMPLE LIMITLESS.

An eminent lawyer in Boston, forty years in his profession, once told the following:

While a student he went to a meeting held in behalf of missions in that city. One speaker, a plain workingman, related that in his family was then living "a great Sunday-school and missionary girl." She came from New Hampshire; her wages were "nine shillings ($1.50) per week;" she had a class of street boys in ——— Sunday-school, who never missed her from her place; and she gave one dollar every month to missions. He said further: "She was the happiest, kindest, tidiest girl he ever had in his kitchen." "I went home," said the venerable lawyer, "with a stirred-up heart by this narrative: 'Class of street boys; one dollar a month to missions; and happiest girl,' etc.

"The three things kept running through my mind. I was ashamed of myself. That girl's example made me so. I'll have a place in Sunday-school, was my first resolve. If she can give a dollar a month I can and will, came next; and as to the happiness, I'll see."

His resolves became acts. Teacher, superintendent, valuable helper in Sunday-school conventions and councils, all these years have shown him to be.

His gifts to missions and to all Christian work have been steadily growing, and might comparatively be called princely; in tens, hundreds and thousands he has bestowed, at times matching by his own the contributions of the entire church of which he is a member, and which is no mean New England church.

Can anybody calculate the result of that lowly kitchen-girl's example upon and through even this one man? The Sunday-school work it led him into still keeps him busy; the steady forty years' giving, its effects upon the church of which he is a member, and upon all who know him; the missionaries his gifts actually have supported; the converts led to Christ by them and the soul-harvests by those converts, and to be followed by successions of converts to the end of time; and the Bibles translated, printed, given to the heathen, into which work his contributions through these years have been entered; the Sunday-schools and even theological schools which have grown up in these, his giving years,—ah! where are the limits?

What that humble young Sunday-school and missionary woman did is just what in other forms any like her in spirit in work, in sacrifice for Christ, can do.—Sunday School World.

NOVEL USES OF THE TELEPHONE.

Various are the surprises that blossom out of that wonderful instrument, the telephone. In France they have applied it to marine purposes. The French war-steamer Desaix had to tow out from Toulon the old ship Argonaute. A conducting wire was rolled round one of the towing cables, with an end on board each vessel. The electric current was formed by the action of the sea on the copper-sheathing of the ships. A telephone was introduced in the circuit on each, and communication was established between them. During the whole time of the navigation conversation could be carried on as easily between the officers of the two vessels as if they had been seated in the same cabin. The next step was to apply the telephone to the work of the diver. One of the glasses of the helmet is replaced by a copper plate, in which is inserted a telephone; so that the man has only a slight movement of the head to make in order to receive communications or report observations. The advantages of such an arrangement are obvious. Frequently at sea the necessity arises of examining the keel or bottom of a ship. The diver descends, and is able to give an account of all he sees and does and receive instructions without having to be brought to the surface to give explanations, as has hitherto been the case. By the use of the telephone a man at the bottom of the sea can remain in constant verbal comunication with those at the surface. But the most singular application of the telephone comes from New South Wales, where Mr. Severn, an enthusiastic experimenter, claims that he has made the deaf to hear with it. After describing a very simple telephone which he constructed out of a tin pot, the closed end of which he opened and tied over it a piece of parchment, passing a fine string through the center and making a knot inside, Mr. Severn says: "Make a loop in the string some three feet long, put this loop over the forehead of the listener (the deaf man), cause him to place the palms of his hands flat and hard against the ears, let the loop pass over the hands, and now this listener will hear the smallest whisper, let him be deaf or not. This fact may appear extraordinary; it is, nevertheless, true that a deaf man may thus be made to hear the voice, music, etc."—The Tribune.

No great man or woman has ever been reared to great usefulness and lasting distinction who was unschooled by adversity. Noble deeds are never done in the calm sunshine of summer light.

Childrens' Corner.

True Courage.

It would be a great mistake to think that courage can be shown only in great things, or by grown-up people. Great courage may often be shown in little things; and little people—boys and girls—may "deal courageously." Have not you sometimes seen a little boy with a thorn in his finger which gives him a good deal of pain, and will go on paining him, unless it is taken out? His mother says to him, "Come here and let me take it out with the point of my needle." But perhaps he is afraid. He cannot summon courage to let his mother take the thorn out, and so it goes on paining him. The prick of the needle would be a very little pain, and the thorn would soon be out. But you see it needs courage to hold out his finger and stand quite still to have it done.

It needs courage to do anything disagreeable, just because we know we ought to do it; for instance, to jump out of bed on a cold dark winter morning directly you are called; or to speak the truth manfully when you expect it will get you into trouble, as George Washington did about the cherry-tree. And I will tell you what takes a good deal of courage. It takes a great deal of true courage—either for children or grown-up people—to stand being laughed at, and to persevere in doing what we know to be right, even if we stand alone.

A young lad left his home, where he had always been taught to pray to God night and morning, and went as an apprentice into a house of business where there were a number of shopmen and apprentices. Instead of his own cozy little bedroom, he found he had to sleep in the same room with five or six other lads. The first night he knelt down by his bedside to say his prayers as usual. Immediately every one else in the room began mocking and laughing at him. Some said foolish things to make him laugh, and some called him names, and some began to sing noisy and silly songs. The poor boy's courage failed him. The next night he thought he would say his prayers in bed; and I am afraid he soon left off praying at all. But after a while another lad came as an apprentice, who had to sleep in the same room. He also knelt down by his bedside, and was jeered at and persecuted just as the first lad had been; but dealt courageously. He did just the same the second night, and the third night. Then his fellow-apprentice felt how wrong he had been to be ashamed of prayer, and he took courage, and also knelt by his bed as he used to do at home. And what did the others do? Perhaps at first they laughed all the louder. But they knew these two boys were doing right. They could not help respecting them. After a few nights everybody was quiet, and I believe several, if not all, of those careless, foolish lads began to pray also.

Now, what was the secret of that lad's courage? The Lord was with him; and he knew it, because he was doing what was good—pleasing to God, good to himself, and a good example to others. This is the secret of true courage—to stick to what is right, and to be sure that the Lord Jesus is at our side, as he was with Paul before Nero (2 Tim. 4: 16, 17). "So that we may boldly say, the Lord is my helper, and I will not tear what man shall do unto me." (Heb. 13: 6.)—Churchman.

The Little Book-Keeper.

"Oh dear! every one has a better time than I do!" was the petulant exclamation of little Kate Williams, as she watched from the windows the passers-by in the street below. "There goes Jessie Brown and Jenny Hull to spend the afternoon with Grace Lee," said Katie, as she saw two handsomely-dressed girls about to enter a gate opposite. "They don't have to stay home to take care of a cross baby."

This last remark was called forth by the screams of poor little Willie, who had rolled over on the floor and could not get up without help. Kate picked him up with a jerk, tossed him some of his playthings and then turned her attention to the window again.

"Yes; and there are Fannie and Dora out on the street," she muttered; "their mamma lets them out if it is cold. Oh dear! and there's Carrie Stone going to ride, all dressed up; and Mamie Brown skating on the pond. Oh, dear! Oh, dear! every one but me!—every one but me! There, you little cross thing! here are your blocks and toys; why don't you stop crying and play with them?"

"Kate! Kate!" said a gentle voice; and Mrs. Williams entered the room, looking reproachfully at her little daughter. "I do not wish to hear any more complaints. Call Sarah to get Willie to sleep, and then take a pencil and paper and sit by me."

Kate hung her head guiltily as she heard the grave tones of her mother.

"Do you know, my daughter, how papa earns the money to give us this pleasant home, our food, and clothes, and all the comforts which we enjoy?"

"Yes, mamma; he is book-keeper for Mr. Thompson."

"As you seem to be discontented this afternoon, suppose you try to be a little book-keeper."

"That will be nice," said Kate, brightening, "If you will show me how."

"Well, your papa has to set down on one side of a great book what his employers owe, and on the other what they receive; the difference between these two is what he calls the balance. Now I have heard all your complaints this afternoon." Here Kate blushed. "You can set the things you have to complain about down on one side of your paper, and call it the trouble side; on the opposite page you can put down your blessings—all the good and pleasant things; then we will strike a balance and see which side has it. Now begin."

Kate got paper and pencil and wrote as her mother dictated:

TROUBLES.

Taking care of the baby.
Could not go to ride.
Could not play ball.
Could not give my doll a ride.

BLESSINGS.

A dear little brother.
Strong feet, which lame Carrie Stone has not.
A kind father, which Fannie and Dora have not.
A pleasant home.
A mother that loves me.
Nice things to eat.
Good clothes to wear.
A nice Sunday-school.

"O mamma, there isn't room for any more blessings; we shall have to balance it now," cried Kate, her eyes sparkling with a new sense of riches."

"Well, in whose favor is the balance, dear?"

"Why the blessings of course; and we didn't put them all down either. The next afternoon I have to stay at home I will think of my blessings and not my troubles."

"That is right, my Kitty," said her mother, kissing her. "Now you are my blessing. Whenever you feel that your troubles are too hard for you to bear, do a little book-keeping, and you will find the balance to be on the blessing side. If that does not answer, then ask God to please help you be patient and contented. Now run and tell Sarah to make your favorite cakes for tea."

"Thank you, mamma; that is another blessing;" and Kate ran off as gay as a lark.—The Little Sower.

Puzzle Corner.

ENIGMA BY MINNIE C. GURNEA.

My first is in dale but not in hill,
My second is in ant but not in bee,
My third is in darkness and also in dawn;
My fourth is in oil but not in grease;
My fifth is in meet but not in part;
My sixth is in table but not in stand;
My whole was a prophet in olden times.

Doing up Men's Clothes.

I used to think it a task to wash and do up men's and boy's wearing apparel, for the reason that I was troubled to make them look nicely after the renovation.

They would put on such a wrinkly appearance that I would get discouraged, and not feel at all satisfied with the result of my labor. It wasn't the washing part that troubled me so much as the ironing.

I learned, by experience, never to wash any kind of woolen goods, especially if they are colored, in a sudsy water, where white clothes had been previously washed, on account of the lint, but to put up a suds made of clear hot water and soap, and then rinse them in clear warm water, folding the garments carefully before putting them through the wringer; they would then dry out clear and look well; but the doing up was where the difficulty came in.

After a while, however, I was fortunate enough to secure some instruction from an experienced laundress, which caused my troubles to vanish like dew before the sunshine, and the lesson was so simple that I was surprised at myself to think I had not thought of it before. It was merely this: After the garments that are to be ironed are thoroughly dried, spread them smoothly over the ironing board, then wring a cloth out of clear water, spread it smoothly over the goods and iron with a hot flat until the cloth is dry; dip and wring again; spread the cloth above the part already pressed, and proceed as before until the face of the goods has been all passed over.

When the pantaloons are to be done up, the seams should be pressed over a press-board, the same as when newly finished; then fold the same as tailors do, and go over them with the wet cloth and hot iron. After being treated to such a course, woolen gear will come out looking nearly as good as new, and no one need be ashamed to wear them "either to mill or meeting."

It is difficult to do up coats and vests, because of the different materials of which they are composed, not all shrinking alike, yet they can be managed so they will look nicely, if care is exercised in the management; that is stretching the parts that have shrunk, and pressing in places, as they are being done up. If the linings are too loose, rip them up, and lap over or rip off.—Dot, in Ohio Farmer.

Cure for Diabetes.—In 1863, my husband was taken with the diabetes; he was so bad that I had two doctors. He got worse for three weeks; the doctors then gave him up, and said he could not live. The last night he was so bad that he drank thirty gallons of cold water, and it passed through him cold. His kidneys were swelled so that we could see them very plainly on his back. I will now tell you what I did, and it cured him, and he is a big, hearty man to-day. Take hops and make one quart of strong tea, and give it every time he wants to drink, till it is gone; then make another quart, not so strong, and give the same way, and every two hours rub the back and kidneys thoroughly with I. L Strahn's Nerve and Bone Liniment. After the first twenty-four hours, use the liniment twice a day, and drink the tea for two weeks every night, that is, after the person begins to get better. The doctors told me that the above saved my husband's life. We used to live in Tiffin, Ohio; we now live in Newton, Jasper county, Iowa.—Lucinda Elms.

Dangerous Paper Hanging.

The Boston Traveler says: "Poisonous wall-paper is becoming so common, and it is so difficult to distinguish it from the harmless article, that it seems to be the part of prudence not to paper rooms. Dealers are not to blame for this state of things, but the manufacturers are, and they have no more right to spread arsenic on the walls of dwellings than milkmen have to place it in the milk they sell—and milkmen would never think of doing anything of the kind. Arsenic is well known to be a cumulative poison, and men can no more breathe it with safety than they can swallow it with safety, and it is inhaled by every one who makes use of rooms papered with arsenic-laden paper. Health is first destroyed, and then life is lost, by inhaling the air of rooms that are poisoned in the papering. Women and children, as being the more domestic are the greater sufferers, and nursing mothers and their babes are peculiarly open to the reeking poison that comes from beautiful walls.

The application of the following remedy for toothache is said to be efficacious in the most desperate cases, provided it be not connected with rheumatism: Alum, reduced to an impalpable powder, two drachms; nitrous spirits of ether, seven drachms; mix them well and apply them to the tooth.

THE UNITED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Congregational church, Hamilton, Miss., August 25th, 1878.

Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Miss., September, 1878.

What name shall be next?

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—At the last meeting of the Synod of New York in Charles street church, New York city, Professors Stewart and Harper resigned their posts in the Newburgh Theological Seminary.

—Rev. W. H. McKee is to be installed Oct. 17th over the church in Hoboken, N. J. Revs. R. W. Kidd, Robert Armstrong and W. Kirkpatrick take part in the exercises.

—Rev. Samuel Martin, who is being detained still in this country from his mission work in India, has become an instructor in Muskingum College at New Concord, O.

—Rev. Thos. H. Pollock, formerly of Jersey City, N. J., has declined calls which he has received from the United Presbyterian congregations of Amity and Avondale, Ohio.

—W. T. Meloy was installed pastor of the congregation in this city, corner Monroe and Paulina streets, on Tuesday evening, Oct. 1st. Rev. R. W. French preached the sermon, Rev. John M. Henderson of Monmouth, led in prayer, Rev. C. H. Mitchell addressed the pastor, and Rev. J. D. Smith the people. The occasion was a pleasant and encouraging one to the church and denomination which is under many difficulties maintaining this testifying body in Chicago. A brother of Prest. D. W. Wallace is superintendent of Bro. Meloy's Sabbath-school.

—Rev. Dr. Watson and family sailed on Saturday, the 5th inst., from New York, in the steamer City of Richmond, for Liverpool, on his way to the mission work in Egypt.

—The United Presbyterian church of Wooster, Ohio, Ex-Pres. D. A. Wallace, pastor, is agitating the anti-lodge question together with the anti-fraternity students in Wooster University. They are inquiring for Past Master Ronayne or some other able speaker to unfold the facts of lodgery.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The 23d Street church, New York, which was nearly destroyed by fire some months ago, has been rebuilt and was opened with appropriate services Oct. 4th. The pastor, David Gregg, Rev. D. McAllister and Prof. J. R. W. Sloane of Allegheny City, took part in the exercises, which continued all day.

—The Ohio Presbytery attended to the organization of two new congregations at its late meeting, and communion was held in each on the first Sabbath of this month. One of these new churches is at Mansfield. Special attention was given by the presbytery to the anti-lodge cause and religious reform in the government.

—Rev. Joseph Beattie, Missionary to Syria is now in this country. Mrs. Beattie having not long since died he will not return to his mission field until spring.

FREE BAPTIST.

—The Rev. James L. Phillips, D.D., of the mission at Midnapoor, India, sailed on the Circassia last Saturday, the 5th inst., for his former field. He was successful in raising the $25,000 needed for the school, and goes back accompanied by his sister, Miss Hattie L. Phillips, for many years a teacher in the Chicago public schools.

FREE METHODIST.

—The Illinois conference met at Crystal Lake, closed last week Monday; Superintendent E. P. Hart presiding. Brethren M. V. Clute, W. F. Manley, D. P. Baker, J. G. Terrill, O. P. Rogers, E. A. Kimball, H. M. Hugunin and J. J. Schuyler were appointed to attend the General Conference at Spring Arbor, Mich., which convened on Wednesday last. W. F. Manley was appointed chairman of Fox and Rock River districts; W. W. Kelley of Galva, Central Illinois and Belleville districts; John Wilson set apart for a mission to Sweden and C. H. Brant to Washington Territory. Bro. C. B. Ebey was reappointed to the Chicago church to which he has ministered with marked success for two years. Bro. C. H. Rawson, graduate in the last class at Wheaton was appointed to the church at Athens in Menard county.

—This conference adopted the following on our great reform work: "The position of the Free Methodist church on the subject of secret societies is believed to be Scriptural. From the experiences of the past year we are persuaded that our efforts against all secret orders should not be lessened but rather increased. Especially do we feel the importance of action in view of the fact that one of our own conference preachers has recently been murderously assaulted as is believed by a member of a secret society, because of his uncompromising position upon this question. Surely it is a time when all lovers of light should hold their lamps higher, when each lover of truth should cry aloud and spare not.

It is believed that substantial progress is being made in exposing the false claims and sacrilegious character of Freemasonry under the efforts of Mr. Ronayne and other faithful laborers.

It is a gratifying fact that the publications devoted especially to this department of Christian reform are meeting with that measure of patronage that they so richly merit.

For the promotion of the Gospel of Christ as against all combinations and associations of darkness we bespeak the faithful labors and earnest prayers of all Christians."

—At the Michigan conference over $300 dollars were raised to remove the debt from the church in Holland.

—A brother, who removed to Clark county in southwestern Arkansas last fall, organized Sabbath schools among both blacks and whites. The latter when they learned that the same leader was engaged in both, broke up their school, while the other goes on prospering and being blessed of God.

—Revs. W. E. Coquilette, the well known seceder, and T. B. Arnold of the Free Methodist, were placed on the superannuated list at the Illinois conference.

—The fifth quadrennial session of the General Conference met at Spring Arbor, Michigan, on Wednesday of last week, superintendents Roberts and Hart presiding, and brethren Gould, Jones and Terrill secretaries. The aggregate membership of the body is sixty and nine annual conferences are represented.

WESLEYAN.

—Agent Kinney, who spent a pleasant hour in the Cynosure office on his way to the Kansas Conference, found his health so poor when he reached Topeka that by advice of physicians he reluctantly put his business into the hands of Rev. J. A. Richards of Fort Scott and returned home to Syracuse. Bro. Richards will visit the Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota conferences.

—At the Kansas Conference Rev. J. T. Kiggins, former lecturer in Indiana, was chairman, and Rev. J. Pixley late from Michigan, was secretary. Rev. J. S. T. Milligan of the Reformed Presbyterian church was present at the conference.

—Bro. L. N. Stratton, of the American Wesleyan, assisted at the dedication of a new church in Morley, St. Lawrence county, New York, last Friday.

—Elder A. R. Dodd, of the class of 1877, Wheaton, is stationed this year at Elgin by the Illinois Conference. Elders Pinkney, Lathrop and Riley remain on their old fields. The next meeting of the conference will be at Wheaton.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The paper on the position demanded by God and truth of the churches on the lodge question, by pastor A. J. Bailey of Hennepin, Illinois, read last week before the Fox River Association, is promised for publication in the Cynosure.

—Dr. Herrick, a returned missionary from Constantinople addressed the Chicago Association at Lombard last week. He drew a dark picture of Turkish oppression as developed in the law courts, in tithing, etc., and believed that God was opening the way in recent events for the spread of the Gospel in that region. He had a map of Turkey, shaded to show the comparative religious populations. The total population of the empire is about twenty-seven millions, of which seven millions are Christians, fifteen and a half millions Mohammedans, and less than one million Jews. He gave a list of the cities in which the Protestants have stations, and it included about all the capitals of provinces. Hundreds of thousands of copies of the Bible have been distributed there. A great number of Sabbath-schools have been established. The Mohammedans have been up to this time nearly unimpressible to Christian influence. This was because their liberty was restricted. The speaker gave a history of the preparation of that translation of the Bible in Turkish which is now in use, and expressed the hope that under the new political conditions, and with the new Bible, the conversion of the Mohammedans would not be so difficult.

—A strong appeal comes from Congregationalists in Warren county, Illinois, for a warning to be given to all the sister churches of the Northwest against maintaining the lodge in connection with gifts for missionary and educational purposes. Several years ago the Triennial Convention, met at the Chicago Theological Seminary, which is largely indebted to Philo Carpenter for its foundation, voted not to give gratuitous aid to young men studying for the ministry who belonged to the lodge or used tobacco, the resolutions being moved respectively by Revs. S. B. Goodenow and W. W. Patton. Last spring in the educational report before the State Association at Galesburg there was an ominous omission of this matter. Our correspondent writes: "We do not want our contributions to be appropriated in support of either secret society students in college or seminary, or secret society pastors or preachers in our home missionary churches, especially in our Illinois Home Missionary Society. We certainly do not need to warm the vipers that are biting us." Vox populi, vox Dei.

BAPTIST.

—But one affiliating Mason is known among the ministers of the St. Croix Valley Association of Wisconsin, and but a very small number of the church members are connected with any lodge. This condition can be made better.

—The Scandinavian churches of this denomination are believed to be thoroughly anti-lodge in their convictions and practice. This honorable position is believed to be largely due to the Christian instruction of Prof. Edgren who has charge of the Scandinavian department in the Theological Seminary at Morgan Park near Chicago. Prof. Edgrin is largely maintained by Col. Wilson of Menominee, Wis., who is well known as thoroughly set for Christ against the secret idolatries of the lodge. A grand work is thus being carried on among the large Scandinavian population of the Northwest through this instrumentality.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—Rev. Warren Taylor, of Milnersville, Ohio, is yet holding the fort for Christ. He is expecting to begin public addresses on the lodge question soon. His appeal to the Presbyterian ministry has had a wide circulation and has had a careful reading by many who probably had their attention first called to the lodge system by this means.

—Rev. C. B. Taylor, of Morgan county, Ohio, is also bearing a good testimony for the truth amid much trial and opposition. As both of these brethren stand somewhat alone in their denomination, the prayers of all the chosen of God are desired in their behalf.

IN GENERAL.

—In the schools of the Old Catholic church in Switzerland there are 3,606 children under religious instruction.

—It is reported that above 33,000 Hindus have renounced heathenism and accepted Christianity this year.

—It is said that no infidel books are to be found in the Welsh language. It is pre-eminently the land of one book—the Bible—hence neither infidelity nor popery get a footing.

—General Howard started a prayer meeting in the Military Academy at West Point some years ago, and it is still held. One-third of the officers leaving the Academy are said to be members of it.

—The Y. M. C. A. noon-day prayer meeting of this city is now the largest in the world. During the month of September there were over 3,556 persons in attendance. The largest number any one day was 250; the smallest 75.

—Leo XIII. has ordered a census of the clergy residing in Rome, with full details as to where and how they live, their fortunes and church functions, in order to institute certain reforms.

—A new education law has been adopted by the Chambers and sanctioned by the King of Holland, which excludes the Bible and religious teaching from the primary schools of that country.

—A Baptist missionary in France has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and to pay a fine of 1,500 francs for attempting to prevent a Catholic priest from administering the last sacraments to one of his — the missionary's — parishioners.

—The government of Russia has at last withdrawn its prohibition against missionary enterprise in Central Asia. The Synod of the Russian church has prepared to found extensive missions in all parts of Turkestan.

Political.

Platform of the American Party.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

To Pennsylvania Voters.—All voters who desire to vote for the American candidates can write their ballots if they fail to receive printed tickets.

MASS CONVENTION.

All friends of the anti-secret society reform in McHenry county are requested to meet in convention, at the courthouse in Woodstock, Thursday, October 17, 1878, at 2 o'clock P. M., to nominate condidates for the various bounty offices; to send delegates to the district convention; and transact any other business that may come before the convention.

Glod Resolves Work Well in Practice.

Union, Ill., Oct. 8, 1878.

Editor Cynosure:—At a meeting of our Auxiliary County Christian Association, held at Marengo about one year ago, we decided that the time had fully arrived when we should express our opinions on the secret society question in a more emphatic manner than by convention resolutions. We therefore called a county convention. The call was liberally responded to and a goodly number present. We put in nomination a full county ticket. In some instances selecting our men from candidates of other parties known to be true to our principles; printed and distributed our tickets; appointed county and town central committees, and were almost overwhelmingly surprised at the great result, several towns casting a large vote. We believe in this kind of work. Please insert the enclosed notice in your paper and greatly oblige us. E. L. Sheldon.

Washington's Ideas of the Civil Service.

When Washington was called to the presidency in 1789 there were no regularly organized parties, and there was no room for patronage in a partisan sense, and nothing could exceed the justice of the rules by which he was guided. Called to the executive chair even against his wishes, he said he would go to it under no pre-engagement of any kind or nature whatever, but would hold himself absolutely at liberty to act while in office with sole reference to justice and the public good. So much depended on wisdom and impartiality in this matter that, in case of injudicious or unpopular measures with regard to appointments, the government itself would be in the utmost danger of being utterly subverted. "My political conduct," he said, "in making nominations must be exceedingly circumspect." Again: "I do not intend to be swayed in the disposal of places by motives arising from the ties of friendship and blood." All this time it is not to be supposed there was nobody to present his "claims." Even before his first inauguration, Washington was greatly annoyed by applications for appointments, and invariably represented to such persons the delicacy of his situation, and the impropriety of bringing such matters before him. He apprehended what afterward proved true: that there would be a hundred competitors for any office of any importance; but for a long time he would give no decisive answer to the applications of any candidates whatever, and would only nominate such persons as in his judgment were best qualified to discharge the duties of the departments to which they were appointed. As between an intimate friend and a determined opponent, he gave a lucrative office, which both had applied for, to the latter, with the following explanation: "My friend I receive with cordial welcome. He is welcome to my house, and welcome to my heart; but with all his good qualities he is not a man of business. His opponent with all his politics so hostile to me is a man of business. My private feelings have nothing to do in the case. I am not George Washington, but President of the United States. As George Washington, I would do this man any kindness in my power. As President of the United States, I can do nothing."—Scribner.

Parker Pillsbury, the anti-slavery agitator, said not long since to a press reporter:.

"I am not interested in politics much in a general way; I have never voted for a president yet. At present I oppose both the Republican and Democratic parties. My sympathy was with the Republican party years ago, but since slavery has been abolished it seems to have fulfilled its mission and done nothing since. So I have come to the conclusion that we need another party. Greeley and Sumner were honest in their aims and desires to organize a new party which should agitate the questions of to-day, but you see they were unsuccessful."

News of the Week.

—The races at a new trotting park in the western part of Chicago were a great attraction all last week. Thousands of dollars were lost in bets. the racing association cleared $50,000. On one day it is said that 40,000 people were present. Hard times, when money can flow for such follies!

—Senator Blaine addressed the voters of Chicago last week in the Tabernacle on financial issues.

—A meeting of Chicago prohibitionists was held last week at 913 Green street to inaugurate a movement in local politics in this city.

—On Wednesday of last week 600 Mormons arrived at the port of New York, destined for Salt Lake, under the leadership of H. W. Nesbitt, an Elder, and editor of a Mormon paper in Liverpool. This makes about 2,000 of this class of immigrants that have arrived this season, and important additions to their number are expected in the course of the next few weeks.

—New and startling facts have come to light in the Stannard case. The arsenic which Hayden says he got to kill rats could not be found in the barn where he said it was left, but enough arsenic has been found in the stomach of Mary Stannard "to kill a whole community." Other damaging evidence also is found, which with the Masonic collusion of the judge, will make a new trial necessary.

—A terrible accident occurred last Tuesday evening on the Old Colony railroad, to a crowded excursion train which was returning from Silver Lake rowing match between Reagan of Boston, and Davis of Portland. A train of twenty cars and two engines went off the track by the carelessness of the conductor of a freight train in leaving a switch open. Some 1,500 were aboard, of whom 20 were killed or died soon and 130 injured.

—There is yet little abatement of the yellow fever. The condition of Memphis is more hopeful, but the interior towns are suffering greatly. A great amount of suffering exists among the poorer classes, and the relief committee are taxed to their utmost to provide for the demand for food. The Board of Health of New Orleans report for the twenty-four hours ending at noon, Oct. 13: Deaths, 50; cases reported, 128; total cases to date, 11,537; deaths, 3,490.

—On Monday night of last week eight negroes entered a house of ill-fame at Mt. Vernon, Ind., occupied by three white girls, displayed pistols, and compelled them to yield to their desires. On Wednesday, four of the supposed culprits were arrested and lodged in jail. Next morning a deputy sheriff in attempting to arrest a fifth, named Harris, was shot and killed from a window. Intense excitement followed. At 8 P. M., a band of masked men, two hundred strong, took Harris, who fired the shot that killed Thomas, and the other four. A knife was plunged into Harris' breast and the body cut to pieces and thrown into the court house vault. The other four were hung. The evidence of their guilt seems convincing. Harris confessed that he fired the shot, but claims not to have known that the men were officers.

—Pope Leo XIII., it is now reported in Europe, is assured of two attempts having been made to destroy his life by poison, and in his constant fear of the attempt being repeated, is said to have his brother attend to the marketing for his table, and he prepares his own coffee. The report has not ceased that his late Secretary, Franchi, died from poison secretly administered to him.

—M. Boukhavoster, a Russian of Orel, recently died, bequeathing all his personal property, about $500,000, to the principality of Montenegro for the founding of a bank at Cettinje, and requiring every cent of profit from it to be devoted to schools and dowries for poor girls.

—During a performance in a Liverpool theatre a fight occurred under the gallery. The audience hearing but being unable to see the disturbance, became alarmed, and a cry of fire was raised, when a terrible panic ensued, people rushing for the doors and gliding down the pillars of the gallery on the heads of the occupants of the pit. A post impeded their exit. Thirty-five men and lads and two women were suffocated. Many persons were severely injured.

—A dispatch from Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 7, says: The insurrection in Santa Cruz has been quelled and the ringleaders captured. The cause of the insurrection is said to have been a disagreement between the negroes and the planters regarding labor contracts.

—The latest Australian news budget says that in New Zealand five Wesleyan missionaries were murdered and eaten by bush natives near Malicola coast. Eighty of the tribe were killed by the traders and coast natives in retaliation.

—From Japan it is reported that the difficulties between the foreign Christian missions and the native fanatics continue in the province of Fu Kien. The churches and schools were burned down by rioters. Dangerous mobs exist in the district of Chusan in consequence of oppressive taxation. Two hundred thousand peasants threaten to rise at Ningpo. The officials have only a few thousand troops in the neighborhood. Several lives have already been lost in desultory conflicts.

THE EASTERN WAR.

—A dispatch from Vienna states that Russia has informed the powers of the stoppage of the retreat of Russian troops and has invited them to join in energetic representations which Prince Labanoff is instructed to make, in order to induce the Porte to take prompt measures to stop the outrages upon Christians. A dispatch from Constantinople says: "In both Turkish and Greek circles the idea is gaining ground that war is inevitable. An influential party in the Turkish Counsel, headed by Osman Pasha, even holds that a purely defensive policy is impossible, for purely military reasons." It is said that seventy-one battalions of Turks and 12,000 Albanians are now at Novi Bazar. Osman Pasha will bs there soon in command of 150,000 men. A Constantinople dispatch says the Porte has received information that the Russians have recommenced marching on Adrianople (presumably from the north). All the foreign military attaches have left Constantinople to verify this intelligence. A dispatch from Simla says the latest rumor is that an immediate advance through the Khyber Pass is probable. The rumor appears to rest on no particular authority. The Khybers report the Afghans in the pass suffering from fever.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

TRACT No. 23

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Revs. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

of the National' Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

ILLINOIS.

The Annual Convention of the State Christian Association will be held in the College chapel at Wheaton the week before Thanksgiving, Nov. 20th, 21st, and 22d. Bishop Wright, the President, is expected and numbers of other able speakers will be present. The business before the convention will be of great importance to our reform work among the churches. Let every friend turn his heart and prayers toward Wheaton.

WISCONSIN.

To the friends of Christian reform in Wisconsin:—The State Christian Association opposed to secret societies will, D. V., hold its annual meeting at Waupun, to commence Tuesday evening, Oct. 29th, at 7 o'clock P. M., and to continue through Wednesday and Thursday, the 30th and 31st. It is expected that Past Master Ronayne will work the degrees of Masonry, and other speakers will be in attendance. Entertainment will be provided for those from abroad. J. W. WOOD, Pres.
H. H. HINMAN, Agent for Wis.

IOWA.—Official announcement is not yet received, but it is understood that the State Convention will meet this year in Chariton, Lucas county, the second week in December.

NEBRASKA.—Arrangements are being made to hold the first State Convention in York Center, York county, Dec. 3d and 4th.

DES MOINES COUNTY, IOWA.

There will be a mass convention of the people of Des Moines county, Iowa, opposed to secretism in general and Freemasonry especially, at the Bethel Baptist meeting-house, six miles west of Burlington, November 6th and 7th, 1878. The object of the convention is the organization of a County Christian Association, auxiliary to the State and National Associations. Every lover of true freedom is invited to attend, ladies as well as gentlemen. Let this be a grand rally for the cause of Christ and civil and religious liberty. Neighboring county Christian associations are invited to send delegates. Public lecturers who are in the field against the great secret foe of Christianity are expected to be present. We will receive delegates coming from abroad at the Lawrence House, at Burlington, Iowa. Conveyance and enterainment free. The convention will meet at 10 o'clock, Nov. 6, and continue two days.

By order of the Spring Creek Baptist church.

TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS!

TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS!!

Ten Thousand Subscribers!!!

EDITORIAL HELP INCREASED.

PRICE OF SINGLE SUBSCRIPTIONS REDUCED.

DEAR READERS:—Week after week we have been permitted, through the goodness of God, to publish the earnest promises of many of our readers, of faithful efforts to enlarge the circulation of the Cynosure. Week after week we have carefully pondered the question: What can we do to make the Cynosure more of a power for Christ and his kingdom? How can we make it more worthy of the noble efforts for its enlarged circulation? Our energies did not waste themselves, however, in mere reflections on this subject. We have promptly embraced every practicable scheme presented to us for making the paper more valuable, and we have abundant testimony to prove that our efforts have not been unsuccessful. The following and many similar expressions quoted from the letters of our readers show this to be the case:

"The paper improves."

"The best paper in America."

"I value the Cynosure next to the Bible."

"Each number is better than the one preceding it."

"It is more to me than food; if necessary I would live on bread and water rather than do without it."

"I would not give up the Cynosure if it cost five dollars a year."

Among the arguments which will, in our opinion, make you successful in securing a large list of new subscriptions for the Cynosure this season, the two following will be very effective:

1st. That the senior editor of the paper is now devoting fourfold more time to its columns than he has ever been able to before. The eighth and ninth pages will be filled with vigorous editorials on topics of vital interest to Christians and patriots everywhere.

2d. The second is adapted to those who would like the paper but feel the pressure of the hard times. It is the great reduction in the price of the paper to single subscribers. During the fall and winter campaign subscriptions, either renewals or new, may be taken at one dollar and a half a year, whether one or one hundred names are sent at one time. We are confident that many whose subscriptions have been solicited under our recent club-of-ten system, have failed to subscribe, fearing that the required number might not be made up. But the price is now $1.50 for all, until March 1, 1879, after which time the price of the Cynosure will be $2.00 a year in advance.

Those whose subscriptions expire with spring, summer or fall months may avail themselves of this offer and forward to us $1.50 before March first and have their date put forward one year.

Now, friends, let us have

10,000 SUBSCRIBERS.

The best of editorial ability, together with a price to suit the times, ought to bring a host of new subscribers. How many will there be by the first of January? Cannot at least one-third of our readers send in ten names each within the next month?

Try! TRY!! TRY!!!

We do not believe that the number is over-estimated when we say that 100,000 persons long to break their connection with secret societies. They are in a condition similar to that of the Irishman, who came to this country with a desire for more light upon the subject of zoology. Passing through the woods one day he undertook to examine a snake whose head was hid under a log near the path. As his Saint Patrick had driven all the snakes out of Ireland he had never seen one. Patrick took the reptile by the tail, but before the inspection was fairly commenced, its head whopped over the log from the other side and with angry eyes and fiery tongue it darted at the kind and honest investigator. To release his hold of the struggling, squirming "varmint" seemed to Patrick certain death so he clung to its tail with a vice-like grip.

"What are you doing to that snake?" called out a passing woodman who suddenly appeared upon the scene.

"Faith an' I'm waitin' fur a dacint man to help me let go of him," said Patrick.

These unfortunate members of the secret orders long to be released from their bondage, but the venomous, and, at first, concealed power of the secret orders is, to them, a constant menace, retaining their unwilling allegiance, under penalty of disarranging their business and destroying reputation and perhaps life. They are anxiously waiting for help. "Decent men"

HELP THEM LET GO!

Put the Cynosure into the hands of all their neighbors every week for a year. Spread abroad the light and they will find it easy to let go. Better still, let us also unite our energies in enlightening the great army of young people now approaching years of maturity, on the nature of secret orders, and they will shun or destroy them, as promptly as an average boy kills a snake. Do not allow them to run the fearful risk of being poisoned by the secret orders. Rather let them in the unmarred strength of youth learn to cherish home, country and Christ.

Only about two months of the present year remain. They are the best months of the year for securing subscriptions. Work on the bright days, on the dark days, on the dry days and on the wet days for subscribers. A gentleman said to us recently: "If I could work in Warren county, Illinois, I think I could secure one hundred subscriptions for the Cynosure."

How many counties are there in our thirty-eight United States that will send us one hundred subscriptions at $1.50 a piece, before January first? Every one helps.

As Freemasonry threatens the destruction of Christianity and blights patriotism everywhere, the Cynosure is designed for all patriots and all Christians.

Canada is showing more and more interest in this reform. How many subscriptions shall we receive from her?

Delays are dangerous. Begin today to work for the TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS.

Yours truly,
EZRA A. COOK & Co.

Historical Sketches of Holland Lodge.

This is a work of 162 pages, written by Joseph N. Balestier, Master of the lodge, and published in New York by the lodge. It consists chiefly of two addresses, one delivered in 1862 and the other in 1878.

It appears that Holland Lodge was established in the city of New York under a warrant issued by a British potentate who bore the following title, viz., "The Right Worshipful and Most Noble Prince John the Third, Duke, Marquis and Earl of Athol, Marquis and Earl of Tullibardine, Earl of Strathsay and Strathardle, Viscount of Balquider, Glenaldmond and Glenlyon, Lord Murray, Belreny and York, Hereditable Captain and Constable of the Castle and Constabulary of Kincleaven, Hereditary Keeper of the Palace of Falkland, one of the sixteen peers of Scotland, and in that part of Great Britain called England and Masonical jurisdiction thereunto belonging, Grand Master of Masons."

This warrant, emanating from such a lofty aristocratic source, was issued, it appears in 1781, to citizens or inhabitants of New York city during the occupation of that city by British troops. We are justified therefore in presuming that the warrant was in favor of the British cause; opposed to the cause of America and given to men who were Tories and not patriots.

The author describes the language of the warrant as pompous, in which every one will probably agree with him; but it is not more pompous than the titles of Freemasonry usually are. Issuing from a lofty aristocratic source, the warrant has descended (so the author claims) to some of the first men of New York. Yet he says, "Holland lodge is strictly an American lodge, and has, I am glad to say, no foreign antecedents whatever." Such is the beautiful consistency of Masonic writers! Some of the distinguished men who have belonged to the lodge were De Witt Clinton, John Jacob Astor, William Irving, Fitz Greene Halleck, John Onderdonk, John Anthon, etc., etc. The lodge furnished two generals to the rebel cause, who went over to it under circumstances of special treachery. Among the distinguished persons who have visited the lodge were Baron Steuben, Soderstrom, Consul General of Sweden, Chancellor Livingston, Gen. Jackson, etc.

The author in speaking of the two members of the lodge who went over to the rebels says: "Two members who joined us at the commencement of the war, and who stood well in the community, subsequently made their way through the Union lines, and acquired high rank in the Confederate service, no doubt carrying valuable aid and comfort to the enemy. It was at a time when Masonry flourished beyond all precedent; and if it has since comparatively languished, the misfortune must be attributed to the over-stimulation of the war, which led hundreds and thousands to the altar of Freemasonry for reasons which the craft well understand."

We would remark here, that the people, too, are beginning to understand these reasons; and the more they understand them the more thoroughly they detest the knaveries of Freemasonry.

But the chief object of Masonry is "charity," so the craft pretends; and let us see how Masonic pretensions agree with facts. The writer unblushingly says: "The charity funds are absorbed in annually gathering together in this city an unwieldy body of Masons whose expenses literally 'devour widows' houses.'" Again he says: "But, of necessity, the chief expenditure has for many years been the pay of the Grand Lodge, and the intolerable deal of sack called mileage and per diem, has always been out of all proportion to the bread of charity." It appears that the sessions of the Grand Lodge in New York city, in imitation of our legislatures, are made up of Master Masons of all the lodges of the State, who thus maintain a secret, subterranean legislature, at the expense of five dollars per day for each member, as pay, and three dollars per day while traveling!

The Masonic Temple owes a debt of $800,000. The income during the year 1877–8 was $98,234.14, out of which $64,000 went to the hall and asylum fund. Of the balance, $34,000, there were nearly $22,000 paid to members of the Grand Lodge!

During a period of seventeen years Holland lodge dispensed $17,-111.19 in charity. As the membership of the lodge is 220 this would give less than five dollas a year from each member for charitable purposes.

The initiation and affiliation fees, so-called, amount to $80 for each member. If we allow 75,000 Masons to the State of New York, this would yield a sum of $6,000,000! What has become of it? Who has been enriched by it? For what secret purposes is it used? The writer himself acknowledges that out of $98,234.14 drawn from the Freemasons of New York, only $750 went for charity! "And as if," says the writer, "to cast more glaring shame upon such a mean showing, we find the next item to be $500 for a testimonial! Nearly a hundred thousand dollars, given ostensibly to charity, reduced to less than a thousand — all frittered away in three or four days, that a great crowd of Masters, many of whom take little or no part in the proceedings, may say they have attended the Grand Lodge!"

Yet, notwithstanding this clear exposition of the false pretenses of the lodge to charity, the great plea for its own existence, the writer urges his audience, with great fervor and pathos, to "stand by the lodge." This institution, invented by a set of monarchists and infidels in a London grog-shop, and which is aristocratic in all its features, and which is as false in all its pretences as it is in its charity; which is utterly un-American, this American writer sustains with all his ability and urges others to do so too! The very first principle of liberty is a distrust of all irresponsible power. The lodge boasts of its power and makes it felt too; and as its counsels are kept secret from the people it is irresponsible to the people. The writer shows that the lodge is not trustworthy, and in the same breath urges young men to sustain it. Such is the character of Freemasonry. American.

Some Facts about Freemasonry without the Dross.

BY D. B. TURNEY.

III. Freemasonry is anti-Christian.

Having found several particulars in which Freemasonry is immoral and unlawful, it remains to be noted that she is also anti-Christian.

1. In prostituting numerous passages of the Bible to her own unholy purposes, and making the Scriptures sebservient to her secular and trifling concerns, to the serious and fatal hurt of vital religion in many cases.

2. In efforts to weaken the sanctions of religion by multiplying profane oaths, and begetting an immoral familiarity with the commingled mixture of religious forms used in impious and degrading ceremonies.

3. In promoting habits of idleness and intemperance, by inducing her members to neglect their own business to attend her meetings and swallow her libations.

4. In accumulating funds at the expense of the poor men who join, and to the injury and privation of their wives and families, to be dissipated and wasted in the senseless ceremonies and pompous exhibitions of the order, under the false pretense that the money will be employed to help the indigent and unfortunate.

5. In the tendency to narrow the sympathies of the human heart, by confining its benevolence to its own votaries, instead of sending it out to all of the needy; and in the reversal of the law of Christian charity, by giving Masons a preference even over those who are "of the household of the faith" in Christ.

6. In a disregard of all the true principles of human equality, by bestowing favors upon members of the fraternity and withholding them from others.

7. In hatred of the spirit and precepts of our holy religion shown by pretensions to an equal antiquity, usefulness and virtue.

8. In labors for self-aggrandizement, attempts to control multitudes and luxuriate in their spoils, the steady encroachments upon the free exercise of religion, and the scornful repudiation of the public good at the beck of self-interest.

9. In the persistent adherence to foresworn vows that are illegal, immoral and irreligious.

10. In the profanation and blasphemous use of God's name in the ritual, thereby repeatedly taking his name in vain and uprooting a veneration for his character.

11. In the perverse ignorance of such passages of Scripture as the following:

"Cursed be the man that maketh any graven or molten image, an abomination unto the Lord, the work of the hands of the craftsman, and putteth it in a secret place: and all the people shall answer and say, Amen."—Deut. xxvii: 15.

"And if a soul sin, and hear the voice of swearing, and is a witness, whether he hath seen or known of it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear his iniquity.

"Or if a soul swear, pronouncing with his lips to do evil, or to do good, whatsoever it be that a man shall pronounce with an oath, and it be hid from him; when he knoweth of it, then he shall be guilty in one of these."—Lev. v: 1, 4.

"Therefore, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy, we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty (Gr. shame); not walking in craftiness, nor handling the Word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth, commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God."—2 Cor. iv: 1, 2.

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame even to speak of those things which are done of them in secret."—Eph. v: 11,12.

"What hast thou done? The voice of thy brother's blood crieth unto me from the ground."—Gen. iv:10.

"Thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor."—Lev. xix: 13.

"If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death, and those that are ready to be slain; if thou sayest, Behold, we knew it not; doth not he that pondereth the heart consider it? and he that keepeth the soul, doth he not know it? and shall not he render to every man according to his works?"—Prov. xxiv: 11, 12.

"Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thy heart be hasty to utter anything before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few."

"Suffer not thy mouth to cause thy flesh to sin." Ecc. v: 2, 6.

"He that answereth a matter before he heareth it, it is folly and shame unto him." Prov. xviii: 13.

But while strangely ignorant of these and texts similar to these, the friends of Freemasonry boast of distinguished patrons, immense income, gaudy and pompous processions, illustrious truths, and keep in the dark the bloody assassinations, abominable oppressions, degrading and disgusting features, the fabric of lies and knavery, and the utter failure to do any good whatever. Yet the system is marked as anti-

Christianin the points named, and in many other respects:

12. In the fruitfulness of the lodge as the mother of delusion and error.

13. In the persecution of renouncing Freemasons.

14. In hostility to the dearest rights of man.

15. In the rigid exclusion of, or refusing to admit to membership, the most amiable and affectionate part of our species.

16. In baleful influence on public virtue.

17. In promiscuous assemblage of knaves and dupes, the good with the bad, etc.

18. In the erection of a false standard of excellence, by substituting the useless knowledge of ridiculous customs and absurd legends in the place of valuable attainments in true wisdom and superior acquirements in real culture.

19. In the habit of diverting the attention of her votaries from objects of permanent and genuine utility and placing it upon frivolous and useless things, to the great detriment of sober civilization.

20. Bold claims, pompous eulogiums, swelling words, boastful pretensions and vain-glorious declamations, hung upon the outer wall; and the hiding veil of secrecy, pernicious lying, viciousness and blind compliance, forced upon the inside votaries. In these things blazoning forth a double vileness.

21. In the idle parades, gewgaws and aprons.

22. In the swords, devices and morals.

23. In the very adaptability to all sorts of men under various shades of circumstances.

24. In the fact that Freemasonry has made many men worse and never any man better, so far as careful observation has extended.

25. In her heterogeneous commingling of sacrilegious, religious, fictitious, and mock ceremonies, to suit the caprices, passions, prejudices and designs of her various votaries.

But I weary of the recital. Freemasonry is anti-Christian in so many particulars that I should need a great while to mention them all. I have pointed to enough, however, to vindicate the charge.

Freemasonry then, is

1. Immoral, and God will curse its votaries.

2. Unlawful, and the government should crush its lodges.

3. Anti-Christian, and we must prevent its controlling the churches.

If we would protect from Masonic vengeance all the

1. Persons and reputations;
2. Lives and families;
3. Property and business of citizens of our American Republic, we must

1. Oppose,
2. Expose, and
3. Destroy

the system of Freemasonry, and that right speedily. Let all good men aid in the work, and may the blessing of God give it success.

What Position Should the Church Take in Regard to Secret Oath-bound Societies?

A PAPER READ BY REV. A. J. BAILEY, BEFORE FOX RIVER CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION AT MT. PALATINE, ILL., OCT. 9TH AND 10TH.

In answering this question, it is proper to state briefly the duties and responsibilities of the church, and the character of secret, oath-bound societies.

The church is the great company of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, organized for the worship of God, the maintenance of his ordinances, and the extending of his kingdom by the preaching of his Gospel. As such, conformity to the truth, and obedience to God, are at once its duty and its authority. The church can not make the conditions on which its fellowship is based, but must accept the condition Christ has made, viz., regeneration or Christian character. The church must receive all whom Christ receives, that is, all Christians, and reject all whom he rejects, that is all who are not Christians, and because Christ receives or rejects them.

The church must judge of the characters of men by their fruits. If their fruits prove them Christians the church must receive them in Christ's name; if otherwise the church must reject them because Christ rejects them.

Secret societies are associations of men bound together by an oath of secrecy. The objects of these societies are various, and so are their modes of operation. But they all make secrecy a condition of membership, and a fundamental principle of the society. In some, the secrecy includes the object of the society, the modes of operation and even the names of the members. In others only a part of these things are kept secret, while other parts are made known to the public. The character of these societies may be unlike in many respects according to their objects and modes of operation. But they all have a common character in these respects: They are based on selfishness; they depend for the fidelity of their members on an oath of fidelity, and not on a love of righteousness; and they appeal for the defense of their existence not to the God of Justice, but to the power of darkness. By their secrecy they show that they love darkness rather than light, and Christ says of such, "Everyone that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God."

Such being the character of secret societies, they should be classed with the things of which Paul says, "Let it not be once named among you, as becometh saints," and adds, "Be not ye therefore partakers with them. * * * Walk as children of the light. * * * Proving what is acceptable unto the Lord. And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."

This is the position the church should take. How shall it take this position and hold it? This is the end to be secured. What position shall the church take to secure it?

I. In the first place the church should take the position of DISCUSSION,—clear, candid discussion of this subject in the spirit of love and Christian faithfulness. The church ought to discuss everything that has to do with morals and religion, especially wherever these things come in contact with the work, progress or purity of the church. It does not belong to the church to discuss mercantile business as such; but it must teach integrity, and when necessary apply this principle by discussion to the business of the land. So the principles of Christianity should be discussed as they have to do with societies or individuals, especially when these principles are violated to the danger of the church.

It may be that some will not agree that secret societies are un-Christian, and so not to be fellowshiped by the church. But in this land of free speech, and in this Association of Congregational churches none can say that this question should not be discussed. Discussion is the lowest ground the church can take on any subject with which it has to do.

The discussion of this subject should begin where, in each case, it is necessary that it should begin in order to prove all things. If all agree on certain points, leave these and go to others; but go no faster than it is possible to have conviction follow. If people know nothing of this subject, begin as if it were all an open question. Take nothing for granted, but prove every point. But investigate and discuss the subject until none can be led astray because of ignorance.

Discussion is a possible and proper position for every individual church, and for every member of the church to take. These societies are everywhere coming in contact with the churches, affecting their work, their progress and their purity. In many feeble communities may be found two or three weak churches, and as many secret societies, all taxing the strength of the people and drawing on them for money. In many instances members of these feeble churches are dividing their strength and money between the church and the lodge, thus affecting the work and progress of the church, to say nothing of its purity, which must always suffer from a divided interest of its members. Such a state of things ought to be investigated. If it is right, accept and carry the burdens thus imposed; if not, seek at once to find and correct the wrong.

Secret societies invite Christian ministers to assist in the burial of their dead, in a service prepared and executed by the lodge, much of which the minister, unless he belongs to the lodge, is supposed not to understand. But the church ought to know whether its ministers are assisting in Christian or heathen burials.

These societies, when they can, put their seals on Christian monuments, and the corner-stones of Christian churches. The church ought to know what kind of seals are stamped on its monuments and houses of worship.

Members of Christian churches seek admission to these societies, and in some of them, special privileges are granted to ministers—Christian ministers—who join them. These ministers sometimes, in public speeches in the churches, extol the lodge, and recommend it to the public.

Members of secret societies seek admission to Christian churches, thus asking the fellowship of Christians, and asking the church to watch over their souls. But the church cannot well watch over the souls of men who hide from it much that has to do with their souls. The church cannot know that those whose ways are hidden from it are children of light.

The investigations that have already been made in regard to secret societies reveal facts that show need of still further investigation; and, much more, of a more general investigation of the subject on the part of the church at large. It is found that these societies are in their principles opposed to the principles of Christianity, and that in their practices they are opposed to Christ, to righteousness and justice. They are full of corruption, and have a damaging influence on the morals and spirituality of not only their own members, but of the communities in which they exist.

II. Secondly, the church should teach the difference between the holy and unholy, especially on those points having to do with the principles and operations of secret societies.

It is amazing what a lack of discrimination there is between the principles Christ taught and those taught by the world. The church is greatly weakened by this ignorance. Men of average mental capacity and intelligence argue that the so-called benevolence of secret societies is the same as the benevolence of the church. They do not see that, in the lodge, men helping others that, in case of need, they may be helped, are acting out nothing but selfishness; but that in doing good to men because they are in need, not expecting to receive anything in return, the principle on which the church acts, is in every way a different principle. In the face of the Sermon on the Mount men still advocate the old tradition, "Do good to those who do good to you," as a right principle on which to act.

Men become so wretchedly blind, or so wickedly perverse, that they can swear allegiance to a society at once the rival and the enemy of Christ, and at the same time seek to enjoy the privileges of his church without recognizing the inconsistency of such a course. Christianity is God's plan for harmonizing the world in a common brotherhood; but secret societies invent other ways to do what religion is designed to do, and yet men do not recognize these societies as rivals of the church. God has said that there is only one way to make a perfect state of society, and that is by supreme love to God and equal love to men. Secret societies attempt to build society on other foundations, and men cannot understand why God should find any fault with the religion of the lodge! Masonry even goes so far as to revive the old heathen religions against which God pronounced curses; it undertakes to make sinful men fit for eternal blessedness while excluding Christ and the atonement; and yet men say that Masonry is not inconsistent with Christianity.

Let me quote from Masonic authority a few of the claims of Masonry, to show how blind those must be who cannot see that the lodge is at enmity with the church.

Macoy says (Cycl. p. 398, Art. Induction, note): "The Rite of Induction signifies the end of a profane and vicious life—the palingensia (new birth) of corrupt human nature, the death of vice and all bad passions, and the introduction to a new life of purity and virtue. It also prepares the candidate by prayer and meditation, for that mystic pilgrimage, where he must wander through night and darkness, before he can behold the golden splendors of the Orient, and stand in unfettered freedom among the sons of light." Mackey, in his Lexicon, page 16, tells us that "Masonry consists in the great truths, that there is one God, and that the soul is immortal." Ibid. pp. 40, 41, he says: "The white apron is by its symbolic purity to aid us to that purity of life and conduct which will enable us to present ourselves before the Grand Master of the Universe unstained with sin." Salem Towne says, "Masonry is the perfection and arrangement of those holy principles by which the soul is fitted up for a meet temple of God in a world of immortality."

And now while Masonry is talking of a new birth, and of making sinful men fit for heaven, Morris, (Dict. of Masonry, p. 90,) tells us, "The order of Knight Templar and Knight of Malta, together with many of the degrees and orders in Scotch Masonry, are intensely Christian in their doctrines; their ceremonies also embody events in the life of Christ. Some of the side and adoptive degrees have the same reference, i. e. the Cross and Crown. This fact, of course, forfeits the claim of such degrees and orders to be styled universal Masonry."

If introducing Christ into a degree or order of Masonry "forfeits its claim to be styled universal Masonry," then Christ is not in that "universal Masonry," induction into which "signifies * * * the palingensia (new birth) of corrupt human nature," and "by which the soul is fitted up for a meet temple of God in a world of immortality."

These quotations and arguments are so familiar to those familiar with this subject, that I should not introduce them here were it not that men still tell us, even after hearing these arguments, that Masonry is not inconsistent with Christianity. I know of no better way to convince men than to ring out these simple facts, and at the same time to teach plainly to all the difference between the holy and the unholy, and between the clean and the unclean.

III. Thirdly, the truths of Christianity must be not only taught but applied. The church must reprove, rebuke with all long-suffering and doctrine.

When the church teaches that no man can serve two masters, and says to the people, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon," if this truth is not applied by those who ought to apply it, then the church must apply it by reproof and rebuke. If men are working so hard to make money that they have no time to devote to Christ and his church, they must be reproved. And if men join secret societies for business patronage; or for votes, or to be taken care of, they must be made to feel that God will not save those who seek their help from men. If men care more for the favor of some secret society than for the favor of God, he will leave them to their own choice.

The directions given to the church in regard to offending members, and the exhortations to those who have sinned, show that Christ did not expect the church to be free from the trials of offending brethren. But they show also that the church must not allow these erring brethren to continue in sin. It is not enough to teach that extortion is wrong; this truth must be applied to the extortioner. And when the church teaches that Christians must forsake all and follow Christ, this truth must be applied to those who, without forsaking all, seek to follow Christ.

When Elijah challenged the priests of Baal on Mount Carmel, it was with the understanding that if Baal proved himself God, all the people should serve him; but if Jehovah proved to be God, then all the people should serve Him. So when the church proves any course sin, it must insist that all must forsake that sin. God does not trifle, and men must not so trifle with truth and God as to prove a doctrine false or a practice unchristian, and not rebuke those who are in error. While every man has a right to insist that he be convinced of sin before he is condemned, the church has also a right to insist that when a man is convinced of sin he must forsake it.

IV. Fourthly, it follows, then, that in regard to these societies, as another step, the church should take the advice given by Paul to Titus, "A man that is a heretic after the first and second admonition reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned by himself."

We must hold that regenerated men will accept the fundamental truths of the Gospel when these truths are clearly presented to them; and that those who seek to do God's will, and to be led by his spirit, will recognize evil when it is shown to them. Men may sin ignorantly through unbelief; but those who believe will not continue to persecute Jesus when they know who he is. If a man cannot be convinced that intemperance and horse-racing and gambling are inconsistent with Christianity, it is quite certain that he is not a Christian. If a man holds to an error in regard to any fundamental principle of religion, it must be because he does not fully understand that principle.

It is possible for one to be a Christian, and because he does not fully understand some essential doctrine, hold to error in regard to it. It may be very difficult to so present the truth that the man can understand it.

But the man who has experienced a truth such as, for example, the new birth, will not deny the facts concerning it; and if the doctrine of regeneration can be presented in language that he can understand, he will accept it. If one does not accept the truth it is evidence that he has not experienced it. So a man might join a Masonic lodge, taking all the oaths of the first three degrees, and not realize that these oaths are contrary to Christianity. But let these oaths be carefully read to him, let him understand what Masonry teaches and if it does not then appear to him inconsistent with Christianity, it must be does not know enough of religion to be a Christian. Masonry is so directly opposed to Christianity that a man can hardly be an intelligent Mason, and at the same time be an intelligent Christian, if, indeed, he could even be an ignorant Christian. And the other secret societies are not so unlike Masonry as to stand much better in the test of Christian character. If an intelligent man could not be convinced of the un-Christian character of secret societies, I should very much doubt his piety, and should reject him, feeling that "he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, being condemned of himself."

Finally, the church, if not in regard to secret societies, at least because of them, should take a higher position of purity and piety. The great difficulties the church experiences in regard to secret societies are because of worldliness and a lack of piety in the church. If all secret societies were like the Ku-Klux, or the Mollie Maguires, they would never get near enough to the church to necessitate the taking of any position in regard to them. And if the church could be as far removed in purity from those societies the members of which seek admission to the churches, there would be no trouble from them. The trouble comes because men see something desirable in both the lodge and the church, and do not see the antagonism between them. They do not see that one is pulling down what the other is building up. When a man's piety gets so low that he cannot see sin in worldiness, he is in danger of going over entirely to the world, and secrecy is one of the ways of the world particularly attractive to many.

When one is full of Christian faith, love and zeal, he will not long love the lodge. Some as they have grown in grace have practically left the lodge, without any argument on the subject; their hearts teaching them in advance of their heads, that Christ is not there. They lose their relish for the lodge as they grow in love for Christ and his work.

Those who oppose secret societies must remember that in so doing they expose themselves to the severer criticisms of the world. It will not do to oppose this sin in others and hide another sin in oneself. If a man complains of the idolatry of secret societies he must not commit sacrilege; if of their dishonoring Christ, he must not dishonor him. The church ought to be so pure that sin would never seek admission to it. Let Christians follow Christ, and walk in the light as he is in the light, and the sin of secrecy cannot long exist in the church.

The Light Rising in the East.

WINDSOR, Conn., Oct. 13, 1878.

DEAR EDITOR:—Among the few things which the right minded people of our New England have occasion for thankfulness one is for the presence and labors of dear Bro. Stoddard. Another is that the next annual meeting of the National Christian Association is to be in our midst. It is at least so to all opponents of lodge power, who long have felt the need of close sympathy and presence of the Lord's band of strong men from the West, all alive with the spirit and power of God, ready to do battle against the powers of darkness which now cast such a blight over the fair land of the Forefathers.

While there has been so little open warfare hereabouts the past two years, greatly due to the "hard times," Bro. S. finds ample occasion to note the results of the good seed sown in the past; and although some of us have slept, God has faithfully given the increase, and a traverse of the field now, with eyes open, will bring forth testimony to his honor and glory.

Bro. Stoddard in his flying visit (like a good angel of God) to many towns in our State, dropped down among us last Thursday night, and the night following gave a terrible blow to the old "handmaid," at a chapel in a corner of the town, where we have prayed for the people for months and years. And oh! if you could realize the thankfulness of many for what they saw and heard, you would thank God with us and take fresh courage.

We had hoped that our new town hall would have been ready, furnished with seats and lights, but it was not, and in the Methodist church directly opposite was to be and came off the same night a temperance lecture by the "chief" of the "Templar" organization of the State. We would not seek to interfere with them under the circumstances, so gathered our little band in our favorite place, and all gave the speaker the best attention, earnestly desiring to hear him again. Three or four of the craft were present and stood the terrible ordeal like martyrs.

Bro. S. left here yesterday morning for Weatogue and Collinsville, where he was to preach on Sabbath in the latter place, and as there was only one night of this week he could be with us before the Convention at Worcester came off, and as the hall is not quite ready, we have deferred till after that, when we shall call him back for two or three nights, and also hope to have Bro Ronayne accompany him and work the degrees.

I have done nothing here the past year to speak of, but our dear Bro. Collins has labored on unceasingly, sowing the good seed, scattering tracts, lending and giving away books as he has had opportunity while following his daily occupation; and he will not fail of an abundant reward.

A short but terrible night of darkness and evil is about to set in upon our world, and over the whole earth will sweep an overwhelming tide of wickedness and evil which will eclipse all that has ever preceded it. "But when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the spirit of the Lord shall lift up a standard against him." To be forewarned and to take heed, is to be forearmed, and the Lord will still be the hope of his people. We may labor on, pray on, suffer on, but a mighty deliverance will surely come to the people of God, and the groaning creation also will be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the sons of God. Amen.

Yours, rejoicing in truth and righteousness. D. J. ELLSWORTH.

FROM OTHER POINTS.

WEATOGUE, Conn., Oct. 17, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Bro. Stoddard has been with us and the Lord opened the way for him to preach in the Congregational churches at Canton Center and Collinsville, Sunday, Oct. 13th, and to lecture in Collinsville Oct. 14th, and at Canton Center on the 15th. The attendance was good on both evenings and the attention remarkable. At Collinsville the lodge was well represented and all kept their jewels.

To those who know Bro. Stoddard it would seem almost useless to offer my testimony as a lecturer of remarkable ability, possessing an almost perfect knowledge of the system of secretism as found in the lodges at the present time, and to those who have not heard him, I would say, improve the first opportunity you may have of listening to the eloquent and earnest manner in which he presents his wonderful subject.

To all the readers of the Cynosure and friends of reform in Connecticut, I would suggest that you at once go to work to secure the services of Bro. S. in your several localities. Work must be done in our State ere we are enslaved or driven out by the lodgemen. Let us by our earnest importunity make an effort to secure his services after the Worcester Convention.

Write Bro. Conant at Willimantic. Let us know who is on the Lord's side. Yours, P. BACON.

GRAND WORK ON THE ROSTRUM AND AT THE POLLS IN MARSHALL CO., IOWA.

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa, October 8, 1878.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—Bro. Rathbun is with us. We held the annual meeting of our county anti-secrecy association at Albion last Thursday, the 1st of October. That night Rev. E. I. Grinnell gave us a very interesting lecture against the lodge, which was followed by another from Bro. Rathbun. There were but few, if any, of the "fraters" present. So the meeting passed off quietly and all went home pleased, so far as the writer has been informed.

Next night Bro. R. gave us another lecture in the Presbyterian church, which proved too much for a Masonic jack that was present. He attempted a contradiction and some Masonic abuse. I think he felt he had got the worst of it before he got through. Bro. R. lectured at Bangor, and a Mason, and perhaps the only one present, lost his jewel and said Bro. R. lied, but when asked to point out the lie failed to do so.

Bro. R. has lectured at several different points in our county, and at several points has worked degrees. One young man took the part of an officer in the lodge one night. Next day he told me he had intended as soon as he could to join the lodge, but he would not do so now, and has ordered some Anti-masonic literature to read. Hope before long he will take the Cynosure. How many more these lectures and expositions have saved from the lodge God only knows. Judging, however, from what we see, I think the scales are beginning to fall from the eyes of many not only out of the lodge but also in it.

I have not attempted to give even a synopsis of Bro. R.'s lectures, for I could not give your readers, who have never heard him, any adequate idea of the force of them. The only way to learn anything satisfactory about his lectures is to send for him and hear him for yourselves. An Odd-fellow the other night listened to the end, and at the close R. gave his experiences briefly and closed by singing some verses composed by a friend at his bedside when suffering from abuse received at the hands of Freemasons. By request of some present the hat was passed round and this O. F. threw in twenty-five cents saying, "that song was worth that at any rate."

OCT. 10.

Bro. R. has lectured at Clemens Grove; worked the third degree Tuesday night at Dillon. In the course of his remarks he told the people that they had been to-day electing men to fill the various offices in the gift of the people, and now if any of those elected should be Masons, and forge their own bond, they could not hurt them. There sat before him an ex-sheriff that had been guilty of that very crime, and went scot free. Now, of course people thought he had been posted; but not so, he had never heard of the case till after the lecture.

Next morning a gentleman (?) fell on him and abused him a while about his lecture the night before. A stranger came along and inquired what the trouble was? Bro. R. replied he had lectured here last night, and this man was mad about it. He inquired what he lectured on. R. replied, "Against Masonry." Said he, "I did not know that any one would dare to speak against Masonry." R. said, "Yes, there are a number lecturing against it." Result, stranger pulled out his wallet and gave Bro. R. $1.50 for the Cynosure, although a perfect stranger. Masonic wrath did it!

Last night he worked the third degree at Albion, and he knocked Hiram splendidly; but he was equal to the occasion, and by the power of the Master's grip he raised him again, and on the five points of fellowship whispered that magic word, Ma-ha-bone, in his ear, which makes all things right again, Masonically.

The "Antis" in Iowa township are jubilant this morning. They gained a clean victory at the election—elected every man by about double their former majority. Bro. R. has visited eight different points in this county and delivered ten lectures and sermons, and almost every place he has been invited back again. May the time soon come when the truth will do its work everywhere as it has done here. J. MCCLEERY.

THE MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 14, 1878.

Friends of this reform and to Secretary Mathews:—In regard to holding the State meeting I suggest that the city of Flint would be a very good place for that purpose. I have got the consent of the president and the managers of the Reform Club Hall for the use of their room at any time I call for it, by giving two or three days' notice; expense of hall $3.50 an evening, well lighted up. This hall will hold one thousand people and there are many here who would like to have such a meeting held here as it is very much needed. I will endeavor to bear a good part of the expense.

We must have E. Ronayne to work the degrees. He need not fear but that he will get a good house. And now if the friends should not see fit to hold the State meeting here, I wish E. Ronayne could find time to come here and give us a lecture and work the degrees. It would do great good and I think it would pay him well for so doing. Yours most truly.

ONE GRAND CLUB OF TEN THOUSAND.

FREE BAPTIST:—MASONRY IN THE NEW DURHAM QUARTERLY MEETING.

CENTER STRAFFORD, N. H., Oct. 12, 1878.

This New Hampshire body of Freewill Baptists was the first organized quarterly meeting of the denomination. The first Freewill Baptist church was organized at New Durham Ridge by Elder Benjamin Randall, June 30, A. D. 1780. The quarterly meeting is now composed of twenty-four churches with a membership of 2,121. The denomination embraces 1,449 churches with a membership of 75,686. As a body the denomination is decidedly Anti-masonic. In New Hampshire which contains 118 Freewill Baptist churches, about one pastor in ten is an adhering Mason; about as many more have been Masons but do not now affiliate. It is probable that the proportion of Masons in the laity is about the same as in the ministry. Yet this small number of Masons, backed up by outsiders and the minor lodges, exercise a powerful and degrading influence over the churches, and hold the timid majority in slavish fear. It is exactly like the pro-slavery despotism of wenty years ago.

At the last session of the New Durham Ministers' Conference, the writer, at the request of his brethren, read an essay on the "Doctrine of Holiness." The essay argued that card-playing, theatre-going, cider-drinking and selling, tobacco-using and lodgism were not in accord with holiness, or favorable to growth in grace. It is our custom to criticise the essays presented. The brethren were called on in turn and offered slight criticism. Bro. J. J. Wentworth, a good Anti-mason, but aged and non-combative, thought it was not perhaps necessary to denounce Masonry on every occasion.

Bro. J. S. Neal, a sound Anti-mason but non-combative, thought my manner was too zealous for the theme, and that there was excess of elaboration on some branches of the subject. Bro. E. W. Ricker, who professes to regard Masonry about as Gallio did Christianity, dissented from the doctrine of the essay that justification and sanctification are co-ordinate and inseparable. The Moderator, Elder Ezra Tuttle, a Mason and tobacco-user (for perpetual medicine), said he was requested by a brother who was present when the essay was read but could not be present when it was criticised to protest against being unchurched without a hearing. The venerable chairman said he would not refute the essay but tell a story. He then told the well-known tale of the lunatic riding an imaginary hobby-horse.

I was then called upon to defend my essay, which I did as well as I could in a few remarks. The moderator then flew to his feet and said he had not objected to the essay because it discountenanced card-playing, cider-drinking and tobacco-using, although he thought cider and tobacco were valuable medicines, but because I had assailed secret societies. He said he had never seen anything wrong in Masonry and thought it decidedly out of place for me to bring that subject up at every session of the quarterly meeting. After apologizing for secret societies as best he could, he resumed the chair. I arose to defend my essay and myself, by asking the moderator to prove the assertion that I had lugged in Masonry at every session, admitting that in about nineteen sessions I had introduced the subject two or three times, and by offering to prove that the oaths of Masonry were contrary to the Bible and the Christian religion. The moderator called me to order. I asked why it was not in order for me to defend my essay as other brethren had theirs, and why it was in order for the chair to speak at considerable length in apology for secret societies and not in order for me to speak three minutes (all I asked) to show that Masonic oaths were wrong. The chairman ruled that the essay had not been attacked on that point hence a defence was not in order. Two brethren simultaneously moved that I be allowed opportunity to defend my essay. The motion was put and unanimously carried. I read from Bro. Ronayne's Hand Book and endeavored briefly to prove that the Masonic oaths are forbidden by the Bible. Bro. Ricker could not see the point which I endeavored to make and with your permission at an early day I will try to make the proof clearer for his benefit and that of other brethren who have not investigated the character of Masonic oaths. Among the twenty-four churches in this quarterly meeting the above named Elder Ezra Tuttle is the only known affiliated Masonic pastor. How much good he could accomplish by renouncing Freemasonry and exposing its barbarous oaths to public scorn. S. C. KIMBALL.

An Old Man's View on the New Departure and of Hypocrites in the Pulpit.

Granger, N. Y.

To all friends and brethren in Christ, East West, North and South, who compose God's great picket line, few in number, but mighty through God:—Courage, brethren, courage, your cause is good, and all power in heaven and earth is in the hands of your Captain. Let the shout go up from right to left, and from to rear, Advance. Your Captain has said, "Lo I am with you always." Don't forget that. These are troublesome times, brethren; but even now as bright crowns of glory may be won as were ever won on earth. God bless our editor, President Blanchard, I would give more and go farther to shake hands with him than I would any other president on earth. The gates of hell thought they had prevailed when Stephen was stoned, but God took their champion Saul of Tarsus and converted him and he was more than a match for all their hosts.

It is said that Falsehood on a certain occasion stole Truth's mantle and left her own, and so has gone naked ever since. We read of wolves in sheep's clothing. And when I see a man wearing a Masonic badge I know he is not one of Christ's sheep. I don't care how long he prays nor how loud he shouts, the devil has him hoodwinked and with his cable-tow leads him captive at his will. And when I see Masonic emblems hung up in a meeting-house I don't need to be told that this is one of the high places of Baal where an effort is made to form a concord between Christ and Baal. It cannot be done. I go for the "New Departure." I think it the best move that has been made yet to make Christ's people one. O how it will strenghen the churches to know that they all have each other's prayers and co-operation. And then they all want the mind that was in Christ for this includes all the Christian graces; and that mind was shown as clearly in cleansing the temple with a scourge of small cords as it was at the grave of Lazarus or when weeping over the devoted city.

Why is the name of Christ rejected by Masons? Because he said, "If they shall say, Behold, he is in the secret chamber (the lodge) believe it not." Now if they admitted his name in the lodge it would be proof positive that he meant them. Their lodge prayers are a greater sin in the sight of God than the most profane language of an Algerine pirate. Men do not persecute and kill their fellow men for revealing their good or virtuous acts. No, they are all too glad to have these known. But it is for revealing what they know to be base, mean, vile, wicked. What they know all good men and women will loathe and condemn.

Masonic ministers cannot take their sectarian principles into the lodge; if they did it would destroy their bond of union. But how is it when they go out of the lodge? Does each one return to his sectarian principles, like the dog to his vomit? If so what becomes of his bond of union? Or has he renounced his sectarian principles forever? If so, then is he a hypocrite in the church. If not he is a hypocrite in the lodge. Take which horn of the dilemma you please, gentlemen; your Masonic minister is a hypocrite the best way you can fix it; and he is drawing money from the church to give to the lodge —your enemy. Will you stand it? "I won't," my father used to say before the Morgan affair. There is no good in Masonry. It is vice only that needs a veil. I am now in my seventy-ninth year, poor in health, can do but little, am doing what I can. You may expect to hear from me again. Gold and silver I have but little, but I have my Saviour, his Word and the Cynosure, and these three ought to make me rich Thank God, Satan holds no mortgage on my throat or tongue. I want to get some subscribers for the Cynosure but it is a hard place here.

Purify the Churches.

Seemly, Ill., Oct. 10, 1878.

Editor Cynosure:—Two members of the Hoopeston Masonic lodge have just returned from the Grand Lodge held recently in Chicago, having been sent by their lodge as representatives. Whatever report they may have made of their lodge the timber they are working into it is not first-class; for, be it remembered, that every candidate at Hoopeston lodge knows in advance just the ceremony he has to pass through and the oaths he has to take, and no first-class man will submit to such oaths and ceremonies. While Masons are claiming that their numbers are constantly increasing, the friends of our reform must remember that numbers are no evidence of strength but on the contrary are often a positive evidence of weakness. The good men all over the country are leaving the lodge and quietly dropping out, while the dead beats are sticking closer to the institution and more rushing in; and these are just the ones that will in the end break down the institution. In other words, using a shipping phrase, the dead beats are the freight and the good men are the rolling stock, or propelling power, which latter we are fast taking away from the lodge. The Masonic lodge with its satellites will soon have to side track and get out of the way. Yes! get out of the way of the car of civilization which is moving steadily, surely and swiftly on.

Let us learn a lesson from the slavery issue. What was it that aided so much—it was separation! The Presbyterian church was divided, the Methodist Episcopal also, and other denominations more or less. We are opposed to schism, and division where matters can be adjusted and settled in a right and Christian spirit; but there is no settlement in this case. We know the temper and spirit of the lodge. It has a deathly grip which it will not relinquish, and as I told the Masonic Methodist presiding elder if there was no other way to settle the lodge question with the churches but to split them from stem to stern, where they will not give up their lodge worships without it, let it be done.

To facilitate this matter let records of persons withdrawing from churches be kept at suitable localities, and their names enrolled as members of Christ's church, where the lodge is not fellowshiped. The College Church of Christ at Wheaton would be one good point for Illinois. Yours as ever in the cause.

J. S. Hickman.

Elder Limbocker to his Friends.

Reading, Mich.

I wish to say a few words to my Cynosure subscribers. I am so feeble in health this fall, which is unusual for me, and my pastoral charge being larger than I ought to undertake, and having removed from your locality, I therefore cannot come around to see you and am anxious for you all to continue your paper. The paper grows better and better. It is the leading one in the noble little band in our nation that dare stand square on the rock and speak the whole truth for Christ in a Christ-like way. And the cause it advocates is making head against the beast, notwithstanding world-loving churches are hindering the truth. And thirdly, now is the time for every friend to put in his influence. If you will direct a card to me (Reading, Mich.,) intimating your desire to continue, I will make arrangements with the publishers to have them come at club rates, and will come around and get the money so you need have no more trouble about it. H. S. Limbocker.

P. S. I am glad to see the subject of our State Anniversary referred to by our secretary. Jackson would be my preference, and I would be willing to meet my part of the expense for a hall. H. S. L.

How I was Convinced of Masonic Integrity.

Quincy, O.

A Mason having approached the writer on the cars, the following conversation took place:

Said he, "I can convince you that we Masons do not favor or shield each other in crime." "I was once on a jury in my county where the accused was charged with horse-stealing, and he was a Master Mason and there were two other Master Masons on the jury with me, and although we saw him give the sign of distress three times during his trial, asking sympathy and favor, yet when we went to the jury-room the three Masons were the first three men to step forward and sign the decision of guilty. Now," said he, "don't this convince you that Masons will not screen one another in crime?"

I asked him, "Are you right sure he was a Mason?" He said he was. I asked him if he was a well informed, shrewd man. He said he was.

Said I, "Did he understand Masonry?"

"Yes, sir," said he, "he was a bright Mason."

"Well, sir," said I, "your attempted defence is too thin: 1st. Your argument drawn from the fact that you Masons were the first men to sign the verdict of guilty looks very suspicious, to say the least of it. Sir, if it were not a concerted plan to deceive outsiders, how came you Masons to step forward unitedly and sign that verdict? 2d. Then if your Masonic witness told the truth, and you have not misrepresented him, then it is true that you have the hailing sign of distress and that this Masonic horse-thief gave it correctly and intelligently, so as to be understood by Masons, and that you Masons have a way or mode of asking relief or help in giving that sign. Now, sir, if there is no such sign, how did you Masons know he gave such sign? and if it is not the established or fixed mode or way of asking relief, how did he as a bright Mason come to make such sign and you to understand it as such, and how did he conceive of such a mode of asking sympathy and relief?"

With this he abruptly left me to my own reflections and I thought of that man in Logan county, Ohio, who said, "If I was going to be a rascal I would join the Masons," and in a short time went into public business and did join the Masons, and the people thought he made his words true.

Mr. Editor, I am more than convinced that these pretensions to Masonic fairness are but deception and a cheat, and that they lie in wait but to mislead and destroy. A Masonic minister of the M. E. church said to me, "Brother Wilkison, if I was back in the U. B. church, with confidence restored that I lost by joining the Masons, I would never betray that confidence again." He added, "Bro. Wilkison, don't you think one of our Masonic ministers got in trouble with a woman and came to me saying, 'You have stopped at that house, and if you will testify that that woman is not honest, that will save me;' and when I refused to do so he appealed to our Masonic obligations and claimed that I must help him. But I told him I was not so much a Mason as a Bible Christian."

My heart sickens as I think of the condition of church and state ruled by the lodge. I am longing for the day when secretism will be destroyed. Yours for the spread of the true light.

JAMES WILKISON.

OUR MAIL.

Rev. B. G. Huber of Shippensburg, Pa., the publisher of the Highway of Holiness, writes:

"Masonry is not only Christless, but also Godless. And yet there are some church members who would invite the Apocalyptic "beast," with its "seven heads and ten horns" into the church. It gored Morgan to death, and your lecturers have felt its keen horns repeatedly. Our church (U. B. in Church) has had some experience of the same kind from this Godless beast.

But "the Lord reigns," and is to be trusted for victory for the right.

Rev. A. F. Dempsey has his address changed to Lisbon Center, N. Y., and takes occasion to say:

"I will try to do what I can for the Cynosure there, and for the God-honoring and Christ-vindicating reform it so nobly represents.

My heart's best sympathies are with President Blanchard in his being "excluded" from his life-honored Association by the allies of Satan, who cannot endure the light.

My present conviction, which appears inspirational, is, that they never could crown his grey hairs with such a halo of glory, as by now casting him out, and thus declaring him in sympathy with the Master. I praise God for the undaunted heroism of his life. I believe God will yet lead him to glorious triumph in victories for the truth."

A friend, of Warren, Ill., objects to anything being said by the Cynosure on politics. We think him mistaken, for, since civil government was established by God he requires his people to be salt and light in this, as well as in business, or any other relation of life. He writes:

"O that our hearts may be in a better work than politics. For all those things will pass away. But God's church and kingdom will increase in glory and power when this earth shall pass away. What we need is a line drawn between those who are openly and fully for Christ and those who are secretly for human inventions; who are like a man with his wife on one arm and a strange woman on the other. Let us seek to be cleansed in the "precious blood of Christ Jesus" and cleave only to him.

I cannot feel to support any religious paper that is devoted to any other cause than directly to the full and complete advancement of Christ's cause, and that by gentleness and persuasiveness in love, and walking with and in accordance with the Scriptures in all cases where brethren walk disorderly.

LET every one cheer for the Ten Thousand,—not Zenophon's but the Cynosure's.

LESSON V.—November 3, 1878.—THE TEN LEPERS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 17: 11: 19. Memorize vs. 15-19.

11. And it came to pass, as he went to Jerusalem, that he passed through the midst of Samaria and Galilee.

12. And as he entered into a certain village, there met him ten men that were lepers, which stood afar off:

13. And they lifted up their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us.

14. And when he saw them, he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the priests. And it came to pass, that, as they went, they were cleansed.

15. And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God,

16. And fell down on his face at his feet giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan.

17. And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

18. There are not found that returned to give glory to God, save this stranger.

19. And he said unto him, Arise, go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?

TOPIC.—Acknowledging blessings.

BIBLE READINGS.

Luke 17: 11-19; Lev. 13: 1-8; Num. 5: 1-4; Lev. 14: 1-20; Num. 12: 10-15; 2 Ki. 5: 1-14; Mat. 8: 1-4.

LESSON NOTES.

This occurrence does not appear to be narrated in order of time, as an incident of the journey, but as one of the teachings of Jesus that properly belongs here, in the class which Luke is now relating.

11. "As he went to Jerusalem:" Probably to attend the Feast of Tabernacles. Some think it was on his return from Perea, whither he had withdrawn after the raising of Lazarus.

"Through the midst of Samaria and Galilee:" Probably not between them on the border, as should be the meaning if this journey was a return from Perea.

12. "Into a certain village:" But not yet in it: still some distance outside.

"Ten men that were lepers:" Not even the outcast lepers can live without society, so they band together for help and protection. Another example, 2 Kings 7: 3. To this day the lepers have their own settlements. See Lev. 13: 45, 46.

"Stood afar off:" Even now the lepers never venture to touch a healthy man; but they come as near as they dare, to clamor for alms.

13. "Lifted up their voices:" Called loudly.

"Master:" Here, commander or director.

"Have mercy on us:" Or, Pity us; or even, Give us alms.

14. "And when he saw them:" After having his attention called by their cry for help.

"Go shew yourselves to the priests:" In accordance with Lev. 14: 2, etc. The priest, however, could not heal, but only decide whether he was healed or not.

"Priests:" Not, priest. The Samaritan would probably not be attended to by a Jewish priest.

"As they went, they were cleansed:" Or, While they were going away, as soon as they started, they were made clean.

15. "When he saw that he was healed:" Before he had been to his priest.

"Turned back:" Back to Jesus.

"Glorified God:" Praised, or ascribed the glory to God.

16. "Fell down on his face at his feet:" A mark then, as now, of adoration to God.

"And he was a Samaritan:" See John 4: 9.

17. "Not:" Or, Not indeed.

18. "There are not found that returned:" Or, Were there not any found who would return?

"Save this stranger:" Or, Except this Gentile.

19. "Arise:" From being down on thy face at my feet.

"Go thy way:" Same as "go" (not as "went") in v. 14.

"Thy faith hath made thee whole:" Or, Thy faith hath saved thee.—S. S. Times Quarterly.

—The largest Sunday school in the world is probably at Stockport, Chester county, England, a town with a population of only 53,014. The school building cost $100,000 and has between eighty and ninety teaching rooms. Since the institution was opened 5,085 teachers have been employed, and 90,804 scholars registered.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCT. 24, 1878.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—Another year, and our reform is not yet completed.

Modernized heathenism of the lodge is still practiced in our midst. Young men and middle-aged have not yet ceased to put their necks under yokes of secretism, that are intended to be life-long. Our fellow-citizens and even our sons and brothers are exposed to the alluring dangers of lodge-craft, whose subtle stratagems, yet far from extinct, still continue their foul and injurious depredations upon public and private weal. Whatever is politic, or patriotic, or pious is in perpetual jeopardy through the chicanery, the despotism and the ungodliness of the antagonist of our Association.

These facts forbid us peace or even armistice. They bid us "Hold the fort"; and not only so, but also to make a Sherman's "March to the sea."

The current annual campaign is almost ended. At its close we are invited to a grand council of war at Worcester, Massachusetts,— time, 15th, 16th, 17th prox.

The day is near at hand. Let all good soldiers under our banners resolve to go or help to send somebody.

Long journeys are required to congregate a national meeting in this vast land. These journeys cost. The wealthy can easily bear the cost, but others may not be able to go unless assisted. "Many hands make light work" — may many proofs of this be shown in many places by united purses to send delegates.

If the spirit of the pilgrim fathers has not departed from Massachusetts, she herself might roll down from the Worcester meeting an avalanche of Anti-masonry that would bury and smother the lodge in the East.

Let the nation drop in there to see and to help.

And since God is our only stay and hope, our fervent prayers ought to be ascending "the hill of the Lord," invoking the divine help we so much need. Men and women of faith, let us pray!

SAM'L B. ALLEN.
Pres. National Convention.

There are some 25 churches in Warren county, Illinois, in theory opposed to the lodge. Will Bro. Gordon see that they are canvassed and 100 copies of the Cynosure put in circulation among them.

How many subscriptions for the Cynosure can you obtain to-day?

"DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO."—Secretary Stoddard is a trifle sharp on ministers who loathe Masonry but "don't know what to do." Their case is this, as one lately said to me: "I do not think it is my 'bread and and butter,' but my ministry; all my means to do good. The first word I say on Masonry is the last word I speak in that pulpit; and the next church does not want a minister who has failed in the last. So the question is not 'shall I lose my bread, but my ministry, to which I am called of God?'" Now let every reader of this writing take it to his own or some other minister who is a good man, in the above situation; and I will tell him "what to do."

1. "Be wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

2. Be sure you lay down your influence and life for Christ's sake; and be willing to leave your church as Edwards left Northampton, for truth's sake, and you will have an hundred fold more now in this life before your life is done.

3. As soon as you have settled it with Christ, go to the best members of the church and enlighten them. Or first, perhaps, enlighten yourself by getting them to take the Cynosure one year. As soon as your praying, giving members, especially women, see what the movement is, your work is done, and your religious worldlings will not, dare not rebel against the piety of the church.

4. Then take your life in your hand, tell your wife to prepare her mind to leave, and preach a temperate, clear thorough out and out sermon on the false worships of earth, lodge worship included.

I did this when a young pastor in Cincinnati, in a worse case than yours and lost not one member by it.

THE ROCK RIVER CONFERENCE of the M. E. church has had Dr. Thomas of the Centenary church before it for unsound and un-Methodist preaching. The Doctor replies to his conference: "On the subject of religion I hold, substantially, to what is known as the moral influence theory;" and "As to the duration and results of that [future] punishment, whether it be eternal or corrective, resulting in reformation or ending in annihilation, I have not reached any settled conviction." And yet this man has been for years preaching salvation from he confesses he knows not what; and ridiculing the tenets of his church and the belief of his brethren who believe that when Christ said one class of people shall "go into everlasting punishment" and another class "into life eternal," he could not mean that both would get to the same place, or into the "eternal sleep" of the French atheists. "That day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed the son of perdition." 2 Thess. 2: 3. Swing and Thomas are the heralds and precursors of "that man of sin." Thousands will follow them to perdition.

VOICE OF U. B. CONFERENCES.—At the Dakota Conference, Aug. 30, 1878, the following resolution was presented:

Recents events as, developed in a convention held in Dayton, Ohio, the great object of which is to destroy our rule on secrecy, show that rebellion exists in our midst; therefore,

Resolved, That we will support the principles of our church upon that subject by precept and example.

The yeas and nays being called for, the following was the result:

Yeas—Milton Wright, A. K. Curtis, I. G. W. Chase, J. Cotton, J. Morris, J. Brown, D. M. Harvey, A. N. King, I. Coles, A. Andus, D. Mekeel, P. Van Norman, W. W. Chase, L. S. Moore.

Nay—J. H. McVay.

North Ohio Conference, Sept. 11, 1878, on—

Tobacco.—We believe that the use of tobacco as a mere gratification of appetite is sin; that thus spending money in this direction is sin; that the influence of the example thus exerted is sinful; and we will, in discouraging its indulgence, live consistent lives therewith.

Cynosure.—Resolved, That we recognize in the Christian Cynosure an efficient co-laborer in the work of spreading light and truth and defending the cherished principles of our church respecting our opposition to secretism.

Let us bless God for Otterbein and the United Brethren church.

LOFTY IMPUDENCE.—A small faction in the church of the United Brethren, the same who held the nullification convention at Dayton, Ohio, seems to have one of its centers in Otterbein University, which has lately conferred the title of D.D. on Rev. Z. Warner, of West Virginia, a leader and exponent of the Masonic faction which is troubling the Brethren church. Before the war, John M. Mason, of Virginia, soundly berated the loyal Senators for "violation of the Constitution," while the guns of his party, stolen from United States arsenals, were shotted and in battery to fire on our National flag! So these false guides condemn the Religious Telescope, and speak of a "low grade of periodicals," and say, "We regard it below our dignity as ministers to encourage such publications." The ignorance, vulgarity and low breeding of these men was abundantly manifested in their speeches at the Dayton Convention. They are the "poor white trash" crept into decent society, and we only refer to them to warn all God-fearing United Brethren to mark them and have no company with them that they may be ashamed. Rom. 16:17.

MORE AND MORE.—The Religious Telescope comes in, since the above was written, containing an article from E. Harper, of West Virginia, against the rule of the U. B. church, whose constitution says: "There shall be no connection with secret societies." The style and spirit of these church nullifiers are a mere transcript and copy of the arguments of the secessionists and traitors before the war. This writer: 1st, cavils because the constitutional provision excluding secret societies "does not permit an appeal." Appeal from an express provision of a constitution! From what? and to what? Anything higher than the constitution? Be it remembered, too, that these men openly "nullify" the constitution which they are prating about. They agree that their constitution excludes "secret societies," and they wish to appeal from it! Ignorance and arrogance combined.

2d. He complains that himself and associates "are looked upon with suspicion as being in full sympathy with secret societies." Well, are they not? When such scribes and Pharisees came with such cavils and bits of law to Christ, Paul or John the Baptist they were called "hypocrites" and "vipers" as they plainly were. So are these men. All the tobacco-users and secret society men are on their side, regard them as their champions, and they never say anything to either reform or to displease them.

3d. Again; this writer says: "It [the church] has tried to do what never can be done," viz., "legislate out of existence what is conceived to be an evil." Mark his words, "what is conceived to be an evil!" No honest man ever penned such a Jesuitical sentence as that. If he believes the lodge which is swearing his neighbors to conceal each other's crimes to be no evil, why does he not, like an honest man, say so and defend the lodge?

4th. Still again, when the church excludes the things which constitute Freemasonry as they exist outside of the lodge, viz., blasphemy, sworn murder, and false worship, as among pirates and pagans, is that trying to legislate evil out of existence? or only declaring such things to be worthy of discipline, and contrary to reason and the Word of God?

Look at the conduct of these men. I went to the Harrisburg office of the United Brethren Tribune soon after it started and asked "What the paper was started for?" The father of the publisher answered: "We want a paper east of the Alleghenies to represent our religious interests." He denied that secret societies had anything to do in starting it. Yet the Dayton nullification convention voted to remove and issue that Harrisburg paper at Dayton, thus giving the lie to their pretended reason for starting that hypocritical sheet to talk "church," "soul-saving" and the like, while they mean secret societies and the repeal of the rule to let in that dark and dreadful brood! Turn to and see an exactly similar case and the way Christ met it in Mat. 22:18.

The Cynosure: More than One-Fourth Reduction of Price.

There is a little Jewish paper published here in Chicago, just one-half the size of the Cynosure; price per annum, $3.00. Why $3.00? Not that Jews like to pay dear for what they buy, but because they know that with a small subscription list it cannot be printed cheaper.

Having faith in the American cause; faith in the devoted and tried men and women who have stood by the Cynosure through its literal perils by fire, frost and flood; above all, having faith in God and the American people, the publishers of the Cynosure have resolved to strike off more than one-fourth of the price of the paper during the cool months which are the campaign season for subscribers.

Below are some of the arguments by which we hope you will prevail with your neighbors and friends to subscribe.

Our aim is no less than to turn the press, pulpit and people of the United States, and the world through them, from the "vanities" of self-projected worships to serve the living God.

We hope and intend to put three or four times the amount of brain labor on the paper given heretofore, and we have made a fair beginning. Meantime, more than one-fourth has been dropped from its price. The Advance, and other papers of the same number of pages with ours, though somewhat larger pages, still stand at three dollars a year, double our campaign price.

Our correspondence daily increases in power, and we hope soon to be compelled to condense each article to one-half the space it now fills to give all an equal hearing.

We intend to give the most lively attention and the strongest backing of which we are capable to all denominations, denominational papers, and other prints which war on the anti-Christ of self-projected worships. We intend to aid and strengthen all ministers of the Gospel who do the same holy work.

We expect at the approaching State Christian Association meeting at Wheaton, Illinois, something definite and reliable will be done towards missions in the ex-slave States by "Independent churches and by anti-secrecy members of pro-secrecy churches;" and all will wish to read of that national movement.

We do not expect that "the American Party" will either die or go back, but grow and increase steadily, and absorb all sincere Prohibitionists and other parties of principle. Even politicians must then read up this American political movement.

In short, we submit and tender this proposition to the minions and myrmidons of the lodge-worshipers, and to their allies, the religious worldlings and children of indifference: Persecute us and we will grow by persecution; neglect us, and we will increase by your neglect. But since without Christ we can do nothing, let us begin, continue and end this campaign with him, remembering his words, "What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them."—Mar. 11: 24.

Now, dear friends and brethren, push this canvas for subscribers, in God's name and the country's.

The Grand Masonic Imbroglio.

"The impersonality of the Supreme Being was declared as a principle of the Masonic creed by less than a score of brethren, (the Lausanne Confederation) and within less than one week's deliberation. The wound they have inflicted may not prove fatal, but the order can scarcely hope to escape the disfiguring scar. It is certainly a dangerous precipice to which it has been hurried—the leap is death."—A. G. Mackey. Voice of Masonry, p. 743.

"Do you not see that what you have adopted is legally and logically a disavowal of such a God as makes religions and worship possible?"—Albert Pike.

"Do you mean by your Principe Createur a Supreme Will and Intelligence, beneficent, provident — a God whom we can trust, and to whom one may, without being a fool for doing so, pray?"—Ibid.

"If we were to deny the personality of the Deity or admit that it could be doubted, every page of our rituals, the labor of many years, would have to be torn out."—Ibid.

Such are the views of the two leading Masonic minds in this country of the erasure of the name of God, by French Masons, and substituting a Force Superieure or Principe Createur in its place.

Yet these same, and all other intelligent Freemasons, know that the Commune of Paris was, in large part composed of Masons; and that they were generally atheists. So were the atheists of the Revolution of 1790 largely Freemasons, who placed over the great gate of the Pere La Chaise cemetery, the propositions: "There is no God. Death is an eternal sleep." Prof. Robison assures us that the Jacobin lodges which inaugurated the reign of terror, were Masonic lodges. Indeed, Freemasonry is everywhere, now, essential and practical atheism. It professes to believe in the God whom all mankind believe in. But, as putting the truth on a level with a lie, is denying there is any truth, because there is no truth which is on a level with falsehood; so putting God on a level with false deities is denying there is any God: for there is no God who is on a level with other deities.

The Congregationalists— Very Important.

Fox River Association is the successor, with name slightly changed, of Fox River Union, the oldest Congregational body in the State of Illinois. This body met at Mount Palatine, Oct. 9th and 10th inst., a good congregation present.

Rev. A. J. Bailey, the successful pastor of the church at Hennepin, by previous appointment, read an article on the relation of the churches to secret societies. The article, which is given in this number, is exceedingly able. It will be read with avidity and delight. Rev. Messrs. Etheridge, of Marseilles, Bascom, of Peru, and Avery of Tonica, followed with interesting remarks in favor of the doctrine maintained by Mr. Bailey; and some others, including one of the sisters, showed that their hearts were full of holy abhorrence of the Baalism which has come back to plague and pervert the churches of Christ. There was, indeed, but one sentiment apparent in the whole congregation.

Rev. J. A. Montgomery, of Morris, was announced for an article understood to be intended as an injurious reflection on the Wheaton College church. A minister present at the Mt. Palatine meeting, informs us that Montgomery passed the duty over to Rev. J. C. Webster of Lisbon, but, that neither gentleman was present, so the paper was not read.

This Mt. Palatine meeting is the beginning of the end. The end must be the fall or purification of the National Congregational Council which is now taxing the Congregational churches five thousand dollars to pay expenses incurred by Grand Chaplain Quint, Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret and Freemason of 32° who is its secretary and actuary.

We expect to report in the Cynosure of January 9, 1879, the number of subscribers. Will you help make it 10,000?

—The Secretary and Agent met a number of prominent citizens of Worcester last Thursday, and steps were taken to arrange for entertainment and reduced fare on the railroads. Bro. Stoddard believes that free entertainment will be generally provided, especially for those from a distance. The Worcester friends are working harmoniously and confidently, and the meeting is beginning to attract favorable attention. Hartford dailies will be represented, and probably also the Boston press will send reporters. The movement is taking a strong hold of the business men of Worcester, and if they move it is evident the people will follow; and if the churches do not take the lead they will be ingloriously put to shame. It is impossible for the Secretary to respond to the numerous calls for lectures. He spent the Sabbath in Harrison, Me., intending to return this week to New Hampshire or Massachusetts. Let his great work be remembered around every altar of prayer.

—Elder Barlow brings us the first news from Spiceland, Ind., of the State Convention. Rev. Halleck Floyd, of Dublin, was elected president; Rev. R. L. Fisher, of Fairmount, is continued as secretary, and Dr. S. L. Cook, lecturer. Elder Barlow spoke after the Convention at New Lisbon, Williamsburg, Hagerstown and Eaton.

—D. L. Moody, the evangelist, revisited Chicago last week, after an absence of nearly two years. He spoke several times in Farwell Hall, and in the Chicago Avenue church, which will long be best known as "Moody's church." Immense crowds listened with interest not the least abated by lapse of time; nor were the exhortations of the speaker less keenly spiritual than their wont.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman returned last week to Wisconsin, where he will remain until after the State meeting at Waupun, which he looks forward to with hope that it will excel all the conventions yet held in that State. Past Master Ronayne will attend and give such aid as never fails to make a convention successful.

—The distance to Worcester will prevent many friends attending from the West, among them we regret to say we fear may be the honored president of the Convention. We hope, however, that such accommodations may be furnished as to induce many to go who could not otherwise. Friends in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey must take hold of the matter in earnest and see that every auxiliary association is represented, and so, too, should be every testifying church of Christ. Western friends should give the more attention to their State meetings, making the lecture work strong and encouraging every honest effort against the lodge. The Illinois meeting will be especially attractive to every true reformer, and the friends at Wheaton extend a welcome to delegations from all parts of the State and from beyond its borders.

Wisconsin.

To the Friends of the Anti-secrecy Reform in Wisconsin.

Dear Brethren:—Are you aware that our State Association has during the past year had an agent in the field, a competent man, a man of Christian character and integrity, a man who is making no small sacrifice to enlighten and bless the community?

Are you aware, too, that pledges given to him in good faith for a partial support have not been redeemed and consequently our brother is suffering embarrassment pecuniarily? Such is the case. Of the $250 due him only a pittance has been paid.

Now, brethren, this ought not,—must not be. We cannot expect to maintain our cause without some effort. Nor can we expect our agents to make all the sacrifice, while we simply meet and pass resolutions. Let us then inquire what we owe the cause and at once remit the same to M. R. Britten, treasurer, Vienna, Walworth county, Wis.

Be Still in God.

FROM THE GERMAN OF JULIUS STURM.

Be still in God! Who rests on him
  Enduring peace shall know,
And with a spirit fresh and free
  Through life shall cheerily go.
Be still in faith! Forbear to seek
  Where seeking naught avails;
Unfold thy soul to that pure light
  From heaven, which never fails.

Be still in love! Be like the dew
  That, falling from the skies,
On meadows green, in thousand cups,
  At morning twinkling lies!
Be still in conduct, striving not
  For honor, wealth, or might!
Who in contentment breaks his bread
  Finds favor in God's sight.

Be still in sorrow! "As God wills!"
  Let that thy motto be;
Submissive 'neath his strokes receive
  His image stamped on thee!
Be still in God! Who rests on him
  Enduring peace shall know,
And with a spirit glad and free
  Through night and grief shall go.

The Other Train that is Coming.

As a train was passing over a New England railroad it struck a broken rail. The conductor felt the shock. He knew a car was off the track, and sprang for a brake. It was his last brave service. The crash came, and he was picked up, a poor mangled wreck; his skull had been broken. He made out, however, to utter these words—the last utterances of a faithful, loyal soul—"Put out the signals for the other train!" Somewhere down the track he knew another train was coming, thundering, crashing along, dashing faster, faster, faster, and there was his train on the track! Out with the signals, out with the signals! another train is coming! That was his last injunction.

That other train, that other train, I am saying to myself, the generation that is follow us; the boys and girls that are pressing hard after us, coming along faster, faster, faster, just ahead of whom we are, only perhaps to be in their way, a hindrance, an obstacle, and, possibly, the occasion of their ruin. What need of care, what need of caution, what need of restless vigilance for their sake, in speech, in act, in look, in gesture! I want nothing to escape me that will be an obstacle in their way. If we are on the track blocking it, if we are in the way, let us take ourselves out of the way as soon as possible.

"What will you take?" was the question asked an observant boy at the table, and referring to the beverage he might desire.

"I will take what father takes." The father had received from the waiter a glass of intoxicating drink.

The father heard the boy's remark, set aside his glass and called for water. He saw the other train coming and cleared the track for it at once.

I think the saddest of all experiences is the consciousness that an opportunity for doing right has been lost. It brings a sad look into a man's face to know that he has set an example, bad in itself, and hopelessly followed by others.

We know of an empty train that came to a stop on a down grade, the station having been reached. In the absence of an official the train broke loose and went crashing down the track to meet the steamboat express. Some one chased the runaway cars, but could not overtake them to put on the brakes. The opportunity for the arrest of the train had gone. There was a collision that night.

Oh, souls on the track! fathers and mothers! your opportunity in behalf of your boys and girls is today—now! Don't let it slip from you.

We are not only to have a clear track for the next train, but in every way we are to make and keep that track suitable for the travel of the coming generation. Here comes the work of the Sabbath-school teacher, to get the uneasy, rambling feet of childhood over into the roadway of the very best life.

I passed recently a large rabble of boys in a vacant city lot. They were noisy and rough. What more important work, I asked myself, than to labor for that age and class, the generation coming? Through the Sabbath-school, the Bible, the church, we are to open a sure, steadfast, blessed way for their feet.

Our opportunity is to-day. Did not Voltaire make the age of five the limit inside which characte substantially is settled? At any rate, that limit cannot be set with safety very far ahead. I don't want to be so absorbed in the cares and pursuits of my generation as to forget the next. I want to think of a plan for and work for the generation coming—that other train on the track. As the Lord helps me, I mean to think more and make more of the interests of the children—the other train that is coming.—E. A. Rand.

The Sack of Earth.

A rich man had cheated a poor widow out of a field which had belonged to her husband and which was the only property she had, in order to make his own garden larger. A day or two after, the poor woman met him in that very field with an empty sack in her hand. With tears in her eyes she said to him: "Sir, I wish you would give me just as much earth out of this field os would fill this sack." The man laughed and said: "I can't refuse you such a foolish wish as that." The widow filled the sack with earth, and then said: "And now, sir, I am going to ask you to help me to lift this on to my shoulder?"

The man had no wish to do this, but the widow begged him so hard that he was obliged to give way. But when he tried to lift the sack, he found it was too heavy for him to move. He told the widow so, and she said: "Oh, sir, if you find only one sack of earth too heavy, how will you be able to bear the weight of this whole field, which holds a thousand times as much earth, upon your conscience at the day of judgment?" The man trembled at these words, and gave her land back to her again.—From the German.

Gibbon the Historian.

This famous author has been generally classed among the enemies of Christianity. A new view of him begins to have reputable endorsement. Dr. Pond, of the Bangor Theological Seminary, in a late number of the Congregationalist makes a good plea in favor of Gibbon being a believer in Christianity. A summary of Dr. Pond's article is thus given in the National Baptist: After some general remarks expressive of the estimate of Gibbon's associations with English Christians of the aristocratic class, Dr. Pond goes on to say, that Gibbon was a Roman Catholic; but, being sent by his father to study with a Calvinistic clergyman of Switzerland, he was recovered to the Protestant faith, and became a communicant in the Presbyterian church. "At this time" (as forty years afterward he wrote), he says "he suspended his religious inquiries, acquiescing, with implicit belief in the tenets and mysteries which are adopted by the general consent of Christians."

The chief reason why Gibbon has been regarded as an infidel, Dr. Pond says, was that in accounting for the rapid spread of Christianity, he did not refer it to the special power of God, but rather to second causes. But, says Dr. Pond, he does refer it to the power of God, and he quotes Gibbon as saying, that "it was owing to the convincing evidence of the doctrine and to the over-ruling Providence of its great Author.' "But to dwell on these points," continues Gibbon, "is the work of the theologian, or the ecclesiastical historian, while it devolves on me, as a civil historian, to trace out the instrumental causes leading to the same result," which he then goes on to do. On the fall of paganism and idolatry, Mr. Gibbon says, "Other deities might have occupied the deserted temples, if at the decisive moment the wisdom of Providence had not interposed a genuine revelation, fitted to inspire the most rational esteem and conviction, while it was adorned with all that could attract the curiosity, wonder, and admiration of mankind."

Gibbon also was a firm believer in miracles, saying that the doctrine of Christ and his apostles "was confirmed by innumerable prodigies; the lame walked, the blind saw, the sick were healed, the dead raised, demons were expelled, and the laws of nature were frequently suspended for the benefit of the church. Under the the reign of Tiberius, the whole earth, or at least a celebrated province of the Roman empire, was involved in a preternatural darkness for three hours." He also speaks of all the Old Testament revelations and sacrifices as pointing to Christ, and of Christianity as adapted to all climes and peoples. He wrote a book defending the books of Moses against the absurd theory of Warburton in his "Divine Legation." He was a constant attendant on the public worship of God, and a diligent reader of the Bible. He had no sympathy with those who rejected or impugned Christianity. He charges Julian the apostate with "puerility, fanaticism, duplicity, hypocrisy and persecution;" speaks of Voltaire as a superficial writer; wrote against the doctrines of the French Revolution; and praises some of the old church fathers in the highest terms.

His great work on the "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire" was, on its appearance, highly extolled by eminent Christian writers, and he himself was greatly surprised when he was accused of undervaluing and rejecting Christianity, so much so that he thought it needless to deny it, or to defend himself from the charge.

All these things, Dr. Pond thinks, and it seems to us justly, are proofs that Gibbon should be regarded as a learned believer in Christianity, and no longer be counted an enemy of revelation, or of the great doctrines and duties set forth in the Bible. "I do not regard him," says Dr. Pond, "as a spiritual, evangelical Christian, but in comparison with some doctors of divinity in our time, he may be called a saint."—United Presbyterian.

When music rises in a city street, every man who hears it with his soul forgets the uncouth noises with which it contends, and becomes in some sense a poet and a prophet. When we listen to the melody of what the best writers say concerning woman, and find that among all the barbarous cries of time this lofty anthem rises victoriously and is remembered age after age because it possesses inherent fitness to command, we are made poets and prophets, and naturally anticipate a better world. When I hear great music I feel sure that the vexed centuries will be put in order at last. In all noble melody there is a suggestion of a melodious final arrangement of human events. Goethe said that level roads lead out of music in every direction. So they do out of the love of love. The immense inspirations of woman's character always elevate us, as music does, to a height from which we anticipate better ages.—Joseph Cook.

The Turn-Stones and the Dead Fish.

A most wonderful and ingenious bird is a turn-stone. It has earned this singular name by the manner in which is procures its food, which is by turning over, with its strong, curved beak, the stones on the seashore, in order to obtain insects that are under them.

A great naturalist, named Thomas Edwards, who is now living, saw two of these birds on the Scotch coast, trying hard to turn over a cod-fish; but as it was six times as large as large as themselves, they found their task rather difficult. Still, they set bravely to work, pushing away first with their bills and then with their breasts; but in spite of their pushing the fish would not turn over, so they ran round to the other side of it and began to scrape away the sand to undermine it, that it might be turned over more easily. Then with fresh energy they set to work; but still the heavy fish would not move. Presently another turnstone came flying towards them from the rocks, and Mr. Edwards could hear a low, pleasant murmur of delight at this timely help. So now there were three of them to tackle the obstinate fish, and many hands, or rather beaks, made light work in removing the sand; then with a long push, and a strong push, and a push all together, at length they raised the fish some inches above the sand. But it was too heavy for them; they could not turn it over—down it sunk again.

Poor birds! they were obliged to rest for a while to recover from their disappointment. But still the dogged little creatures would not be beaten. Thrusting their bills under the fish, they managed to lift it again, and with another united push with their breasts at last the fish rolled over, and the brave little birds were victorious. You may imagine how much they enjoyed the rich feast of insects which they found where the fish had lain. "I was so pleased and even delighted," adds Mr. Edwards, "with the sagacity and perseverance which they had shown that I should have considered myself guilty of a crime had I endeavored to take away the lives of these interesting beings at the very moment when they were exercising the wonderful instincts implanted in them by their Creator."—Missionary Visitor.

Cecil's First Fleece.

Little Cecil loved the Sabbath school, and when his parents removed to Kansas, and he learned there were none near them, he was inconsolable. His father at length took pity upon his little boy, and commenced a Sabbath school at home for him and his sister.

One day the school was commenced with the usual exercises, and Cecil stepped up to his father and recited this verse, "The first fruit also of thy corn, of thy wine, and of thine oil, and the first of the fleece of thy sheep, shalt thou give to him." Then he asked, "What is the first fleece, father?"

His father explained by telling him that the Israelites gave the first crop of a new piece of land, the first fruit of their trees, and the first of their fleeces to God, and after that the greater part of their crops, fruit, wool, etc., was theirs.

"Did they have to do it?" asked Cecil.

"Yes; God told them to, and they would have been very ungrateful and wicked if they had not obeyed. God gave them all these things in the first place, and if they were really grateful for them, they would love to give a part of them back to him. When I buy candy for you, would you be a good and thankful boy if you went off by yourself and ate it alone, and never gave any of it to your parents or sister?"

"No, sir;" said Cecil; "I always think, 'Now father gave me this candy, and I'll give the first and best piece to him.'"

"That is the way we should feel about everything God gives us," said his father.

Cecil sat very still while his sister was reciting her lessons; and then said, "Father, aren't you going to shear my sheep this week?"

"Yes, my son."

"Won't that be my first fleece?"

"Yes."

"Well, I want to give it to God, and wait until next year for my new coat. May I, father?"

"Yes, my son," said his father, and if you always give your first fleece to God, you will never want for necessary clothing.—Child's World.

Puzzle Corner.

ENIGMA BY A. M. PAULL.

Illustrating the proverb "Birds of a feather flock together."

I am composed of 93 letters.

My 5, 19, 63, 22, 21, 3, 39, 11, 64, 4, 27, 10, 24, 37 and 44 is a prolific but a sorry brood.

My 15, 16, 61, 25, 71, 20, 59 and 26 is father of the brood.

My 75, 30, 46, 51, 36, 6, 53, 13, 9, 72 and 7 is the mother of the brood.

My 22, 29, 18, 32, 71, 38, 73, 58, 89 and 5 are found very plentiful in the neighborhood of the mother, from which we infer that the brood is hatched from them.

My 65, 31, 81, 85, 80, 42, 43, 74, 28, 39, 33, 76, 45 is one of the brood.

My 48, 92, 4, 58, 16, 18, 5, 11, 85, 45, 23, 68, 54, 24, 62 and 53 is another of the brood.

My 53, 84, 92, 53, 13, 85, 86, 11, 77, 6, 81, 82 and 1 is another of the brood.

My 86, 84, 42, 43, 23, 36, 6, 89, 2, 24, 22, 80 and 53 is another of the brood.

My 35, 91, 90, 45, 56, 19, 84, 75, 40, 11, 67, 13 and 30 is another of the brood.

My 29, 17, 49, 50, 44, 34, 77, 88, 45, 21, 92, 41, 57, 68, 4, 27 and 53 is what the hungry brood is fed on.

My 58, 8, 24, 26, 69 and 12 is the verdict of God's word in the case of all who take such food. Leviticus 5:4.

My 85, 55, 43, 5, 61, 63, 70, 72, 76, 39, 10 44 is what Jesus calls this brood. Matt. 24:24.

My 88, 71, 63, 73, 4, 60, 80, 15, 79, 91, 19, 56, 21, 64 and 18 is what Jesus says this brood would do if it were possible.

My 1, 27, 57, 24, 37, 60, 46, 59, 32, 77, 13 and 35 is what Jesus tells his own to do when this brood calls to them to come and seek for truth within the "secret chambers." Matt. 24:26.

My 87, 9, 64, 42, 51, 47, 38, 3, 54, 59, 67 and 69 is what Paul calls this brood in 2 Cor. 6:17.

My 64, 65, 36, 37, 74, 14 and 78 is what Paul says to those Christians who are joined to this brood. 2 Cor. 6:17.

My 63, 84, 90, 46, 11, 66 and 93 is what a voice from heaven says to those Christians who are joined to this brood. Rev. 18:4.

My 22, 84, 92, 6, 83, 67 and 80 gives the brood the agonies of death.

My 68, 70, 71, 63, 52, 67, 84, 53, 2, 22 and 80 is sure death to the whole brood.

My whole is a declaration of Jesus, (recorded in Matthew) which, if his followers properly understood, they would never be found in the company of this wicked brood.

Moral: Brood over this, and ere the mischief is fairly brewed, unite to overthrow the brood.

Fruit vs. Malaria.

The residents in the Western States and other regions where intermittents and similar diseases result from malaria, state that a regular supply of ripe, home-grown fruit is almost a sure preventive. Eat the fruit only when fully ripe, and eat only moderate quantities at a time, and little need be feared. The residents of such regions should, therefore, not omit the very earliest opportunity for a supply. Plant large quantities of strawberries for early summer—they will bear abundantly a year from the time they become established. Plant many currant bushes, for these are a most healthy and excellent fruit, very hardy, and, if in abundance, will last through all the hottest parts of the summer. The Doolittle and Orange raspberries are profuse bearers, the former very hardy, the latter generally so, but should be laid down and covered with an inch or two of earth for winter. The Rochelle blackberry, if pinched in when three or four feet high (about mid-summer) will bear abundantly, and prove hardier than if the canes run up without control. The Delaware, Clinton and Concord grapes are early and hardy, and will bear in two or three years from transplanting. Dwarf apples, on the Paradise and Doucin stock, will flourish in any locality, and begin to bear profusely in three or four years, and on the Paradise stock often in two years. Some varieties bear early on common stock; such, for example, as the Dyer, Lowell, Early Strawberry, Sops of Wine, Oldenburgh, Porter, Belmont, Jonathan, etc.; but these will, of course, bear much sooner as dwarfs. The Bartlett Washington, Julienne, Howell and Seckel pears produce early as standards, and the Louise Bonne de Jersey as a dwarf. Houghton's gooseberry grows with great vigor, is very hardy, and in two or three years affords almost solid masses of berries in the branches.

Such fruits as the above should be planted out on every new place, as indispensable to health as well as to comfort and economy; and emigrants to new countries should take a supply with them, as the best medicine chest they can provide.—Fruit Culturist, page 132.

How to make Skeleton Leaves.

The Gardeners' Chronicle gives the following: For the dissection of leaves I find the process of maceration too long and tedious to say nothing of the uncertainty as to the results; I have therefore adopted the use of alkali in saturated solution, the specimens to be introduced while the liquid is heated to boiling point; the time of immersion to be regulated by the character of the various leaves, and the nature of the epidermis to be removed. When the specimen is freed from epidermis and cellular tissue, it must be subjected to the action of chlorine to destroy the coloring matter. The introduction of peroxide hydrogen serves not only to render the lace-like specimen purer in color but preserve it also.

In destroying the coloring matter in ferns this also is invaluable; added to the chloride it gives a solidity to the bleached fronds, and appears to equalize the action of the chlorine. For skeletonizing capsules, the slow process of maceration by steeping in rain water is alone available; a moderate heat may be applied to hasten the process, but alkali is useless.

The only known flower that can be dissected is the hydrangea japonica. The fibrous nature of the petals renders it easy to skeletonize in the perfect truss in which it grows.

Skeletonized leaves and capsules appear to gain in the process a toughness and durability not possessed by them in their natural state.

Mutilating Fruit Trees.

Of all the blunders that the common farmer makes with trees, none is so common or so hurtful as the practice of cutting off lower limbs. All over the country nothing is more common than to see big limbs cut off near the body of the tree. This is a sin against nature. The very limbs necessary to protect the tree from wind and sun are cut away. But the greatest injury is the rotting—too big to heal over, and kept moist by the growing tree, the limb must rot, and the rotting goes to the heart and hurts the whole tree. —Gardener's Monthly.

Experiments with Ammonia and Flowers.

A French journal states that Prof. Gobba has lately made a series of experiments for the purpose of determining the change which ammonia produces in the color of different flowers. For this purpose he merely makes use of a dish in which is poured a small quantity of common aqua ammonia. Over this he places a tunnel, in the tube of which are inserted the flowers to be experimented upon. In this way he has shown that blue, violet and purple flowers change to a beautiful green: deep red and carmine flowers to black; white to yellow, etc. These changes are most striking when the flowers have several different tints, in which the red lines are turned green, the white yellow, etc. An interesting example is that of fuchsias, with white and red flowers, which in consequence of the ammonia vapor become yellow, blue and green. If when these changes have taken place, the flowers are immersed in pure water, they preserve their colors for several hours, after which they gradually resume their original tints. Another observation due to Dr. Gobba is that the flowers of the asters, which are naturally inodorous, acquire a very agreeable perfume under the influence of ammonia. The flowers of the violet asters also become red when they are moistened with a diluted solution of nitric acid. Again, these same flowers, if exposed in an open box to the vapor of hydrochloric acid, become after some hours of a beautiful carmine red, which they preserve, after being dried in the dark, if kept in a dry, dark place. Our readers may like to try some of these experiments.—Bos. Journal of Chemistry.

A butterfly is the very last creature one would suspect of carrying a useful tool, and above all of using it. But it is true that this beautiful insect carries a long pump coiled up under his head, shaped like two half tubes (as though you split a tube lengthwise), which he can open, hook the two sides together, stick deep into a flower, and pump out every drop of honey in it.—Ex.

Religious Intelligence.

United Brethren in Christ.

—The following resolutions were passed at the East Des Moines annual conference held at Fry's chapel, Oct. 10th to 14th, 1878:

Whereas, The Christian Cynosure, the organ of the National Christian Association opposed to secret societies, and published by Ezra A. Cook & Co., 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., is a leading reform journal and worthy of confidence; and

Whereas, Its expressions of sympathy for the United Brethren church in her efforts to maintain her constitution and laws against the cunning efforts of secret enemies are appreciated; therefore Resolved, 1st. That we wish the Christian Association and its organ, the Christian Cynosure, abundant success.

2d. That the Iowa State Christian Association to meet at Chariton, Iowa, the second Tuesday in December to discuss the subject of secretism in its relations to church and state, meets our approval.

3d. That we request each field of labor in this conference to send a delegate to the above named Association.

Whereas, There was held in Dayton, Ohio, in May, 1878 a convention of ministers and laymen which passed a resolution advising a disregard of the constitution and law of the church relating to secret societies; therefore

Resolved, That said convention was revolutionary, and is therefore condemned by this annual conference. Wm. Kelsey, Secretary.

—The Missouri annual conference meeting in Bethel chapel, near Andover, Harrison county, Oct. 3d, passed strong resolutions against the use of tobacco, and unanimously voted to sustain the principles of the church against the lodge; and the Dayton nullification convention was declared by resolution to be revolutionary.

—Bishop Wright presided at the above conference. Last week he was at the East Des Moines conference, Corydon, Iowa, and this week he presides in the Iowa conference at Lisbon.

—Mr. Robert Smith, of Polo, Ill., has lately given $2,000 to the mission work of the church.

—Bishops Dickson, Weaver and Glossbrenner are just closing their fall conferences for this year.

—The semi-annual convention of the Holiness Association meets at Middletown, Adams county, Pa., November 12, 1878, and will continue till Thursday night.

—The Michigan Conference, Bishop Weaver presiding, resolved to "approve the spirit manifested in the Telescope against secret societies, and earnestly pray it may ever be as a flaming sword against all secret orders." Also to disapproval of the Dayton Convention, and of the Otterbein University in conferring the title of D.D. upon Rev. Z. Warner, because of his disloyalty to the constitution and regulations of the church.

—The West Nebraska Conference set apart a special time to the consideration of the importance of organizing a State Christian Association opposed to secret societies, and on behalf of this conference, W. S. Spooner, I. Belknap, C. G. Bowers, O. Knepper, and C. C. Kellogg were appointed as delegates, and the hearty co-operation of the conference was pledged. This shows an earnest determination to maintain the principles of the church and the Gospel seldom if ever equalled in any denomination.

Baptist.

—Elder Barlow has returned from lecturing in Indiana.

—Elder A. D. Freeman has left the Spring Prairie, Wisconsin, church for the time being. During his absence Elder E. L. Harris of Delavan, Wis., supplies the pulpit.

—The Bridgewater Baptist Association held its annual meeting Sept. 11 and 12, in Birchardville, Pa. The following resolution, introduced by Elder A. L. Post of Montrose, was adopted by a strong but not unanimous vote: "Resolved, That we continue to stand by our old Baptist landmarks, such as individual soul liberty; church independency; church, as distinguished from Christian fellowship; New Testament, as distinguished from such prelatical titles as Doctor of Divinity, now becoming so common; the equal right of all men to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness; and also to all our former testimonies in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating drinks, and against all oath-bound secret orders, or so-called brotherhoods." The Association has for many years had a majority against secret orders; yet it is believed that there are members of the lodge in sufficient number to prevent emphatic action. Elders Post, Miller and other faithful brethren are members of the Association, and they are resolved to maintain a pure testimony "until the Master comes to deliver the church and nation."

—The Mondovi church, Buffalo county, Wis., with its pastor, are right on the question of fellowship with the Baalism of the lodge, and lodge members must renounce before taking the covenant of the church.

Congregational.

—The able paper of Pastor Bailey, of Hennepin, before the Fox River Association, appears in this number.

—Rev. Geo. S. Bascom, of Peru, Ill., in the discussion following the reading of the above paper, said he was much influenced in his judgment against the secret orders by this consideration: that all who came out from the lodge said the same thing, their testimony agreed. Pres. Finney, Bernard, Ronayne, Rathbun, Cogswell and others made the same statement regarding the lodge. Whereas, the adhering members say, some one thing, some another. Some say, it's all a lie; others in private confirm the testimony of the seceders; others say they are all perjurers. The testimony of those who stand by the lodge is not consistent. He believed with Finney that the lodge was corrupt.

—Pastor W. J. Phillips, of the College Springs, Iowa, church, called at this office last week.

—Rev. Eli Tapley, of Columbus, Miss., supplies for one-half the time a Congregational church just across the State line in Alabama. The rest of his time is given to evangelistic labors in other congregations. His efforts for the truth have been abundantly blessed, though his reward is not a pecuniary one. If any liberal-hearted Christian could furnish him a horse, or help him to needed books, it would be a gift which God would bless. He asks the prayers of all the people of God that he may be blessed in his noble work for Christ.

Wesleyan.

—Rev. R. L. Fisher, re-elected secretary of the Indiana State Association, takes charge of the Fairmount church this year, removing from Westfield.

—Rev. J. T. Kiggins, President of the Kansas Conference, is stationed this year at Topeka.

—Rev. L. W. Stratton, of the Wesleyan, is expected to dedicate a new church at Varick, N. Y., on Thursday of this week. At this place Bro. Stratton labored in a precious revival about two years ago, following which the church was organized.

—Rev. J. A. Richards reports a gracious season at the meeting of the Iowa Conference at Masonville, Oct. 2d to 6th. Rev. N. Wardner, of New York, was present, and preached with power. Several publicly renounced Freemasonry and confessed Christ. Several ministers also were received from the Methodist Episcopal church, and two were ordained.

Presbyterian.

—Rev. James Donaldson has finally been driven from Wardsville, Ont., by Masonic opposition and intrigue. This place is a few miles from Ridgetown, where Elder Barlow lately preached in the Baptist church. Masonic art has been used against the pastor for some time, and on the 8th inst. a deputation from the ihe Presbytery met with the congregation, which had been called together in a clandestine manner, without the legal notice from the pulpit. Pastor Donaldson got official intimation of the meeting by telegram only the day before at noon. A venerable preacher, who was one of the deputation, said he hated Freemasonry as much as any man could, but he made up his mind just to let it alone. He moved that the pastor be invited to resign at once, and that the committee accept the same, and appoint a brother to declare the pulpit vacant on the first Sabbath. This, being utterly irregular, they finally voted to request the pastor to intimate his desire to resign at the next meeting of Presbytery. Thus another is added to the list of crimes perpetrated by Freemasonry in the name of religion.

Methodist Episcopal.

—Rev. O. E. Burch is stationed this year by the Rock River conference at Nunda, Ill.

—The following is the report on the Sabbath, adopted by the Illinois Annual conference:

Whereas, God has said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy," and we believe that we ought to obey God; therefore,

Resolved, 1. That as ministers we will oppose, by tongue and pen, and by personal influence and example, the desecration of the Sabbath, such as Sunday excursion trains, whether to camp-meetings or not; the sale of anything on Sunday at camp-meetings, the keeping open on Sunday of baker shops, tobacco or cigar shops, clothing stores, drug stores (except for the sale of needed medicines), and business houses of all kinds.

Resolved, 2. That we will discourage the burial on Sunday of any person who could as well be buried on Saturday or Monday, thereby preventing interference with the various regular Sabbath services.

Resolved, 3. That as American citizens we will insist on an American Sabbath, and if our foreign element like the foreign Sabbath best, let them go where they can enjoy it without disturbing the rights and privileges of the citizens of this country.

Resolved, 4. That as newspaper men and newsboys ought to have a Sabbath as well as other people, we will discourage Sunday newspapers, and will teach our people that it is as sinful to buy newspapers on Sunday as it would be to buy groceries or any kind of merchandise.

Resolved, 5. That we mean what we say, and that we will defend the fourth commandment even if it renders us unpopular.

In General.

—The only large town in England or Ireland in which omnibuses and street cars do not run on the Sabbath is Belfast.

—A Parsee lady joined the Methodist church in Bombay, June 16, the first instance where a lady of that faith has publicly professed Christianity.

—There are about 400,000 persons connected with the Christian churches in India, China and Japan, besides 200,000 children receiving a Christian education.

—The Spanish Christian Church is the name taken by the Protestants of Spain. The church is Presbyterian, having a Presbytery at Madrid, where the first assembly was held, and another in Andalusia.

—There are now seven different Protestant evangelical bodies in Rome, viz: The Waldensian, the Methodist, the Episcopal, the Presbyterian, the Plymouth Brethren, the American Baptists and the Apostolic Baptists, numbering 700 Italian adherents in all. The Waldensians have purchased a site for a new church, and the American Baptists are building a place of worship.

—The national camp-meeting of the Seventh Day Adventists was held at Battle Creek, Mich., the headquarters of the denomination, during the early part of the present month. The following interesting facts were reported: Tracts and reading matter to the amount of 13,525,465 pages have been distributed during the past year, in the State, and 79,637 by European missionaries, besides 162,198 newspapers in the same way. Twenty-five thousand missionary visits have been made, and 21,326 letters written. This work has been done not by paid colporteurs, but by amateur missionary workers. Nineteen thousand dollars have been raised the past year for Tract Society purposes. The inventory of the Seventh Day Adventist Publishing Association shows its assets, after debts are paid, to be $99,112.63, making a net income during the year of $19,536.65.

—The church meetings that are taking a stand against the waste and filth of tobacco using may be surprised to learn how some good people view the matter. The Lutheran Standard says: "The Methodists have become so righteous overmuch that the use of tobacco is declared a disqualification for the ministry. Two candidates were rejected at the Conference recently held in this city, because they would not meet the Methodist requirement in this respect. Where it is written in the Bible that taking a smoke or a chew is a sin, any more than eating ice cream or drinking tea, the Methodist doctors have not shown, and we fear that they have not cared to inquire."

—Bishop Vail of Kansas, with a hundred other Protestant clergymen of different denominations, have issued a call for a "prophetic conference" in New York, Oct. 30 to Nov. 1st next week to be held in the church of S. H. Tyng, Jr. The following is the programme for the day sessions: 1. "Christ's Coming; Is it Personal and Visible?" Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., D.D., of Episcopal church of New York city. 2. "Christ's Coming; Is it Pre-Millennial?" Rev. S. H. Kellogg, D.D., professor of theology, Presbyterian seminary, Allegheny, Pa. 3. "The First Resurrection," Rev. A. J. Gordon, D. D., Clarendon street Baptist church, Boston Mass. 4. "The Rapture of the Church," Rev. W. P. Mackay, D.D., Presbyterian church, Hull, England. 5. "Times of the Gentiles." Rev. John T. Duffield, D.D., professor in Princeton college. 6. "The Kingdom and the Church." Prof. H. Lummis, Methodist church. 7. "The Present Age and Development of Anti-Christ." Rev. H. M. Parsons, Presbyterian church, Buffalo, N. Y. 8. "The Gathering of Israel." Bishop W. R. Nicholson, Reformed Episcopal church, Philadelphia. 9. "The Judgment, or Judgments." Rev. J. T. Cooper, D.D., professor of theology United Presbyterian seminary, Allegheny, Pa. 10. History of the Doctrine of the Pre-Millennial Coming of Christ." Rev. N. West, D.D., Presbyterian church, Cincinnati, O. 11. "The Coming of the Lord in its Relation to Christian Doctrine." Paper by Rev. James H. Brooks, D. D., Presbyterian church, St. Louis, Mo. Addresses by Rev. Dr. Craven, Presbyterian church, N. J.; Rev. L. W. Bancroft, D. D., rector Christ's church, Brooklyn, N. Y. 12. "That Blessed Hope as a Motive to Holy Living and Active Labor." Paper by Rev. Rufus W. Clarke, D. D., Dutch Reformed church, Albany, N. Y. Addresses by Rev. E. P. Goodwin, D. D., pastor First Congregational church, Chicago; Rev. L. Osler, Advent church, Providence, R. I., and Dr. Mackay, of England.

Evening sessions will be devoted to conference upon the topics of the day and to evangelistic services. Dr. W. P. Mackay, author of "Grace and Truth," of the Presbyterian church, Hull, England, will address the Conference upon the opening and closing days, and probably at evening sessions.

The World Moves.

The Baptist State Convention of Wisconsin has just closed its session at Racine. In connection with this body was held the Ministerial Union composed of most of the pastors and ministers of the State. Before this body was read an essay by Rev. Mr. Medberry of Milwaukee on "The Attitude of the Church in Reference to Social Reforms."

The essay took the ground that the Christian church is amply sufficient for all moral reforms and that Christians should work in, and through the church; instead of joining in outside organizations, thereby acknowledging the incompetency of Christ's organization. This article was the subject of criticism, and to our surprise and joy, we found the essay almost unanimously sustained by the body. A few belonging to the Temple of Honor, however, writhed and squirmed under it. The Masons bore it like heroes. Two Knight Templars (laymen) acknowledged the truth of the essay.

Our surprise was increased, as we were about to ask for an abstract of it for the Cynosure, to hear the editor of the Standard say he would publish it in his paper.

Accordingly the Union voted to ask the author to furnish a copy of it for publication. Five years ago such an article could not have found tolerance in that body, much less a place in the columns of the Standard.

I hope when published you will furnish an abstract of it for the readers of the Cynosure.

Yours for progress,

E. L. H.

OBITUARY.

Died at Cordova, Ill., Oct. 15th, Joseph R. Sexton, in the 72nd year of his age. Deceased had been a resident of this place since 1838, and for many years a consistent member of the Baptist church of the place. When slavery was in existence he opposed it with all his influence. Since that ceased to exist he was equally zealous in opposing secret societies and all other wrongs. He leaves a widow and a large number of relatives who deeply mourn his loss.

News of the Week.

—During a marriage at the colored Baptist church at Lynchburg last Tuesday, crowded to the utmost capacity, a piece of plastering fell, creating a panic of the most dreadful character. The bodies of ten women were taken out and many were wounded.

—The number of failures in the United States for the third quarter of 1878 were 2,853, as compared with 1,815 for the same quarter last year. The liabilities for the last quarter were $66,000,000, as compared with $42,000,000 for the same period of 1877. For the first nine months of 1878 the failures numbered 8,768, as compared with 6,565 for the same period in 1877. The liabilities for the first nine months of 1878 were $197,000,000, against $141,000,000 for the nine months of 1877.

—All the accounts from South Carolina agree that the Democrats are trying to terrorize the Republicans, and that Wade Hampton is doing nothing to protect the latter in their rights. In the district represented by Congressman Smalls the Democrats have a body of fifty armed men to ride to every point where a Republican meeting is called, and demand a division of time, and when this is refused they boldly break the meeting up.

—Reports from Yankton, Dakota, state that a destructive prairie fire has traversed from fifteen to twenty counties between Jim river and the Missouri river. It reached Yankton and Bonhomme counties, driven by a strong northwest wind. Bonhomme village and Springfield village were saved only by the hardest kind of work. The Bohemian settlements of Tabor and Siskov, some ten miles west of Yankton, have suffered severely. Six parties have been arrested for firing the prairies, but the supposition is that the fire was originally started by a band of Yankton Indians. Destructive fires have also raged over some counties of Iowa and Nebraska. In one case an old farmer was burned to death.

—It is established beyond a doubt that the total number of citizens killed near the Nebraska State line by the Cheyenne Indians who crossed the Union Pacific Railroad Oct. 7 was forty-three—twenty-three on the Sappa, fifteen on the Beaver, one on Prairie creek, and five near Republican river. The Indians carried away a large number of fine California horses from Wilson's ranche, Hitchcock county, Neb. Army official reports are unanimous in the opinion that the outbreak was caused from lack of food. Lieut. Col. Lewis, who was killed by them, in his last report stated: "While Captain Hemphill's company was here Mr. Amos Chapman, interpreter at Camp Supply, informed me that he was at the Cheyenne Agency just before the escape of the Northern Cheyennes. He says that at that time the Indians were suffering for want of food; that he knew this from his own observations, and from what was told him by the Indians, and that they were driven to eat horse flesh taken from horses that had died from disease or natural causes. His opinion is that the escape of the Indians was for the purpose of reaching some place where they could get sufficient food for themselves and their families. In his opinion there will be a larger outbreak before the coming spring, unless something is done to improve their condition at the agency."

—A dispatch from New Haven states that in the case of the Rev. H. H. Hayden, charged with the murder of Mary Stannard, the grand jury, after two days' deliberation, found a true bill for murder in the first degree, so that Freemasonry could not finally prevent the indictment. What will be done at the trial?

—Time has seldom brought to view so strange a combination as that of the famous guerilla commander, Mosby, and a son of the martyr Abaham Lincoln, both of whom appeared last week as witnesses in the Fitz John Porter case. According to the testimony of Mr. Lincoln, his father thought the sentence of the court-martial against Porter just, and that he deserved death. Some of Porter's own words, as given in the latest testimony, appear as the worst evidence against him.

Tell every one that the Cynosure has increased its editorial force and lowered its price for the fall and winter campaign.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

—AND—

HON. JAMES MADISON'S LETTER,

Giving his opinion of Freemasonry (1832.) Both of these letters in one 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a carefnl analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO, 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 15

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argnment proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By Rev. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abdnction.
A 4-page tract

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illnstration and argnment, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The anthor, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV, A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argnment to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract,

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pnre Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have prononnced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of qnotations from Standard Masonic Anthors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thonsands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d, degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World.
This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract,

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

of the National' Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

RAILROAD RATES TO WORCESTER.

Arrangements will be made if possible on all roads passing through Worcester for reduced fare. A reduced rate is also promised from Chicago; but still better terms will be made it is hoped. All friends who can go to Worcester through Chicago will please instantly send word by card to H. L. Kellogg at this office. The terms now promised are $35 for the round trip to New York.

NEBRASKA.

A convention of all the anti-secrecy friends and workers in the State of Nebraska is hereby called to assemble in the city of York Center in York county, Nebraska, on Wednesday, Dec. 4, 1878, at 10 o'clock A. M., to consult together and aid in forming a State anti-secrecy association. Let delegates come from all parts of the State, as provision to entertain them will be made and able speakers will be present.

W. S. SPOONER,
Chairman of Committee.

PAST MASTER RONAYNE.

I intend to leave Chicago (God willing) on the 5th of November on my way to the National Convention at Worcester, Mass., and if arrangements can be made will visit Wooster, Ohio, on the 7th, 8th and 9th of November. As I am now enabled to go to New England I wish to say to the New England friends that it is my desire to stay there as long as possible, and hence I shall so arrange as to give them all the time they require. I intend also to visit Odessa, N. Y., Shade, Ohio; East Herrick, Pa., and West Salem, Ohio, on my return. Eastern friends will address me Worcester, Mass., care of Rev. J. P. Stoddard until Nov. 14th.

EDMOND RONAYNE,
P. M. Keystone Lodge, 689, Chicago.

IOWA.—Official announcement is not yet received, but it is understood that the State Convention will meet this year in Chariton, Lucas county, the second week in December.

ILLINOIS.

The Annual Convention of the State Christian Association will be held in the College chapel at Wheaton the week before Thanksgiving, Nov. 20th, 21st, and 22d. Bishop Wright, the President, is expected and numbers of other able speakers will be present. The business before the convention will be of great importance to our reform work among the churches. Let every friend turn his heart and prayers toward Wheaton.

DES MOINES COUNTY, IOWA.

There will be a mass convention of the people of Des Moines county, Iowa, opposed to secretism in general and Freemasonry especially, at the Bethel Baptist meeting-house, six miles west of Burlington, November 6th and 7th, 1878. The object of the convention is the organization of a County Christian Association, auxiliary to the State and National Associations. Every lover of true freedom is invited to attend, ladies as well as gentlemen. Let this be a grand rally for the cause of Christ and civil and religious liberty. Neighboring county Christian associations are invited to send delegates. Public lecturers who are in the field against the great secret foe of Christianity are expected to be present. We will receive delegates coming from abroad at the Lawrence House, at Burlington, Iowa. Conveyance and enterainment free. The convention will meet at 10 o'clock, Nov. 6, and continue two days.

By order of the Spring Creek Baptist church.

S. A. FLANDERS,
JOHN STORER,
T. L. STEPHENS,
Committee of Arrangements.

ELDER D. P. RATHBUN announces that he has returned to Iowa to remain until after the State Convention, the Lord willing. His address will be Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, care Alvin Hall. Arrangements can also be made for lectures with James McCleery of Marshalltown. Let Iowa be thoroughly canvassed this winter. Send for Bro. Rathbun.

NEW ENGLAND AND THE NATIONAL CONVENTION.

FROM SECRETARY STODDARD.

HARRISON, Me., Oct. 23, 1878.

God is giving free course to his truth here as he is wherever I have gone in New England. A deep undercurrent of opposition to the lodge occasionally finds way to the surface. There is but one feeling among the really pious either in or out of the churches on this question; but many suppress the utterance of their convictions through fear of those who in the lodge reject Jesus and his Gospel, and in the spirit of those who once cried, "Crucify him! crucify him!" persecute and weary the saints of the Most High. I am persuaded that the dawn has arisen and the day of deliverance hasteneth on. Not long will the churches of New England seal their lips in silence on this momentous issue, or those ministers whose bodies are temples of the Holy Spirit spare this oppressor to do his work of soul-destruction.

As the time of our National gathering approaches I feel more deeply the momentous interests involved. If I read the opening book of God's providence aright, and correctly interpret his movings upon the hearts and consciences of the people, the Great Head of the church has decreed that the Worcester meeting shall be the hinge upon which is to turn the destiny of many, many souls. Confessedly the secret orders are keeping men away from Christ, out of heaven, and sending them to hell. Pastors who have never said a word publicly against the lodge have repeatedly told me this, and the evidence is overwhelming. Shall this work of death go on unrebuked? GOD FORBID.

To me it is as clear as the rays of the morning sunlight that God is pouring upon these mountain summits while I write, that he has been by his Spirit, his Word and the testimony of a few faithful, fearless witnesses diffusing light upon the hearts and consciences of his people until further silence must be a crime and an offence in the eyes of him who is the Master and will very soon be the one Judge of us all.

Following this impression the same leader has lifted up a standard at Worcester, and is directing many eyes to this center of spiritual conflict where it is to be decided whether the Christ of God or the Barabbas of the lodge (already notable and convicted of sedition and murder) shall be released among the people. The issue is now fairly joined. God, not man, has forced it upon us; and at this time more especially upon the pastors in Worcester and the New England ministry. How will they meet it? When the invisible Head of the church makes up the roll to be called at the judgment, whose name will appear and whose will be missing that should be there? This is not a struggle for worldly power, but a contest for souls. The enemies of Christ and of his bride, visible and invisible will be there in force. Will the disciples forsake and leave our Lord? Will any go away to warm by the fire kindled outside by the betrayers of Jesus and where they will be sorely tempted to deny the "Lord that bought them." Other duties may detain some who will be missed, but their prayers will be in unison with those who gather. Satan and his tireless emissaries will be ceaseless in efforts to throw obstacles in your way, and to furnish excuses and reasons for absenting yourselves from this meeting; but, my dear brethren, as you value your own influence in saving souls, as you esteem the peace of Zion above your chief joy, as you covet the approval of him who shall one day say to his cross-bearing, believing disciple, "Well done," do not suffer any thing less than imperative necessity to deter you from coming up to the help of the Lord against this enemy which you acknowledge to be a mighty foe.

Never before has there been such a favorable opportunity to strike a blow that shall shatter the flinty ramparts of this dark empire of secretism throughout New England, at least since the fires kindled by the murder of Morgan have subsided; and if this passes unimproved years may come and go sealing the doom of lodge-victims in darkness and chains before another so favorable opportunity shall occur. There are many and true friends of our work in Worcester who will make every effort to add to the efficiency of the meeting and reduce the expenses of delegates and friends to the minimum. Entertainment will be provided as far as practicable, and influential business men in Worcester are negotiating for special rates on railroads. Mechanics Hall has been hired for three evenings and two days. A portion of this expense and for other matters have already been provided for, and we expect that God will move the hearts of the friends in New England to contribute enough to meet the entire expenses. Any sums sent to S. A. Pratt, No. 20 Front street, Worcester, will be faithfully applied.

Following this central meeting should be held this winter a series of State meetings in each of the New England States, and this will be a very favorable time for friends to arrange for speakers and make out programmes for the campaign, and I trust they will not be slow to avail themselves of so favorable an opportunity.

Christ I believe has lifted up his standard for all New England and the whole country at Worcester, and I devoutly pray and humbly trust that unto him shall the gathering of the people be.

Freemasonry Modern Heathenism.

BY J. L. BARLOW.

Since first the scheming prince of hell
Threw o'er our race his withering spell,
Nor he nor his did e'er devise
A plan more deeply, darkly wise,
To compass man's discomfiture
And make his final ruin sure,
Than when he hatched a mystery
And swore him aye to secrecy.

Beneath this plot the ancients fell,
And loved the fearful darkness well;
From God, their Maker, led astray
The nations took their devious way,
And worshipped—as man worship will—
In valley low, or grove-topped hill,
Such gods, as from their passions sprung
Of earth beneath, or stars among.

But moderns all the fathers shame,
Though taking on a different name.
Eleusis, Bacchus, Isis,—all
By this are driven to the wall.
Freemasonry climbs into place,
And with a shameless, brazen face
Ignores the Christ and makes her boast
Of kinship with the HEATHEN host.

Its secrets secrets are no more—
Wide open stands its tylered door;
And all its chamber'd imagery
Is an exploded mystery.
The gauge, the gavel, square and plumb
Lie on the altar mute and dumb,
As reason now returns to men,
And light on darkness shines again.

"The righteous shall be in everlasting remembrance."—Ps. 112: 6.

Through your columns allow me the privilege of recalling to his many friends the memory of Dr. George L. Weed. Though the grass is long green over his grave, we may learn from his life the truth of the Scripture quotation above, and kindle anew our zeal for Christ from his example.

His early manhood was given to arduous missionary work among the Indians. For them he labored and prayed sixteen of his best years. Then prostrated by disease he was obliged to leave the work so dear to him, and his devoted wife, and with a young family, yellow with fever and ague, was landed at a small town on the Ohio river. A kind Providence again gave health, and Dr. Weed was soon appointed treasurer of the department of the American Board, having its center in Cincinnati. This important position he filled for long years with scrupulous integrity. His church relations were with the Sixth Street Presbyterian church, in which he was an elder, and that was then the reform church of that city, taking high ground against sin of every name—slavery, Sabbath breaking, intemperance, secret societies, etc. It stood like a light-house amid the surrounding darkness, and the influence for good of that noble band of strong men and brave women eternity alone will reveal.

In 1855 Dr. Weed was appointed Secretary of the Reform Book and Tract Society, located in Cincinnati, which society was outspoken in all its utterances against slavery, and published the first tract against membership in secret societies. By care and skillful management he redeemed it from a state of financial embarrassment and bankruptcy to one of prosperity and success. In 1863 he retired from the arduous duties of that office, and spent his last days with his children, whom he reared in respectability and competence, and who, we trust, will ever follow their father's God.

We close this short tribute to the fragrant memory of our departed brother in the words of one who well said of him: "He was a reformer without bitterness, a conservative without time-serving, a church officer without bigotry, and a Christian without reproach."

Give the Missionaries a Chance.

BY THOS. HODGE.

A question and its answer lately appeared in the Christian Standard, of Cincinnati, and both deserve a wider reading:

"If Christians in our land can unite with Deists in worship without Christ in the Masonic lodge, as they do, why should not a Christian missionary in India or Africa not take part with the pagans in their worship?"

The following, in effect, is also asked:

"Why should not excursions or Sunday picnics, with music and banners, be used to enlist and attract the people to the church services?"

To which the Standard replies:

"A deistical worship is not Christian, and we do not see how Christians can have anything to do with it. Worship from any other motive than that of faith, gratitude and reverence, or in any other way than through the mediation of Jesus the Christ, is, for a Christian, very much like burning incense with strange fire.

All attempts to popularize religion by conforming to the world's false tastes and carnal excitements, are wrong, and lead to evil. Social enjoyments in the way of steamboat excursions, picnics, &c., may be innocent and desirable under some conditions, and not at all subversive of spirituality, but rather helpful. But when they are made to minister to the profanation of the Lord's day, or to any irreligious end, or are relied on as a means of raising money that ought to be voluntarily given for good purposes, Christians should have nothing to do with them."

If such worship is, "for a Christian, very much like burning incense with strange fire," what is it for others? Certainly, when such incense is offered the fire is equally strange.

Yet this Masonic worship is practiced extensively by members of Christian churches of nearly every name, and has its parallel in the time when the sacred volume tells us of men who worshipped God and served their graven images. We live in a time when the ancient idolatries are having a revival in our country by flattering the wisdom and inventions of men instead of abiding in Christ as the true vine, and they are teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

Letter to the Indiana State Convention.

PRINTED BY VOTE OF THE CONVENTION.

To the Indiana State Christian Association:

RESPECTED FRIENDS AND BRETHREN:—The Anti-masonic movement of fifty years ago, led by Wm. H. Seward, Thurlow Weed, Thaddeus Stevens, and their associates, culminated in the nomination of Wirt and Ellmaker for President and Vice-President of the United States in 1831. The movement fused with the Whigs, who were largely Masons, thus foregoing and giving up their moral issue and religious testimony, and of course, died. A political organization cannot eradicate a religious evil.

If Moses had taken the three thousand calf-worshippers into Hebrew fellowship, instead of ordering them to instant execution for treason against the Hebrew state; if he had recognized them as Israelites and children of God, allowing them still to practice the religion which Aaron had invented for them, which united an orthodox creed to a heathen ritual,—that Mosaic movement would have sunk, as did Anti-masonry fifty years ago. But Moses did no such foolish thing. He executed the leaders of the manufactured worship, who stood to fight his executioners. And "He took the calf which they had made and burnt it in the fire, and ground it to powder, and strewed it upon the water, and made the children of Israel drink of it."

This is what you, the Indiana State Christian Association, are now organized and called to do, viz: To cleanse the churches of this country from this accursed idolatry, or sink with them when they go down, as go down they will and must. For the omission of this duty Morgan Anti-masonry failed. We have now amended their indictment; the case has been heard; the lawyers on the other side are silent; the case is going against them by default, and the time is come when actions must follow words, or words will lose their meaning.

The Advance (Congregationalist), which has allowed its under editor to traduce us, had lately a clear, strong article, condemning the mass of ministers for their ignoring the lodge idolatry. (See article, "Why Not Let It Alone?" in the Cynosure of Oct. 3.) And, while I write, there are sixteen hundred Masons in session in the Grand Lodge in this city. The Chicago press informs us that "The unusually large attendance is owing to very important business coming before the lodge." As this great crowd of able-bodied men came pouring out of McCormick Hall on the sidewalk, they looked thoughtful and anxious, like men in trouble.

At this point of my writing the New York Herald and Sun comes in, informing us that Rev. H. H. Hayden (Methodist Episcopal) accused of the murder of Mary E. Stannard, of Madison, Connecticut, is a Mason; and the justice a Mason. The prosecuting attorney, Harrison, said to the reporter of the Herald: "Justice Wilcox and Hayden are members of the same Masonic lodge." He also said: "Rev. E. K. Avery, who murdered Sarah Cornell in 1831, first came before two magistrates who were Masons, and they acquitted him; but he was subsequently bound over by a magistrate who was not connected with the lodge." And in the light already shed by the National Christian Association, ten thousand eyes now turn toward every case of acquittal for crime, to scrutinize its relations to the secret fraternities among us. * * *

In 1818 the General Assembly of the Presbyterian church voted slavery "an atrocious violation of the most precious rights of human nature." But they expelled the abolitionist George Bourne, and years later chose Jas. H. Thornwell of South Carolina, moderator, and honored James Smiley of Mississippi, both of whom had declared in print that slavery was "not a moral evil."

Bishop Fallows of the Reformed Episcopal church, went from organizing a "Lodge of Intelligence" in Oriental Hall, Chicago, to the platform in Mr. Moody's tabernacle, and pronounced the benediction after his (Moody's) testimony against Masonry.

Bishop McLaren of the Episcopal diocese of Illinois, is a Mason, and doubtless owes his election to the lodge. But few years prior to his election, while a Presbyterian pastor in Cleveland, he was announced to address a secret fraternity in Charlottesville court house, in Virginia.

Elgin (Congregational) Association lately, at one and the same sitting, excluded an Anti-mason without charges, elected a Freemason to membership, and placed a Knight Templar on their standing committee! And when they had done all this, passed an Anti-masonic resolution! Surely he must be blind who cannot see that churches led by hypocrites and idolators must be purified or sink and wither under popular condemnation when people are enlightened on the subject.

I have edited the Cynosure for the ten years of its existence without compensation, as I have been able. Give us now ten thousand subscribers, which can easily be done by each present subscriber obtaining two others, and a marked change in these churches will take place before the lapse of a single year.

The political parties of this country are in process of disintegration. In the war the leading Republicans were old-time Democrats [illegible]ant,

Logan, Trumbull and many others. This of itself weakened party ties and names. Then the Democrats proper have now been out of power for seventeen years; and they are seeking fusion with the Greenbackers and the Republicans are in many localities attempting the same thing; so that both parties and their organs are more or less divided and thus tend to disintegration. The influence of this struggle of parties, on the currency and business, cannot but be disastrous. Both parties have cried "hard money" and "soft money," while they mean success in 1880 in the Federal elections. The Republicans enacted a return to specie payments, and the Democrats sought to repeal it and postpone the resumption; and in the meantime "resumption" has come within one quarter of one per cent. by the inherent energies of the country and economy enforced by hard times. These party currency struggles have scared capital so that it has run away from labor and left the laborers without work. This has produced secret rings of laborers to fight secret rings of capitalists, after the manner of Satan, who promises to both success, if they will worship him by secret rites! The remedy for our States as well as our churches is the destruction of these secret idolatries and shams. They must be driven from the ballot-box, the legislature and the jury-box, as well as from the communion table.

Meantime, while abundant crops and increasing wisdom and economy are bringing us out of our financial troubles our land turns pale with pestilence, and our inter-state traffic is suddenly brought up standing before the homes of the dead.

The two causes which defile a land and bring down God's judgments are unpunished murder and idolatry; especially the latter, which by divorcing this globe from its God, leaves nothing in it to define or punish crime. Now punished crime brands only the criminal; unpunished crime the nation. The murdered dead of the plantations; the terrible arrears of blood during the long agony of slavery; Andersonville and Libby with the famine murders of the war; the maudlin mockery of justice by our government, hanging a woman, shooting a stage actor and sparing Jefferson Davis,—such crimes need no ghosts. They scarcely require the sacred Scriptures to convince reflecting men that wrath in some shape must follow, and the pestilence is that shape!

Our remedy is to cast out the lodge which organized the rebellion, which protected rebel property of brother Masons, who, in some instances, shot our soldiers while they were guarding it; and which during the war and since has dotted the North all over with its false altars, and betrayed our churches into insulting God with its idolatrous rites.

We must henceforth organize and act, both religiously and politically. An anti-secret society is good but it is temporary. We must move on the churches and political parties. When you have defeated a Masonic ticket in town, county or State, something is done. When you have excluded adhering Masons from Christian fellowship you have done more. And when both church and state are purified we have done all.

Wishing you a joyous and harmonious meeting under the overshadowing presence of God, I remain, respected friends and brethren, yours in Christ, J. BLANCHARD.

DR. S. L. COOK, for the Indiana State Christian Association.

"HAIL, MASONRY DIVINE."

A minister of Aledo, Illinois, alluded recently in a local print to the fact that prayer in the name of Jesus is contrary to the spirit and the discipline of Freemasonry, substantiating his statement by quotations from the highest Masonic authorities. His remarks elicited the following reply which our readers will agree with us in regarding as interesting and suggestive reading:

EDITOR BANNER:—After a delay of some weeks we have thought best, the Banner willing, to make a brief reply to the last article of Bro. Graham on the subject of Masonry. Now the object we had in view in asking Bro. Graham to point out his authorities for his former statements, was not that we disputed those statements, but for the purpose of posting certain embryo Masons as to what Masonry really does teach, by referring them to the book and page, which Bro. Graham has kindly done, supposing he presumed that we would make a flat denial of the same. But if such was his expectation we shall have to disappoint him, for we are not so foolish as to deny the chief corner stone of Masonry.

Masonry is an institution designed to be of universal applicability and being a religion, must necessarily embrace no religious principle in which all religions do not concur; and we find that there is but one single article of faith in all the various creeds of earth to which all can subscribe, and that is the belief in a first cause. Hence, the propriety, nay, the absolute necessity of saying to the Christian that when he enters the lodge-room he must leave his Christ outside, for nothing can be admitted within that holy precinct that would offend his Mohammedan, Jewish or infidel brother.

Nothing can be plainer than that the very moment you permit any and every one to introduce their own peculiar religious tenets, that moment the seeds of discord are sown and speedy disintegration and ruin would certainly follow and this imposing and world-wide structure would come tumbling down, like the walls of Jericho at the blast of the rams' horns. We therefore would kindly but firmly admonish the rank and file in Masonry, those who have but entered the outer portals, those who have gone no farther than the third degree or a b c of Masonry to be very careful what they deny or affirm; for let me assure them that they have not yet entered the Holy of Holies; and that in thus attempting to defend Masonry, they not only betray their ignorance of the institution, but are violating a solemn obligation.

As to Bro. Graham's strictures on the Christian ministry, men who claim that Christ commissioned them to preach his gospel, who profess to know nothing among men but Christ and him crucified, how they can swear allegiance to an institution that utterly ignores the Master whose vows they have assumed, are questions that I leave for the clergy to answer. If as Masonry affirms, and friend Brouse, at the late installation, re-affirms, Masonry is equal, if not superior to any and all other religions, it is not difficult to see how a minister may justify his course in violating his vows by taking upon himself those of an opposite character. And if they believe (as Masonry teaches) that there is eternal salvation through Masonry alone, without the intervention of an atonement by Christ or any body else, who can find fault with them for embracing this "more excellent way?"

And we affirm, without fear of intelligent contradiction, that Masonry does teach most fully that a faithful adherence to its teachings, is all that is necessary to translate a poor earth-born mortal from the lodge below to the Grand Lodge above without the intervention of any vicarious atonement. If any squeamish Mason doubts the statement we refer him to the law and the testimony. Whoever speaks not according to these the truth is not in him. We seek no unprofitable controversy with Bro. G., but would kindly intimate to him that if he has any further accusations to bring against Masonry, that they be such as Masons can deny, and not as in this instance, attack the very keystone to the grand arch. Now with one or two questions to Bro. G. we close.

Is Masonry not a benevolent institution? Compare it with that of Christianity.

Does not Masonry teach the most perfect code of morals the world has had? Compare its moral code with either the Jewish or Christian.

Does not Masonry exclude from her sacred portals, all unworthy applicants, requiring them to be of good moral character, adult males of twenty-one years of age, and sound in body and limb? Compare such a brotherhood with the Christian or any other church, which receiveth sinners of every age and grade, male and female, black and white, the halt, the lame, the deaf, the blind. In fact the broad invitation is, whosoever will let him come!!

How do you like the comparison, Bro. G.?

"Hail, Masonry divine."

—Honestas in Christian Statesman.

Do you know a book that you are willing to put under your head for a pillow when you lie dying? Very well; that is the book you want to study when you are living. There is but one such book in the world. For one, I have made up my mind not to put under my head when I lie dying, anything written by Voltaire, or Strauss, or Parker. We are too scientifically careful when we choose a book for a dying pillow. If you can tell me what you want for a dying pillow, I will tell you what you want for a pillar of fire in life—that is, the Bible, spiritually and scientifically understood by being wrought out into deeds. Sentiment is worth nothing until it becomes principle, and principle is worth nothing until it becomes action.—Joseph Cook.

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE 52ND ANNIVERSARY OF THE MORGAN TRAGEDY.

Commencing on September 11, 1826, and ending in his murder on the 19th, including eight days of fiendish torments by Freemasons.

It is quite probable this may be the last anniversary of this melancholy tragedy I may live to see. Therefore, in lieu of sympathizers to converse with on this gravest of subjects to me, I cannot forego giving recognition of this momentous event.

The Rev. T. K. Beecher may have inspired or prompted me into this writing. It came out in the papers that this eccentric preacher had given Masonry quite a commendation, on the occasion of the erection of a Masonic temple at Elmira. This came to my notice on the 11th of September, fifty-two years after Morgan was abducted at Batavia.

He dug deep into Beecherism to enlighten the "habitable globe" as to what constituted a church proper, and in one of his wild vagaries he made out that a Masonic temple was a church. It would seem, in this curious analysis of a church, as though he had out-Beechered his brother Henry W.

I don't ask any one to believe Freemasonry a murderous institution and an organization of unrepentant murderers, without the strongest proof that it is such. But I do ask every professed ambassador of Christ Jesus to investigate the high charges preferred against the order, making every Christian church throughout the land that fellowships the lodge implicated in heinous charges, legally or morally; and if through ignorance, it savors strongly of willful ignorance. For the facts and truths in question have gone a-begging for ten years past.

They have been knocking at church doors for entrance, but are barred and bolted out. But these doors are occasionally thrown open to allow the preaching of the heathenish gospel of Freemasonry from the pulpit. These things fill my soul with sadness, and my conscience impels me to enter my humble and feeble protest according to my measure. The truth makes bold, and my apology for charging the popular clergy in the city of Rochester and elsewhere, as abject cowards, morally and religiously, to suffer themselves to be implicated in fellowshiping Freemasons in the church, as brother beloved. A clergyman and high priest of Masonry will mount the pulpit when driven to extremities and laud Freemasonry with all the virtues that adorn human nature, without meeting the first charge against it, so damaging to the church as well as the order. There are but few of the clergy that have the "cheek" to so disgrace their high calling; but the lack in numbers is made up in audacity. The clergy outside of the lodge, that have not had their consciences paralyzed or petrified with infernal oaths, when cornered, creep out through the smallest kind of a gimlet hole, by saying they don't know much about Freemasonry. Such evasion as this fills me with a solemn disgust, that it would be a violence to my conscience to conceal.

That Anti-masonic lecturers are treated with silent contempt by the pulpit and the press, enabling the craft to keep their "jewel" of a silent tongue, should be ample proof that Freemasons, and clergymen that "don't know much about Masonry," dare not meet their peers in honest and honorable discussion on the merits of the case. I challenge the most "Invincible and Gallant Sir Knight" of the clan—aye, their most "Illustrious Puissant," or their grandest Pontiffs or their Potentates and "Sovereign Dictator," I challenge this pompous array of "toadies," to meet Past Master Ronayne the next time he comes around. I challenge you one at a time, or all at once, to measure swords with him in behalf of the truth or falsity of the expose and charges against Freemasonry, sublime or divine. If this great and grand phalanx are afraid of him, any one of half a score of lecturers I could name may be substituted.

The jewel of a silent tongue is their only safety; and the most cunningly devised fraud, so successfully practiced on an intelligent people. There is no mystery in this when the cause is properly analyzed. It is to the pecuniary interest of mankind, out of the lodge as well as in it, to wear the Masonic jewel of a silent tongue; or in other words not to give offense to Freemasons, their "Grand Pontiffs," "Potentates" and "Sovereign Dictators."

FREE MISSIONS IN INDIA AND BULGARIA.

OBERLIN, Ohio.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—By request of the Rev. J. P. Stoddard, I send to you the following statement of facts:

In August, 1871, while attending a camp-meeting at Canton in this State, I formed the acquaintance of Rev. Albert Norton, then on his way from Western New York to Evanston, Ill., M. E. Theological Seminary. I invited him to tarry a day or two at Oberlin on his journey, and here learned his intention to go to the foreign field; but said he, "I cannot go out under the Methodist Board; they require pledges of their missionaries that I cannot conscientiously assent to. I must be free to speak for Christ as the Spirit leads without hindrance." When nearly through his course of study he decided on his field of labor, and proposed to the M. E. Board, which they accepted, that if they would pay his passage out to Bombay, India, he would pledge himself to give his life to preaching the Gospel of Christ, and would never ask anything more of them. Bro. N. however thinks that the M. E. brethren held that he was yet under some obligation to labor in their connection, while he was pressed in spirit to go to the heathen where Christ had never been named. This was the cause of subsequent separation from the Methodist connection.

After tarrying at Bombay about seven months Bro. N. started out with but fifty dollars in his pocket, trusting that the Lord would provided more. He labored with great success among the English-speaking people along the line of the railroad running northeast from Bombay, as he had not yet acquired sufficient knowledge of the language to preach to the natives.

In the autumn of 1872 he went to Ellichpoor, province of East Berar, and began to preach to the natives. In September, 1873, Miss Mary Kelly, of Burr Oak, Michigan, a very devoted Christian lady, and a graduate of Oberlin, joined him at Bombay, and became his wife and co-laborer. It would be very interesting to you to know how wonderfully the Lord, in answer to prayer, provided the money to pay her passage, as he has always supplied all their needs, but space will not permit. Suffice it to say that they never have asked money of any man, but when they need money they go to Him whose is all the wealth of earth, and he provides for them. In 1875 Bro. N.'s health failed, and he was advised by the best medical counsel that if he would save his life that he must leave the country for a while. The Lord wonderfully provided the means and he came to America, his wife "holding the fort" during his absence. In the autumn of that year his health was so far restored that he returned to his field of labors, taking with him Miss Jenny Frow, another student of Oberlin, not yet graduated. During the summer of 1874 the Rev. William Sibley, of Medina county, this State, felt called of the Lord to join the mission and enter upon the same glorious work. He and his devoted wife left this country in November last stopping about three months in England to learn the language from a brother who had been some years in India. They reached the mission at Ellichpoor in January last, where they are now still engaged in getting the language and preaching to the English speaking people, while Bro. Norton and wife and sister Frow are all sixty miles away in the jungle amongst Koorkoos, an aboriginal race, with whom Bro. N. has labored much, endeavoring to reduce their language to writing so that they read the Word of God.

But there is another mission of which I must briefly speak. Amongst the little company from Oberlin at the camp-meeting referred to, was Mrs. A. V. Mumford, widow of the late Major Mumford of the U. S. (volunteer) army, a very devoted Christian lady. At that time she was under appointment from the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to go to Bulgaria. After spending five years in that country, she returned home, when the Board thought it not best to send her back, but desired her to go to Micronesia. But she felt her life too far gone to spend five years more in learning a new language. After much prayer and counsel with Christian friends, she decided to return to Bulgaria, trusting only in God for her support. Again the Lord, who doeth wonders, came to our aid with the means, and she is now located at Philippopolis, the ancient capital of Philip, king of Macedon, laboring among the Bulgarian refugees who fled from the Turks, and the Turkish refugees who fled from the Bulgarians. God has wonderfully protected and cared for her during the bloody war that has swept over that country.

One instance of his faithfulness and loving care must suffice. On the eve of that fearful battle between the Turks and Russians last winter that swept through Philippopolis, she gathered all the Protestants into her house. For three long hours that house was midway between the contestants, but God covered their heads in the day of battle, and not a hair of them fell to the ground. At one time her purse was reduced to two dollars and fifty cents, but she told her needs in the ear of him who heareth the cry of the humble, and her barrel of meal was abundantly replenished, and her cruse of oil has never failed.

At the present time Miss Celia R. Dolittle of Ontario, Indiana, another graduate of Oberlin and a niece of Mrs. Lucia C. Cook of Elkhart, [a name well known to our readers.—ED.] is here preparing to sail the first week in October to join Mrs. Mumford in her work.

In closing permit me to say that all these missionaries are in full and warm sympathy with all the reforms of the day.

Should any inquire how money can be sent them, I would say that the writer is their financial agent in this country and is prepared to forward, free of cost, any amount great or small, that the dear Lord puts into the hearts of the people to send.

Affectionately your brother in Christ, O. M. BROWN.

—Friend E. Gratton of Michigan, writes of lectures on temperance and the lodge by Rev. J. Levington in Clayton, Mich., in September. The lectures were given in Perkins' Hall. Bro. Gratton wishes now to get Ronayne or Rathbun to work the degrees and carry forward the work with greater power.

Reform News.

—Friend Loudenback of Glidden, Iowa, reports that Elder Rathbun was thrown from a buggy at Vail and had his left shoulder fractured. He suffered severely from the accident, but it seems was not long delayed from his lecture work in which his usual success follows him.

—Bro. I. R. B. Arnold called at this office a few days ago while on a short business visit to Chicago. He was to lecture that evening at Franklin Grove, on the Northwestern railroad near Dixon. Mrs. H. E. Hayden writes to the Wesleyan of his visit to Harmon in Lee county, Ill., where his lectures were well received. There are a hundred towns in Illinois that should be reached this winter by lectures of this kind. Send for Bro. I. R. B. Arnold of Sycamore.

—Secretary Stoddard spoke six times to full houses in Harrison, Maine, and vicinity, and leaving Elder Jackson and other friends greatly encouraged he returned to Worcester by way of Pin Hook, Me., where he was to speak.

—Bro. Hinman is busy this week with the Wisconsin State Convention at Waupun. We expect news of a good meeting for next paper.

—Dr. Cook is cheered with the prospect in Indiana. There is promise of more energy in the management of the State work that makes the agent feel that he is not alone in the fight.

—Past Master Ronayne returned from Iowa last week, having worked the degrees an aggregate of thirty-three times in seven weeks. This week he is at Waupun with improved implements for "killing Hiram." On Monday he purchased a "setting maul" from a well known Masonic furnishing company of this city, at an advanced price because of the good use he would put it to. He shook it under the noses of the Masons about the streets of Chicago during the day, to their great discomfiture. It was the kind of "knock-down" argument which they have been trained to submit to with their best grace. Mr. Ronayne desires the Michigan friends, since they have expressed a desire that he should be with them, to postpone their meeting until his return from the East in January.

SIXTH ANNUAL STATE MEETING IN INDIANA.

October 11, 1878.

The friends in Indiana have no doubt been looking for an account of the sixth annual meeting. Some I have no doubt had good excuses for not being there; some had next to none, except a want of zeal for a good cause. It would have made us glad to have seen many more and would have added interest to the meeting; as it was we had a good meeting. Elders J. L. Barlow, Halleck Floyd and J. F. Hutchison, Dr. S. L. Cook and a few others made up the speaking force. Many of the speakers did themselves credit and left an impression on many minds we hope will not soon be effaced. All the meetings were very harmonious; no discord entered to hinder the work and under the re-organzation we hope more work will be done the coming year. Our new central committee seem determined that more must be done financially and otherwise. The following is our State Central Committee for the ensuing year:

Dr. G. W. Champ, New Lisbon, Henry Co.

Benj. Butler, H. Floyd, Dublin, Wayne Co.

Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake, Kosciusko Co.

Walter Edgerton, Spiceland, Henry Co.

Wm. Ritchie, Spring Hill.

Rev. Halleck Floyd was chosen president, and S. L. Cook was re-elected lecturer and corresponding secretary.

The following vice-presidents were elected:

James Craig, Lima, Lagrange Co,
John Bowman, Albion, Noble Co.
John Hogue, LaOtto, DeKalb, Co.
William Haverstock, Zanesville, Wells Co.
Jacob Cochran, Van Buren, Grant Co.
Isaac Crane, Peru, Miami Co.
Benj. Ulsh, Silver Lake, Kosciusko Co.
Frank Heighway, Savastapol, Marshal Co.
Edmond Peel, Jerome, Howard Co.
George Studabaker, Royerton, Delaware Co.
T. T. Puckett, Cerro Gordo, Randolph Co.
Thomas Craynor, Williamsburg, Wayne Co.
Peter Rich, Hamilton.
David Marshall, Rush.
Samuel Kuffle, Roann, Wabash Co.

The following brethren were endorsed by a unanimous vote as lecturers in the State, and each of them requested to give lectures as often as possible and report to State lecturer: E. Teter, Boxley; S. Y. Miller, Contreros; C. R. Paddock, Lotus; Frank Heighway, Savastapol; J. T. Hobson, Leesville; Wm. Hall, Fairmount.

The Association adjourned to meet again under the advice and direction of the State Central Committee. We were especially glad to hear so unanimous an account of the need of united and persistent effort on the part of all and every true reformer, especially in reference to financial interests. If every subscriber of the Cynosure in Indiana would send fifty cents to the State agent it would make a better support than he has ever had. I will suggest a plan and hope all the friends in the State will adopt it viz., Let every subscriber to the Cynosure get one or more new ones. Let there be no failure in this. I will get five and ten times that number if possible. Stand up to it, brethren.

The Cynosure, Christian Ensign and Herald of Gospel Freedom and President Blanchard were well "Resolved." Yours truly,

S. L. Cook.

Ronayne's Iowa Campaign.

ADEL.

Dear Cynosure:—Mr. E. Ronayne of Chicago, delivered in Adel about the 1st of October, three lectures in exposition of Freemasonry, initiating a candidate into the three degrees of Masonry. It was notably evident that he knew well whereof he affirmed. He proved most emphatically that he was master of the ceremonies. Even Masons who witnessed the initiations dare not deny that he was posted in the sublime secrets of the order so far as he went. He had a full house each evening, with increased interest to the close. The portraitures of iniation, given the first and second evenings, were wonderfully impressive of its foolishness. But the initiation into the third degree capped the climax of absurdity. The killing, burial and resurrection of Hiram of course could not fail to impress one with a sense of the grandeur of the play. It would be a passable play for children if they would not strike too hard in killing Hiram. "Ah!" say the wives of Masons, "I do not believe my husband was fool enough to go through the farce of being killed and lugged around in that way. O, that's too silly, I know he has more sense than that." Their liege lords are very willing the public should accept the verdict of the wife, and think the affair all bosh.

I think from what I can gather here and there since the lectures, that many who had thought of uniting with the order, at some time, are disgusted with the whole thing and could not be induced to become members of the order upon any consideration. It has been said that people love to be humbugged. If that saying is true, they can probably get as full a dose of humbuggery in Masonry as in any place now known on earth, or under the earth, or in the waters under the earth. When summed up, Masonry amounts to a stupendous fraud.

ATLANTIC.

Mr. Edmond Ronayne, the exposer of Masonry, paid this place a visit on the 8th, 9th and 10th of this month (October) and left much valuable information in the minds of the people in regard to the mysteries of the Masonic institution. His lectures here were the first instruction the general public have had on the subject.

A good audience met in Whitney's Hall on the evening of the 8th to see the working of the first degree. This was done in a masterly style as all who have attended his meetings know. The members of the fraternity seemed much amused at the outset but their visages gradually lengthened until the close, when they were quite "chop-fallen."

The hall not being available for the second night, Mr. R. lectured in the U. P. church, and notwithstanding there was a temperance lecture and a public dance going on in the place (by way of diversion) a good audience was present to hear one of the most powerful and convincing lectures I have ever listened to. With the Bible in one hand and the lodge book in the other, he showed such a contrast between their teachings as might well cause any one to wonder why Masonry should be tolerated in a Christian land.

Popery and Masonry were also compared to the manifest disadvantage of the latter.

On the following night the third, or Master Mason's degree was worked in the hall, before a large crowd of wondering beholders and auditors. It was a killing scene. Not so much to Hiram Abiff as to his votaries. The Masons did themselves the credit of refraining from any disorderly proceedings, except in the matter of withdrawing rather abruptly in a body before the fatal scene transpired.

While good order prevailed through all the meetings, there yet was "no small stir" over the matter along the street, the Masons doing their best to fulfill their obligations, to "always hail, ever conceal and never reveal."

The expositions and lectures here were a grand beginning of a good work in this place where secrecy and sin prevail to a large extent.

Elder Rathbun's Work.

Glidden, Carroll Co., Iowa, Oct. 21, 1878.

Dear Cynosure:—I will try to give you a few items of Bro. Rathbun's labors with us. We had expected him October 7th but not reaching here till the 14th, there had arisen an influence that prevented our getting a hall in Glidden, but a school house seven miles north was opened and we had a good turnout.

On Tuesday evening he lectured at Maple Grove M. E. church and on Wednesday evening he worked the third degree of Masonry. I think two-thirds of the church are opposed to Masonry, but a few think the lodge is good because their fathers, brothers or preachers belong, but they have seen and heard what they can never forget. The Lord has sent just the man we want for this part of the work whose heart and soul are in the cause. We hope he will be with us again when his family gets settled at Clarence.

Correspondence.

Churchill Temperance Union.

Editor Cynosure:—The cause of temperance is one in which all good men and women are interested, and no marvel that it is so. Intemperance, like the mighty avalanche is sweeping on, leaving destruction and death in its path. How many tear-dimmed eyes are raised to the eternal hills pleading for help! How many sorrowful hearts are raised in earnest pleadings to the eternal throne, crying, Stay, O stay the mighty destruction!

This evil is a very costly one. Immense sums of money are expended in restraining those from crime who are excited thereto by the intoxicating cup. Millions are expended in ferreting out the criminals whose crimes are justly chargable to this cause. Millions, again, are expended in prosecuting and punishing these criminals. Yet all of this expenditure of money is a very small fraction of the evil consequent upon drunkenness. Of the mental and the physical suffering who can form a just estimate?

While the terrible work of destruction is going on how indifferent is the general community!

The yellow fever has raised great excitement, and created a deep interest, and moved the heart in sympathy towards the afflicted portions of our country. And while it counts its victims by the hundred the demon of strong drink counts his by the thousand.

Alas, what a deep, deep, sleep has fallen upon community! The commotion of the rioters disturbs us not. Amidst the crying of famishing children we slumber on. The widow's wail is unheeded. The appeals of broken-hearted wives are disregarded. It seems that nothing short of Divine power will awaken us to the enormity of the evil existing in our midst.

Thankful am I, however, that there are exceptions to this general indifference. There are numerous persons in almost every community, intensely opposed to the evil. But each opposer is so isolated, so far as every other opposer is concerned, that their power is not felt. If these were brought together there would be a power that would make itself felt for the right.

Certainly here, as everywhere else, there is strength in union. In the cause of temperance this has been recognized in the past. Many of the organizations of the past and present have barred many good men and women therefrom by their secrecy feature. I now take pleasure, by your permission, Mr. Editor, in introducing to your notice an organization without this objectionable feature. I refer to the "Churchill Temperance Union." This open organization has lately been introduced into this State (Ohio) from the East. A State meeting was held in Crawford county, near New Washington, on the 10th and 11th of September, in which six local organizations were represented. An unusually interesting lecture was delivered on the evening of the 10th, by Dr. Luce. of Clyde, in this State. This organization, if proper attention is paid to it, is calculated to do a great deal of good. Arrangements are being made to have a temperance camp meeting soon in the State. This young organization, like older ones, has its organ, the Temperance Advocate, which is published in the interest of the society, by Rev. J. G. Lhentaler, Clyde, Ohio. It a is sprightly monthly, in magazine form of sixteen pages. My prayer is that God's blessing will rest upon this and any other effort put forth to suppress this terrible curse. W. W. McCurdy.

Politic Thurlow Weed.

Dear Cynosure:—While thinking of the good men and true standing by the truth and the right, when it is universally abandoned by its professed friends, there comes to my mind in sober, solemn contrast, scores and hundreds of clergymen who are hugging vile oaths to their bosoms, fitting only for savages.

Another class present themselves not fettered with such devilish oaths. Thurlow Weed stands before me as worthy of notice in this line. Thurlow Weed, the great champion and hero of Anti-masonry, and our worthy standard-bearer throughout the Anti-masonic campaign that ended in the overthrow of this secret benevolent society so venerable and grandiloquent.

Thurlow Weed was apparently as true as yourselves, until tested; until demoralized by the loose morality of public sentiment that sustains this clandestine power with greater facilities to "strike the blow and conceal the hand" than any other power throughout the habitable globe. But alas, how fallen! Thurlow is far-sighted, for when he wrote his autobiography, he omitted doing justice to the most eventful period of his life in a moral point of view; compromising a splendid manhood to sail with the popular breeze. The probability with me is he has done more harm than good. His apostacy is sad, and its effects sadder. Yours ever in the truth and the right, Wells Springer.

Exposition Jottings.

"I am an infidel," said a stout gentleman, after some talk, "and am a member of the same lodge (he named the number) as John V. Farwell, the great supporter of Mr Moody. and isn't he a good man? Your most religious men are Masons, but I don't believe in your Christ the way you do, and I don't go to your churches either!"

A young man was listening who had been chatting in a doubtful manner, leaning considerably to secretism as against churchism, when the aforesaid gentleman broke in and carried him, as the young man apparently thought, to victory. If it is true that John V. Farwell meets with such deists as brethren in the Masonic lodge we cannot imagine any one in greater need of applying to himself Mr. Moody's urgent advice to "separate" from them.

That Masonry was older than Christianity seemed to be the unanswerable argument for its right to be regarded as therefore the more correct system. In reply reference was made to improved machinery, to the adaptation of bread for food, and light to the eye. So Christ was the Bread of heaven and the Light of the world, adapted to the wants of the soul, and no substitutes could be equal to Christ for the soul. His life, death, rising again and present rule afforded the strongest possible motives to the exercise of all that was best in man.

An Odd-fellow, Baptist, intelligent and candid at first, called his church pastor, a Mason, to defend his Masonry. He denied that Masonry was a religion. As an answer Webb was read on that point, but strangely enough the pastor still denied the fact, and was aided by the Odd-fellow, who thus showed himself more anxious to defend lodgery than Christianity, and was told so. The conversation had several listeners, and, as usual, some appeared in sympathy with lodgery. One of the latter said he had never seen any religion in the lodge! This statement was probably true; but even if he had seen religion I doubt if he would have known the article.

T. Hodge.

Reason for Opposing.

We are told in the Holy Writ that a tree is known by its fruits, whether it be good or evil, and by this figure we are taught to look, not at the professions of men, not at what theory they adopt, not at what they believe to be right or wrong—but at results; at the fruit of the tree, and from this standpoint we either commend or condemn. We oppose Freemasonry, not because of what they profess, not because of their great swelling words or high-sounding titles, but because we fail to see the desirable fruits.

It is claimed by Masonry that it does not conflict with Christianity. But see the Christian minister entering a Masonic lodge. He has already professed to the world that he has received Christ Jesus whom the Bible declares is the light of the world; he professes to be a follower of Christ, and Christ says, "he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." He claims to have been made "free in Christ," but he goes to the lodge, is there hoodwinked, takes the badge of moral darkness, half nude, reduced to semi-barbarity, he bows his neck to the cable-tow, the emblem of slavery, and then meekly says he has long been in darkness and is seeking to be brought to light. The first step in Masonry conflicts with Christianity. The first prayer heard in the lodge ignores Christ our Mediator, and Christ says, "he that denieth me before men him will my Father deny before the Son and before his holy angels." Every step in Masonry, every degree conferred, conflicts with or degrades the religion of the Bible more and more. Every advance step is a step farther in falsehood, deception and blasphemy.

Imagine the preacher personating Hiram Abiff. He is blindfolded, pretends to be killed, has a mock burial, a funeral dirge is sung and then on bended knee a Christless prayer is repeated, and then a feigned attempt is made to resurrect him to life after having been dead fifteen days, as they falsely say. Finally, after two fruitless attempts by the grip of the first and second degree he is raised by the strong grip of the Master Mason, and the nonsensical word "Mah-hah-bone" speaks life into the putrified carcass. He then shakes off the dust of the winding sheet, pulls off the dirty drawers, throws aside the hoodwink, steps into the pulpit and proclaims to a dying world that "Christ is the resurrection and the life," and then with bold effrontery says there is nothing in Masonry that conflicts with Christianity!

These are a few of the reasons for opposing Masonry, and if there were no other we think these sufficient to enlist every Christian against the soul-destroying institution.

Our Mail.

C. G. Callison, Commerce, Ia., writes: "Our friend, Mr. Ronayne, gave the Masonic lodge at Norwalk a black eye. We think the master of this lodge will have to whisper Ma-ha-bone in its ear a good many times before it comes to life again."

J. Mattinly, Mulberry Grove, Illinois, writes:

"I have distributed tracts. Some of them fall into the hands of the enemy, and are taken care of. I hope they will be read and convert as they go."

M. C. Gerrard, Mt. Vernon, Ia., writes:

"I feel strong in trusting in the Lord to lead his conquering hosts on to victory."

G McElhenny, Darlington, Pa., writes:

"As the battle rages and intensifies all along the lines while the keen, bright darts of truth are being hurled against the strongholds of secretism, another name for falsehood and deception, there should be no faltering on the part of those who enlisted for the whole of the war."

LESSON XLV.—November 10, 1878.—WHOM THE LORD RECEIVES.

SCRIPTURE. Luke xviii:9–17.

Memorize vs. 15, 17.

9. And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others:

Lu. 16: 14, 15; 10: 29; Pr. 30: 12; Gal. 6: 3; 2 Cor. 10: 18; Is. 65: 5.

10. Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, the other a publican.

Acts 3: 1; Lu. 19: 46; Matt. 5: 20; 16: 6; 23: 2-6; 23: 14.

11. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican.

Is. 58: 2; 1: 15; 59: 2; 65: 5; Rev. 3: 17, 18, 27; 10: 3.

12. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess.

Matt. 23 23; Mal. 3: 10; Zec. 7: 6; Deu. 14: 22; Luke 11: 42.

13. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner.

Ps. 40: 12; 51: 17; 106: 6, Ezra 9: 6; Job 40: 4; 42: 6; Cor. 7: 10; Is. 1: 18.

14. I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

Eccl. 9: 7; Rom. 5: 1; Pro. 28: 13; Ps. 138: 6; Hab. 2: 4; 1 Pe. 5: 6; Job 22: 29.

15. And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it they rebuked them.

1 Sam. 1: 24; Eph. 6: 4; Pr. 20: 11; Is. 9: 6; 1 Cor. 13: 11; Is. 65: 20; 2 Ki. 10 16; 1 Tim. 5: 1.

16. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God.

Deu. 31: 12; Jer. 32: 39; Hos. 11: 1; Ps 8; 2; Acts 2: 39.

17. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein.

Ps. 131: 2; 1 Pe. 2: 2; Cor. 14: 20.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall in no wise enter therein."—v. 17.

CORRESPONDING TEXT.—"Better it is to be of an humble spirit with the lowly than to divide the spoil with the proud." Prov. xvi. 19.

PRACTICAL LESSONS.

1. Mere morality and good works will not justify any man before God.
2. The self-satisfied never pray, for a sense of need is essential to true prayer.
3. Directness is an element of successful prayer.
4. The confession of sin is a token of repentance and a condition of forgiveness.
5. Children should be encouraged, and not hindered, in coming to Christ.
6. Heaven's purity is imaged in little children.

LESSON.

[From the Evangelical Repository.]

The prayer which prevails is not that of the self-righteous, but that of the penitent and humble. The publican who stood afar off, hardly presuming to venture into the company of worshippers; who hardly dared to lift up his eyes heavenward; who smote upon his breast in anguish of soul; who had not a word to say about his good deeds or his good heart but could merely ejaculate the words, "God be merciful to me a sinner," was the supplicant who succeeded in his suit, while loquacious and self-confident Pharisee only deepened his guilt by his approach to God in the attitude of a worshipper. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace to the humble." We fear that some of the most precious doctrines of grace are abused in certain quarters in our day, and made to minister even to pride and callousness of conscience. Let us suspect any doctrine that would make us think lightly of sin, and of our own sin in particular, and let us never forget that the faith which is saving is a faith productive of and pervaded by sorrow for sin.

Vocal thanksgiving may be but the expression of our pride. The Pharisee eloquently thanked God; but he makes no confession of sin, and manifestly gives thanks as a mere matter of form, while moreover he asks nothing. He resembles Cain, who presented thank-offerings to God, but nothing that implied his sense of sin and need of a Saviour.

We may be stout believers in the doctrine of human depravity, and yet very slow to admit that there is anything wrong in ourselves. The Pharisee had a very low opinion of men in general; but he thanked God that he differed from the rest of the race.

It is a bad sign and of evil tendency when we compare ourselves with our fellow-men, rather than with the perfect standard, God's law.

We may be outwardly moral, and even observant of the forms of religion, while utterly destitute of true godliness. Thus also we may deceive, not only others, but ourselves, and be more Gospel-proof consequently than the most abandoned.

Men may go a great way together, meet in the same place of worship, sing the same Psalms, bow together in prayer, and yet be as wide as the poles asunder as to their true character in a moral sense.

Genuine sorrow for sin is emphatically personal in its reference. "God be merciful to me the sinner," said the publican. "My sin is ever before me," said David. Ps. li. 3.

Parents have all encouragement to seek a blessing from Christ for their children. The keen reproof which he administered to his disciples when they undertook to debar parents from bringing their children to him is ample evidence on this point.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, OCT. 31, 1878.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—Another year, and our reform is not yet completed.

Modernized heathenism of the lodge is still practiced in our midst. Young men and middle-aged have not yet ceased to put their necks under yokes of secretism, that are intended to be life-long. Our fellow-citizens and even our sons and brothers are exposed to the alluring dangers of lodge-craft, whose subtle stratagems, yet far from extinct, still continue their foul and injurious depredations upon public and private weal. Whatever is politic, or patriotic, or pious is in perpetual jeopardy through the chicanery, the despotism and the ungodliness of the antagonist of our Association.

These facts forbid us peace or even armistice. They bid us "Hold the fort"; and not only so, but also to make a Sherman's "March to the sea."

The current annual campaign is almost ended. At its close we are invited to a grand council of war at Worcester, Massachusetts,— time, 15th, 16th, 17th prox.

The day is near at hand. Let all good soldiers under our banners resolve to go or help to send somebody.

Long journeys are required to congregate a national meeting in this vast land. These journeys cost-The wealthy can easily bear the cost, but others may not be able to go unless assisted. "Many hands make light work" — may many proofs of this be shown in many places by united purses to send delegates.

If the spirit of the pilgrim fathers has not departed from Massachu setts, she herself might roll down from the Worcester meeting an avalanche of Anti-masonry that would bury and smother the lodge in the East.

Let the nation drop in there to see and to help.

And since God is our only stay and hope, our fervent prayers ought to be ascending "the hill of the Lord," invoking the divine help we so much need. Men and women of faith, let us pray!

SAM'L B. ALLEN.

Delegates! DELEGATES! DELEGATES! Every church friendly to to the reform, every local and State association that can arrange to do so should be represented at Worcester. Let this matter be attended to at once by friends in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. If you cannot get a delegate, write and persuade some friend to go who might thoerwise be away.

"GIVE me a place for my lever and I will raise your globe," said Archimedes. I hope the readers of the Cynosure will hear what I say, for I have never knowingly misled their opinions one hair's breadth; and I say unto you that (10,000) ten thousand subscribers will be a fulcrum, and a sufficient fulcrum, resting on which, the Cynosure can and will, under God, move this country and world. Every subscriber cannot quit his business and canvass for the paper; but if your business gives you bread and a trifle over, you can, out of that trifle, hire some devoted, God-fearing young man to canvass your county. It will give him a little money and much valuable experience, and make an abler, better man of him, and furnish your part of the fulcrum. What would you give to have the communion tables, ballot-boxes, and jury-boxes of the United States cleansed from idolatry and strange oaths?

THE ILLINOIS STATE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION, don't forget, meets at Wheaton, November 20th, just in time to receive reports from delegates returning from the National Convention. Bishop Wright has written that he will be present and speak to us. Committees on entertainment are already appointed, and the friends at Wheaton are resolved to entertain all who come to the meeting, be they more or less. The two grand practical topics, "The United Churches of Christ," and "Missions free from Lodgism," will be discussed and inaugurated so far as possible. It will be a good time for parents to visit their sons and daughters in the College. Above all invite the Master of assemblies to be present.

A GOOD brother and member of Fox River Association has convinced us that there was no design to reflect on Wheaton College church by putting in a late programme "An essay on the question, Can a Congregational church be dissolved?" Yet the putting over this duty on one who had with great rancor opposed the church and contended that a Congregational church could not disband, we think warranted the inference which the Cynosure drew; though the one who proposed the essay had evidently no sinister design or reference to the College church.

VOTE FOR MR. L. N. STRATTON of the Wesleyan, Syracuse, New York. He is nominated by the Prohibitionists of his district for Congress, and if elected will make a most popular and able Representative. Not only every reformer, but every true-hearted American ought to vote for Mr. Stratton, whatever his party affiliations may have been.

ELGIN CONGREGATIONAL ASSOCIATION met, Oct. 14th, at Richmond, Ill. Several important churches were unrepresented by pastor or delegate, and one delegate at least was inclined never again to meet with that body. G. S. F. Savage, H. W. Cobb and J. C. Webster, neither of whom have any charge within the bounds of the association, and who voted at Sycamore to exclude an Anti-mason without charges, took a Freemason into membership, and placed a Knight Templar on their standing committee,—these men were present and helped pass a vote of censure on six Congregational ministers and churches who helped to ordain three young men at Wheaton in June. The ground of censure as stated, was that a council (ex-parte) had advised to disfellowship, and the minority church at Wheaton had disfellowshipped the three brethren ordained. Both statements are untrue. The council advised to disfellowship nobody, and the church in question never disfellowshipped the three brethren, or either of them.

THE NATIONAL MEETING.

But one Cynosure after this will be issued before the Worcester National Convention. Are you all going to it who can? and are those who cannot praying for it?

Mr. Ronayne, just in from a most successful campaign, in which he has worked the degrees and lectured thirty-three times, says to us, "write Mr. Stoddard that I will be there." Prof. C. A. Blanchard of Wheaton College, and Dr. A. M. Milligan of Pittsburgh, are to speak there. Prof. S. C. Kimball of Center Strafford, N. H., will speak, and if the delegates as usual give reports from all parts of the country, the meeting will be one of the most thrilling interest. Go to the Worcester meeting and take all your friends. It may be years before we get into New England again.

Will delegates see how many churches will vote and report themselves on the list of

"The United Churches of Christ."

Two from Mississippi are all yet on the list; but we know of others ready to enroll themselves, leaving each church and denomination to work for the Master in its own way.

The subject of missions free from lodgery has been assigned to Rev. Dr. Post of Montrose, Pa. Rev. J. M. Bishop of Chambersburg, Pa., has been written to for words on "The United Churches of Christ," and Rev. L. N. Stratton will doubtless speak on political action.

J. C. K. Milligan of New York city, must surely accompany his Pittsburgh brother, and Henry Harrison must take at least twenty-five United Presbyterians from New York city to Worcester, his own pastor included.

The Free Methodists of New York, too, are a most single-hearted and devoted race and will doubtless be represented by Revs. W. Gould, of Brooklyn, Matthews and Travis of Philadelphia, and others from the New York Conference.

THE "PROPHETIC CONFERENCE" IN NEW YORK CITY.

This conference, (now in session) is called by some one hundred Protestant clergymen to consider Christ's coming: whether it will be "personal and visible," "pre-millennial" or "post-millennial." Dwight L. Moody was invited, but he does not attend conventions. Dr. Cooper of Allegheny Theological Seminary Pennsylvania (United Presbyterian), who aided in forming our National Christian Association at Pittsburgh, 1868; Dr. E. P. Goodwin of Chicago, and other prominent men of their stamp, are among those calling this great convention.

We wish to call the attention of the above-named, especially of Mr. Moody, to the following somewhat curious and shameful facts concerning Bishop Vail (Protestant Episcopal) of Kansas, whose name heads the list of one hundred clergymen calling this great and solemn meeting.

I have the facts from a former classmate of mine, then an Episcopal rector, and Freemason of seven degrees, at whose house Bishop Vail was stopping, and who aided in making him (the bishop) a Master Mason. I especially request Judge Joel Holt, of Beloit, Kansas, to place these facts within reach of the prominent men, lawyers, judges, and clergymen in his judicial circuit, and part of the State.

Soon after Mr. Vail was appointed bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in Kansas he went to Rev. Mr. Allen of Davenport, Iowa (then in the lumber trade, I think) and wished to be made a Freemason. Allen and others petitioned the Grand Lodge of Iowa for a dispensation to give him the three degrees in one night. Allen, who was my classmate in Andover, Massachusetts, and who after a twelve years' pastorate in the Congregational church, went into the Episcopal ministry, was a most worthy and simple-hearted man. He said to me, narrating these facts, that he thought he should never again aid in imposing three life-long obligations on a man in a single evening. It was too much for any man to assume at a single sitting of the lodge. "But," said he, "we began early and gave him the three degrees that night.

"Next morning the bishop, who is a man of very tender conscience, said to me, 'Bro. Allen, I feel bad. My obligation taken last night to keep all a Master Mason's secrets, except murder and treason, binds me to conceal adultery, counterfeiting, or any other crime except the two, if committed by Master Masons.'

"I immediately," said Mr. Allen, "called the bishop's attention to this phrase in the oath 'he being worthy!'—and this satisfied him that he had sworn to no moral wrong."

This Jesuitical dodge was, if possible worse than the stripping, blinding, and being led by a rope about his neck, to which Bishop Vail had submitted. He had sworn to conceal all a Master Mason's crimes but two, "he being worthy." But if guilty of crime he was not worthy, and, if not criminal there was nothing to conceal. Vail had sworn to conceal crimes of which Master Masons should be guilty, and Allen told him he was not bound to conceal those crimes unless the perpetrators were "worthy," that is not guilty of the crimes! And this, which all can see was a weak and wicked quibble, satisfied Bishop Vail and quieted his disturbed conscience.

But if Vail took the oath in that sense, he cheated the lodge, by swearing a void oath; for he bound himself to conceal no crime unless there was crime to conceal. In Allen's sense, therefore, Vail's oath was a sham, and an imposition on the lodge. It would do the rogues of the lodge no good for Vail to swear to conceal their crimes while they had no crimes to conceal, but when they had!

The only other meaning possible to Allen's explanation must be that a man may be a "worthy" Mason while he is a guilty man; which is, doubtless, the actual theory of the lodge. See Mackey's Jurisprudence pp. 502-3: "'Every Mason is obliged by his tenure,' say the old charges, 'to obey the Moral Law.' But this moral law is not to be considered as confined to the Decalogue of Moses, within which narrow limits ecclesiastical writers technically restrain it; but rather as alluding to what is called the law of nature."

Then also Mackey's Jurisprudence p. 510: "Although a Mason may be convicted of either of these acts (viz., treason or rebellion) by the courts of his country he cannot be Masonically punished."

Thus the law of the lodge repeals and sets aside the law of God, and the law of the land, and a man may be Masonically "worthy" who violates both.

Now we wish to lay before this august body of Protestant guides and lights of the churches; this plain question: Do you think that Christ, who is omitted from the creed of the lodge to let in his enemies, will meet with and bless you in your convention, led by Vail, the Tyngs and others, who have sworn, and still adhere to such oaths, in the face of Him who said "Swear not at all?" Do you think that the Holy Ghost whose office is to take the things of Christ and show to believers, will meet with you, led, as you are, by men who belong to the great system of false worships which excludes Christ? Will the Holy Spirit attend a convention led by men whose lodges cut Christ's name out of the Bible when it is used in Masonic rituals? Will not the fervor of your convention be interfused by demons in the role of angels of light? Will not the very light which is in you become darkness? If so, "How great is that darkness." A religion consistent with such swearing as Bishop Vail, the Tyngs and others adhere to, undermines the whole kingdom of God, whose foundation is rightousness.

"Fishers of Men."

This book by Rev. B. T. Roberts, of the Free Methodist connection, is no ordinary production. I have read two hundred pages of it. I began to read it for the purpose of giving a notice of the volume, but continued to read on from a real and profound interest in the book itself.

Its excellences are, first: as a compilation from such writers as Edwards, Finney, Whitefield, Baxter, Judson, Paley, Chalmers, John Wesley and other eminent thinkers and writers on divine things; it is an invaluable book to those young ministers who have not the money to purchase or the time to read all these writers; and second, the ideas and teachings of Mr. Roberts do not suffer from the company they are, in by comparison, but are clear, forcible and just.

Perhaps there should be some slight exception to the above remark where Mr. Roberts is combatting popular errors; as, for instance, in the hymn

"Nothing either great or small Remains for me to do."

He calls this hymn "thoroughly unscriptural" and a "just cause of alarm." This is true, taken in one sense, and not true, in another. It is true that the sinner has nothing to do to atone for his sins past; but every thing to do to make his calling and election sure, else his faith without works is dead. Also, in justifying violent emotions, and the expression of them in religious worship, which he does ably and well, he yet omits to notice that loud outcries and shouting are in Scripture history, and the history of revivals by Edwards and others, exceptional and not habitual, the immediate effect of the power or providence of God. If Christians shout because they did in Edwards' days and because it becomes customary, they are in the opposite extreme from a frozen formalism and worldly propriety, and like bows long strained will lose their elasticity.

But the book is an exceedingly able and instructive volvme, and generally judicious and sound. Take the following on page 163, to Christians:

"Your corruptions may struggle hard for the mastery, and, in fact, often prevail; but you will wrestle with them the more vigorously. * * He is not in earnest to secure his salvation, who upon an interruotion of his enjoyments becomes careless and prayerless, and in time immoral and wicked."

The book is published by G. L. Roberts & Co., Rochester, N. Y., and is worth many times its price.

Real Estate in Chicago Suburbs.

Coming into Chicago from a suburb this morning, an old, weak man was lifted on the car by two young women. I saw tears in the clear, calm eyes of the one who directed about the old man, and learned that he was her step-father. His wife, the young woman's own mother, was buried in Trenton, N. J., last week, and this young woman turned from her mother's grave, left her own husband and four children, and had come to get her step-father on to her home in New Jersey. The following was our dialogue:

"What is the matter of him?"

"The doctor says his heart is broken by the loss of all his property. He weighed 200 pounds six months ago. Now a child can lift him. When I got to him he had eaten nothing for two weeks, and was starving to death. He took a little food to please me, and I gave him a little and often, till after a while he asked for some."

"Who is that girl by his side?"

"It is his only own daughter, and the doctor said she must be removed or she would lose her mind. All father's heart was set on leaving her a fortune."

"What was your father's business?"

"Real estate. He was born in England; came to New Jersey and married my mother when I was but a babe. He is all the father I ever knew. They did well in New Jersey, and came to Chicago just before the fire; and I did not know their trouble till a few weeks ago when I got the telegram to come. He does not know that mother is dead; and he keeps asking where she is."

"Do you think it right to conceal his wife's death from him?"

"I hardly thought it was; but the doctor said if we told him he would sink right down and die."

"Can I do anything to help you?"

"Only to help papa off the cars at the next station, where I have a sister living, and we shall try to recruit him up and get him into a sleeping car where he can lie still till I can get him home to New Jersey; and we think his daughter will get her mind and health if we can get her where she will be calm and quiet."

I have believed in ministering spirits, but in that young woman I saw one. I helped the old man off the cars and he tottered along led by his daughter and step-daughter. I did not ask their names, and so they have passed away. The New Jersey woman was a Baptist, training her four children for Christ, and had been teaching her step-father and sister to look to the Saviour as a "present help in trouble."

"What does he say?" I asked.

"He says, 'I ought to have done it before.'"

He is only 63 years old, but looks 90 at least. He supposed himself worth many thousands, but his property is now in the hands of a lawyer who gives them hope of four or five hundred dollars.

—We give up our first page again to Bro. Stoddard and the National Convention. It is evident that we must go to Worcester with the certainty of a grand victory or a disastrous repulse before us. Friends of New England and the Middle States cast up the account and see whether the churches and the nation can afford to lose the day. Grand opportunies are in your power the next fortnight. Let every man do his duty as he must answer to his God.

--It is cheering to know that a wide and deep interest is being taken in the State Convention at Wheaton. The Wesleyan brethren in Wisconsin send a delegate, and it is hoped that a friend deeply interested in missions free from lodgery will be present from Oberlin. The letter on another page represents what is being done in this way already; and there is no indifferent feeling among the more earnest Christians throughout the land on this subject. Let prayer go up for a mighty visitation of the Spirit of God upon this meeting and the National Convention.

—The great Masonic temple in New York is mortgaged for $800,000 and appears to visitors to be about one-half occupied. O. B. Frothingham, the apostle of infidelity, addresses his followers weekly in one of the halls, and the Theosophs, who are trying to introduce the Parsee philosophy into America, have here their head-quarters where the ashes of the notorious Baron De Palem are preserved until a suitable times comes for casting them into the Atlantic, which disposition is to be made of them to save the expense of sending them to India to be strewn on the Ganges.

—The Odd-fellow National Grand Lodge which met at Baltimore last month had little satisfaction in reviewing the year in the face of such figures as the following:

Decrease in initiations	4,559
Decrease in lodge members	8,959
Decrease in encampment members	2,998
Decrease in receipts	$66,820.61

And yet there are reported 447,185 Odd-fellows in the United States. The truth must work "like leaven" among these. There is power in it to bring them out from the dismal shade of the lodge.

—Last August the Inter-ocean of this city resolved to manage its own internal affairs and as a necessary result gave mortal offense to the secret labor lodges, which harpooned it again and again with savage resolutions. But the love of money is the root of a serious evil in the Inter-ocean office. Some politician wants the votes of these secret orders, and buys them by buying the paper over into their interest and re-establishing the rule of the printers's union in its office.

Home Circle.

Tears.

Is it raining, little flower?
Be glad of rain!
Too much sun would wither thee,
'Twill shine again.
The clouds are very black, 'tis true,
But just behind them shines the blue.

Art thou weary, tender heart?
Be glad of pain;
In sorrow sweetest things will grow,
As flowers in rain.
God watches, and thou wilt have sun
When clouds their perfect work have done.

The Ballad Singer.

"Oh, mother, I'm so thirsty!" and a feverish little face was held up to the poor worn-looking woman who brought a broken glass containing water to the bed as the child called her.

"I wish father would come; he said he'd bring me an orange;" and Bessie sank back. and began again her restless tossing from side to side while every sound on the stairs brought an eager expectant look on her pinched features, as if she was waiting for some one.

The mother sighed. She had long since lost all trust in her husband's promises, for the love of drink had taken hold of him.

Hours went by, but no father came to little expectant Bessie, who moaned with pain, and turned away from the bread which was all her mother had to give. Not a penny was in the house; no firing, no food for the sick child, and poor Mary Brian sat with her infant in her arms trying to hush its cries as she pondered how she might earn a few pence to get food for Bessie; she could not leave the little ones and go to work, even if she had been strong enough. She had not a friend in all the great city to help her, for she was a stranger. and country-bred. Only a month before her husband had brought her to London, with the promise of keeping from the vice which had disgraced him in his own village. That month had been a time of worse suffering than before. Not only had Brian given way to drink, but Mary herself had been ill, and laid aside, and now Bessie grew worse daily from want of proper food.

All this the poor mother thought over during the long day-hours, and she could see but one course before her—she had still a clear, sweet voice; and shameful and degrading as it seemed to her, she resolved as evening fell to go out into the streets, and try thus to earn something, if only a penny, with which to buy Bessie her orange.

"Mother'll not be long, dear," she said, bending down to the sick child, as she fastened her shawl round her with trembling fingers. "Mother is going to get you an orange, and she'll soon be back."

A faint smile passed over the pinched little face, and Bessie lay still listening as her mother went down the dark creaking stairs with the baby in her arms, and out into the sharp night air. The child was content, known the promise would be kept.

Once in the street, poor Mary Brian walked on a few yards, in doubt where to go. It must be somewhere away from her wretched room, in some road where mothers lived with happy, well-fed children, in comfortable homes — mothers whose hearts God might touch with pity for the singer. On she went, till streets and courts, and dirty, fever-stricken alleys were left behind; turning into a quiet road where she saw lights shining from behind the drawn curtains, she began with a trembling voice to sing a little ballad she had sung in her girlhood many a time as she worked by her mother's side in her country home. No one heeded the singer—her song was ended and no voice called her. What was she to do? A picture of Bessie lying on her miserable bed rose before the poor mother—of Bessie crying with pain and weariness.

"O, God, have mercy on me! Send help to me in my great need," was the cry of the burdened heart, and once more Mary sang—an old plaintive song; and now there was no trembling in the tones of her voice—something seemed to tell her she had not asked God's help in vain. Presently a curtain was drawn back from a window, and a fair little face appeared.

Back, now, to the narrow streets and passages—but, oh, how light was her heart. Sixpence in her hand, besides pieces of meat, bread and other things wrapped in a parcel and carried under her shawl. What riches it seemed! Entering a shop, Mrs. Brian bought two oranges, and took them up to the waiting child, who smiled so gladly at the sight.

"It was God's doings, Bessie," said the poor mother. "I'm afraid I've been forgetting him a long time, and yet he is good to me. I asked him to touch some one's heart, and he did it."

"Perhaps he would make father good if you asked, mother," said the dear child, forgetting for a moment her delight.

Far into the night Mary Brian thought of those words as she waited for her husband's step, yet waited in vain. Never yet had she made that prayer to God; but she made it then, and asked that her husband might be brought back to his own self — the steady, honest man he had been when she married him.

A week went by and nothing was seen of Brian. Again and again his wife went out in the evening to sing, for thus only could she find a way of earning bread; and though sometimes she brought back only a few pence, she never came in empty-handed. But her prayer for her husband remained unanswered—God's time had not yet come. Meantime Bessie's little life failed fast; no food, no care could help her now, the doctor said, as he went away one evening from the poorly-furnished attic. All that night Mary Brian sat by the dying child, with tears falling down her thin cheeks. As morning dawned heavy footsteps came up the narrow stairs, straight to the room where Bessie lay half unconscious, but it aroused her.

"Father! Father!" she cried, as the door opened and Brian staggered in. "You didn't bring me my orange, but mother did. She went out and sung, and God made the rich people sorry for her. Oh, father, be good to her, for she has been praying for it, and there'll be no one but you left, except the baby, for I'm dying!" and the dear child sank back exhausted.

That last word went a good way to sober Brian. Dying! his little Bessie dying! He had cared for her once, until the horrid drink had drowned every good and fatherly feeling; now he went with unsteady steps to the bedside. "Bess— look at me," he said. "I'll bring thee an orange. I don't want to be a bad father to thee. I'll mind, that I will!" but the child's eyes had closed forever in this world, and she would need no love or care from parents again.

For days Brian sat in heavy, silent grief, in a darkened room, thinking remorsefully of the past. It was then he saw the sin and the folly of the course he had been following; it was there, by his child, that he promised never again to give way to the vice which had brought misery and suffering to little Bessie. Nor did he promise in vain; for that was the beginning of better days, and Mary Brian could now rejoice that God had heard her prayer, and saved her husband.

It was not long before once more they had their tidy rooms, in which several other children were born to them; and though they were often hard pressed and anxious, they never again sank down into the misery and distress which had taken Mary Brian out as a singer in the London streets to get an orange for little feverish Bessie.

Sometimes the children wonder why mother can always spare a half-penny for a poor street-singer when she hears one. They do not know the story we have told, and mother feels as if perhaps her little help may be part of the answer God is giving to the cry of suffering which goes up from an aching and troubled heart.—Selected.

Bring Jesus more into Home.

The little loving charities of daily life preach loudly for him who went about doing good. Bring Jesus into your home and your circumstances more than you have hitherto done. Things do not go on well in your household, perhaps, nor in your circumstances either. You wonder why it is. Wonder not. It is because you bring the Lord so little into them. How can it be otherwise, with him so little acknowledged. How can it be otherwise, when you are not cast upon him in all that pertains to you? Change your plans. Bring Jesus more into home, and plans, and duties, and circumstances. Live not on as you have done, realizing his presence so little. The name of Jesus is no mere fancy. He is a reality. He is a bosom friend, a tender physician, a loving father, a gracious Saviour, a very present helper. Oh, make him so to you! Live not outside these pleasant relationships. How strangely will all things change then! How you will be lifted up above things that once fretted you and hug heavily upon your mind! How little will appear the things which men are struggling after and panting for around you! You will rise above them into a new element. Try it! Bring Jesus more into everything. Make him your constant friend and companion. Make him a reality. Only then will you begin to know him as you should. Only then will the unutterable preciousness of Jesus begin to unfold itself in your heart.—Selected.

It is Better.

It is better to wear a calico dress without trimming, if it be paid for, than to owe the shopkeeper for the most elegant silk, cut and trimmed in the most bewitching manner.

Better to live in a log cabin all your own than in a brown stone mansion belonging to somebody else.

Better walk forever than run in debt for a horse and carriage.

Better to use the old cane seated chairs and faded two-ply carpets, than tremble at the bills sent home from the upholster's for the most elegant parlor set ever made.

Better to meet your business acquaintances with a free, "don't-owe-you-a-cent" smile, than to dodge around the corner from a dun.

Better pay the organ grinder two cents for music, if you must have it, than owe for a piano.

Better gaze upon bare walls, than upon pictures unpaid for.

Better eat thin soup from earthen dishes and owe the butcher nothing than to dine on lamb and beef, and know it does not belong to you.

Do not think that because there comes to you no great opportuuity of performing a wonderful work, you will let the thousand little ones pass you unimproved. It is no small thing to be the joy of the domestic circle, the one whose soft touch and whose gently, fitly spoken word averts disturbance and disagreement, conciliates the offended, and makes alien natures understand each other. It is no small thing to possess the happy tact which makes people pleased with themselves, and which insensibly urges people to appear at their best. The young woman who is gifted with this grace of touch, swiftness of sympathy, and this beautiful unselfishness, may not have a fair face, nor a trim figure, but she will be endowed with a dignity more winning than either.

The Ten Commandments.

The ten commandments we must learn,
And practice every day,
They point us to our living God;
"The Life, the Truth, the Way."

Each sacred law we all must heed,
No graven image make,
Ne'er bow to idols, nor in vain
God's holy name dare take.

The Lord's Day we must not forget,
The blessed day of rest;
But keep it, as of all good days
The holiest and the best.

Our father and our mother, we Must honor and obey;
And to our hearts no murderous thoughts
Must ever find their way.

We must commit no single act
That shows a mind impure;
And this command, "Thou shalt not steal,"
Must through all time endure.

No false report must e'er be spread
Of either friend or foe;
Nor should we covet what our God
On others may bestow.

These pure commands we cannot keep
Without our Saviour's aid;
But if we seek his grace, in him
They all will be obeyed.

Did he Know?

The dog, in the opinion of many close and really scientific observers, stands first among the whole brute creation in intelligence, or rather in that department of intelligence which comes under the head of association of ideas. We know that a well-born puppy—that is a dog coming from good stock—can be taught many wonderful tricks, most of which, however, can be performed automatically, or without any process of reasoning. In occasional instances we are forced into the belief that there must be a clear intellectual comprehension of the ideas under consideration; at any rate, something more intellectual than instinct as commonly interpreted.

In the following instance, vouched for by a gentleman of unimpeachable integrity, did the dog know what he was doing, or was he simply following out an "imitative instinct?" This dog was of the purest Newfoundland extraction, and exceedingly faithful and affectionate. It so happened that the house where this gentleman lived was occasionally visited by a woman whom the host suspected of dishonesty. One day she entered when he was all ready for a fishing excursion, and was about to leave the house with his pocket-book containing considerable money, lying loose upon the library table. Hastily bethinking himself, he returned to the apartment, and seizing the purse threw it to the dog, saying, "Take care of that, Carlo!" and walked out of the house.

A few days afterward the same woman called, and as it happened the same pocket-book was lying in the same place. As she entered the library, Carlo rose from a rug, walked with dignity to the table, picked up the treasure, and deliberately approached her with it between his teeth. Then he gave a low, ominous growl, and stretched himself before her, never once taking his eyes from her face; nor could she move that he did not follow her step by step.

Now, did the dog perfectly understand the case, and if he did, was it by a process of reasoning?—Zion's Herald.

Street Talk.—"Learn to talk like a gentleman, my boy. Papa is sorry to hear you talk 'street talk.' Do quit it."

"What is 'street talk,' papa?"

"What did you just now say to sister?"

"I told her to be quiet."

"But you said, 'Hush up!' and said it very loud and rudely. And what did you, ten minutes ago, say to Martha?"

"But you did not say it half so nicely as that. You said 'Get out of this,' and I think you called her some name. What was it?"

Harry looked ashamed, and the tears came; but he answered, 'I called her a 'dirty sneak.'"

"Just so. That is what I mean by street talk. All these naughty words, and especially the rough tone and manner you hear on the street. They belong to those boys who have never been taught any better, and to those men who, though knowing better, yet do not care anything about the better way. But my little boy must never use street talk."

Courtesy.—Little girls, do you ever think about the meaning of words? This word now, courtesy, has something about it which girls and women ought to care for very much indeed. You know that hundreds of years ago, in Europe, and in many heathen countries now, women were not much better than slaves. In China, for instance, when company comes to a house, the parents present the boys very proudly, but they send the girls out of sight as fast as possible. They don't want anybody to know that they have a little daughter in their home.

Gradually in the middle ages woman came up from a state of barbarism, and the clergy and poets together helped her to win her proper place. The lady of the castle kept the keys and presided at the feasts, wore beautiful robes of stuffs called samite and camelot, and gave medicine to the sick. She learned surgery, too, and when the soldiers and knights came home from battle wounded and faint, she knew how to set the broken bones and bind up the bruised parts. So everybody treated her politely, and the sort of manners which then came to be popular in place of the old roughness and rudeness took the general name of "courtesy."

The Bible bids us to be "courteous." Do you want to know the highest and loveliest style of courtesy, which you can practice at home, at school, and in the street? It is all wrapped up in one golden phrase, "In honor preferring one another." Suppose you try to live with those words for your motto, say for a whole week to come.

Street Education.—A gentleman visited an unhappy man in jail awaiting his trial. "Sir," said the prisoner, "I had a good home education. My street education ruined me. I used to slip out of the house and go off with the boys in the street. In the street I learned to lounge; in the street I learned to swear; in the street I learned to smoke; in the street I learned to gamble; in the street I learned to pilfer and to do all evil. Oh, sir, it is in the street that the devil lurks to work the ruin of the young."

Home and Farm.

Right Habits of Breathing.

Good air is one of the first essentials in physical and vocal exertion. No one can keep the body and mind vigorous for any great length of time in impure air. And the most impure air is that which is filled with the emanations from the human system.

The lungs should be trained to free, full and vigorous action. They are, so to speak, the very springs of vitality. The more immediate importance of the lungs in the animal economy will be brought to mind when we recollect that a person may live for days without food, but to deprive him of air, even for a few moments, is to deprive him of life itself. If our breathing is imperfect, all the functions of body and mind are impeded. In fact the manner of breathing at any particular time is almost as good a test as the pulse itself of the general state of the system, physical and mental.

One of the commonest faults in the use of the lungs is the habit of breathing as it were, from their surface, not bringing sufficiently into play the costal and abdominal muscles. By watching the domestic animals—a horse or cow for instance—we may learn a lesson in breathing. We perceive that there is very little motion near the fore extremities, but the breath is impelled from the flanks. So should we have the main action at the waist. Any form of dress or belt, therefore, which constrains the base of the lungs and presses upon the stomach and intestines must do serious harm. —Educational News.

Dr. E. W. Sylvester of Lyons, N. Y., in a paper on "Fruit-growing" said he bought his farm of one hundred acres twenty-six years ago and planted out the first year 1,100 fruit trees. During the last ten years the average money received each year exceeds the purchase money paid for the farm and buildings; or, in other words, the fruit has paid the original cost of the farm ten times over in as many years. Croakers said at first he would never live to eat the fruit of the trees he planted, or if he did apples would not be worth over fifty cents a barrel. But he has lived long enough to gather a thousand barrels in a season; to make sales of pears at $15 and $18 per barrel and apples at $4 to $10 per barrel, the average apple rate for the last twenty years having been $2.25 per barrel. With labor and other expenses as at present apples at one dollar per barrel will pay better than most farm products. The export demand for fruit is yearly increasing. Last year 396,000 barrels of apples went abroad and this year it is likely to exceed half a million. There were 14,318,052 lbs. of dried fruit exported, and there was also a million dollars worth of canned fruit. The doctor fully believes that fruit-growing has paid, does pay, and will pay, all the way down to the millennium, and then folks will live on fruit altogether.

The New York Times has visited the "business orchard" of Richard McKinstry, near Hudson, N. Y. It contains 30,000 trees; a four-mile line of 2,600 trees, ten feet apart marks the boundaries. The apple orchard contains 7,000 Greenings, 6,000 Baldwins, 4,000 Kings, nearly 4,000 Wagners, 600 Northern Spys, 800 Red Astrachan, and 700 Derricks Graft, a local variety. There are Pound Sweets that bear seven barrels to a tree and Kings of which sixty apples fill a barrel. Much of this fruit is shipped to Europe. There are 1,700 pear trees, several thousand cherries, and a large peach orchard. The ground is plowed several times in the season, and when the growth of the trees promises to be excessive the land is laid down to clover. But success is not won without a hard fight. One year over 8,000 trees were destroyed by mice; borers often bother; sunscald and fungus must be watched; trees are broken down by overweight, and storms often scatter the half-ripened harvest. It requires persevering patience to be a fruit-grower.

Benzine and Bedbugs.—Benzine, applied freely, by pouring on, or with a sewing-machine oil-can, will surely kill every bug and destroy every egg or nit touched. Twenty-five cents will buy a gallon, which will cleanse a good sized dwelling, and is as easy as pouring on water. Use by daylight. Nothing will be soiled by it, and odor all gone in less than an hour.

Don't Worry about Yourself.

The Journal of Health says: To regain or recover health persons should be relieved from anxiety concerning diseases. The mind has power over the body. For a person to think he has a disease will often produce that disease. This we see effected when the mind is intensely concentrated upon the disease of another. It is found in the hospitals that physicians and surgeons who make a specialty of a certain disease are liable to die of it themselves; and the mental power is so great that sometimes people die of diseases which they only have in imagination. We have seen persons sea-sick in anticipation of a voyage before reaching the vessel. We have known a person to die of a cancer in the stomach when he had no cancer or any other disease. A man, blindfolded and slightly pricked in the arm, has fainted and died from believing that he was bleeding to death. Therefore, persons in health and desiring to continue so, should at all times be cheerful and happy, and those who are sick should have their attention drawn as much as possible from themselves. It is by their faith men are saved, and also by their faith that they die. If a man wilis not to die he can live in spite of disease; and if he has little or no attachment to life he will slip away as easily as a child falls asleep. Men live by their souls and not by their bodies. Their bodies have no life of themselves; they are only resources of life—tenements of their souls. The will has much to do in continuing the physical occupancy or giving it up.

Religious Intelligence.

THE UNITED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Congregational church, Hamilton, Miss., August 25th, 1878.

Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Miss., September, 1878.

What name shall be next?

—The Freeman, Albany, Missouri, commends the United Churches of Christ in the following earnest paragraph. "The Cynosure has begun a list of the churches which wish to unite in their testimony and work against the lodge under the name of 'The United Churches of Christ' The New Ruhuman Congregational church, Hamilton, Mississippi, and the Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Mississippi, have already sent their names for the list. This new arrangement is not by any means, if we understand it, to supercede the existing denominational connections, but merely to act upon the principle, consecrated, that is contained in the preamble of the United States Constitution. "In union there is strength," whether that union be political, social or religious. We have need of all the strength available in this conflict with the powers of darkness. Any move that shall unite in closer bonds of sympathy and mutual cooperation in the vital work of the Gospel should receive a hearty welcome from all. We commend this movement to all our readers, and through them to the churches to which they belong, as a long stride forward in the reform. Let every church, of whatever evangelical name, that stands unflinchingly by the truth against lodgism send its name at once to Bro. H. L. Kellogg, 13 Wabash Ave., Chicago, for the 'United Churches of Christ.'"

—The religious interest among the students in Wheaton College has been increasing since the opening of the fall term, and a number of interesting conversions, several during the past week, have been a hopeful token of God's favor on the institution.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. H. H. Hinman, Wisconsin State lecturer, attended the annual conference held at Baraboo, Oct. 16–20. The conference met in the new Wesleyan church built by the faithful labors of Rev. W. Vandressen, who during three years has gathered a membership of about 100. The conference was well attended, the devotional meetings were crowded, and a high spiritual tone pervaded the meeting. Bro. Hinman presented the reform work and Rev. W. Warner was appointed delegate to the Illinois State meeting at Wheaton. The report of the committee on reforms was adopted as follows:

"The committee to whom was referred the subject of moral reforms, beg leave to say, that in the estimation of this conference the present is no time to relax our efforts for the removal of the great evils with which our fair land is burdened, and more especially should we raise our voice against wrong and wrong doing in view of the time-serving and compromising spirit of the age. We contemplate with painful apprehension the prevalence of skepticism and the spirit of infidelity that is abroad in the land; and we are reluctantly driven to the conclusion that much of this laxity in faith and morals is the outgrowth of pride, formality and conformity to the world, and worldly maxims by so many of the professed Christian churches.

When unbelievers observe the fact, as is the case in too many instances, that Christianity has so little influence in controlling the life and conduct of many who profess to be the disciples of Christ, it often follows that they lose faith in the power of the Gospel and drift into the shadowy realms of doubt, uncertainty and skepticism.

Although there may not be a specific rule for every case that may arise, yet there are general principles in connection with the "Spirit that is in Christ" which will make the Gospel a sufficient guide in all the relations of life. Therefore Resolved 1. That intemperance is opposed to every principle of the Gospel; a violation of the laws of nature. The use of intoxicating liquor the greatest evil now existing in the land, is the source of degradation, pauperism and crime, obliterating everything that is good and noble and blotting out the image of God with which humanity was endowed by the Creator—bringing untold sorrow and unspeakable anguish to thousands of women and children whose bitter pangs are known only to themselves and their God.

2. That the traffic in intoxicating drinks is a crime against society, a prolific source of political corruption, the greatest enemy to civilization and one of the mightiest engines of the devil to prevent and overthrow the kingdom of Christ, and should be opposed not only by voice and pen and social influence, but in the exercise of the elective franchise.

3. That the use of tobacco and other narcotic stimulants is inconsistent with the purity of the Gospel, and their use should be opposed by every legitimate means, and especially by the example and prayers of God's people.

4. That extravagance in dress and devotion to fashion so prevalent at the present, is an unjustifiable waste of God's property, feeding pride, vanity and perverted nature, productive of great evil and sinful in the sight of God.

5. That organized secretism in all its various forms, of which Freemasonry is at once the type and pattern, is contrary to the spirit of the Gospel and the example of our Lord Jesus Christ; is clannish and selfish; its covenants, oaths and penalties are often illegal, immoral, and profane. The religious ceremonies which it authorises and enjoins generally exclude Christ, while Freemasonry professes to save men without faith in his blood, and hence they are all unfruitful works of darkness that we should have no fellowship with but rather reprove them.

6. That we earnestly commend the National Christian Association and the Christian Cynosure.

7. That as Wesleyans we renew our testimony against the spirit and practice of war and urge upon all Christians to labor for the settlement of international disputes by arbitration or other peaceful methods.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton, editor of the American Wesleyan has been nominated for Congress by the Prohibitionists. In the event of his election the denomination will have to provide a new editor for its periodicals.

—Rev. J. M. Snyder of the Wheaton church expects to remove to Nebraska in February next, and will rally the scattered Wesleyan forces now emigrating to that State. He will settle at Loup City.

—Rev. N. Wardner, connectional evangelist, has been holding special meetings for the promotion of holiness with great success in Iowa. Last week he visited Sycamore, Ill., and held a convention beginning Wednesday evening and continuing over Sabbath. This week he is at Wheaton holding a four-day meeting.

—Rev. D. C. Linville of North Carolina has been blessed with great success in extending the Gospel until his appointments are enough for two men. He has lately been preaching for a time from one of the pulpits which the sainted Adam Crooks filled before the war. As many as fifty have been forward for prayers at once and the power of the Spirit is wonderfully manifested. He is urgent that assistance should be given him.

—The Iowa conference stationed Elder Rathbun and wife at Dayton Chapel; E. I. Grinnell at Mt. Algor; A. W. Hall at Elgin and Father Smith at Ringgold. Elder W. S. May continues as conference missionary. It must be understood in respect to Elder Rathbun that his lecture work goes right on as sister R. we understand is an able speaker also, and takes his place in the church when away.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Christian Instructor of Philadelphia and all the Sabbath-school papers of the denomination, including the Little Preacher of Washington, Iowa, are to be removed to Chicago about January 1st next and will be published here thereafter. This will be an acquisition to the moral power of the press here at which all good men may rejoice.

—The Evangelical Repository of Philadelphia prints the following interesting item:

"The congregation of Liberty, in the Presbytery of Cleveland, lately reported to the Presbytery that there was but one Freemason or Odd-fellow in their number, and that after laboring with him and finding him unwilling to give up his connection with the order the session had suspended him from the sealing ordinances. The action of the session was most heartily approved by the Presbytery. The time was when such action would have raised a loud cry of intolerance and bigotry by the religious press of the country. The day, however, is nearly passed, and most Christians who reflect upon the matter have but little opposition to the position of our church on this subject. At heart, they wish that, without tearing their church to pieces, they could occupy the same attitude."

—Rev. Dr. R. A. McAyeal of Oskaloosa, Iowa, has received a call to the U. P. church of Lawrence, Mass.

—At the meeting of Oregon Presbytery at Brownsville on the 3d inst., Rev. R. N. Fee, missionary to the Nez Perces Indians at Warm Spring Mission, was present with Capt. Smith and gave an interesting account of their work. They are doing a noble work, and of course meeting with the usual difficulties in missionary work among Indians. The corrupting influence of bad white men; the difficulty of doing much with their barbarous language; the inclination of the Indians to hunt and trap and fish, rather than to settle down in the quiet pursuits of civilized life. Yet, with these and many other obstacles, they have reason to thank God and take courage.

—Rev. W. G. Moorehead, D.D., has been called to become pastor of the Third church, Xenia, of which Rev. Richard Turnbull, now located in Detroit, has been pastor until recently.

—The next meeting of the Chicago Presbytery will be held on the second Tuesday of February next in Rev. W. T. Meloy's church corner Paulina and Monroe streets.

—A freedman's school in Chase City, Va., in a new building erected through the munificence of Mr. John Thyne, is now full to overflowing. Rev. Matthew Clarke has charge of the religious work in connection with the institution.

—Pres. D. A. Wallace reports in the United Presbyterian an interesting discussion of the topic "The U. P. church—its tendencies, dangers and needs" in the Ohio Synod at Mansfield, Oct. 15th. Dr. Comin in introducing the topic said:

"In our own church there is no tendency towards secretism, or to regard it with increased favor. But there is an effort being made by the friends of secret organizations to crush out the U. P. church. Much is being done to prejudice young men against us and in every way to crush us. There are two methods of self-protection: 1. By filling the minds of young people with the truth; 2. By showing the falsehood of the position of our enemies. The work may be done in either way, but the second method should not be used without the first. The great truths of our holy religion, such as God's electing love, Christ's redemptive work, the necessity of the work of the Holy Spirit, the Word as the only channel of blessing, if fully discussed and carefully taught, will fortify the minds of the young against the errors of secretism." Dr. Wishart said, "We are in danger of being excluded from the great cities by secretism. We should disseminate light."

FREE METHODIST.

—The unused building known as the east school-house in Wheaton has been purchased by J. L. Rawson for the use of the church in that place as a house of worship.

—The late General Conference decided after a long discussion to recognize the decision of the local church in regard to the membership of a delegate who had been sent to an annual conference, but had been refused admission, the conference deciding that he was not a member legally of the church. The final decision places the local society in its proper place as the unit of the church.

FREE BAPTIST.

—It is reported that there are various bodies of Free Baptists in the South and West which have no visible bond of union. The Free Baptists of the North have been hoping that they would see their way to union with their conference. The Southern brethren fully appreciate the benefits of union and seem to be ready now to meet with representatives of all kindred bodies to form a national church of Free Baptists.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The New Jersey Association objects to a great national organization with 32 degree Sublime Prince of the Royal Secret A. D. Quint at its head drawing $5,000 a year from the churches. It passed the following lately:

"Resolved, That the Congregational Association of New Jersey, while accepting for the present, in respect to the publication of the statistics of the churches, the services of the body recently organized as a National Council, meeting at stated intervals,sees no cause to recede from its vote of a year ago, expressing doubt as to the desirableness of such an organization."

—Rev. Henry Avery, Tonica, Ill., is preaching for a few Sabbaths at College Springs, Iowa.

—Rev. Israel Brown, a Wheaton graduate, has been pastor at Olney for two years. The church has just dedicated an edifice costing $8,000, free from debt. It is one of the finest buildings of the denomination in southern Illinois. Rev. G. W. Bainum, of Bunker Hill, assisted in the dedication Oct. 20th.

METHODIST PROTESTANT.

—A pastor of this denomination writes: "The Methodist Protestant church was originally composed of persons exiled from the Methodist Episcopal church by the hand of arbitrary power exercised by the itinerant ministry. Some of them had been expelled because they honestly believed the sovereign power should be vested in the whole church and were sufficiently American in their feelings to express their opinions. Many others had withdrawn upon witnessing such an exhibition of tyrannical measures as were meted out to their Christian brethren against whom no charges of immorality had been brought. These two classes composed the Methodist Protestant church at its organization; men who had been proscribed in church for opinion's sake and not for want of Christian character or religious integrity.

The articles of association were adopted in November, 1828. Under these articles, twelve annual conferences were organized within the space of two years. In 1830 the Constitution and Discipline were adopted, and the Methodist Protestant church took her position among the sister churches of the land. In 1834 she numbered but 26,587, and at the general conference in 1854 her returns showed an aggregate of of 70,018 communicants. In 1858 the church was divided on account of slavery, and in May, 1877, was reunited, making the Methodist Protestant church the only Continental Methodism, numbering 130,405.

FRIENDS.

—A very noticeable departure from the usual customs of the Friends was to be observed in the manner of conducting religious services at their annual meeting at Richmond, Indiana, a short time ago. The meetings were opened with prayer and singing a hymn, and closed with prayer, singing the long-meter doxology, and the apostolic benediction, very similar to that of other churches.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Bishop Wright will dedicate the First United Brethren church in Altoona, Polk county, Iowa, the first Sabbath in November.

—Col. Robert Cowden of Galion, O., is visiting the United Brethren in all quarters of Ohio and States east holding Sabbath-school conventions and arousing an interest in this important branch of the work of the church.

—Bishop Weaver has appointments to dedicate ten U. B. churches between October 27th, last Sabbath, and Jan. 5th. One of these is at Lexington, Ill., and four are in the bounds of the St. Joseph conference.

—Revivals are reported at Swartz's schoolhouse in eastern Pennsylvania and at Edinburg, Va. At the latter place a new church built seven years ago left a burden of debt under which the fires of grace nearly died out. During September this was removed and a precious outpouring of the Spirit followed.

GENERAL.

—Dr. Barnardo, who is engaged in reclaiming the homeless boys and girls of London, estimates that there are 30,000 of this class in that city under sixteen years of age. He has at present about 700.

—Since May, 1,600,000 portions of Holy Scriptures have been distributed at the Paris Exhibition in twenty-two languages. It is to the credit of the Parisian authorities that they give permission for the employment of Bible colporteurs at all entrances outside the Exhibition grounds. It is expected that the distribution will reach 2,000,000 copies by the time the Exhibition is closed.

—The present Queen of Madagascar has recently made formal declaration of her determination to repudiate idols, and put her faith in the Word of God. Under this new influence the missionaries have met with great success, and have aroused the natives as in a great revival. In a single week 3,300 Bibles were called for and paid for by the natives and it is stated that there is scarcely a village where some portions of the Bible are not found.

—Hon. Stewart L. Woodford, Attorney General of New York, and presiding officer of the New York Synod of the Reformed Episcopal church, tendered his resignation on the adoption of a resolution affirming the doctrine of eternal punishment. The Synod requested him to retain his position notwithstanding the tenets of the church.

—Including ministers and probationers, the Synod of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian church has now eighty-six men preaching the Gospel, besides one missionary, Mrs. Giffen, in Egypt, and one missonary-elect, Rev. Mr. Pressly, for Mexico. In every sense this church is doing a good work in steadily witnessing in profession and in practice for the truth, and in laboring to spread the gospel at home and abroad.

—The Presbyterian synod of China at its recent meeting, considered the question, Is it right or wrong for the women of China to compress their feet in order to render them permanently small? A native pastor moved, "Whereas, foot-binding is contrary to the spirit of the Gospel, we exhort the churches within the bounds of Synod to use their influence to do away with this evil practice." Then we are told that Mr. Zia, one of the oldest native pastors, in seconding the motion, remarked that the practice was "sinful, because small feet are much admired by the opposite sex, and it is placing a temptation in their way." After several hours' debate, the resolution was carried. Finally, a native elder, in a telling speech, said that binding the feet was not the only thing of the kind to which exception might be taken. Cutting the hair, shaving the head, piercing the ears, and compressing the waist, might he pointed out, be put in the same category.

News of the Week.

—Four inches of snow and a hard freeze in the vicinity of Chicago last Sabbath.

—A terrible storm raged last week Tuesday night and Wednesday from North Carolina to New England resulting in immense damage to shipping and other property with large loss of life. It was more destructive to life and vessels in the Chesapeake and the Virginia rivers, than any that has been known for years. At least fifty lives are supposed to have been lost, and as many vessels wrecked. A steamer was lost near the mouth of the Potomac, and twenty-one of her crew and six passengers were lost. The captain, one roustabout, and the passengers only were saved. The steamer Express from Baltimore was also lost with nearly all on board. Numerous other disasters of like character are reported. At Philadelphia 384 dwellings and stores were unroofed and otherwise injured, and several completely demolished. In addition to these there were badly injured thirty-one churches, twenty-three schools, thirty-five factories and warehouses, five hotels, two elevators, and fifty other large buildings, such as depots, ferry houses, mills, and railroad offices. The fatal accidents were six, and those seriously injured number thirteen. Eight vessels were sunk and twenty-two damaged in that harbor alone. The estimated loss is $2,000,000. The destruction all along the Atlantic coast was immense.

—The cool weather and frosts of last week nearly killed out the yellow fever in the principal points at the South. The death rate has dropped to very low figures and the Howard's and other benevolent organizations are turning their attention to the relief of a famished people. The total deaths in New Orleans up to Saturday were 3,849 with 12,855 cases.

—The Manhattan Savings Institution was on the morning of Sunday, Oct. 27, 1878, robbed of securities to the amount of $2,757,700, of which $2,505,700 were registered in the name of the institution, and are not negotiable, and $168,000 are made payable to it, and $73,000 are in coupon bonds and $11,000 in cash. The burglars were masked and did their work between 6 and 9 o'clock. After handcuffing the janitor they made him, under threats of instant death, reveal the combination of the safe to them, and deliver up the keys of the bank. They rifled the vault of presumably a large amount of money, as twenty tin boxes known to have contained bills were found on the floor quite empty. Great surprise is manifested that the janitor should have the combination of the safe.

—Tuesday of last week companies B and D of the Third Cavalry, under command of Captain J. B. Johnson and Lieutenant Thompson, while scouting in the sand hills about seventy miles southeast of Camp Robison, Neb., came upon about 150 Cheyennes under chief Dull Knife. The hostiles at first showed fight, but seeing themselves out numbered, gave up and were brought into Major Carlton's camp on Chadron creek, where they were disarmed and their stock taken away.

—Decatur and Edwards counties, in Sappa Valley, Kan., recently raided by the Cheyenne Indians, have been devasted by prairie fires, and nearly everything not destroyed by the Indians, consumed. Several persons are said to have perished in the flames.

FOREIGN.

—Last Friday evening as King Alphonso was driving through the streets of Madrid a man in a blouse fired a pistol at him. The King was not touched, and continued on his way to the palace amid the acclamations of the crowd. The criminal fired from the sidewalk in front of the house No. 93 Calle Mayor, not far from the arched entrance to the Plaza Mayor. He aimed too low, however, and the ball passed through the hand of a soldier standing guard on the opposite side of the street. The King saw the flash, and, with an involuntary movement of his hand checked his horse momentarily. He then rode tranquilly onward toward the palace. Several women who were standing near the criminal pointed him out with loud cries, and he was at once secured. The man was immediately seized by the soldiers and taken to prison. The would-be assassin is named Juan Moncasi, aged twenty-three, by trade a cooper, and a native of Terragona. He states that he is a member of the International Society, and his crime was premeditated.

—The funeral of Cardinal Cullen took place last Sunday at Dublin, and was witnessed by 60,000 people, while 10,000 took part in the ceremonies and procession.

LONDON, Oct. 28.—A special from Daijeeling says: "It is expected that the proclamation of war against the Ameer of Afghanistan will be gazetted shortly, specifying in full the reasons which decided the government to declare war." It is stated that a number of border tribes whom the Ameer summoned to Ali Musjid have again dispersed, in consequence of the scarcity of supplies. A Berlin dispatch says it is expected in Russia, if England occupies the south of Afghanistan, the Russians will occupy the north.

—A Vienna correspondent says if the latest news be true, affairs at Constantinople are more and more assuming the same semi-hostile phase as before the meeting of the Berlin congress. Turkish troops have been moved into the positions vacated by the Russians, and earthworks are being repaired and armed before Constantinople and Galipoli. The Turks are arranging to increase their forces and summoning half-pay officers to active duty. A special committee for the defense of the capital has been formed. A Berlin dispatch says the return of the Russians towards Constantinople was only commenced after the porte had rejected the draft demanded by Russia.

—A dispatch from Alexandria, Egypt, says the inundation from the Damietta branch of the Nile is advancing. It now covers one hundred and twenty square miles. Twenty villages have been submerged and from six hundred to one thousand lives lost.

—About a hundred negroes have been put to death in Santa Cruz, but the rebellious spirit remains, and the island is practically ruined. The damage to property from the insurrection is estimated at three million dollars.

THE CYNOSURE for $1.50 a year is the offer until March 1st, 1879, when we must report 1,0,000 subscribers!

LIST OF Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

TRACT NO. 1.

HISTORY OF MASONRY.

BY PRESIDENT J. BLANCHARD, OF WHEATON COLLEGE.

This is now published in three tracts of four pages each.
TRACT No. 1, PART FIRST—Shows the origin of Speculative Freemasonry, and is entitled "HISTORY OF MASONRY."
TRACT No. 1, PART SECOND—Is entitled "DESPOTIC CHARACTER OF FREEMASONRY."
TRACT No. 1, PART THIRD—Is entitled "FREEMASONRY A CHRIST-EXCLUDING RELIGION."

TRACT NO. 2.

MASONIC MURDER.

By REV. J. R. BAIRD, of Pleasantville, Pa., a seceding Mason who has taken seventeen degrees. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 3.

SECRETS OF MASONRY.

BY ELI TAPLEY.

This is an Illustrated tract, showing the signs, grips and passwords of the first three degrees. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 4.

GRAND! GREAT GRAND.

BY PHILO CARPENTER.

This tract calls the attention of the public to the despotic and ridiculous titles of Freemasonry, a long list of which are given.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 5.

EXTRACTS FROM MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES,

As Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a re-print of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 6.

HON. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' LETTTER,

Giving his and his Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831).

—AND—

HON. JAMES MADISON'S LETTER,

Giving his opinion of Freemasonry (1832.) Both of these letters in one 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 12.

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry. An 8-page tract.

TRACT NO. 13.

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY

AND

HOWARD CROSBY, D.D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 14.

GRAND LODGE MASONRY,

Its Relation to Civil Government and the Christian Religion.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES'T. BLANCHARD of Wheaton College. A 16-page tract.

TRACT NO. 15.

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By Rev. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract,

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract.

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d, degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract.

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;

translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass.

This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract,

Publishers' Department.

David Nelson, Remington, Ind., sends eight subscriptions for a year each and two for three months each.

James Barnett, West Geneva, O., sends five subscriptions for a year each.

W. I. Phillips, College Springs, Iowa, sends two for a year each making seven in all recently sent by him.

Rev. John Miller, Wauseon, O., sends two for a year each.

Many single subscriptions have been received with pleasure. Several send money to pay for sending the Cynosure to others.

A friend residing at Phillipsville, Erie county, Pennsylvania (one of these persons), writes: "I herewith send you four dollars to pay for ten copies of the Cynosure for the balance of the year. They are for free distribution in lieu of paying a Mason minister. * * * I shall get all the subscribers I can to commence the next year."

This friend will doubtless give a good report of work accomplished this winter.

A. Beach, Ohio, writes: "Go on, I will aid what I can."

C. Quick, Weston, Michigan, writes: "I will try to get as many subscribers as I can. THE CYNOSURE OUGHT TO HAVE 10,000 SUBSCRIBERS THIS YEAR."

OCTOBER'S lovely days pass away and with watchfulness, prayer, courage and hope we move forward into the sturdy November.

Terms begin

Dec. 10th, 1878.
Mar. 18th, 1879.
Sept. 2nd, 1879.
Dec. 9th, 1879.

WINTER TERM BEGINS DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

We desire to ask the attention of every reader of the CYNOSURE to the advantages offered by this Institution. An able and experienced Faculty, thoroughly devoted to the work of the Institution, are now harmoniously laboring to make this College thorough in each department, and so economical that its advantages can be secured by all.

FOURTEEN TEACHERS

are engaged in the College, the Preparatory School, the Sub Preparatory Department, the Department of Music and the School of Drawing and Painting. In each of these Departments, students can enter at any time and advance as rapidly as their abilities will permit. Prof. Baker in Vocal Music and on the Organ gives instruction at very reasonable rates while Miss Browne has charge of the Piano Room.

PENMANSHIP

German, Free Hand Drawing and Book-keeping are taught by excellent teachers without any extra charge. Vocal Music costs only one dollar per term. Hereafter, as for some time past, special attention will be paid to the study of Elocution and Rhetoric as connected with practical

ORATORICAL WORK.

The charge for tuition is eleven dollars per term. Young ladies can have Room, Board and Tuition for forty-five dollars per term of thirteen weeks. Persons from neighboring towns who wish to be at home from Friday evening to the following Monday can have a reduction of one fifth on the charge for board.

BOARDING PLACES

in private families can be secured at from three to four dollars per week. Persons who board themselves can get along at an expense of from one to one and a half dollars per week. In short any one who can live at home can live in Wheaton and secure a thorough education.

OUR GRADUATES

are successfully teaching, preaching, practising law and conducting mercantile affairs in many parts of the country. Young men and women who have a fair elemental English Education can graduate from our Preparatory or Normal School in two or three years.

DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

Our next term begins on this date, at which time we hope to greet many old and many new students. If you wish any further information write to the undersigned and it will be cheerfully furnished.

PRES'T. J. BLANCHARD,
WHEATON, ILL.

How to Send Money.

Notices.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION

of the National Christian Association will be held in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, Massachusetts, on the 13th, 14th and 15th of November next.

No further reduction of railroad fare to Worcester from Chicago has been secured than was reported last week.

ILLINOIS.

The Annual Convention of the State Christian Association will be held in the College chapel at Wheaton, Nov. 21st, 22nd and 23d, opening on the evening of the 21st with an address by the president of the Association, Bishop Milton Wright of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Other able speakers will be present among whom are expected Elder J. L. Barlow, Rev. D. P. Baker of the Free Methodist, Rev. W. Warner, delegate of the Wisconsin Wesleyan conference, and the fraternal delegation of the Wisconsin State Association. The great work of this convention, however, will be the probable inauguration of missions free from the lodge, and establishing a basis for the United Churches of Christ. This will be the most important meeting ever held by the Association and every friend of reform in the State who can possibly be present should come. The homes of the Wheaton friends will make every delegate welcome. All delegates coming over the Chicago and North-Western road, paying full fare, will be returned FOR ONE-FITH FARE.

NEBRASKA.

A convention of all the anti-secrecy friends and workers in the State of Nebraska is hereby called to assemble in the city of York Center in York county, Nebraska, on Wednesday, Dec. 4, 1878, at 10 o'clock A. M., to consult together and aid in forming a State anti-secrecy association. Let delegates come from all parts of the State, as provision to entertain them will be made and able speakers will be present.

W. S. SPOONER,
Chairman of Committee.

ELDER D. P. RATHBUN announces that he has returned to Iowa to remain until after the State Convention, the Lord willing. His address will be Clarence, Cedar county, Iowa, care Alvin Hall. Arrangements can also be made for lectures with James McCleery of Marshalltown. Let Iowa be thoroughly canvassed this winter. Send for Bro. Rathbun.

NOTICE!

The author of the "Temperance Songster," "Liberty Minstrel," "Harp of Freedom," "Songs of the Free," etc., has been repeatedly urged to publish another Reform Song Book, containing pieces suitable to be sung in aid of the objects of the "National Christian Association opposed to secret societies," "orders," "cabals," "rings," etc.

All persons anxious to aid such an object should send to Geo. W. Clark, Dansville, Livingston county, New York, Box 15, such odes, hymns, songs, etc., either original or selected, as would be adapted to such a work. Let them be "short and sweet," pithy and to the point.

Topics of the Time.

Another case of secret fraternity diabolism has occurred at Cornell University which recalls the case of young Leggett five years ago last month. A young fellow named Ingersoll was found in extraordinary circumstances, having passed through an initiation. His voluntary confession, however, will shield the members of the society from punishishment. He claims to have joined the mysterious company against their protest, and to have agreed to the debasement of their initiation with eyes open and probably more spirit than any of the company. He was bound, gagged and laid on his back across a stone wall, his mustache cut off and face painted, and then left to his reflections. The affair was simply a rowdyish frolic with but a step to brutality and crime, which the resistance of the victim would surely have called out. Nothing is expected from the lax discipline at Ithaca to remedy such excesses, when we remember how the murderers of Leggett were shielded and the rioters at Prof. C. A. Blanchard's lectures were unpunished either by college or civil authorities.

The passage of a hundred and sixty Mormon converts through Chicago, is not, thank heaven, an every day occurrence. Such a company, from England to Salt Lake, were here long enough last week for the reporters to scan the company and quiz the Mormon elder under whose leadership these poor deceived creatures were exchanging the land of English homes for a land of lust. The company was largely of women, many of them young. To pertinent, pointed questions on the character of the company the elder attempted a defense of his bestial business and gave assurances that the holiest motives actuated the Mormons. It is reported that ten thousand converts have gone to Utah during the past season, and there is not wanting suspicion in political circles that the Mormon leaders have made a bargain with prominent men in the Democratic party to fill up one or two territories and get them admitted as States, thus securing a Democratic majority in both branches of Congress. The fate before these young women is foreshadowed in a case now before the Salt Lake courts. An intelligent English girl was coaxed to join one of these emigrant companies. At Salt Lake she was married to a wretch who had on the same day married two young women who were sisters. The victim of this brutal outrage, without home, found shelter in the U. S. Marshall's house while the trial against her seducer was going on. Such is the system tolerated by a representative in our Congress, and against whose secret oaths the courts of the United States are powerless.

At no time probably since the proclamation of war by the Czar at Kishenev has there been so much uncertainty in the affairs of what was then Turkey in Europe. Rebellions in Albania, in Bosnia, in Bulgaria and in the Rhodope mountains, with the demands of Austria, Russia, Greece, Montenegro and England have brought the affairs of the Turkish government to the last extremity. Under the treaty of San Stefano there would have been peace, but under that of Berlin there has nothing yet resulted but anarchy and bloodshed with almost a certainty of war between England and Russia, in which several minor nationalities are pretty sure to be engaged. Gladstone, who has been heard with respect on both sides the ocean in his protests against the course of the British ministry, has spoken again on the Afghanistan difficulty. The dispatches say that he pointed out that the weak power which a professedly chivalrous government threatened to punish for receiving the Russian Embassy was less culpable than the sender of the Embassy. The sending of an Embassy was apparently a breach of Russia's engagement to England, but he feared Russia would cite as justification the unfriendly conduct of the British Government. Gladstone declared that to saddle India with the expenses of defense against imaginary dangers would be an injustice as monstrous as any recorded in the world. He asked a comparison of the state of England in 1873 with that of 1878. He energetically defended the Geneva arbitration, and thought it far better to make a nation of forty millions a friend than one of eighty millions an enemy.

In the remarkable exodus out of the dominant political parties which is now going on in Massachusetts, the Prohibitionists, like the Liberty party men of pre-Republican days, will ere long be on the winning side because they are on the side of principle. They already hold the balance of power and will, if united and faithful, soon carry the day. This spirit and policy are best exhibited in the following resolution offered by our New England correspondent, Rev. Henry T. Cheever, at the last prohibition rally at Horticultural Hall in Worcester just before the State election:

Resolved, That in voting as we propose ourselves to do, and to persuade others in like manner, for Rev. Dr. Miner to be governor of Massachusetts, we have the supreme satisfaction of obeying our cherished convictions; and so far from throwing away our votes by so doing, as the politicians who fear them are fond of insinuating, we are simply placing those votes, according to a received maxim of politics, where they will do the most good.

That we urge it upon all temperance electors, of whatever party, throughout the State, now to stand by their principles, and to be inflexibly true to their convictions of duty at the ballot box. With such an erect and manly standard bearer as God has given to Massachusetts prohibitionists, let us unitedly deliver on the pending fifth of November, a determined volley of ballots, better than bullets, that will convince the leaders of our political parties that convictions are not to be trifled with, and that reformed voters and reformed men, with wives and mothers behind them, suffering, as God only knoweth, in helpless anguish by the vile liquor traffic, yet denied the ballot against it, mean to be henceforth a power in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

A Rallying Cry for Worcester.

BY A. M. PAULL.

2d Samuel 22: 40.

All hail, my comrades true and tried, all hail!
In God we trust;
Prevail we must.
Though strong our foe our cause shall never fail.
Then rally, men, hurrah!
See, there she stands,
With bloody hands—
Our pagan foe;
With impious breath
She vows our death
Or overthrow.
But men of prayer
Shall storm her lair,
And lay her low.
Then rally from afar.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
As on we go
To meet the foe.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
And he will give the victory.

Stand firm, my comrades true and tried, stand firm!
In God our strength,
We'll win at length,
Though like an avalanche our foe should come.
Then steady, men, hurrah!
Poor Morgan's blood
Cries out to God
For vengeance now.
And many more,
In bloody gore
Are lying low.
Then let our zeal
Reveal our steel
To Freedom's foe,
Nor falter in the war.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
As on we go
To meet the foe.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
And he will give the victory.

Advance, my comrades true and tried, advance!
With gleaming sword,
The Word of God;
See how it makes the cheek of Hell to blanch.
Then forward, men, hurrah!
Press on for love
Of God above,
And liberty;
And break the chain
Of fellow men
In slavery;
Expose the snare
That holds them there
So willingly,
Nor heed a hero's scar.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
As on we go
To meet the foe.
In God our everlasting strength shall be,
And he will give the victory.

Freemasonry an Abomination in the Sight of the Lord.

BY GEO. H. WILLIAMS.

Yet the permanent secretary of the National Council of the Congregational churches of the United States claims it to be an honor to be the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts; and two prominent clergymen of the Protestant Episcopal church of the United States, father and son, both noted Sunday-school workers, and generally considered to be of the most evangelical in that body, are, the father, a Royal Arch Mason, and the son was once the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York, and speaks of Masonry as the great bulwark of Protestantism against Romanism.

In an interview with leaders in "The National Association for the Promotion of Holiness," who came in June last to hold one of their meetings in Putnam, Conn., the writer, after speaking of the evil influences of Masonry and other secret societies here, as hurting the churches, injuring the cause of Christ and destroying souls expressed to them his firm conviction that Masonry is of Satanic origin, and an abomination in the sight of God. One of them said, "We cannot have any specialties." He, or another of them, said, "Get the heart right and you get all right." (But the apostolic way of getting the heart right was, in part, to point out, show the wickedness of, warn against, convince of and call to repentance of every sin then prominent as well as of sin in general. Also now, none of these but speak against some particular sin; e. g., the use of tobacco, ardent spirits, etc.) One, Rev. Wm. William McDonald, said, as I remember, he was for twelve years in Masonry (he was in high degrees); but for some fifteen years had had nothing to do with it; that "it is foolish," "a waste of time," etc. "But to be honest," he added, "I must say, I see nothing in it contrary to religion." Both in this and in a subsequent interview, calling his attention to the fact that in its generally accepted rituals, Christ's name is left out of the prayers, and is taken out of the passages in which it occurs in the Bible, when those passages are quoted in these rituals, only brought a repetition (in substance) of his former expression, that he saw nothing in Masonry contrary to religion.

Besides these men, so high in place in the church of God, are a multitude of others, of various denominations, who also profess to be Christians, followers and servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, who are Masons.

Now, though not one of all these men, should with his lips utter so much as one word in favor of Masonry, yet the fact that they all profess to be Christians, followers and servants of the Lord Jesus Christ, taken in connection with the other fact, that they are all Masons, testifies to all who know these facts, to the whole denomination, to the whole church of God, and to the whole community, that Masonry is acceptable to God; honors him, honors Christ; is in accordance with God's Word; is consistent with Christianity; is promotive of the prosperity of the church of which Christ is the Head (Eph. 5: 23); that it is not injurious to the church; that it is not contrary to the religion of Christ; is not of the devil; is not an abomination in the sight of God. This is the testimony of their profession of faith in Christ, joined with their Masonic example.

But all this their testimony is false! is a lie! God hates this their testimony! Now why should I say all this? Because I ought to say—to testify to this truth, that I may so warn all whom I can reach of the peril into which Masonry brings the souls of Masons, and show them what is their treatment of the Almighty and only living and true God, and of his Son, Jesus Christ our Lord, when they become Masons; and until they repent and renounce it, God's Word requires this of me. God's Word in Leviticus 19: 17 is still in force, saying, "Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him" (margin, "that thou bear not sin for him.") Silence in the presence of sin consents to it, becomes partaker of it. This truth which I ought to testify is open to all to know if they will by their own personal investigation. Every Christian ought to know and in God's name to testify it. So he should meet and put down all the abundant false testimony in favor of Masonry. No intelligent Christian need to wait one minute after he knows of even one of the thousands of wickednesses and blasphemies that are incorporated into Masonry to know that Masonry is of the devil and is hateful to God.

Rev. Wm. McDonald, in the first interview mentioned in this article, said to me in reply to the charge that Freemasonry leaves the name of Christ out of the prayers of its ritual, "It is in." I re-examined as far as the seventh degree, and Christ's name is not in one of them; and I told him so at the second interview. He replied, "It is in the higher degrees." I have since re-examined in the eighth and ninth degrees, (which is as far as I had at hand the means to examine), and it is not in either of them. But, left out of the lower degrees — the foundation — were it in all the higher degrees, since the foundation is laid on the sand and not on the Rock Christ Jesus, the foundation must be swept away, and where then will be the superstructure—the higher degrees? (See Mat. 7: 24-27 and Luke 6: 46-49.)

Exposition Lessons.

BY J. L. BARLOW.

Pictures are painted on men's minds as well as on canvass. The Cynosure stand in the gallery of the Exposition lately, was an interesting position at which to catch these mental photographs. Many of the impressions there taken will never fade from my memory. As Bro. Stratton and myself stood there and watched the passers-by, giving them tracts, selling them papers, books, etc., as we could arrest their attention, we found interest, instruction and amusement. The great whole, as the scene passed before us, was a kaleidoscope picture indeed. With reference to our peculiar work it was especially so.

Among the callers at our stand were hundreds who belonged to one or other of the secret orders, some who belonged to many of them. It was curious to watch these. Some were inclined to be threatening and abusive. One elderly man, after looking at the pictured supplement, Ronayne's book, etc., with flashing eye and great fierceness of manner, looked at me and said, "You are engaged in a nefarious business, sir!" and then firing off a rapid fusilade of unanswerable abuse, passed on. Now a lady comes up—looks at our books and then at us—gives the Morgan expose a flip, and says: "Ugh! Any man who will take such obligations and break 'em ought to be hung; and so he had! Ugh!" And she lifts herself off with a jerk, giving us a parting look over her shoulder to see if we are living still, and finding we are unhurt, passes on muttering, "ought to be hung, sir!" One day a gentleman came up with a friend and called for Ronayne's book, which was shown him. He then handed it to his friend, who was a young Mason, with the remark, "It is as straight as a string! You need it to post yourself up. It is very difficult to keep all the work in your head, so as to work your way into a lodge. Buy it; you need it!" After some hesitation he did buy it. After some conversation with this party of the first part, as I was telling him of Ronayne's past relation to the lodge, he flung back at me as he and his friend passed on, "I am Past Master of a lodge myself."

My conviction is that we sold more of the Hand Books to Masons than to any other class. Some of the Masons would show quite an amount of anger as they for the first time caught the idea of our work. Some would assail us with the words, "You are pretty fellows, to be peddling trash about something of which you can possibly know nothing." Others when appealed to to buy would smile, point to the square and compass, the keystone or the "G" and pass on saying, "O, I've been there! I know all about it!" Others would say, "Yes, it is all out; there's no use in denying it." Others still, "Yes, I was once caught in that snare; you are right; God bless you!"

We were cheered by the visits of a few friends in the ministry from the United Brethren, United Presbyterian, Free Methodist, Wesleyan, and German Lutheran denominations; but during the twenty days I spent there scarce a pastor of a Baptist, Presbyterian, Congregationalist or Episcopalian church made himself known to me. Like the priest and the Levite of old, they passed by as far from us as the width of the gallery would permit, and would accept of none of the light we stood ready to give them.

The high Masons of Chicago evidently knew all about our position and work. They would pass us either absorbed in conversation with some companion, or in looking at something in the distance before them; while now and then one would throw us a side glance, evidently intended to be very withering, but which fell on Bro. Stratton about as "drops of water on a duck's back," and as to their effect on myself, why I am hale and hearty, thank you.

Notes from New England.

THE ELECTION.

[The following was received too late for insertion last week Although a day or two after the election it is of too great interest to be left unpublished or unread.—Ed.]

The Prohibitionists of Massachusetts, although denied a hearing in the Republican and Democratic newspapers, are not silent in the present extraordinary political canvass. The late Worcester County Prohibitory Convention at Horticultural Hall in this city, have just issued a stirring address to the Prohibitionists of the State. In it they quote from an incisive review of the situation by Bishop Gilbert Haven, of that great Methodist church whose honest pride it is that its ministry and membership, above any other denomination, are one for Prohibition. In the last convention of Massachusetts Republicans a mild resolution in favor of Prohibition was violently and illegally throttled.

"What matters it now (says Bishop Haven) that the nominee for governor and the president of the convention were once earnest prohibitionists? They can no more impress that party with their views than James G. Birney and the Grimkes, slaveholders though they were, could impress their ideas as to abolitionism on their fellow slaveholders of the South. The rum-holders and Republicans are one. Henry Wilson wisely said of this party, years ago: 'Its neglect to take reforms under its patronage and guidance was alienating from its ranks men whom it could ill afford to spare. That neglect has now grown, until at last it insolently spurns all true reforms from its haughty door. It has driven out some of its truest and ablest friends. Judge Pitman, president of its Senate and chief in popularity once in all the State of Massachusetts, has been compelled to go. Others have gone and are going.'

Thanks be to God, they and we well know where we are going—many more than is thought for—not into the camp of the corrupt 'cipher' Democracy, nor over to the arms of Communism; but to the goodly fellowship and humane embrace of Prohibitionism. In its warm fostering arms we hope duly to enfold our beloved State, whose present and prospective peril is not Butlerism but rum.

Let us, then, on the 5th of November, unitedly lay hold and let go. Let us lay hold of Prohibition, and let go to 'grass,' like haughty Nebuchadnezzar, that once honored party of reform, whose fate it may now be, seeing it has gone back upon its own first principles, to have its "dwelling for a season with the beasts of the field, to eat grass as oxen, to be wet with the dew of heaven, and to have seven times pass over it, until it shall know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of man, and giveth it to whomsoever he will." By the time the Republican leaders have learned that, through the wholesome discipline of adversity, by the (Butler) rod of God's anger and the staff of his indignation, reason will have returned to them as of old to the put out king of Babylon, and they will extol and honor the King of Heaven all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment.

Till then let their dwelling be for a season with the 'beasts' of the barroom and the beer shop, whose alliance they plainly prefer for their votes and for the disreputable support of license and the liquor traffic, to that of honest Prohibitionists.

For ourselves, as in duty bound, out of love to man and conscience toward God, we intelligently vote for Alonzo A. Miner for governor, and may God save the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Close upon the heels of this election will come the Annual Convention of the National Christian Association in the same Mechanics' Hall that has lately witnessed the struggles of the contending political hosts. It is believed that public interest will be roused by the developments expected. Let Ronayne be on hand with his expose and working of Masonic degrees and the people will be on hand to hear and to see. H. T. C.

"Be not Deceived."

BY ELI TAPLEY.

Friend, do you know that the secrets of Freemasonry, Odd-fellowship and other secret orders are all told publicly now? Then why did you pay your money to get into them? It was because you did not know and was deceived by them. And so was I deceived by them. I paid thirty dollars to be made a Master Mason because I was told, "Masonry is a good thing." But when I got in I found it a very bad thing and that I had been cheated out of my money and got nothing for it. I found that the lodge is no place for a Christian to be or any other man who wants to be honest. So I quit the Masons and now I warn everybody not to join them.

See the candidate kneeling at the altar, stripped and blindfolded. This is the way they have every one who joins them kneel down and swear that they will obey them. Did not they have you do it? They have no more right to do this than the man who hires you has a right to have you kneel down and swear that you will put all of your corn into his crib, or all of your cotton into his pen. God does not count it a sin for you to break your Masonic oaths. Why not? Because they deceived you and made you think you were doing a good thing, and he never gave them any right to have you swear. Neither do any of the laws of our country give them any such right. A great many papers, tracts and books, telling the secrets of these orders and what they do in the lodges have been published and scattered far and near, and it is not honest to make people pay their money to join the lodges to find out what every one can know by reading papers and books.

Masonry is a very bad thing because it teaches that a Mason will be saved in heaven whether he believes in Christ or not. The Word of God says, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved," and "He that believeth not shall be damned."

Now, friend, if you have been deceived and joined the Masons or any other secret order, come out from among them and tell everybody not to be trapped and swindled by secret orders. The Bible says, "Be not unequally yoked together with unbelievers," (2 Cor. 14), and "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them." (Eph. 5: 11.)

Ronayne's Hand-book of Freemasonry is true as you who have been Masons well know as soon as you read it. Do you who are preachers warn the people against these things? If you do not after you know they are wrong, you will be far from doing your duty. Let the people encourage all the preachers to stand up against secret societies.

To one and all I would say, Be faithful Christians. Strive by the help of God to give up every sin. Christ offers to save us from our sins but he will not save us while we are holding on to them and are not willing to quit them. Serve God with all your heart, and try to lay up treasure in heaven each day and keep out of every secret order.

Serving Two Masters.

BY F. M. STONE.

Our picture is this: In the village of —— there is a church called the United Baptist church, and near by there is a Freemason hall. Among the many members that belong to this church is its pastor with the loving command before him, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over thee which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." One of this flock is a pious mother whose only son is still in an unregenerate state. But of the lodge, its membership consists of the Lord's servant (named above) and the son of the pious mother with many others, and among the number is a Jew who yet clings tenaciously to the belief that Jesus Christ was an impostor, and is yet with his kindred looking for the promised Messiah.

It is now Saturday evening and the lodge meets with the landmark of Freemasonry before it, which says not a word is to be spoken in the lodge that would offend any brother, let him be Jew, Mohammeden, or of any other faith under the sun. And now, my Baptist brother, you are called upon to pray, and here is the Jew and near by is bowed the son of the pious mother who remains at home ignorant of the critical position of the boy she has prayed the Father to save for the sake of his Son. And now, my brother, here is the Jew and your Worshipful Master and the landmark which forbids you asking the Father for any thing in the name and for the sake of Jesus Christ. At the same time you dare not approach the Father in any other name. O what a plight for a servant of Him who has led captivity captive. But, my brother, to pray how can you? Well, you have the Masonic formula of prayer, and if you are the chaplain of the lodge you certainly understand the Masonic ritual well, and doubtless you have received that hint from Rob. Morris, that your prayer should be strictly Masonic; beyond this I know not what would be of any comfort to you, unless it is that the pious mother will never know in this life any thing of the scene or the impressions made upon her boy.

But by your permission we will now change the scene. The picture being reversed and this the beautiful Sabbath, the Lord's day, you hasten to appear before your flock at the Baptist house of worship. And now, brother, you must preach; and if you will allow me to guess what your text will be, you first agreeing that you will take the one which burdens your soul the most, I will guess it to be the words spoken by my blessed Master, "I am the way, and the truth, and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." Before you deliver your discourse you will lead the congregation in prayer, for we see the pious mother has come with her son, and we have no doubt that she is now praying that the Lord would bring the word spoken home to the heart of her boy.

And now I can imagine your trouble. That same Jew sitting over there that gave you trouble last night. Do the angels see? Yes, they are already here ministering to them that shall be heirs of salvation. Do those eyes see that looked upon Peter? If so, do they behold a penitent Peter? Does God the Father look down and see? Yes; have not the two or three already assembled in his name; and did not Jesus say, "If any man love me he shall be loved of my Father, and we will come and make our abode with him." And now, my brother, he has said this too, "No man can serve two masters, for either he will hate the one and love the other, or else he will hold to the one and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

A Masonic Secret, but not a Secret.

Town says, "It is no secret that Masonry is of divine origin."

"Who will pretend," says Stearns, "that Solomon was inspired of God to organize the system. . . . . It is one of Satan's great lies, and the whole system a great cheat."

Masonry appears to have assumed and to exercise the same powers as papacy, for it changes times and seasons and gives effect or not to its ancient traditions as modern circumstances seem to warrant, for the purpose of promoting its power and prosperity by such means as its authorities may approve.

Verily our age and nation have two keen competitors for the control of men. What shall be the end? How would our people like to choose between submission to the Czar of Russia or the Sultan of Turkey. But these are physical tyrants; the others tyranize the soul. H.

The Issue before the National Convention.

"Considering the great forces which threaten the welfare of the nation in the next thirty years, and how readily and efficiently they can use any secret organization, such should not be allowed to exist."—Wendell Phillips.

Covenants.—"It is the covenant which makes the Mason. * * No law of the land can affect it—no anathema of the church weaken it. It is irrevocable."—Rob. Morris 33d degree, (Notes to Webb's Monitor page 240).

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that a Master Mason's secrets given to me in charge as such, and I knowing them to be such, shall remain as secure and inviolable in my breast as in his own, murder and treason excepted, and they left to my own election."—Pres. Chas. G. Finney, 3d degree seceder. (Practical Workings of Freemasonry, page 73.)

"If a brother should be a rebel against the State * * if convicted of no other crime * * they cannot expel him from the lodge, and his relation to it remains indefeasible." —Ancient Charges. (Page 56 of Jurisprudence by A. G. Mackey 33d degree.")

"Furthermore do I promise and swear that I will obey all regular signs, summons or tokens, given, handed, sent or thrown to me, from the hand of a brother Master Mason or from the body of a just and lawfully constituted lodge of such, provided it be within the length of my cable-tow."—C. G. Finney. (Page 73, Finney on Masonry.)

"These rulers and governors, supreme and subordinate, of the ancient lodges, are to be obeyed in their respective stations, by all the brethren, according to the old charges and regulations, with all humility, reverence, love and alacrity."—A. G. Mackey. (Jurisprudence page 58.)

"The use of this ceremony among Masons indicates that the initiate agrees to surrender his own will in all that relates to the order and become obedient to its ancient laws. We may not call in question the propriety of this organization. If we would be Masons, we must yield private judgment."—A. T. C. Pierson, 33d degree. (Traditions of Freemasonry, page 30.)

"I am come a light into the world that whosoever believeth on me should not abide in darkness."—Jesus Christ. (John 12: 46.)

"In a word, that the Christian religion came out from the mysteries of initiation, and the creation, the gods, the angels, the occurrences, dogmas and ceremonies, such as we find them in the sacred books are nothing but resemblances, more or less faithful, of the ancient gods, angels, dogmas and ceremonies of the Brahmins, the Magi, and the Egyptian priests."—(Rebold's History of Freemasonry, page 418.)

"Yes, the Christian religion originated from ancient Freemasonry as it was in its simplicity and purity," —(Manual of Ancient Scottish Rite. By Wm. M. Cunningham, 33d degree, page 202.)

REMARKS.

The above are a few among many declarations scattered all through Masonic writings, and forming the staple of their most highly recommended standard works. No intelligent person needs to be told that such sentiments are directly antagonistic to equal rights in civil government, and destructive to good morals and the Christian religion wherever they prevail. The city of Worcester has at least four of Blue Lodges, a Lodge of Perfection, a Council of Princes of Jerusalem, a Chapter of Rose Croix, at least fifteen Sublime Princes of the Royal Secret, and two or more Sovereign Grand Inspectors General. Each of these bodies is a school of instruction in which the above atheistic teachings are being inculcated and every member of every lodge is told that he must "yield private judgment," and obey his "Masonic superiors right or wrong." (Rob Morris.) Nearly every official position in this city is filled by a sworn agent of this secret government and is allied to this religious system of atheism. Worcester is a specimen of our condition as a nation, and the history of God-rejecting France will be the history of America twenty years hence, if Christians, and especially ministers, continue for the next ten as they have for the last ten years, silent upon this evil.

Other reforms are important, but this is paramount and vital. The single issue is between God's religion and the devil's counterfeit. If the lodge prevails we have atheism and anarchy; if Christ is enthroned we shall have light, liberty, life, peace and "joy in the Holy Ghost." "Hell from beneath is moved," and wicked men and devils are stirred. Masked batteries are sending up their signal rockets of alarm and an occasional shot breaks the ominous silence that forebodes a desperate struggle near at hand.

Where will you be found, my brother? At the front with your armor on, or skulking away in some flimsy refuge which can only protect you for a few days? Come up to the help of the Lord against this mighty anti-Christ and let us see your faces and hear your voices in this national rally for Christ and freedom at Worcester, Nov. 13-15, 1878. Make a sacrifice, if need be, and let us have full ranks, and present a solid and impervious front and march boldly to victory under the royal banner of "King Jesus."

J. P. Stoddard.

Grand Work must be done at all the conventions for the Cynosure.

Annual Conventions — State and National.

These have become increasingly centers of power, concentrations of social, intellectual and spiritual influences, thus forming sources of light and fountains of thought whence issue streams to give wisdom, life and power to every true friend of the reform in every part of this great land. And well they may, for they are not human inventions, creatures of human skill and planning. They are transcripts of the Divine thought. They are the conceptions of the thought of God, and as old as the work of reform. When God engaged to reform a world wholly lost, entirely degraded and deformed by sin, he projected the idea of the conventions of his people. He required them to be present, to give to them their most earnest thought, their most serious and prayerful attention. The programme of business, largely composed of worship and devotion, he provided for them; all civil, political and social interests were included. When thus with prayer and worship and devotion his people prepared themselves and were present, he himself met with them, and the seasons were blessed, yes glorious with results. The work of reform was mightily advanced, and every interest of the people was wonderfully blessed, sending influences down the ages even to the present, and one destined to envelop the world with beneficence and love.

Jesus adopted the same principle, and acted upon the same plan. He says, "Where two or three of you are met in my name there am I in in the midst of them."

To meet in Jesus' name is to accept of him as a director. All that he has enjoined in respect to prayer is to be put into practice. We are to be prepared to meet by prevailing prayer; and such meetings are always meetings of power; they never fail. All the vitalizing truths of God's system of infinite love for reforming and saving lost men are thereby brought into play and are attended with divine results. They never fail. Conventions now to be anything good must be God's conventions. They must be conventions of Jesus. God must be there; Jesus must be there; the Holy Spirit must be there. In principle, in spirit God must project the programme, become a general director, whatever form it may assume, whatever interests are discussed. I have been greatly cheered, strengthened and encouraged with the spirit manifested throughout the whole company of the friends of our reform. There seems to be one heart throbbing with anxious desire to have prayer offered that God will accept. Every writer says pray. Brethren, let us "pray and not faint." O, temptations to fainting will be terrible! We are weak, O, how weak! Sin and Satan are mighty, O, how mighty! We are easily diverted, and Satan is crafty. It must be prayer such as Moses, Elijah, Daniel and Jesus offered to be worth anything. Brethren, let us pray for the conventions, the Cynosure, and every friend and interest of the whole work of the reform.

A Friend of the Truth.

Reform News.

The Michigan State Meeting.

Brooklyn, Mich., Oct., 29, 1878.

To the Friends of Reform in the State of Michigan, greeting: God's grace be with you, Amen! Seeing that our fifth anniversary is at hand, and feeling the necessity of a general rally, I suggest again, not wishing to mistake the most suitable time, Nov. 19th, 20th and 21st as the time for our meeting. I am aware this is immediately following the National meeting, and just two weeks too late to be pleasant for me, wishing to attend at Worcester, where I should like to speak intelligently on the state of the work with us, which we certainly could better do after than before our State meeting. As a partial remedy I solicit correspondence on the state of the work in the several neighborhoods where the Cynosure is read. Please write me now.

Again as to place. The communication in the Cynosure, Oct. 24th, by Bro. Liscomb, gives Flint the preference now. Bro. Jones has written to have it at Adrian, but will speak through the paper giving particulars. To him and all others we say, "What thou doest do quickly." Concerning expenses, Let every person claiming sympathy for our work bring money with him, and those who cannot come send money by mail, or, as Father Wilcox, of Jackson, has done with me when he can't attend, send it up as a means of helping to answer your own prayers. I would say the lodge is kept stirred in our county, and what we thought we should do is being done. An anti-secret church is partly finished at Jefferson, Jackson county, Michigan. This is where the secretists threatened to starve my family and force us to leave. Any of our friends who can send us help please do so. I am some in debt, but expect Father Blanchard and others at the dedication some time in the early part of December. Finally, brethren, pray for us and pay for the reform. Yours in earnest,

E. Mathews.

New England Awakening.

Gloucester, Depot, Me., Oct. 28, 1878.

Eight days in this State with nine meetings and many private conferences has only served to deepen the conviction that is preparing for a great change in our reform work in New England. There is an indescribable feeling of aversion to the lodge that has come over the people in a way and by means that no body can explain. The secretists themselves feel it and tremble, and look upon the feeblest efforts to expose their system very much as an owner of a powder mill would regard a man who should walk into his premises with a lighted cigar in his mouth. Evidently they are looking for an explosion and are using every means to delay its coming.

On Saturday evening I reached the house of Bro. Rice at Pownal in company with Bro. Jackson. On Sabbath morning I went with these two brethren to attend divine service at Windham Corners M. E. church. I was introduced to the preacher in charge, who received me kindly and treated me courteously. At his request I preached at 11 A. M. and at 2 P. M. to his people, and received from the pastor and several of his people words of thanks and commendation. I was to preach at Pownal M. E. church, a part of the same circuit, in the evening. It had also been arranged that I should lecture at the same place on Monday evening. The pastor learning of the arrangement came with another brother two miles in the dark evening to prevent the plan being carried out, urging as a reason that the services in his church two miles away in which there was some special interest would be interfered with. Of course we did not wish to interfere with the work of saving souls, and to avoid the appearance of evil we relinquished our plan for lectures. I preached to a fair audience in the evening and after my sermon explained to the people something of our work, the reasons why the contemplated lectures were given up, and then invited them all to attend our meeting at Worcester. The pastor of these two churches has taken only one degree in Freemasonry and has no sympathy with its anti-Christian spirit or pagan rites, but like thousands of others, he sees the doom of the order hastening on in free discussion and the truthful exposures of this system of iniquity and is striving to delay the day of a complete revolution and consequent demolition of this dark conspiracy.

The sensitiveness of this brother is a specimen of what prevails all over New England and indicates too plainly to be mistaken that the time has come for the friends to rally and strike a decisive blow that shall release those who are held in unwilling servitude, and scatter the enemies of righteousness. God has prepared the way and the hearts of the people for this, and if there is a response by the friends we shall see such results following our National gathering at Worcester as will astonish both enemies and friends.

There is a price put into the hands of New England clergymen and churches to buy wisdom, Will they have a heart for it? I trust they may and that the response at Worcester may be proportionate to the interests involved and the interests at stake. The time is approaching and what is done must be done quickly. As you value the souls of men who are perishing by the hand of this wicked system, as you shall meet your obligations in the judgment, don't fail to do what you can by your prayers, your counsels and your presence to make the Worcester meeting what God designed and would have it to be—the beginning of the end of this system in New England.

J. P. Stoddard.

From the Pine Woods of Maine.

Harrison, Me., Oct. 28, 1878.

Bro. Kellogg:—Bro. Stoddard has been here. I'll tell you what he reminds me of. All remember the brilliant comet that visited our heavens just before the war. At that time we were holding a protracted meeting at Saratoga, Wis. Often after the evening meeting when we had to pass miles through the dark woods this comet lit up our pathway so we need not stumble. In like manner does the bright spiritual light that follows from the words of our dear brother Stoddard light up our pathway in this dark, woody country (spiritually) here in Maine. May God bless and prosper that servant of the Most High God; although some of the craft say he is a liar God will have such in remembrance at the judgment. All have to acknowledge he is able and educated, although slander follows him from the craft as you will see in the columns of the Bridgton News.

I. R. B. Arnold at Harmon, Ill.

From the Telescope.

Mr. Editor:—Please allow me, through the Telescope, to say that Bro. I. R. B. Arnold of Sycamore, Illinois, recently delivered three lectures here, in the Wesleyan church, on "Ancient Mythology," "Modern Freemasonry," and "Miscellaneous Art."

In his first lecture he showed, by numerous photographic representations,—among which were the gods Baal, Moloch, Bacchus, Jupiter, etc.,—the nature and modes of worship of the mysteries of ancient India, Greece and Rome,—showing how the candidates were initiated into the same. He said there is no passage of scripture which speaks of idolatry (except where it speaks of covetousness, which is idolatry,) that does not refer directly to oath-bound secret societies, or mysterious worship, such as that of Osiris, Baal, etc., and that, although there were laws to punish criminals, yet the worshipers of the mysteries had the law in their own hands, and hence it was very difficult to punish one of them, no matter what the crime, which is also the case with modern Freemasonry.

In the second lecture he showed—also by photographic representation—how a candidate is initiated into the mysteries of Masonry; how in the third (Master Mason's) degree the candidate (Hiram Abiff) was killed by the three ruffians (Jubela, Jubelo and Jubelum), buried in the rubbish of the temple, and finally raised to life on the "five points of fellowship" by the Worshipful Master (King Solomon).

It was clearly shown that Freemasonry is simply a revival of pagan idolatry and mysterious worship, and that as the death and resurrection of Osiris was to the pagan, so the death and resurrection of Hiram Abiff is to the Freemason, which he claims is to him as the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ is to the Christian. While Bro. Arnold is by no means harsh or abusive, but on the contrary mild and gentle in his language, yet he boldly declared the truth of this abominable and idolatrous, yet popular, tradition of the people.

The third lecture was an exhibition of royal splendor and magnificent scenery in Europe and elsewhere. Among many other beautiful pictures exhibited were the royal palaces and thrones of the various European sovereigns, the Vatican gallery at Rome, public gardens, etc.

The whole course of lectures, from beginning to end, was by far the best of the kind ever delivered in this place, and doubly worth the cost of seeing and hearing. The attendance was small the first evening, but much larger the second, and still larger the third—thus showing the willingness of the people to receive the truth when properly presented, as well as the complete satisfaction which was given. I cheerfully recommend all, both saints and sinners, Protestants and Catholics, to go and hear these lectures when they have an opportunity, which will doubtless come to many.

Geo. F. Woodard.

What are you doing for the 10,000 subscribers? Let each one now taking the paper send three new names and the work is done.

"But," says one, "Masonry is not a religion. It is only meant for social and benevolent purposes. I never saw any religion in the lodge."

Why then its prayers and chaplains and titled priesthood? Why its hymns and incense? Why its garbled quotations and sad misapplications of Scripture language? Why its Grand Lodge above for good Masons, if it is not, as claimed by Mackey, "a religious institution?"

But the fact is that Masonry is caught in its own toils. It desires a Catholic and imitates the infallible style of his church. It desires a Protestant and commends itself by advocating and crediting itself with some distinguishing feature of Protestantism. The same rule is applied to every religion, so that Buddhist and Jew, Mohammedan and Christian of every name are taught that their Bible or Koran is in harmony with Masonry and Masonry with it. It is a most self-contradicting system. It has many writers who are recognized by Masons as authorities, but let an opponent quote them and they are either ignored or he is told that he must join the lodge before he can understand it! A man must be a hatter before he knows what a hat is!

OBITUARY.

Died on the 20th of July last Mr. Perley Mitchell, in the 83d year of his age.

The deceased had been a constant reader of the Cynosure for several years past. Did all he could to impart the knowledge "In secret I have said nothing," to all of his friends.

Mr. Mitchell was born at Acworth, New Hampshire, on the 13th of Oct., 1795. Since the early day of 1821 he has been a citizen of Indiana; residing for fifty years on a farm in Parke county, and for the last four years has been a resident of Terre Haute. He leaves many many friends to sympathize with his wife and children and grandchildren. He died believing that though it was their present loss it was his eternal gain.

—Recent investigations show that more money is paid for beer in almost every large city in the country than for bread. In New York competent authorities set down the amount as not far from $30,000,000 per annum. As at present carried on, the manufacture of beer is very profitable to the brewers, and there are many instances given of their sudden acquisition of immense wealth. Frank Jones, now a member of Congress from New Hampshire, made an immense fortune in the brewing business in a few years. George Ehret, of New York, began with $4,000 ten years ago, and is now worth $1,500,000. Jacob Hoffman, who began with $7,000 at the same time, is now worth $400,000. John Kress, who began brewing in his wife's wash-kettle, without a cent, died about a year ago worth over a million.

—Twenty-eight dishonest tradesmen recently came before the Paris Tribunal of Correctional Police. A coal merchant for cheating in weight was fined $10 and imprisonment for a week; a grocer was fined $10 for selling goods of poor quality; fifteen tavern-keepers were fined $10 and imprisoned for adulturating their liquors; nine milk dealers suffered a like punishment for watering their milk, and two bakers were fined $5 for using light weights.

The Cynosure for $1 50 and 10,000 subscribers is our rallying cry for the winter campaign.

Correspondence.

Ex-parte Business in the Baptist Church.

Your readers who may take the Standard of Chicago, or the Central Baptist of St. Louis, may have seen "Doings of a Council," and "Burlington Baptist Association," in which I am served to a fresh edition of the same old fight that Masons made against me at the East for my vote against Masonry. The last article says, "We publish him to the world as unworthy the name and place in the Christian ministry." I would not publish this article if it were not for the fact that some may see those articles and be misguided by them. I think in due time my church will reply to them in its own defense and in my vindication. These findings of the enemy are calculated to mislead the public mind and cause it to arrive at a wrong conclusion. It always is an enemy that sows tares. "By their fruits ye shall know them."

Let it suffice for me to say that such a council and the whole matter is a revival of the old fight. The leading managing spirits in the attack here are known as Masons, and this is all the explanation necessary to those who have received their tender mercies. There have been no charges preferred against me. I have not been cited to any hearing. I have been called before no council where I might speak for myself. Paul had a chance to speak for himself, not I. And yet they publish to the world that I am "a man unworthy the name and place in the Christian ministry."

Who are they that do the finding and publishing? Some at least that I have rebuked personally for their Baal worship, for their hypocrisy. In one society they preach Christ, in another they deny him. Paul knew whereof he was accused, but this council have been very careful not to put anything in a shape that I might make a defense. Are Baptist councils sunk below Rome? This was called a Baptist council. The Baptist denomination cannot be responsible for such a caucus. It is responsible to nobody; but here it plainly shows the condition into which secretism is plunging the whole church. Its ministry is being silenced and padlocked by the power and worldly policy of the lodge. Here is a case where they sit in judgment on the character of a man, and pass their popish decree without giving either him or his church a chance for defence. Certainly we are approaching the days of the Roman inquisition only in another form. These men arrest without charges the character of a man and arrive at a fearful conclusion without his knowledge or having any opportunity for defense, and yet their decision would take him, another man's servant, from the walls of Zion, and for what we are only left to conjecture; and we guess the reason is that he takes the Cynosure and distributes it and Anti-masonic tracts; that he got his church opened for the expose of Masonry, and got that Rathbun here to work the degrees.

Their sympathizers often say, "Who got him to come? Did you?" I tell them "Yes; and look for him again." Now, undoubtedly these are the leading causes of this renewed attack, and the reason why they publish me as un-Christian. It appears that in their minds it is un-Christian to protest against Baal worship and the heathen rites and practices of the lodge. They say if the church would turn me off then they would have peace.

They earnestly desire me to depart out of their coast. But the church has peace among themselves since the lodge sympathizers are out. We are contented and happy as a church; united and at work for the Lord, and do not believe that the course taken by the so-called Baptist council is either Bible or Baptistic. We are looking forward and praying that we may have a time of refreshing at the meeting for the county organization. Come, brethren, come over and help us; for the great beast would swallow us up, or cast a flood out of its mouth and drown us.

JOEL H. AUSTIN.

System Needed.

GENEVA LAKE, Wis., Oct. 7, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—I was very much interested in the article under the above heading by brother Barlow. Although I do not wish to class myself as one of 'the wise ones,' yet I will give my opinion how the much needed money to carry on the reform work can be raised, and here it is: Organize in every county and every town if possible a stock company, making the shares at ten dollars each, the stock to be taxed as needed a per centage; say not over five per cent. per annum, to be paid, say quarterly in advance. I believe that nearly every person who has any sympathy with this great reform work will take one or more shares.

Such a plan would equalize the pressure, and not be as it now is, the whole burden resting on a few. Then again, as any one can see by a moment's thought, the amount realized would soon be a handsome sum.

I was once in an organization of this kind to raise money for another purpose, and it worked like a "charm." Some took as high as twenty shares. In our work I believe some persons will take more than that. Will some one suggest a better plan. Yours truly,

H. W. CLARK.

Neutralizing Rathbun and Ronayne.

FAIRFIELD, Ia., Oct. 14, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—Last Thursday, the 10th, the Masons and Odd-fellows had a grand rally in Birmingham, where the moral atmosphere is not conducive to the health of secret societies. They had speakers from abroad; the first, Mr. Leach, spoke in the interest of Odd-fellows, reading a lengthy essay on the principles of virtue, charity, etc., which he claimed as the foundation on which Odd-fellowship was built. So far as I remember he let Christianity alone.

The second speaker, Mr. Lewelling, spoke for the Masons. He said he was raised a Quaker. When a boy he and his friends thought that he ought to be a preacher, but when he began to read of all the wars that religion had caused: the thumb-screw, the rack, the implements of torture, the intolerance of Christians toward those who differed with them in opinion he began to look around for something better. He claimed that he found it in the Masonic religion; "for," said he, "we have too long denied that it is a religion. Other religions were better than no religion, even the worship of the cow or the lizard; but the Masonic religion was free from that jarring and bitterness which was found in the different denominations of Christians." He eulogized man for his rapid advancement. He said Adam as he came from the hand of his Maker was weak. Man at the present day was as far his superior as a suit of broadcloth was superior to the apron of fig leaves.

The third speaker, Rev. Stephenson, capped the climax by out-doing the others in disparaging the church. After endorsing what had been said, he went on with many sarcastic reflections upon the different denominations of the Christian church; he compared them to a four-horse team stuck in the mire; a good-looking team, but unfortunately the horses all belong to different denominations. After describing the peculiarities of each and showing how useless it was to try to pull out with such a team, he goes on to show the superior excellency of Masonic piety, which works harmoniously and raises its adherents to a higher life and better leaving the impression on my mind that the church was nearly swamped in Masonic mire and pollution. He said that they were charged with screening the guilty. "Now," said he, "if I was on trial for crime I would not want a Mason or Odd-fellow on the jury for this reason: they knowing the opportunities that I have had to learn what is right and wrong through the teaching and symbols in the lodge, would hold me to a rigid accountability, perhaps too rigid."

Now I had thought that people could learn from the Bible, through close communion with God and the influences of his Spirit what was right and wrong, but this "Rev." did teach that the greater knowledge on this subject was hid away in the secret conclaves of the Masonic lodge. His last remark was, "You find a good, decent, respectable man and in all probability he belongs to one of these orders."

Now, Mr. Editor, I am not quite ready to give up the cause of Christianity and substitute for it that of Masonry. That good-looking team spoken of, has been floundering in Masonic mud and mire until it is badly discouraged and perhaps we will have to clean out the inside of the cart, lighten up a little, and in many places get a new driver. But she must be lifted out of the mire.

The day after this meeting I was appealed to in Fairfield to settle a dispute. Some Masons charged their speaker with referring to Jesus Christ in his remarks. They could not give the precise language and appealed to me. It was this: "He whom the common people heard gladly." Although this does not necessarily apply to Christ, yet it gave offence as being contrary to Masonic law. Now, when I read that "God out of Christ is a consuming fire;" "Ye cannot come to the Father but by me;" "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved;" "He that dishonoreth me dishonoreth the Father that sent me"—and many other similar passages, I from my heart pity those who are deluded and led away into any secret organization, for so far as I can learn they all dishonor Christ by rejecting his name even to the popular order of grangers. The Lord lead us all to that light which lighteneth every man that cometh into the world, is my prayer.

Our Mail.

J. A. Learn, Point Abino, Ont., writes: "I wish God's richest blessings to rest upon you and your efforts to break down these strongholds of the devil."

S. S. Palmer, Hillsdale, Mich., writes: "I hope by next year to remove to Wheaton, and there hope to receive the special instruction I so much need for future work in the reform in connection with the ministry. My whole soul is taken up with this reformation, and I expect to devote the best of my life to it, until it triumphs, if life be spared so long."

J. S. Baldwin, Pitcher, N. Y., writes: "I wish some able speaker might come this way and lecture in Norwich, county seat of Chenango county, for it is a stronghold of Masonry. Norwich is easy of access by rail direct from Syracuse."

Will not some of the New York lecturers correspond with Mr. Baldwin and arrange for lectures as he desires?

Edward Walker, Sturgis, Mich., writes: "I am doing what I can to get subscribers, and think you will gain two or three new ones by my efforts. Sturgis is a perfect bed of secretism. I am praying daily for the Lord to help you bring out the hidden things of darkness."

Z. Ober, Ogden, Iowa, writes: "I am in hopes that Rev. D. P. Rathbun will visit Ogden soon."

Rev. S P. Ternald, Melvin Village, N. H., writes: "When I entered the ministry forty-seven years ago, I hated Masonry and all its off-shoots, and that hatred has not abated in the smallest degree, but rather increased. I don't take my denominational paper, the Morning Star, because of its silence on this great sin. I expect to hate this evil and die hating it."

L. C. Livesay, Nashville, Ill., writes: "I am trying to open a new field for the exposition of secret societies."

J. A. Conant of Willimantic, Conn., writes: "Brother Stoddard went through this place on Wednesday and I had the pleasure of a call of about an hour from him. He is doing a good work in New England and I hope he can stay here for some time after the National meeting. We want him several weeks in Connecticut. He is now on his way to Maine. I believe he is just the man to work into the good graces of our people and disarm them of prejudice, so that they will listen to the unpopular truth concerning secret societies and when the New England people get really waked up on this subject, I believe the National Association will receive substantial aid from them in carrying forward this work, consequently I believe it will prove a financial success to the Association to keep Bro. Stoddard in New England the next six months at least, although the Association may not realize much, no not even his expenses at first. The land needs plowing and harrowing and then it will, by the blessing of God, bring forth a bountiful harvest."

LESSON XLVI.—November 17, 1878. —ZACCHEUS THE PUBLICAN.

SCRIPTURE—Luke 19: 1-10. Commit to memory vs. 9, 10.

1. And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho.

2. And, behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich.

3. And he sought to see Jesus who he was; and could not for the press, because he was little of stature.

4 And he ran before, and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see him; for he was to pass that way.

5. And when Jesus came to the place, he looked up, and saw him, and said unto him, Zaccheus, make haste, and come down; for to-day I must abide at thy house.

6. And he made haste, and came down, and received him joyfully.

7. And when they saw it, they all murmured, saying, That he was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner.

8. And Zaccheus stood, and said unto the Lord: Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold.

9. And Jesus said unto him, This day is salvation come to this house, forasmuch as he also is a son of Abraham.

10. For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

CORRESPONDING TEXT.—"This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief." 1 Tim. 1: 15.

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. Jericho—its situation and history (Josh. 2: 1; 1 Kings 16: 34; 2 Kings 2: 19; Luke 10: 30).
2. Zaccheus—the man and his office.
3. The sycamore tree.
4. The evidences of repentance in Zaccheus.
5. The duty of making restitution.
6 Christ's method of dealing with publicans and sinners.
7. Duty of Christians toward the modern "publicans."
8. The Bible readings.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. The grace of Christ in meeting an inquirer.
2. The zeal of the inquirer and the example he sets us.
3. The power of love, of divine love as here, to melt and win.
4. The nature and evidence of a changed heart.
5. The readiness of men to misunderstand divine pity.
6. The common danger, "lost."
7. The blessed mission of the Son of man, the only Saviour.

[From the S. S. Journal.]

PRACTICAL LESSONS.

1. Christ reveals himself to those who are most anxious to find him.
2. Jesus is no respecter of persons.
3. The presence of Christ makes us conscious of our moral condition.
4. Salvation through Christ is offered to all by faith as children of Abraham.
5. Change of heart is evidenced by change of life.
6. Reparation of wrongs is a Christian duty.
7. Faith is to be shown by works.

[From the Evangelical Repository.]

LESSONS.

Men may be led by mere curiosity, or even by more unworthy motives, to the place where they shall find Christ as a Saviour. When God has a purpose of mercy toward any one he will provide that the object of his electing love shall be brought to the spot where grace may take possession of him. The Gospel will be brought to him, or he to the Gospel, in the case of any adult whom God designs to save. In perfect consistency with the free agency of man, will the meeting of such a soul with Christ be brought about.

Zaccheus was in no proper sense seeking Jesus, but Jesus was in the highest sense seeking him. Zaccheus was curious to see Jesus; Jesus was yearning to save Zaccheus. "Make haste," said he "and come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house." Why was it necessary to abide in the house specified? Because he meant to draw the heart of Zaccheus to him that day; to do that despised publican honor in the presence of scorners, and to prove that it was the lost he came to save. The commingled tenderness and majesty with which the words were spoken, and the unexpected knowledge exhibited by Christ in pronouncing the name of Zaccheus, combining with all the rumors which had come to his ears respecting Jesus of Nazareth, flashed upon the mind of the chief publican the conviction that this stranger was the the Messiah, and his Master. When the Spirit of God accompanies the truth, a small measure of it may suffice for the conversion of a soul, provided the truth be that which relates to Christ.

We should be careful to station ourselves by the road along which Christ may be expected to pass.

The sovereignty of God in the bestowal of grace is illustrated here. There were many on that day who pushed and panted and climbed, no doubt, to catch a sight of Jesus; many of these, too, more amiable, and outwardly more moral, than Zaccheus, but none of them was honored as was he. For aught we can tell, Zaccheus was the only one of all that gazing throng who was enabled that day to see in Christ the true Saviour of sinners.

Rich men, even men who have become rich by foul means, may be saved. One reason, we presume, why it is recorded expressly that Zaccheus was rich, is just to convey this lesson: that grace can convert even those about whom it was said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God!" Mark 10: 24.

We cease to be bond-servants when we become Christ's servants. See the emancipation which Zaccheus gained when he found a Saviour and his rightful Sovereign! The chains of worldliness are broken, and he who loved gain so much that he would defraud and oppress in order to get it, stands forth relieved from the ignoble thraldom, his heart swelling with the desire to help the needy and make ample restitution to the wronged.

Several fruits and evidences of conversion are here traceable: such as obedience to the word of Christ in coming down and receiving him joyfully; confession of sin; recognition of the authority and excellence of the law of God; and his resolution to undo, so far as in him lay, the evil he had done.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOV. 1, 1878.

THE ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE NATIONAL CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

BRETHREN AND FRIENDS:—Another year, and our reform is not yet completed.

Modernized heathenism of the lodge is still practiced in our midst. Young men and middle-aged have not yet ceased to put their necks under yokes of secretism, that are intended to be life-long. Our fellow-citizens and even our sons and brothers are exposed to the alluring dangers of lodge-craft, whose subtle stratagems, yet far from extinct, still continue their foul and injurious depredations upon public and private weal. Whatever is politic, or patriotic, or pious is in perpetual jeopardy through the chicanery, the despotism and the ungodliness of the antagonist of our Association.

These facts forbid us peace or even armistice. They bid us "Hold the fort"; and not only so, but also to make a Sherman's "March to the sea."

The current annual campaign is almost ended. At its close we are invited to a grand council of war at Worcester, Massachusetts,— time, 13th, 14th, 15th inst.

The day is near at hand. Let all good soldiers under our banners resolve to go or help to send somebody.

Long journeys are required to congregate a national meeting in this vast land. These journeys cost. The wealthy can easily bear the cost, but others may not be able to go unless assisted. "Many hands make light work" — may many proofs of this be shown in many places by united purses to send delegates.

If the spirit of the pilgrim fathers has not departed from Massachusetts, she herself might roll down from the Worcester meeting an avalanche of Anti-masonry that would bury and smother the lodge in the East.

Let the nation drop in there to see and to help.

And since God is our only stay and hope, our fervent prayers ought to be ascending "the hill of the Lord," invoking the divine help we so much need. Men and women of faith, let us pray!

SAM'L B. ALLEN.
Pres. National Convention.

Delegates! DELEGATES! DELEGATES! Every church friendly to to the reform, every local and State association that can arrange to do so should be represented at Worcester. Let this matter be attended to at once by friends in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. If you cannot get a delegate, write and persuade some friend to go who might otherwise be away.

UNTIL THE 1ST OF MARCH NEXT THE CYNOSURE will be sent to all for $1 50 a year.

THE DATE—CORRECTION. — The call of President Allen for the National Convention has been printed twice with a mistake in date. Read the whole call as now corrected.

THE CHRISTIAN STATESMAN.—We are reminded of a serious omission in the list of exchanges, published four weeks ago, which are outspoken against the lodge. The Christian Statesman of Philadelphia, while with superior judgment and ability advocating the religious reform in our nation, has always been among the foremost in presenting the truth against the lodge system; which, when it is driven from its hiding-places into plain view, will appear the most hostile of all to the enthronement of Christ in our nation.

IS IT RAILING?—We clip from the Baptist Standard of this city the following:

Doings of a Council.—The following is the decision of the council of which the Rev. Dr. Whiting, pastor of the First Baptist church, Quincy, Ill., was president, and the writer was secretary. I hand it to you in accordance with the unanimous request of the council that you may publish it.

W. H. CHANNON, Sec'y.

* * * * *

Also from the abundant and unimpeachable testimony, both oral and documentary, regarding the character of Joel H. Austin, pastor of Spring Creek Baptist church, this council fully endorses the action of the Burlington Baptist Association, in excluding him from their number and fellowship, and publish him to the world as unworthy of a name and place in the Christian ministry.

A charge without specification is a "railing accusation," and pointless accusation is reviling, and "a brother" who is a "reviler" is classed with extortioners, drunkards and other vile persons (1 Cor. 6:10; 1 Cor. 5: 11, and 1 Tim. 6:4), and Christians are commanded to avoid him. The above action is mere railing and slander, and all concerned in uttering and publishing it are guilty before God and liable to action in the civil courts.

We give elsewhere the statement of the brother aggrieved.

THE LAY EVANGELIST, E. Jones, editor, 43 Bible House, New York. A friend has handed us a copy of this small monthly paper. We read some earnest and just utterances, rebuking the worldliness and wickedness of church members, and were about to send asking an exchange when we were brought up standing by the following editorial answer to a friend who asks: "Can a man be a Christian and an affiliating member of a secret society?" The editor answers: "Knowing nothing about secret societies we are not a competent person to judge of their influence on mind and character."

And yet this man writes and deals out wholesale statements concerning Christian churches and ministers of whom he has not one-half the means of knowing that he has concerning the lodges of this country. Every daily of New York gives him Masonic and other statistics enough to show him that the industry of the country is taxed and swindled by lodges working nightly by the side of every school-house, court-house and legislature of the land. He knows that women are excluded from lodges, and thus wives and husbands are separated fifty-two nights in the year by hedges of secrecy interposed by the lodge.

This Bro. Jones knows or he is culpably ignorant, that Rhode Island, Massachusetts and Vermont have, by law, forbidden the imposition of Masonic oaths, which of course informs him, if he does not know it otherwise, that there are such oaths sworn in the face of the Saviour, who said "Swear not at all." Yet this strange "Lay Evangelist" says he knows "nothing about secret societies." O, brother, "If we say, Behold, we knew it not, doth not he that pondereth the heart consider? and shall he not render to every man according to his works?"

We shall send this brother a Cynosure containing this article for exchange. If he is an honest man he will take measures to inform himself and his readers concerning secret orders which are swallowing up the earnings of the American people by millions and sending their souls to hell. Bro. Jones, please exchange.

THE WORCESTER CONVENTION.

This is our last word before that important convention. By some unaccountable error Prest. Allen was misinformed and his brilliant official "call" put the convention on the 15th, 16th and 17th instead of the 13th, 14th and 15th of November inst. A postal is sent to the Telescope and a notice put at the head of our editorial column to correct the error.

The Telescope, in a clear, ringing editorial, gives the voice of the annual conferences of the United Brethren church, stretching from Virginia to Oregon and from Ohio to California, on the lodge question. Of forty-four conferences, thirty-four give out a clear and terribly earnest testimony against our national church leprosy. The remaining ten say not one word in favor of the lodge, but give a feeble Masonic utterance to show that they are worm-eaten by the plague. This is a glorious halo of light preceding the coming dawn. These holy men and women are in the minority in the communities where they live, but the spirit of the living God is in them and the lodge is so cowardly, mean, unholy and impure that every honest man between the oceans, and every woman, honest or dishonest, who has decency and sense enough to stand up for her sex, will frown on that woman-hating system when it is once uncapped, and its myriad serpents, dazzled by the light, have ceased to hiss.

Do not let the Worcester convention rise till it has given a clear, ringing testimony in favor of "The United Churches in Christ," and also in favor of missions free from the national blight.

We pause in this writing to take the hand of Mr. Ronayne who is just in from the State meeting at Waupun, Wis. He gives a thrilling account of that convention, and says that the truth triumphed wonderfully there. He brings several subscribers for the Cynosure, and says the one great want of the cause is a subscription list of ten thousand. Strike for it, friends, at Worcester. Give us that list and then it will furnish oil for its own wheels, and the true and strong-hearted publishers will spare no expense to put on the paper the very best talent in the country, and make it indeed the pole star to which the eyes of America shall turn.

Let Messrs. Stoddard, Conant, Kimball and others avail themselves of the crowds who will come to see and hear Ronayne, to put this matter right before New England mind. New England was slow to come up against the slave power; but she at last gave up even her idolatry of Webster for country and liberty. So soon will it be with this great movement which is Christian in religion and American in politics, involving every church and court house in the whole land.

MORMON MASONRY.

SALT LAKE, Oct. 28.—The examination before Commissioner Sprague, of the case of Miles, for marrying three young women at the Endowment House on Thursday last, was continued to-day. John T. Caine, Jr., who married about the same time knew but little that occurred and finally declined to answer, as he was bound to secrecy by oath to the Mormon church the witness was excused. George Reynolds who was convicted of bigamy about two years ago and sentenced, but whose case is now before the United States Supreme Court, was called as a witness. He took the names on a piece of paper of the ladies entering the Endowment House for marriage, but did not know what became of the paper or where the record was kept. He finally refused to answer for the same reason as the first witness and was excused. Dora Young was examined, and although present, remembered little and finally declined to answer, claiming that a reply would criminate her, and the court adjourned until to-morrow without a decision.—Inter-Ocean, Oct. 29.

It is not commonly known that Joseph Smith was a Freemason, and a familiar acquaintance with Samuel D. Greene and often at his house at Batavia before the murder of Morgan; and that Mormonism arose there where Masonry fell. The devils who ruled and run the lodges and received their worships, seem to have entered that new and terrible system. It is stated by persons acquainted with the facts that Jo. Smith was guilty of the Masonic crime of forming a clandestine lodge (that is, instituting a stop degree by which other Masons were kept out of Mormon lodges, while Mormon Masons could enter other lodges) and of continuing his lodge after the Grand Lodge had revoked his charter. Of this we have not certain information; but if the relations of Smith to the lodge could be traced out, important information may be elicited. The last time I saw Major W. Powell, then fresh from the Mormon regions, he said to me, "The country generally do not understand the Mormon system. The Mormon masses understand that they have nothing to do with affairs of their government."

"Yes," I answered; "It is a system of clandestine Masonry, in which all officials are sworn to secrecy and obedience; and the masses understand they have nothing to do with the government but to obey."

The Major, who is himself a Mason, laughed significantly, and said, "This is the first time I ever heard the two systems spoken of together."

The identity of the two systems is seen in the above paragraphs from the Inter-ocean. Mormons, like Masons, are sworn to secrecy and obedience. The recusant Mormon witnesses at Salt Lake are but acting over what Masonic witnesses have done often in the courts of San Francisco. And all can see the salvation of the country depends on the destruction of both systems alike.

Will the readers of the Cynosure notice that United States judges excuse witnesses from testifying in U.S. courts because of their Mormon oaths. General P. O'Connor was the first, and so far as I can learn, the only officer who ever compelled the Mormons to respect the Federal flag. He was assailed by Brigham Young's hired and bribed emissaries.

The Inter-ocean has not one word of rebuke for Federal judges who excuse Mormon witnesses on the ground of their allegiance to the superior Mormon power. The Chicago Times properly exposes the infamy but does not censure the recreant judges. Are the judges afraid of Mormon daggers?

DON'T FORGET. — The Cynosure until March 1, 1879, is only $1 50 a year.

—The Wisconsin State meeting at Waupun last week elected Rev. E. Collins, President, the other officers remaining as last year. Bro. Hinman was chosen lecturer subject to the approval of the Illinois State Association, and an arrangement agreed upon to secure his services in both States, part of his salary being raised in each. The report of the meeting waits for our next paper.

—Prof. C. A. Blanchard left last Monday for Pittsburgh accompanied by his wife. He speaks in that city and in New York on his way to Worcester. Past Master Ronayne will go direct to Worcester, leaving here on Monday morning next. The representative of the Cynosure leaves on the same day.

—The Illinois State Convention expects to welcome Revs. Ames, Warner and Johnson as delegates from the Wisconsin State Association. The Northwestern railroad gives a reduction of fare. Let the reform churches of all denominations be represented.

— Bro. Stoddard writes from Worcester that he is finding new friends every day and the way opens at each step as the time of the Convention approaches. Let all rejoice in this answer to prayer and renew their petitions for the victory to the truth next week. The all-absorbing theme in Massachusetts has been politics. But the questions arising from that issue were decided at the polls last Tuesday, and the way is clear for a strong impression to be made in the interest of our reform work. Let it not be misimproved. Those who cannot go to Worcester or aid at home by voice or pen can pray God by his Spirit to be present in power.

—The Iowa State Convention is yet in an unsettled condition as to time and place. Brother Hall of Clarence, suggests a change of the latter to Cedar Rapids, or some other central point, which meets the approval of a number. Meantime Elder Rathbun is at work, as we hear in one way or another. Friends will always find it an advantage to him and the work in general to report often and always notify the Cynosure of his appointments in advance. A postal card item does it.

—Our publishers have just issued a revised and carefully corrected edition of the Exposition of the Knights of Pythias ritual. The "Supreme Lodge of the World" of this inflated order met this year at Indianapolis. Their password for the last half of 1878 from July to January is "Be United."

—Past Master Ronayne returned from Waupun and the Wisconsin State meeting Friday afternoon. He reports a grand time and glorious victory, albeit the lodge mustered its forces and on the second evening made a grand effort to stampede the audience by fastening the door and stoning the windows; but, under the steady control of the friends on the platform the attempt was an utter failure, the ladies sitting bravely under the crashing glass. A Methodist minister, who was formerly master of a lodge in Kalamazoo, Michigan, assisted as Senior Warden for Mr. Ronayne's lodge.

—Mention was made last week of the Masonic temple in New York city. The following figures reported to the Grand Lodge of New York in 1876 show where part of the funds of this benevolent order are sunk so deep that no widow or orphan is likely ever to dig them up:

Total cost of ground and building.	$2,243,978 78
Total cost of furniture.....	94,458 52
Sundry expenses attending the purchase of the property, erecting the building, negotiating loans, interest on same, and care of property as shown by reports of each year, to May 1, 1876	251,850 66
Total disbursements to May 1, 1876	$2,590,262 96

The indebtedness reported at that time, covered by bonds and mortgages was $794,015.

—Though the views of a Catholic priest, the following opinion of John A. Fanning, President of the Catholic Benevolent Union of Illinois, are valuable as strong corroborative testimony:

"The immortal souls of many of our young are lost by joining secret societies which are the pathways to jobs on the railroads, steamboats, stores, aye, saloons and barber shops. Individual merits are coolly overlooked unless the possessor thereof be a Mason, an Odd-fellow, or a member of some other secret organization, and if employed he is only kept until some tramp who, discharged for bad conduct, has left his country for his country's good, comes along, makes some silly gesticulations, and presto! our worthy young Catholic leaves in order to make room for this dead beat, who, by his own confession, gives evidence that he cannot stand upon his own merits. What wonder then that, in an evil hour, our young men fall in and are speedily swallowed up in the maelstrom of vice which surrounds them. I am told sometimes that our co-religionists do not always lose the faith by their union with secret societies; and this I freely grant. But what I want to see is, how much their spiritual welfare is benefitted by these associations."

All Good Gifts from God.

We plough the fields and scatter
The good seed on the land,
But it is fed and watered
By God's almighty hand;
He sends the snow in winter,
The warmth to swell the grain,
The breezes and the sunshine,
And soft refreshing rain.
All good gifts around us
Are sent from heaven above,
Then thank the Lord O thank the Lord,
For all his love.

He only is the Maker
Of all things near and far;
He paints the wayside flower,
He lights the evening star;
The winds and waves obey him,
By him the birds are fed;
Much more to us his children,
He gives our daily bread.
All good gifts, &c.

We thank thee, then, O Father,
For all things bright and good,
The seed-time and the harvest,
Our life, our health, our food,
Accept the gifts we offer
For all thy love imparts,
And, what thou most desirest,
Our humble, thankful hearts.
All good gifts, &c.

—Matthias Claudius, 1815.

What Happened in a Snow-Storm.

Nearly a century ago there lived a pious man named Christian Zirchel, a mile northeast of Frederick, Maryland, which was then a straggling village. By his industry Zirchel had supported his family in what was then regarded a moderate competence. He had his patch of cleared ground and a plain, rude house. In the spring of the year he was taken seriously ill, and after a few weeks of suffering died, leaving a wife and four children under twelve years of age. The poor widow with her orphan children, managed by thrift and economy to procure the needed comforts of life during the summer, autumn and earlier part of the winter. The country was sparsely settled; her nearest neighbor lived a mile away. Fuel was easily procured, for heavy forests were all around and timber was of little value.

As the winter gradually wore on her stock of provisions grew less and less, filling her mind with much anxiety. In the month of March, when her food was about exhausted, there came a heavy fall of snow, covering over and obliterating the few roads in the neighborhood. The snow also drifted heavily against her cabin, which had only one door. Against this door the snow settled so compactly, to the depth of five feet, that the family were unable to make their way out. They were prisoners.

The widow began to realize their situation. Without more than sufficient provisions for one day, and shut in from all human help, what would become of them? No earthly probability that any traveler would come into such an out-of-the-way place through such snow. From the depth and compactness of the snow it might lie for several weeks. No hope of human help. The pious woman turned her thoughts to God. She told the eldest child to repeat the explanation of the first article of the creed in Luther's Catechism: — "I believe that God hath created me and still preserves to me my body and soul; that he daily provides me with all the necessaries of life, guards me from danger and preserves me from evil, wholly induced by paternal love and mercy."

The mother then took her German hymn-book and sang Gerhardt's hymn:

"Commit thou all thy griefs
And ways into His hands."

She then took her Bible and read from the thirty-seventh Psalm: "Trust in the Lord and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed. Commit thy ways unto the Lord; trust in him, and he shall bring it to pass." She then offered a fervent prayer that her Heavenly Father would, according to his promise, protect and feed her helpless household.

The day passed, but no signs of help. The second day the prayers of the good woman became more fervent. A mere morsel had been left for a scanty breakfast, and now the children were crying for dinner. The prayers of the mother were earnest and uttered aloud, that her Father in heaven would send some messenger with food to satisfy the hunger of her children. These prayers were at length interrupted by a pounding on the top of the door. In response to her inquiry a voice said, "Open the door." This was done with difficulty, but, partially open, she saw a man standing on the drift holding in his hand the bridle-rein of his horse. She said, "You are a stranger, but you are a messenger from God to preserve these children from starvation."

The man said, "I paused for some time before knocking at your door. I overheard parts of your prayer; I have learned its general import. I am a drover from Washington county. I sold a drove of cattle in Baltimore, and am on my way home. The roads through the woods are so drifted that I lost my way. I saw the smoke from your chimney, and came here to ask what direction I am to take for your village. But first of all, as you seem to be in distress, what can I do for you?"

She informed him that for several days her children had been on short allowance, and had merely a crumb to-day; the last morsel was gone. It was impossible for her or her little ones to make their way through the snow to the nearest house, a mile off.

The stranger said he had passed a mill, probably a mile or two back; by following the track his horse had made he could reach it. He would bring her half a bag of flour.

When he returned, by the assistance of his horse treading down the snow, he contrived to open a path from the door. He also aided in getting additional fuel from the woods, then gave her about five dollars in coin, and said, "So late in the season, this heavy snow cannot last long. Your meal will keep you in bread for several weeks; by that time you can buy with this money more provisions."

The benevolent man then took his leave, riding through the unbroken snow in the direction of the village, where he found comfortable quarters for the night in the village inn.

The very next day the sun shone with great warmth, and the snow melted rapidly. The widow Zirchel lived for many years, and never afterward knew what famine and want were. No sceptical cavilling could ever make her doubt that the hand of the Almighty had interposed to save her and her children from starvation. For ever afterward she was a firm believer in the efficacy of prayer.—Presbyterian.

The Baptism of Fire.

Suppose we saw an army sitting down before a granite fort, and they told us they intended to batter it down, we might ask them "How?" They point to a cannon ball. Well, there is no power in that; it is heavy, but not more than half a hundred, or perhaps a hundred-weight; if all the men in the army hurled it against the fort they would make no impression. They say, "No, but look at the cannon." Well, but there is no power in that; a child may ride upon it, a bird may perch in its mouth. It is a machine and nothing more. "But, look at the powder." Well, there is no power in that; a child may spill it, a sparrow may pick it. Yet the powerless powder and powerless ball are put in the powerless cannon; one spark of fire enters it, and then, in the twinkling of an eye, that powder is a flash of lightning, and that cannon ball is a thunderbolt, which smites as if it had been sent from heaven. So it is with our Christian machinery of this day; we have all the instruments necessary for pulling down strongholds, and oh, for the baptism of fire!—Arthur.

Overworked Women.

Here is a woman who from dawn till dark is busy with the actual work of a household, with its cooking, sweeping, dusting, mending, and general moil and toil. There is never one working consecutive hour in which she can, without a a sense of neglected duties, rest absolutely. She spends day after day in the seclusion of home, without anything sparkling or merry to inspire, with no very ennobling thoughts, except in the direction of religion, and her religion is too often a compound of ascetic self-denial and sentimental fervor, rather than of high principles and holy love. When she is unequal to the performance of her tasks, she takes tea, and as her nerves become more and more diseased, more tea. With neuralgic pain often seizing her in the beginning of that slow decline which saps the life and happiness of so many of our women before they reach the middle age, she is irritable. Little trials cause her torture, and as she sees herself falling below her ideal, she loses heart, thinks herself a miserable sinner, and very likely doubts her claim to the name Christian. Doubtless she will gain spiritual help by praying, but she had better confess to a physician than to a clergyman. She does not bear petty crosses with unfailing sweetness, and perhaps says many a hasty word of which she repents, only to repeat the fault again, despite her prayers and struggles. What ails her is not temper, but tiredness, and tea, and too hot rooms, and a lack of variety and cheer in her life. Doubtless God could keep one in a holy and patient frame of mind who constantly violated every law of health, but there is not the least warrant for believing that he will do so, because if human suffering means anything, it means that we are to learn by it, not only spiritual truths, but that the soul and body are like yoked oxen—if one lies down the other must, or be sorely cramped. No delusion is more common than that illness is conducive to saintliness. The most devout Christian will have the nightmare if he eats half a mince pie before going to bed, and a crusty temper next morning, and his spiritual agonies will not save him in the future, unless he adds to his faith knowledge.—Woman's Journal.

Americanisms.

Among the best known Americanisms unused, and scarcely understood in England, are locomotive for engine, railroad for railway, horse cars for tramway, depot for station, switch for shunt, baggage for luggage, store for shop, bureau for chest of drawers, clever for good-natured, boards for deals, calico for prints, corn for maize, dry goods for draper's articles or haberdashery, fall for autumn, dress for gown, fix for repair, guess for think, hardware for ironmongery, hold for stop, homely for ugly, loafer for lounger, mad for angry, mail for post, pantaloons for trousers, vest for jacket, quite for very, rooster for cock, sick for ill, sleigh for sledge, stoop for porch, suspenders for braces, venison for deer meat and woods for wood.—Ex.

A Controversy. — A religious controversy is thus illustrated: 1st, Two beans and two beans make four beans. 2d, I beg your pardon, sir, but according to my arithmetic, three beans and one bean make four beans. 3d, Gentlemen, I pity your stupidity and your ignorance, and lament the mischief you are working in inculcating that but two parcels of beans can make four beans, while both history and geometry so clearly establish that it takes four separate and individnal beans to make four beans.

Childrens' Corner.

Obey.

Among the first lessons taught children from the Bible, those relating to parental obedience seem es pecially to claim attention. When the fact that God requires children to obey their parents is well established in their minds, a very important object is gained. Will they not listen with fearful attention, with filial confidence, when told that God says, "Hearken unto thy father that has begotten thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old;" "Children, obey your parents in the Lord, for this is right;" "Honor thy father and mother (which is the first commandment with promise), that it may be well witn thee, and that thou mayest live long on the earth;" "Children, obey your parents in all things; for this is well pleasing unto the Lord!"

Then, when reminded that obeying their parents is not only right, but well pleasing unto the Lord—that with it is connected the promise of long life and well-being—

"Promises of life eternal, of a crown that never fades,
Of a kingdom full of glory, which no sorrow e'er invades;"

and that disobedience is connected with fearful denunciations—when told these things, will they not feel that, with all the heart, they will seek to render cheerful and ready obedience?—D. F. Newton.

"I'll Keep my Eyes Shut."

Little Henry had been quite sick. When he was slowly recovering, and just able to be up and about the room, he was left alone a little while, when his sister came in eating a piece of cake. Henry's mother had told him he must eat nothing but what she gave him, and that it would not be safe for him to have what the other children did till he was stronger.

His appetite was coming back; the cake looked very inviting; he wanted very much to take a bite of it; and his kind sister would gladly have given it to him. What did he do?

"Jennie," said he, "you must run right out of the room away from me with that cake; and I'll keep my eyes shut while you go, so that I shan't want it."

Wasn't that a good way for a little boy of seven years to get out of temptation? I think so. And when I heard of it, I thought that there are a great many times when children, and grown up people too, if they would remember little Henry's way would escape from sin and trouble.

"Turn away mine eyes from beholding vanity, and quicken me in thy way," is the Psalmist's prayer; and it is a good one for each of us.

A Little Girl's Prayer.

During the terrible yellow-fever epidemic just past in Vicksburg, many incidents worthy to be remembered have occurred. Among them one of the most touching and instructive is published in the Sunday School Times:

Some two weeks ago a little orphan girl, named Maggie Beggs, between six and seven years old, was taken with the fever at the house of Colonel Martin Keary, a noble and generous Irishman, and a friend of the widow and orphan, who has since died of the fever. Little Maggie was very sick. One afternoon Dr. Shannon, the attending physician, an excellent Christian gentleman, who has had great success in treating the fever, called to see his patients of whom he had a number in the house. After examining the little girl, he said, in a low tone of voice, as he supposed, to Mrs. Wilson, the lady in charge, "You need not do anything for Maggie; she will die during the night." With senses all quickened at such time, the child heard it and immediately began to pray!

She was a child of the Sabbath school, and evidently had a faithful teacher. She repeated all the little prayers she had been taught or learned. And she commenced to improvise prayers of her own, in substance like the following:

"O, good Lord! blessed Father! don't let me die. Dear Father in heaven, I don't want to die now. I don't want to go down in that dark hole, in the cold grave! O, Lord, I have no father or mother on earth to take take care of me! You are my heavenly Father, and have promised to take care of me. Good Lord! please let me live a little longer. I have tried to be a good girl; and if the Lord will spare me now, I will try to be a better girl than ever and love him so good. All I ask for Jesus' sake."

So the child continued to pray almost during the entire night. When the morning light came, there was a great change in little Maggie. She was better, and improved rapidly. In a few days little Maggie Beggs was running about the house and yard as lively as she could be, and as bright and sweet as a May morning.

Now, what do you call that? Was it chance? Did it happen so? No, never—never! It was in answer to humble, child-like importunate, trusting prayer. May the Lord help other children, and older people, too, to imitate the beautiful example of this little girl!

Sins Blotted Out.—"According unto the multitude of thy tender mercies blot out my transgressions." (Ps. 51: 1.)

A little boy was once much puzzled about sins being blotted out, and said: "I cannot think what becomes of all the sins God forgives, mother."

"Why, Charlie, can you tell me where all the figures are you wrote on your slate yesterday?"

"I washed them all out, mother."

"And where are they, then?"

"Why, they are nowhere; they are gone," said Charlie.

Just so it is with the believer's sins; they are gone—blotted out—"remembered no more."

"As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us."

A Sunday-school teacher was describing the wonderful ladder of Jacob's vision—"as high as the sky." After he had vividly pictured its great height, he asked one of his little scholars: "Wouldn't you be afraid to climb a ladder as high as that?"

His apt reply was: "No, I wouldn't if God held it."

Puzzle Corner.

The long enigma of two weeks ago, Oct. 24th, has such unusual and entertaining answers that we are anxious that all who can should study it out before the answer is printed. So we give a little longer time for our young folks to guess it.

ENIGMA.

I am composed of 69 letters.

My 19, 8, 65, 32, 23, 59, 10, 57, 48 and 38 should be avoided.

My 47, 54, 36, 13, 4, 17, 69 and 41 has an open countenance.

My 68, 22, 2, 40, 30, 50, 54 and 14 resembles the above.

My 21, 64, 27, 42, 5, 28, 11, 57 and 3 is a kind of drum.

My 60, 16, 39, 55, 34, 58, 51 and 43 were household furniture in ye olden time.

My 6, 5, 42, 66, 22 and 31 is used by carpenters.

My 67, 44, 61, 45 and 25 is good to eat.

My 29, 18 and 62 we should give to those who need it.

My 7, 26 and 1 is a verb.

My 37, 20, 12 and 53 we should always be.

My 9, 15, 24 and 33 pertains to a watch.

My 46 and 49 are vowels.

My whole would be sound planks in a political platform.

Home and Farm.

L. J. Strout, Esq., of Limington, a successful fruit grower and farmer, has received an order from a merchant in London, England, for several hundred barrels of apples. Mr. Strout was the gentleman who, two years ago, wrote a letter and enclosed money for the payment of a returned letter and placed the letter in the middle of a barrel of apples that he was putting up for parties, to be sent out of the State, but its destination was unknown to him. The apples were opened in London and the letter found therein and all the interrogatories kindly answered as to price paid, condition of apples, etc. This letter has thus led to a correspondence and may prove to be a profitable one to Mr. Strout.—Ex.

The Care of Cattle.

While some cattle receive no attention, others receive too much; that is to say, they are cared for so tenderly that some of the necessary precautions against disease and the existence of too great tenderness of constitution are neglected. Cattle should have shelter and comfortable shelter in winter, but the stabling should not be so close as to prevent a free circulation of the air and ventilation, nor should there be such a perpetual keeping of them in the stable that the least exposure to the world will make them chilly. Cattle, as well as human beings, need fresh air, and like human beings, pampering in a warm place all the time, will make them over-sensitive to the cold, weaken the constitution in time, and induce disease.

The treatment of animals should not differ much in principle from the treatment we accord to ourselves or our families. Animals appreciate care and kindness, and seldom forget neglect or harshness. This is very much like the children around our hearthstones. All of our domestic animals have some degree of sensitiveness, and the other feelings common to humanity, but in none of them is humanity more developed than in the cow. She is a sensitive, retiring, delicately constructed creature, that can be faithfully described as a bundle of nerves; and yet how terribly is her nature often misunderstood or neglected. Perhaps she may be subjected to actual cruelty,, and yet is expected to perform the functions of her being as faithfully as if she were treated in the kindest manner. Even at the time when kindness and care are most necessary - when she is carrying a calf—she is often treated with no more consideration than if she were an inanimate rock. At such time the naturally nervous and timid creature is a thousand times more nervous and timid. Any unusual noise, the firing of a gun, thunder and lightning, the barking of a strange dog, or the attack of a vicious cow, will frequently cause fright which will cause the cow to cast her calf—thus showing how very sensitive the animal is. And yet after the grossest neglect, long continued often, her owner wonders what can be the reason for the cow's casting her calf. The cause is plain in many cases, and can be found in utter neglect. No care has been taken of her, she has been exposed to all sorts of annoyances, and finally a sudden fright does the work.

Too great care cannot be exercised with a cow in calf, especially in these days when the country is full of worthless curs that prowl around, often worrying stock of all kinds. It is common to count the depredations of dogs only with reference to the damage they inflict upon sheep, but there is not a shadow of doubt that they are the cause of many a cow slinking her calf. The Western Rural has always waged a war against worthless dogs, because of their damage to the sheep industry of the country, but here is another charge which it wishes to make against them, and one which is seldom laid at their door. Against their depredations, however, and the various other dangers which beset the cow when in this condition, watchfulness and care will do something to guard, although it may not always wholly prevent them.—Western Rural.

Hanging Pictures.—No picture ought to be hung higher than the height of the human eye when the owner of the eye is standing. It is the almost universal rule in our houses to hang pictures much above this level, and they cannot be enjoyed there. If the picture is a portrait, or if it have human faces in it, its eyes should look as nearly into ours as possible; and if there be no such simple guide, perhaps a good rule will be to have the line that divides the picture horizontally into equal parts, level with the eye. If one starts in hanging pictures with the determination to place them so that they can be easily seen and enjoyed without stretching the neck the least, or stooping the body, he will be pretty sure to do well.—Scribner's Monthly.

Charcoal for Poultry.—The Germantown Telegraph says there is one thing which nature does not supply, and which civilization renders quite necessary to fowls. It is charcoal. But charcoal made of wood does not answer the purpose; it has no taste of food, is not attractive to the fowl, and is seldom eaten. But if any one will put an ear of ripe corn into the fire till the grains are well charred, and then shell off the corn, and throw it to his flock, he will see an eagerness developed and a healthy condition brought about which will make a decided improvement. All pale combs will become a bright red, that busy song which precedes laying will be heard, and the average yield of eggs will be greatly increased.

Religious Intelligence.

THE UNITED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Rehamah Congregational church, Hamilton, Miss., August 25th, 1878.

Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Sanford Co., Ala., September, 1878.

New Hope Methodist church, Lowndes Co., Miss., October, 1878.

What name shall be next?

—It is reported that the widow of the late Pres. Chas. G. Finney of Oberlin is filling the place of the absent pastor of the Congregational church in San Buenventura, Cal., with profit to the people.

—A remarkable case is reported to us from the vicinity of Boston. A while since the Methodist Episcopal church of Maplewood, six miles from Boston, was scandalized by the criminal conduct of a member, and when discipline was attempted it proved a failure, because the man was a Mason and was shielded by the Masons in the church. This fact was so notorious that a considerable number of the God-fearing members of the church withdrew from its fellowship, fearing to remain in connection with so grievous a sin. This body meets in a pleasant hall and has regular worship, though their organization is not yet complete. The Spirit of God has owned their coming out from the hypocrisy and idolatry lurking in the M. E church and they have been greatly blessed and sustained, according to the promise of God's Word.

FREE BAPTIST.

—A correspondent of the Morning Star, Dover, N. H., some time since wrote as follows of the renunciation of Rev. Isaac Hyatt:

"We are informed that most of our clergymen and many of the laymen have received a copy of the Cynosure containing the narrative of Rev. Isaac Hyatt's experience with Freemasonry. We have received a copy ourself, and have performed the duty of reading the narrative. Bro. Hyatt does not attempt to make out a case against Masonry. He simply narrates, in a quiet, dignified way, the particulars of his taking the first degree, which is as far as he went, tells how that oath disturbed his peace of mind, and describes his final withdrawal from all relations to the order. He leaves the reader to draw his own inferences. These will perhaps vary according to certain preconceived opinions or prejudices concerning Masonry, but the narrative really deserves the candid attention of fair-minded men, and a conscientious, not a passionate, consideration of the statements and inferences which it presents. Coming from a sincere Christian man and being addressed to his brethren, it should be read and reflected upon by them as Christians, and not as Masons or Anti-masons."

BAPTIST.

—The letter of Rev. Joel H. Austin, on another page, explains itself. The council was composed of delegates from the following Baptist churches: The First of Quincy, Galesburg, Canton and Lyndon, Illinois; Burlington, Mt. Pleasant, Denmark, Pisgah and Riverton, Iowa. It met in Spring Creek Union church "by the invitation of the minority of the Spring Creek Baptist church, and the recommendation of the Burlington Baptist Association," and the clerk says, "carefully considered the evidence laid before us." The verdict of the council was, as is usual in such ex-parte affairs, very decidedly against the church and pastor, whose defence they neither heard nor asked for, as the latter states. It would be of interest to know the Masonic complexion of this body and especially of the managing minds in it. Our correspondents in that locality will do a good work by looking up this matter.

—Prof. Edgren, of the Scandinavian department at the Baptist Theological Seminary, at Morgan Park, near Chicago, has just received letters from four Swedish churches that can support pastors, but who cannot get them. Young Scandinavian brethren are waiting and anxious to enter the Seminary to prepare to preach the Gospel to their people, but the means to aid them are wanting. The Standard makes an appeal in behalf of this important work.

—Rev. W. W. Ames, of Menominee, was re-elected Secretary of the Wisconsin State Association last week at the Waupun Convention.

—Rev. S. C. Rice of Azatlan, Wis., whose chart of scripture history was spoken of in these columns some weeks ago. Bro. Rice has had his ingenious and interesting work transferred to glass so that it can be shown with a scioptican. He desires a good and responsible man to assist him in placing this excellent work before the public, and any whose opportunities and inclinations are favorable will do well to open a correspondence.

—Rev. Dr. W. W. Everts, who resigned his twenty years pastorate of the First Baptist church of this city a short time ago, on last Friday evening at the covenant meeting urged that the church unanimously accept his resignation and release him. Many members were visibly affected and very few could be induced to vote, so reluctant were the members to break a relation so long and close. The hope is that some arrangements can be made for the removal of an oppressive debt through the change made by Dr. Everts' resignation.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. N. Wardner conducted a holiness convention at the Wheaton church, beginning Wednesday last and continuing over the Sabbath. The meetings were a precious season to many souls. Members from the other churches of the place were active in promoting the meetings.

—The Preachers' Association of the Iowa Conference is meeting this week in Elgin, Fayette county.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton, editor of the Wesleyan, expects to be at the National Convention at Worcester, and is planning as usual for work on the way. He does not believe in passing by opportunities for Christian labor.

—Rev. D. S. Kinney, the connectional agent, is not yet fully recovered from his severe attack of malarial fever which cut short his work among the conferences and sent him home to Syracuse. It is hoped he will soon be restored to soundness.

—The church at Varick, New York, just dedicated, sprung from the setting forth of Gospel truth against the lodge by Bro. Stratton in a course of lectures there two or three years ago. As a result the Christ-abiding members of the Methodist Episcopal church could not endure any longer to fellowship the lodge and withdrew. A great revival followed, and now after two years time a church of seventy is gathered worshiping in a fine building worth $5,000. Truly the Lord knoweth them that are his. To his name be all the glory!

—Rev. J. T. Kiggins, president of the Kansas Conference, is located this year at Topeka. He is rallying the Wesleyan forces of the State, setting all the preachers at work, and finding out all the destitute places and making provision for them as far as possible. He calls for help from men who hate the "lodges, rum, tobacco, and all that the devil loves and uses to entrap unwary souls."

FREE METHODIST.

—Rev. B. T. Roberts of Rochester, N. Y., one of the general superintendents of the church, goes to California this month to look after the interests of the denomination.

—The General Conference last month re-elected elders Roberts and Hart superintendents; reduced the ratio of representation; added a prohibition to the general rules barring out secret societies, which will become a law when passed upon by the annual conferences; and appointed a large committee to compile a denominational hymn-book. Two new conferences were formed; one embracing the portions of Illinois and Indiana south of a line from Keokuk, on the Mississippi river, to Peoria, Ill., thence east through Logansport, to Peru, Ind., and the portion of Indiana west of the railway from Peru through Indianapolis, to New Boston, on the Ohio river, and to be known as the Indiana and Central Illinois Conference. The second, called the Ohio Conference, to embrace the State of Ohio, and the portion of Indiana east of the Indiana and Central Illinois Conference. The State of Texas was added to the Kansas Conference, Dakota to Minnesota, and Ontario to North Michigan. A project was discussed to establish a publishing house, purchase the Free Methodist and have it conducted by persons elected by the conference. The matter is deferred for the present.

FRIENDS.

—A very hopeful work has been begun in Mexico by Samuel A. Purdie, in the neighborhood of Matamoras. Two Mexicans assist him and their labors have extended to Jiminez, 200 miles south of Matamoras, a town of some three thousand inhabitants. This work was commenced, says the Christian Worker, under the most marked evidence that it was of the Lord, both in opening the door for laborers, and calling the laborers to the field. So far as we know, no other work in the foreign mission field, undertaken by Friends, has yielded so much fruit in proportion to the capital invested, as this. One reason we believe why our laborers have been so blessed in their labors is, that they have been faithful in presenting the gospel as a gospel of peace.

GENERAL.

—The American Bible Society has procured a new stop-cylinder press, upon which alone the whole Bible can be printed every minute. This is the briefest and most significant commentary possible on the achievements of modern invention in the dissemination of the ever-living divine work. What a preacher the modern printing press has become!

—Rev. Dr. Gray, of Scotland, recently declared, while speaking in favor of an effort making at this time by the Presbytery of Edinburgh to abolish fast days preparatory to the observance of the Lord's Supper, that these days do serious harm to religion, in that while they were intended to aid in preparing for that holy sacrament, now they are largely spent in thoughtless frivolity.

—Of its work in Polynesia, the London Missionary Society says: "The seventy islands under our charge, with their 80,000 inhabitants, have all been Christianized, native churches and congregations have everywhere been established, and, as in older Christian countries, in each group an institution is maintained for the education of a proper native ministry, and the employment and support of all Christian ordinances is thrown almost entirely upon the converts themselves. The superintendence of the churches, ministers and members is almost the only thing now provided by the society; and the number of English missionaries have been gradually reduced to fifteen.

—The Rev. Gilbert De La Matyr, who has just been elected to Congress from Indiana, has been a minister of the Methodist Episcopal church for many years; but when, some time since, he applied to the Methodist conference of Indiana for appointments to preach, he was refused, on the ground that he was taking too active a part in politics. Some years since, while preaching in central New York, he was defeated at the polls for Prison Inspector in that State.

—For more than three centuries the valuable catechism that Calvin prepared and used in the French language in his church at Geneva, has been apparently lost. It is known to have been Calvin's first French work (with the exception of a preface to an edition of the New Testament in 1535) and to have been printed in 1536 at Geneva. Recently this work has come to light. In looking over a collection of manuscripts, known as the Du Puy Collection, in the National Library of France, in Paris, M. H. Bordier found a pamphlet of forty-eight pages which prove to have been the Catechism and Confession of Faith used in the church of Geneva. This work has just been re-published and is said to be a work emphatically for edification.

—At a ministers' meeting in this city lately, Rev. W. Jessup, a missionary to Asia Minor, pictured in glowing terms the benefits of Anglo Turkish alliance from his standpoint. He said: When the war began between Russia and England his sympathies, and the sympathies of every American in the East, were with Russia. But after the war had closed and the question of reconstruction arose, there could be no doubt but that Great Britain was the nation to institute and carry out the great reforms that were necessary. One of the most important yet undertaken was the abolition of tithing, which had been a method of oppression impossible to conceive by one never having had experience of it. The tithe gatherers were entitled to a tenth; they seldom took less than one-fourth of the produce of the country. The speaker knew of a beautiful village in Lebanon where the people had cut down all their fruit trees because the Multeezim had got in the habit of taking everything of each year's crop. Now, Lord Salisbury had declared in Parliament that tithing was to be abolished. There were other reforms, such as the liberty of the press and a change in judiciary. The speaker never heard of a judge in the Turkish empire who could not be bribed. He himself had a case in court in Beyrout last year. Fortunately all the witnesses on both sides were Mussulmans, as Christians' evidence was not admissible. He was plaintiff and had four Mohammedan witnesses. The defendant, a Mohammedan, had twenty-five witnesses. The Cadi heard the testimony of the plaintiff's witnesses, and then gravely gave a judgment in his favor without hearing the defendant. Very much surprised, the speaker asked a Mufti who was friendly to him if that was law. "Yes," replied the Mufti, "if four Mussulmans declare in the face of God that a certain thing is true it must be true, and the law would stultify itself if it permitted other witnesses to declare it untrue."

Thanksgiving Day.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.—The President has issued the following proclamation, setting apart Thursday, Nov. 28th, as a day of thanksgiving:

By the President of the United States:

The recurrence of that season, at which it is the habit of our people to make devout and public confession of their constant dependence upon Divine favor for all the good gifts of life and happiness, and of public peace and prosperity, exhibits, in the record of the year, abundant reasons for gratitude and thanksgiving. Exuberent harvests, productive mines, ample crops of staples of trade and manufactures, have enriched the country. The resources thus furnished to our reviving industry and expanding commerce are hastening the day when discords and distresses through the length and breadth of the land will, under the continued favor of Providence, have given way to confidence and energy and assured prosperity. Peace with all nations has remained unbroken, domestic tranquility has prevailed, and the institutions of liberty and justice which the wisdom and virtue of our fathers established remain the glory and defense of their children. The general prevalence of the blessings of health throughout our wide land has made more conspicuous the sufferings and sorrows which the dark shadow of pestilence has cast upon a portion of our people. This heavy affliction even the Divine Ruler has tempered to the suffering communities; an universal sympathy and succor have flowed to their relief, and the whole nation may rejoice in the unity of spirit in our people by which they cheerfully share another's burdens.

Now, therefore, I, Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, do appoint Thursday, the 28th day of November next, as a day of national thanksgiving and prayer; and I earnestly recommend that, withdrawing themselves from secular cares and labors, the people of the United States do meet together on that day in their respective places of worship, there to give thanks and praise to Almighty God for his mercies, and to to devoutly seech their continuance.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 30th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and the independence of the United States the one hundred and third.

R. B. HAYES.

By the President:
WM. M. EVARTS, Sec'y of State.

News of the Week.

—Dr. Babcock, who was once wealthy, and has become well known as the inventor of the fire extinguisher, is now said to be an outcast in Oakland city, Cal.

—The Halladay Co. at Batavia, Ill., shipped lately to Egypt, two immense box pumps to elevate water from the river Nile for irrigating purposes. These pumps are connected by a walking beam, and raise three barrels of water per stroke. The pumps are operated by a twenty-two foot Halladay windmill.

—Our indebtedness to the people of other countries has been estimated at $250,000,000; though some statisticians who claim to be authority reduce the amount one-fifth. It is not more than five years since our indebtedness abroad was nearly four times as great. We have been gradually relieving ourselves of this heavy obligation to foreigners by assuming it ourselves, and if this process continues for a few years longer we shall be our own creditors, and will then be in a condition like unto England, nearly the whole of whose indebtedness is held by her own people.

—Last week was a terrible one for shipping on Lake Michigan. A whole fleet of vessels were beached or sunk along the east shore. At Luddington a large grain-laden schooner having shifted her cargo was in danger of going down at anchor, and forty men were employed to shovel the grain over. The vessel drifted on the bar and became a complete wreck, the crew and men taking to the rigging whence they were rescued with the greatest difficulty the next day. Another vessel was lost near Muskegon with several of the crew. Reports are anxiously awaited from several other craft, and it is feared they have gone down with all on board.

—A Chicago jury decided the case of a wife murderer last Saturday night in this wise: "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty in manner and form as charged in the indictment, and fix his punishment at death by hanging. We, the jury, also find the defendant, Jeremiah Kennedy, to be insane at the present time." After being taken to his cell the prisoner showed a very sane kind of rage at the result. He will be tried for insanity, and if not sent to the asylum will be hung.

—The public debt statement for October shows a decrease of the public debt amounting to over $3,000,000, about the same as in September. The balance of trade still continues to be largely in favor of the United States. The returns for September show that the excess of exports over imports during that month was more than $20,500,000, an increase of over $5,000,000 above the excess for September, 1877. The same returns show that the imports of coin to this country during September were more than $1,000,000 more than the exports, showing an increase of nearly 30 per cent. over the same balance last year.

—The United States Consul at Tangier has transmitted a dispatch to the State Department, giving an account of the fearful ravages of the cholera in the interior of Morocco. The misery among the people is great, and business is almost completely paralyzed. The cholera is sweeping over the middle and the southern provinces, and hundreds are dying of starvation. To all these miseries, small-pox and malignant fevers add to their horaors.

—It is reported that the negotiations between England and Portugal, in regard to the cession of Delagoa Bay, an inlet of the Indian Ocean, in Southeastern Africa, fifty-five miles in length from north to south, and twenty miles across, have been completed.

—Since the yellow fever appeared in the South last summer there have been 12,617 deaths. Of these 3,917 occurred at New Orleans, 3,108 at Memphis, 1,118 at Vicksburg, 327 at Grenada and 314 at Holly Springs. Thirty-two deaths from yellow fever occurred at Cairo, thirty in New York, thirty-one in St. Louis, thirty-two in the vicinity of Gallipolis, sixteen at Cincinnati and one in Chicago.

—The official estimates required for the postal service the next fiscal year aggregate $36,551,900. The estimated total postal revenues will fall short of supplying this sum by $5,907,876. The amount appropriated for the current fiscal year was $33,256,373, of which $4,222,274 comes from the general treasury. It is estimated therefore that $1,685,631 more than this year's appropriation from the treasury will be required for the next fiscal year.

—The agent of the Nez Perces Indians, Oregon, in submitting to the commissioner of Indian affairs his eighth annual report, states that during the year the Indians have been unusually quiet, as well as industrious. The departure of the non-treaty element from the section of country in the vicinity of the reservation has resulted in good to the treaty-abiding portion of the tribe, who are successfully endeavoring to lead a civilized life. A few non-treaty Indians remain, but seldom come on the reservation to create trouble. The census of the tribe shows a total of 1,156 men, women and children. There are 3,122 acres under cultivation, and the Indians harvested 20,000 bushels of wheat, 6,500 bushels of oats and 3,500 bushels of corn. They have raised more than enough for their own subsistence. There is an orchard of 3,000 apple trees upon the reservation. The average attendance at school is 48.

—About 60 per cent of the looms and spindles in the Lancashire and Cheshire cotton districts of England have stopped or are working on short time. The agricultural laborers in Kent and Sussex counties threaten a general strike, because of the announced intention to reduce their wages.

FOREIGN.

—A letter from Odessa to a German newspaper presents a startling picture of the Nihilist movement in Russia. The sect it says has penetrated the universities, and even the military academies, and the police are afraid to make arrests, fearing the sentence of the secret revolutionary tribunals.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The Pall Mall Gazette editorially declares that the Treaty of Berlin is a failure; that it will be impossible by it to arrive at a pacific solution, and that the sooner this fact is recognized the better. "Peace," it says, "must be commanded by the arrest of the reckless power which has kept Europe in commotion for years past, and now threatens to break away from all law and all restraint. If this is only to be done in concert, and the concert is a give and take matter for the benefits of which all parties must pay something, it follows that we should not shrink from any price in reason."

—A memorial to Thomas Clarkson, the advocate of the abolition of slavery, has been placed in Playford church, Ipswich, England. It consists of a marble medallion portrait with an appropriate inscription.

—Louis, king of Portugal, and son-in-law of the late king of Italy, Victor Emanuel, is under such an apprehension or fear of being assassinated, that, it is said, he will travel on the river Tigris only in a war frigate, and has also placed extra guards aroond his royal palace.

—The thirty-second report of the British commissioners in lunacy shows that the number of "registered lunatics, idiots and persons of unsound mind in England and Wales" has increased from 36,762 to 68,538 in the last nineteen years.

—The Oldham, England, cotton operatives on Saturday unanimously resolved to resist the proposed reduction of 10 per cent on wages. Twenty thousand hands and eight million spindles will be affected by this action.

—A police magistrate of Montreal committed six Orangemen for trial for belonging to an illegal society. When the case came to trial the judge charged the jury that they should acquit these men on the ground that their assembling in their lodge-room was not illegal.

—The Conservatives in England, says an Inter-ocean dispatch, who questioned the wisdom of Beaconsfield's Eastern policy, and predicted that the diplomatic arrangements at Berlin would prove to have settled nothing for European peace, while it involved England in new and weighty responsibilities, political, moral and financial, without adequate return, are winning numerous adherents in view of current events. Little heed is given to the sensational assertions that Russia proposes to renew an aggressive war, but everybody sees that she has neither been put in bonds, nor compelled to retire from her menacing position. The Afghanistan policy is also criticised as another blunder, because war with the Ameer, even though British arms shall achieve success in the field, will, diplomatically, level the mountain barriers still separating Russia from British India, and give the Czar active sympathizers and invaluable allies if ever, in the future, he shall justify the English jealousy and distrust of his purposes, which afford motive for the Afghanistan campaign. There is a decidedly uneasy feeling in intelligent circles, caused by a conviction that, unless the British policy is radically changed, next spring will find England involved in an expensive war, at a time when the country more than ever before needs repose, economy, and reduced taxation, in order to revive her languishing industries and relieve popular distress.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract,

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND EDNAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World.
This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract.

Publishers' Department.

A friend who has not "plenty of money" made some unsuccessful efforts for subscribers, but determined to act promptly sends nine subscriptions for six months each and his own for a year. Another writes: "I see by the paper that the price is reduced," and sends $1.50 for the year. Imitate the friend who sends the club, please. The Cynosure now does not pay its bills; but if you will make the list 10,000 strong it will do so.

Rev. H. H. Hinman sends five for one year each. John Finney, Mansfield, O., and Peter Howe, Wenona, Ill., send three for one year each.

Henry Kumler, Dayton, Ohio, and J. P. Stoddard send two for one year each.

Terms begin

Dec. 10th, 1878.
Mar. 18th, 1879.
Sept. 2nd, 1879.
Dec. 9th, 1879.

WINTER TERM BEGINS DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

We desire to ask the attention of every reader of the CYNOSURE to the advantages offered by this Institution. An able and experienced Faculty, thoroughly devoted to the work of the Institution, are now harmoniously laboring to make this College thorough in each department, and so economical that its advantages can be secured by all.

FOURTEEN TEACHERS

are engaged in the College, the Preparatory School, the Sub Preparatory Department, the Department of Music and the School of Drawing and Painting. In each of these Departments, students can enter at any time and advance as rapidly as their abilities will permit. Prof. Baker in Vocal Music and on the Organ gives instruction at very reasonable rates while Miss Brownehas charge of the Piano Room.

PENMANSHIP

German, Free Hand Drawing and Book-keeping are taught by excellent teachers without any extra charge. Vocal Music costs only one dollar per term. Hereafter, as for some time past, special attention will be paid to the study of Elocution and Rhetoric as connected with practical

ORATORICAL WORK.

The charge for tuition is eleven dollars per term. Young ladies can have Room, Board and Tuition for forty-five dollars per term of thirteen weeks. Persons from neighboring towns who wish to be at home from Friday evening to the following Monday can have a reduction of one fifth on the charge for board.

BOARDING PLACES

in private families can be secured at from three to four dollars per week. Persons who board themselves can get along at an expense of from one to one and a half dollars per week. In short any one who can live at home can live in Wheaton and secure a thorough education.

OUR GRADUATES

are successfully teaching, preaching, practising law and conducting mercantile affairs in many parts of the country. Young men and women who have a fair elemental English Education can graduate from our Preparatory or Normal School in two or three years.

DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

Our next term begins on this date, at which time we hope to greet many old and many new students. If you wish any further information write to the undersigned and it will be cheerfully furnished.

ILLINOIS STATE MEETING.

NOVEMBER 20, 21 AND 22.

The Annual Convention of the State Christian Association will be held in the College chapel at Wheaton, Nov. 20th, 21st and 22d, opening on Wednesday evening with an address by the president of the Association, Bishop Milton Wright of Cedar Rapids, Iowa. Other able speakers will be present, among whom are expected Elder J. L. Barlow, Rev. D. P. Baker of the "Free Methodist," Rev. W. Warner, delegate of the Wisconsin Wesleyan conference, and the fraternal delegation of the Wisconsin State Association. The great work of this convention, will be the establishing of missions free from the lodge, and forming a basis for a Christian alliance or United Churches of Christ. This will be the most important meeting ever held by the Association and every friend of reform in the State who can possibly be present should come. The homes of the Wheaton friends will make every delegate welcome. All delegates coming over the Chicago and North-Western road, paying full fare, will be returned FOR ONE-FIFTH FARE.

Delegates coming on the C. B. & Q. railway, reaching Aurora at 2 P. M. can reach Wheaton at 5:30 via the Fox River line to Geneva, on the C. & N. W. Those coming on later trains will be met at Naperville at 6 P. M. with conveyances.

IOWA.

The annual meeting of the Anti-secret Association of the State of Iowa, in accordance with the known wish of a majority of the officers, as also at the request of other friends, is hereby called to meet at Cedar Rapids (instead of Chariton) on Tuesday, Dec. 10. at 2:30 P. M. to continue through the following day. Important matters will demand attention. Able and interesting addresses may be expected. Auxiliary associations and churches in sympathy with the movement are hereby urged to send delegates. All friends of reform are hereby invited to attend this Convention.

C. D. TRUMBULL, Rec. Sec'y.

Topics of the Time.

Last week in Worcester the topic of topics was politics and Butler. This week it is the National Convention and the lamentation for the "widow's son."

The papers report at length the New York conference on the second coming of Christ. A convention of similar character but less influential, met a few weeks since at Toronto. The papers read at the New York meeting will be read by a few; in more, probably, will spring up an inquiring spirit that may lead them to the "precious word," where are written words that are the life of the world and the hope of the Christian church. In other ways the meeting will indirectly be a blessing in encouraging those who hold the hope of Christ's coming feebly or tremblingly, and in turning the thought of the church into the future from a too exclusive resting on the past, thus inspiring faith and weakening the hold of formalism begotten of narrow experiences. But had Christ really come while the conference was sitting would he have found faith there? With which company would some of its members have met their Lord? with those who rise to meet him in the air, or with the false-swearers, the infidels, the deists, the rejecters of Christ in the lodge?—with which, for they have long professed fellowship for both?

New York was horrified last Thursday by a robbery of a strange and unusual nature. During the last few months the ghoulish work of despoiling new-made graves has been so great as to cause serious apprehensions in the vicinity of every medical college; but the trade of "body-snatching" had a "new departure" when a company of bold villains in the center of a great city, whose every point is guarded by watchful eyes, dug into a vault, broke open a triple coffin, and bore away the decomposing remains of A. T. Stewart, now nearly three years buried. The audacity, the horrible nature of the deed is amazing. It was equalled in boldness by the Manhattan bank robbers and was undertaken for the same end—a reward. But who can measure the avarice of a New York thug who can plan and execute so loathsome a business! The worst of it is the robbers have everything their own way in the matter; and they will not be likely to give up their booty for so small a sum as twenty-five thousand dollars. The problem of crime has some new features in these late affairs, that will puzzle our wisest law-makers.

As the facts in the case of Miss Owens in Salt Lake City come out, the revolting character of Mormonism is revealed in all its darkness and crime. Miles, the seducer in the name of religion, has been bound over to the grand jury, but eleven of the fifteen members of this body are Mormons, and what can be done? The witnesses, generally, will not testify where their secrets are involved in their replies. The daughter of the late Brigham Young personated Eve in the endowment house ceremony of Miss Owens, but refused to answer the question of the court, being bound by the horrible oaths of Mormonism. Last week, the non-Mormon women at Salt Lake at a public meeting adopted a thrilling address to Mrs. President Hayes and the women of the United States setting forth the inactivity, if not the collusion of Congress in this great crime, and the infamy and degradation of the Mormon system. They appeal to the Christian women of the nation to join them in the holy crusade against the evil. May God grant success to their effort; and withered be the hand that would be raised against them! The appeal closes with these words: "We call upon the Christian women of the United States to join us in urging Congress to empower its courts to arrest the further progress of this evil, and to delay the admittance of Utah into Statehood until this is accomplished; and we ask you to circulate and publish our appeal in order to arouse public sentiment, which should be against an abomination that peculiarly oppresses and stigmatizes woman. It is our purpose to ask names to the petition designed for Congress, and we hope also that every minister of the Gospel will commend it to the women of his congregation, and that all Christian associations will do what they can to obtain signatures. With cordial co-operation and concerted action of the Christian women of our land, we may confidently hope that the great sin of polygamy may be abolished."

The failure of the Bank of Glasgow last month has brought on a financial crisis in Scotland as disastrous and wide-spread as that of Jay Cook in 1873. One after another the great firms that leaned on the bank have sunk, and the whole people feel the shock. The great ship-building companies of the Clyde have resolved to enforce a reduction of wages, and the ship-builders' union, a powerful society numbering twenty thousand in Great Britain and Ireland has struck. There is every prospect of a long and bitter struggle which will be most disastrous in the present circumstances, and will tend to drive the ship-building trade to other and perhaps distant localities. The builders on the Delaware see their opportunity and are on the alert.

In the struggle between Bismarck and the Socialists of Germany the views of President White of Cornell University are suggestive. He has just returned from Europe, where he was one of the United States Commissioners at the Paris Exposition. He believes the attempt to suppress the Socialists by force is a great mistake, since the main incentive for the uprising is the terrible pressure of the military system. He says: "I traveled from the frontiers of France by easy stages, around to Italy, and then through Germany, and in every little town the most important business seemed to be the training of men to cut the throats of their neighbors. France is obliged to have a military system, and Germany, too; and that is the center of the evil; but the financial depression is almost unbearable. In Germany there are few signs of a better outlook. It is curious that Germany, which had so much money poured in upon it after the Prussian War, should now be almost stagnant financially, while France, from whom the numerous sums were taken, enjoys apparent prosperity." If this view of Germany is correct it is a wonderful argument for the disarmament of Europe and the adoption of arbitration for national disputes.

The Prophet of Carmel.

Elijah stood erect,
Terrible earnestness and majesty
Now sitting on his brow. Twelve stones he took—
Mark, twelve; this challenge was in the full name
Of Israel, as it stooped to David's hand,
And with one mighty throb the multitude
Approved Elijah's purpose;—twelve smooth stones
From Carmel's side, and with them he repaired
Jehovah's altar. Then at his command,
We filled the trench with water, till it ran
Around the altar like a surging stream,
And washed the stones and soaked the wood beneath
The sacrifice. He knelt upon the ridge,
Against the golden, placid sky of eve;
Brief, simple, clear, his words arose to heaven:
"That God would testify unto himself
And to his prophet, and would turn the hearts
Of his own people back to him again."
Scarce had he spoken when a broad white glare,
Scattering earth's light like darkness in his path,
Keener than lightning, calmer than the dawn,
The sword of God that proveth him by fire,
That proveth him by fire in every age,
Stooped from above and touched the sacrifice.
In the white blaze the sun grew wan, and hung
Like a pale moon upon the glimmering sky.
The fierce flame licked the water up; the wood
Crackled aloft, the very altar stones
Glowed fiery red. The pillared smoke arose
Through the flushed air in towering flawlessness,
Then spread out, calm and broad, like God's own face
Breathing acceptance.
But Baal's prophets shook
In utter fear, and smote upon their breasts,
And grovelled, moaning, down into the dust.
Clear broke the shout from that great multitude,
"JAH IS THE GOD! JEHOVAH HE IS GOD!"

—Bayne's "Days of Jezebel."

Coming to Shame.

BY ALBERT M. PAULL.

The Masonic fraternity exhibits great uneasiness "lest the craft should come to shame." Not that there is any danger of shame on account of its disgraceful deeds. But it is the reputation of the craft they are so anxious about. Masonry has a black heart, but a fair face; a bad character, but, to some extent, a fair reputation. As to its character, we cannot say any good of it. It is such that traitors, pirates, whoremongers, rum-sellers, infidels, pagans and alas! some Christians also, meet on the level and part on the square. It must of necessity be of so low a grade as to meet the ungodly desires and tastes of all this motley crew. As to its reputation, by some means, by falsifying and misrepresentation, Masonry has succeeded in establishing a name which is utterly at variance with its true character; a glare which, hovering over the institution, covers its deformities and transforms it, apparently, into an angel of light. Whenever the penetrating rays of the Cynosure are turned upon this fictitious reputation it vanishes like the ignis fatuus before the pure light of heaven. The life of Masonry therefore depends on keeping out of sight its true character and maintaining at all hazards this fictitious reputation.

We say, 1st. It must keep out of sight its true character. Mackey's words are very significant when he says (Jurisprudence, p. 37): "The death of the order would follow its legalized exposure." We understand now, under this light, why Masonry impresses such fearful and blasphemous oaths of secrecy; why it maligns the character of and when possible murders those who expose its wickedness. Exposure will bring the craft to shame. Then let the exposure go on apace!

2d. It must maintain at all hazards this fictitious reputation. This is strongly expressed by Chase (Digest, p. 69): "But the reputation of the order must not be permitted to be endangered." What a magnificent impulse! Just what governs all hypocrites. The defaulter looks out for his reputation. In general, such people join the church and are very active. Every body has confidence in them, and admires their show of piety. They intrust their funds to their keeping, and mourn when it is too late to repent. Just so some Christians place their soul's eternal welfare into the keeping of this dark order of Freemasons, dazed by the glare of its famous, but untrue reputation. God grant they may repent in time.

But I am digressing. As might be expected, some strange developments follow the unfolding of the principle we are now considering, which perhaps we "cowans" would do well to bear in mind.

First, we will let Masonry speak for itself, and to begin: It punishes those crimes, and only those, which would bring the craft to shame, (Mackey's jurisprudence, p. 500): "And again in the same document [Old Gothic Constitution] the master is directed to guard his apprentice against the commission of perjury and all other offences by which the craft may be brought to shame."

Again: Offenses against outsiders are not worth the notice of Masons, as such offenses do not bring the craft to shame (p. 509):

"Thus, in the instance of a simple assault, in retaliation for injurious words, where one party only is a Mason, although the municipal law will not consider any words as a justification, and will proceed to conviction, still, as the offense is not infamous, nor the punishment ignominious, and the character of the order does not need to be vindicated, the lodge will not take cognizance of the fact."

Once more. A Mason will be punished who innocently brings shame upon the craft (p. 608):

"And from this arises an important principle of Masonic law. If A shall have been tried and convicted of a crime in the courts of his country, charges may be preferred against him in his lodge for conduct unbecoming a Mason, and on the trial it will not be necessary to introduce testimony to prove the commission of the act, as was done in the temporal court. It will be sufficient to adduce evidence of his conviction, and the fact of his conviction will be alone a good reason to render him obnoxious to a Masonic penalty. He has by the conviction brought shame upon the craft, and for this he shall be punished. It is true that there may be cases in which it is apparent that the conviction in the court was an unjust one * * * unless he can show cause to the contrary, he must be punished."

Second, we have a theory to present. It is this: An institution governed by so base an impulse, so regardless of the first principles of morality, and so jealous of a fictitious reputation, will stoop to any means, fair or foul, to boost up that reputation, or to save it from tumbling. And in connection with this hypothesis, we wish to mention a few facts and draw an inference.

Geo. T. Hathaway of Fall River, Mass., was a defaulter. He was a Mason. The hoodwinked press, however, had nothing to say upon that point, but there was a point upon which it dwelt with evident satisfaction, and blazed it abroad over the whole land, and that point was his church relations.

Now we have had another similar case in our own city of Providence, R. I. John B. Calder, a member of What Cheer lodge of Masons, has served the Grocers' and Producers' Bank as cashier for four years past, and during that short time has been practicing the great Masonic virtue of secrecy, and wearing the Masonic jewel of a silent tongue, i. e., he wanted money, and took it secretly from the funds of the bank and kept mum. He only took about $80,000 or $100,000 out of the capital stock of $160,000, leaving them a little something to remember him by. But, then, perhaps he might have taken the whole if he had been allowed a little more time, but as it was, he "stopped short, never to go again" to that pile of money. He is now in jail. The very first news of the defalcation showed up every relation he sustained as a professed Christian; as a member of the Baptist church, treasurer of the Sabbath school, and a prominent member of the Young Men's Christian Association. How diligent some one must have been to have ferreted all this out so soon. Whoever it was, he said nothing about Calder's relations with the lodge. Not one word about his being a Mason. It seems, too, that the preceding cashier, Eugene F. Phillips, also took about $15,000, and the books of the bank were that much behind when Mr. Calder took charge of them. Mr. Phillips has been and is now one of the directors of the bank. He too is a Mason, a member of the same lodge with Calder. He is able, he says, to replace his sum and intends to do so. He has not been arrested. Why not, we cannot tell. Perhaps Masonry holds the secret of his freedom.

To conclude; defalcation, like assassination, is in perfect harmony with the genius of Masonry, which is itself one immense "game of grab," intensified selfishness; and directly opposed to every principle of the religion of our Saviour, Jesus Christ. While it is undoubtedly true that some of these defaulters were connected with the Christian church, it does not thereby implicate the church, but only shows the hypocrisy of the men who would thus impose upon the people of God; and to always, when possible, mix the name of the church, to the exclusion of every other institution, with these defaulters, shows at the least, very bad taste, if not cunning and intense hatred to the church. Every one understands it as a sly thrust at the inefficiency of the religion of Christ. Who more likely to do this than the rival institution of Freemasonry? We ask the question, will any one question its force? Do you not see that while the eye of the public is turned to the church their attention is diverted from the lodge, and thus the craft may be saved from shame?

Though slow to apprehend these things, the people will eventually become enlightened, and then—God hasten the day—the craft will "come to shame" and deep disgrace; let us hope oblivion.

"Be off, or from?"

"Off"—till further developments.

Exposition Notes.

BY THOS. HODGE.

On school-children's day there was a sight. The Lilliputians were so active, so interested and wide awake, their every faculty open to receive. Sights, sounds and forms of all kinds were being appropriated by the voracious appetites for knowledge. Eyes and ears were open, and hands also ready to seize all sorts of cards and Anti-masonic tracts to be read and re-read when they got home.

A Unitarian Freemason from Michigan said that his grandfather died at the age of 90 in the State of New York, during the Morgan excitement, and the old gentleman regretted that the state of public feeling was then such as to prevent his being buried with Masonic honors! I am at a loss to see what object there was in giving such an item regarding this grandfather. He could scarcely expect to raise an Anti's esteem for the old gentleman's good judgment, or to illustrate his Christian hope. Surely the Grand Lodge above is at best inferior to the Christian's New Jerusalem!

A polite gentleman approached, smiled and made some remarks as he saw the object of the stand. He winced a little at the question, Are you a Mason? and, Is Masonry a religion? He retorted by asking if Romanism was a religion. I replied, Yes, and Mohammedanism also. He added another and walked off, evidently allowing the conclusion that his beloved Freemasonry is a religion also.

One said he intended to join the Masons, but he had heard Ronayne and he had given up all idea of doing so. His father had been an Anti-mason and he was now convinced that his father was quite right.

"I'm glad I ain't a member of any church," said one, and several avowed themselves to be opposed to Christianity as Masonry was good enough for them. This is a common sentiment. It would not, however, be fair to regard all who say so as having abandoned the church for the lodge, for some may be Jews or skeptics. But certainly the fact may be taken as proof that Masonry is not the "handmaid" of Christianity.

Here is one who is both Methodist and Mason and denies that he serves two masters. His minister and the deacons, or most of them, are Masons, too. He walks off complacently. What a delightful dilemma it must be for a man to be in when he has two masters! His Christianity commanding him to tell to every one all the best things he knows of it, and to have his Masonry commanding him to conceal and never reveal the best things he knows of it! Christianity offering glorious rewards, and Masonry threatening dire calamities for telling the best things in each to the benighted world.

A tall athlete, a Baptist, listened to a point or two versus the secret lodge, but he "couldn't see it." Others came along and evidently comforted him as they walked off together. Of all men who must necessarily take their bodies through the strange ceremonies of the lodge to rescue them from the errors of the profane world and entitle them to wear the white lambskin as the emblem of innocence, Baptists and others whose bodies have already been professedly "buried and risen with Christ in baptism," must be regarded as the strangest! Buried and risen with Christ and seeking the "new birth" in the Masonic lodge! What words shall express the situation!

The Lutherans also showed their colors. Their trumpet gives no uncertain sound. It is cheering amid so many modern religious bodies which are blinded on this subject, to find this old one continuing so true-hearted and so loyal to the Lord Jesus Christ. Whatever differences may exist on church government there should be unity in the faith of the absolute supremacy of Christ as Head of his body, the church. No other master can be allowed here. It won't do to imitate the ancient backsliders and attempt to worship the Lord and serve graven images.

A young Reformed Episcopal churchman alleged that Bishop Cheney was a Mason, and was so full of admiration for him in that character that every remark bearing against Masonry was fruitless. He could not see that the plain words of Mackey could mean what they said, else Bishop Cheney wouldn't be a Mason. Perhaps no case afforded a better illustration of the saying:

> "Convince a man against his will, > He's of the same opinion still,"

if they are Masons. What a responsibility there rests on such men as Bishop Cheney, J. V. Farwell and others whose names were given as towers of strength to Masonry, and as a sufficient answer to the charge that Masonry is a religion not of Christ!

I had great pleasure in pointing to the portrait of the late Alexander Campbell to a young gentleman of the Christian church. To such the remarks of Mackey in his Ritualist regarding "the new birth," the "stone of foundation," etc., ought ever to be conclusive against the anti-Christian character of the lodge as a subverter of the Gospel. He read the remarks of Mackey with keen interest and I have no doubt that the seed fell into good ground and that the Masonic tares will be easily distinguished from the Gospel wheat hereafter.

The usual oratory was occasionally displayed over the "perjured" revealers of Masonry. How well satisfied the denouncers were with themselves when they had vented their indignation against the renouncers! Yet there was generally enough candor to admit that if a man thought he had taken an oath which he afterwards believed was wrong, e. g., to murder or to be an incendiary, it was right to repent and warn others against it. The exceptions would not admit the possibility of any wrong being involved in the Masonic oaths, while one occasionally was found to defend the obligation of every oath. If Christ's command "Swear not at all" means anything, it must mean swear not such oaths as are prohibited in Lev. 5: 4, i. e., oaths of things "HID" were sinful then and ever must be.

WAS IT AN ADVERTISEMENT OR A CHARITY?

The following items are from the same column of the Cincinnati Gazette Jan. 25, 1876:

The widow of Chas. W. Temple remains in the Butler County Infirmary. Her health is rapidly failing, probably from an accident she met with some weeks ago, which, it is feared, she cannot survive. The old lady's case is peculiarly sad. To add to the troubles incident to old age, sickness, in the absence of friendly faces in her declining years, she is uncomfortably situated in a damp cellar-room, in company with a colored woman and infant child, and an insane woman who acts as her attendant, and performs her duties reasonably well during her sane intervals. Mrs. Temple was kindly cared for by the lodge of Freemasons, which her husband founded years ago in Oxford, until, for some reason, they cut off her support, and transferred her to the county poor house, where she is now supported by the public. It may be that in a small village a suitable home could not be provided for ths old lady, but it is believed that she could easily be provided a home in a Sister's hospital or some similar institution. In her present quarters her case is, indeed, pitiable.

Mrs. Temple, the old widow lady who was consigned to the county poor-house by the Masonic lodge of Oxford, some months ago, died on Saturday afternoon of the infirmities of old age, hastened probably by the neglect and treatment to which she was subjected by an insane attendant. The Oxford Freemasons sent a committee of one to see to the removal of her remains to Oxford, for interment with the honors due a Masonic widow.

"MASONRY IS NOT POLITICAL!"

[From the Catholic Examiner.]

Philanthropy, love of man, is the virtue Masons usually boast of, and it is in its exercise that the large sums that flow into the Masonic coffers are said to be expended. Whoever has studied the Masonic jargon, knows that man signifies in it, not every individual belonging to the great human family, but exclusively a Freemason; or, to explain its meaning more clearly, a person who is nothing but man, without any addition by which he would be recognized as belonging, for instance, to a certain religious community, or to a certain state, country, caste, and so on; as man is acknowledged only he who frees himself from the shackles of "superstition," which means religion, and of "slavery," which means monarchy, and who owns only the lodge, the mansion of free men. "Humanity" means Freemasonry. "Philanthropy" is the virtue which contributes temporal means toward, or assists in any way, the ultimate object of Freemasonry.

The ultimate aim of Freemasonry is the dominion over the whole world. The royal art, or the art of acquiring and wielding the regal or supreme power over the whole human race, consists in using the hammer for battering down the thrones of all tyrants, which means kings, the altars of all superstition i. e. religion, and the barriers of all prejudice, which means social rank, and in using the trowel for building up the Temple of Solomon according to the Masonic square and circle, which means the Masonic government over the whole world, kings and all peculiar governments being first used as tools for that ultimate end, and finally thrown aside.

Toward this ultimate aim all work is directed, under the seal of strictest secrecy, lest the powers that be, be aroused, and bethink themselves of self defense; in the midst of the night, till the rising sun shows to the astonished profane world that the Masonic light shines forth in the Orient. Toward this ultimate aim must serve also the moneys collected from the host of brothers who are admitted into the secret league, without receiving any knowledge of the final object for which they engage themselves to work and to pay. That the resources of the Masonic body are destined for such philanthropic political purposes, has never been doubted by those who observe the march of our contemporary history, and especially of that of the last century. But the secret agents of the initiated, guarded by thirty-three terrible and horrible oaths, like a fly by the encircling threads of the spider, are sometimes either unwise or wise enough, either conscientious or unconscientious enough, to let the secret out; and one fact that has become publicly known, throws then an immense light upon the nocturnal laboratories of the Mason lodges.

One of such untoward revelations we happen to have got knowledge of, is the contribution of the paltry sum of some £30,000 sterling made by the American lodges to the revolutionary government of Spain in 1874, for their army against Don Carlos. The Chaine d'Union, a Parisian Masonic journal, describes in its number for January, 1875, page 96, a great festival celebrated in the lodge "Le Temple des Amis de l'honneur francais," on the 21 December 1874. On this occasion Br.·. Holinski communicated to the convivial party the following fact:

"From the venerable lodge 'The Sons of Hiram,' working under the Grand Orient of Spain, we have received a letter to which we invite your fullest attention. It is an address of thanksgiving of the Spanish Masons to the lodges of the South American Republics. Those lodges have, with noble liberality, contributed a sum of 154,000 piasters for the "liberal" army which fights against Don Carlos. The sum mentioned has already been forwarded to our venerable Br.·. General Esparto." To this Br.·. Holinski added: "The example of our American Br.·. is a new proof of the power of Freemasonry, and may serve to shame those of our Br.·. who have done as yet nothing for this noble cause."

Br.·. Serrano it was who in 1874 ruled over unhappy Spain; and it is he, or his "Government of Spain," which was considered by the philanthropic American lodges one of the poor who foremost deserved a subvention from the lodges.

If Freemasons say, we do not occupy ourselves with politics, but only with social amusements and works of benevolence then let this fact, to which we can add others, stand as a proof that, however it may be with regard to the blindfolded apprentices, it is certainly a a shameless untruth in the mouth of the initiated.

A new story of Mr. Lincoln is related by a correspondent of Harper's Magazine. This gentleman called upon Mr. Lincoln soon after he was installed, and while awaiting the President's leisure in walked several officers of the Spanish navy to pay a visit of courtesy to the American ruler. They mistook the visitor for the President, and while they made their pleasant speeches to the former the latter shook with laughter, and motioned to his caller to go on with the farce. The correspondent concludes: "I thought now I had paved the way to win the position I had come to ask. I made up my mind to address the President in a new way, and thus add to the hold I already had upon him. So when my time came, I stepped up to Mr. L. and said: 'Sir, I have seen the annoyance to which you are subjected by so many and often-repeated requests for innumerable positions, etc. Now if you will permit me to shake hands, I will try and smother my desire for a certain position which I had come to ask from you.' Mr. L. jumped up, and grasping my hand said: 'Sir, you are one man in a thousand. I am doubly indebted to you. You have been the means of conveying to those Spanish officers that the President of the United States is a very handsome man, and then you do not even ask an office. But,' he added, 'hurry home. You may repent.'

The Unequal Yoke.

FROM THE STANDPOINT OF RELIGION.

In looking through Scripture we find almost numberless passages setting forth the intense spirit of separation which ought ever to characterize the people of God. Whether we direct our attention to the Old Testament, in which we have God's relationship and dealings with his earthly people, Israel; or, to the New Testament, in which we have his relationship and dealings with his heavenly people, the church; we find the same truth prominently set forth, namely, the entire separation of those who belong to God. Israel's position is thus stated in Balaam's parable, "Lo, the people shall dwell alone, and shall not be reckoned amongst the nations." Their place was outside the range of all the nations of the earth; and they were responsible to maintain that separation. Throughout the entire Pentateuch, they were instructed, warned and admonished as to this; and, throughout the Psalms and Prophets we have the record of their failure in the maintenance of this separation, which failure, as we know, has brought down upon them the heavy judgments of the hand of God. It would swell this little paper into a volume were I to attempt a quotation of all the passages in which this point is put forward. I take it for granted that my reader is sufficiently acquainted with his Bible, to render such quotation unnecessary. Should he not be so, however, a reference, in his concordance, to the words "separate," "separated" and "separation," will suffice to lay before him at a glance the body of Scripture evidence on this subject. The passage just quoted, from the Book of Numbers, is the expression of God's thoughts about his people Israel: "The people shall dwell ALONE."

The same is true, only upon a much higher ground, in reference to God's heavenly people, the church —the body of Christ—composed of all true believers. They, too, are a separated people.

We shall now proceed to examine the ground of this separation. There is a great difference between being separate on the ground of what we are, and of what God is. The former makes a man a Pharisee; the latter makes him a saint. If I say to a poor fellow-sinner, "Stand by thyself, I am holier than thou," I am a detestable Pharisee and a hypocrite; but if God, in his infinite condescension and perfect grace, says to me, "I have brought you into relationship with myself in the person of my Son Jesus Christ, therefore be holy and separate from all evil; come out from among them and be separate;" I am bound to obey, and my obedience is the practical manifestation of my character as a saint—a character which I have, not because of anything in myself, but simply because God has brought me near unto himself through the precious blood of Christ.

It is well to be clear as to this. Pharisaism and divine sanctification are two very different things: and yet they are often confounded. Those who contend for the maintenance of that place of separation which belongs to the people of God, are constantly accused of setting themselves up above their fellowmen and of laying claim to a higher degree of personal sanctity than is ordinarily possessed. This accusation arises from not attending to the distinction just referred to. When God calls upon men to be separate, it is on the ground of what he has done for them upon the cross, and where he has set them, in eternal association with himself, in the person of Christ. But if I separate myself on the ground of what I am in myself, it is the most senseless and vapid assumption, which will sooner or later be made manifest. God commands his people to be holy on the ground of what he is: "Be ye holy, for I am holy." This is evidently a very different thing from "stand by thyself, I am holier than thou." If God brings people into association with himself, he has a right to prescribe what their moral character ought to be, and they are responsible to answer thereto. Thus we see that the most profound humility lies at the bottom of a saint's separation. There is nothing so calculated to put one in the dust as the understanding of the real nature of divine holiness. It is an utterly false humility which springs from looking at ourselves—yea, it is, in reality, based upon pride, which has never yet seen to the bottom of its own perfect worthlessness. Some imagine that they can reach the truest and deepest humility by looking at self, whereas it can only be reached by looking at Christ. "The more thy glories strike mine eye, the humbler I shall be." This is a just sentiment, founded upon divine principle. The soul that loses itself in the blaze of Christ's moral glory, is truly humble, and none other. No doubt, we have a right to be humble when we think of what poor creatures we are; but it only needs a moment's just reflection to see the fallacy of seeking to produce any practical result by looking at self. It is only when we find ourselves in the presence of infinite excellency, that we are really humble.

Hence, therefore, a child of God should refuse to be yoked with an unbeliever, whether for a domestic, a commercial, or a religious object, simply because God tells him to be separate, and not because of his own personal holiness. The carrying out of this principle, in matters of religion, will necessarily involve much trial and sorrow; it will be termed intolerance, bigotry, narrow-mindedness, exclusiveness and such like; but we cannot help all this. Provided we keep ourselves separate upon a right principle and in a right spirit, we may safely leave all results with God.—From the Unequal Yoke by C. H. M.

—A correspondent of the Standard describes Albert Lea, Minn., as one of the prettiest little cities in Minnesota. No guns are allowed to be fired in the corporation limits, so wild ducks come here in the spring, hatch, and tarry till November. It is a luxury to see wild birds so tame among wild boys. Just now the muskrats are making their nests for winter, rounding up piles of flag almost as large as hay-cocks. Some of these nests are only three or four rods from dwelling houses. Happy town, where men and muskrats dwell together in unity! These little animals, by the way, are a sort of night police; they watch as well as work while people sleep. One rarely hears of burglaries in Albert Lea.

The State Meeting at Waupun, Wisconsin.

REPORT OF STATE LECTURER.

WAUPUN, Wis., Nov. 1, 1878.

DEAR BRO. KELLOGG:—The fifth annual convention of the Wisconsin State Christian Association has just closed its session. Owing to the storm and bad roads the attendance was not as great as was expected, but was reasonably good. A deep interest was felt in the cause, and the sessions were harmonious.

The subject of an alliance of churches against organized secretism was discussed, and Rev. W. Warner, of Byron, Rev. E. W. Johnson, of Waupun, and Rev. W. W. Ames, of Menomonee, were chosen delegates to the convention at Wheaton, Nov. 20–22, and H. H. Hinman a delegate to the National Convention at Worcester, Massachusetts.

About $60 were pledged for the support of a State lecturer, and a committee appointed to raise funds in the different counties for this object.

Mr. E. Ronayne worked the three degrees in his usual interesting and instructive manner. I have been with him on many occasions, and have never known him to do better. The large hall was crowded in the evenings and the attention was excellent. The city authorities endeavored to preserve order and are worthy of praise. The wrath of the craft was greatly stirred. Two large stones crashed through the windows, and on reaching the house of Mr. D. Andrews, his family and visitors, including Rev. Starks and wife, Mr. Ronayne and myself, were greeted with a volley of bad eggs, which fell around us, but strangely did not hit any of us. The family of Bro. W. Sperry had also the honor of a donation of bad eggs, while multitudes of others got any amount of bad language.

This morning by the courtesy of the officers of the Penitentiary we were permitted to visit and pass through its different departments. I regret to say that some of them had the bad taste to express hostility and contempt for Mr. Ronayne and his work, though the visitors did not allude to the matter. Yours in the Lord, H. H. HINMAN.

REPORT OF STATE AGENT.

To the Wisconsin Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies.

DEAR FELLOW LABORERS:—Another year of toil and conflict has passed and we meet to review our work and lay our plans for the future. The past year has in some respects been one of unusual trial. The continued financial pressure has made it difficult to obtain means for the prosecution of our work, while the partial failure in crops in this State and Minnesota has added to the doubt, discouragement and dismay, that have settled down on many minds. There are, however, many indications that are hopeful, and the outlook is full of promise.

1st. The secret trades unions and communistic societies both in America and Europe have caused a widespread alarm and a deep conviction that all secret organizations are dangerous to the public safety. The threatened violence in our great cities from armed bands of secretists, the attempted assassination of the German Emperor and the recent stringent enactments against these organizations in Germany, are among the evidences of a reaction of sentiment on this subject.

2nd. The morale of the lodge has materially deterioated. The proportion of Christian men who are connected with Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship has steadily diminished. Good men either keep out of the lodge or they silently leave it if they have joined, and it comes more and more under the control of the bad. The omission of the name of God by the Grand Orient of France is one of the evidences of this tendency to atheism and its attendant wickedness.

3rd. Statistics show that their numbers are diminishing. The United States Grand Lodge of Odd-fellows report a large falling off in numbers and in funds. The World's Grand Lodge of Knights of Pythias reported last year a loss of 5,000. The Grand Chapter of Indiana reports a loss, and in the Grand Lodges of New York, Indiana, Illinois and Missouri, there is a large falling off in Masons, while in the other States of the Northwest the increase has not kept pace with the increase of population.

Our meeting at Baraboo last year was eminently successful. The clear and able exposition, not only of the esoteric work, but of the nature, history and spirit of Masonry by Mr. E. Ronayne, did much to vindicate our principles and to break down the opposition to our reform. His labors in other places in the State have had excellent results.

At the convention in Baraboo I consented to act as agent of the N. C. Association for this State until some one could be found to take my place. I have been unable to find a suitable agent, and so have continued to labor in this State, reporting to the N. C. A. up to Sept. 30th, at which time my connection with them as agent ceased. I have labored in Sauk, Monroe, Vernon, Richland, Rock, Walworth, Jefferson, Washington, Fond du Lac, Waupaca, Portage, Columbia, Vernon and Trempeleau counties, besides one month in Kansas and some weeks in Minnesota. My family has continued to reside in Wheaton, Ill., and I have preached a few times in that State.

I report since Nov. 1, 1877, 272 days service and 151 lectures and sermons. My expenses have been as follows:

Railroad fare	$196 13
Hotel fare	15 45
Postage and stationery	5 87
Total	$217 45
I have collected on the field	$283 99
Subscriptions for the publishing house	155 00
Total collections	$438 99

Of the $225 pledged for my support at Baraboo, there have been paid as follows:

For Rock county by W. C. Stevens	$40 00
Sauk county	35 00
Dunn county by Rev. W. W. Ames	10 00
Dodge county by Samuel Bennett	5 00
Walworth county	19 00
Total collected	$109 00

There is due as follows:

Walworth county	$21 00
Sauk "	5 00
Trempeleau "	30 00
Dunn "	30 00
Dodge "	20 00
Richland "	10 00
Total	$116 00

The Association assumed no pecuniary obligations to me, and I have no demands against it, but would say that in order to continue the services of an agent in the State it will be necessary to raise not less than three hundred dollars over traveling expenses, and it is desirable that it should be paid at least quarterly.

In conclusion, let me say, that our reform needs above all things the power of prevailing prayer. Like the dumb devil this kind goeth not out but by fasting and prayer. But so sure as God is true, into that kingdom that is to fill the whole earth there shall enter nothing "that defileth, neither whatsoever that worketh abomination or maketh a lie, but only they who are written in the Lamb's Book of Life."

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, 1st. That we renew our testimony against every form of organized secretism, and especially against Freemasonry, the mother and pattern of them all, as contrary to Christian simplicity, injurious to public morals and destructive to civil equality; and that the church cannot continue to tolerate it without being destroyed by it, nor the State without a subversion of our republican institutions.

2d. That from all the testimony presented to us as an Association we are firmly convinced that the institution now known as Freemasonry is undoubtedly the secret worship of Baal, as it was practiced in Israel, Phœnicia, etc., in the days of pagan ascendancy; that it is thoroughly and purely anti-Christian in practice and principle—a degradation to men and a gross insult to the God of heaven and earth; and that we earnestly call upon all professing Christians, and especially on all ministers of the Gospel, to have no fellowship with it.

3d. That we commend the proposed plan of an alliance of churches against organized secretism, and that our hope for the redemption of our nation is in the preaching of a Gospel that has no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reproves them.

4th. That we earnestly commend the Christian Cynosure and urge its continued and enlarged support as vital to the success of this reform.

5th. That we tender our sincere thanks to the people of Waupun for their generous hospitality and to the Waupun Times for publishing notices of the meeting.

6th. That we express our warmest sympathy with Rev. W. W. Ames and family in being subjected to what seems to us to have been most manifestly a malignant Masonic prosecution, and we earnestly commend him as a fearless and faithful minister of Christ and an earnest and able advocate of our reform.

7th. That we request the publication of the proceedings of this convention in the Waupun papers, the Cynosure, Telescope, Wesleyan, Free Methodist and Weekly Witness.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON FINANCE.

The Committee on Finance and State Agency report that we recommend that we, as an Association, unite with the Association of Illinois in the support of a lecturer for the two States, and that we raise not less than two hundred dollars, provided the State of Illinois will raise not less than three hundred dollars and that the agent divide his time between the States in proportion to the amount pledged, and that we recommend the raising of $20 to pay expenses for this convention.

The Cynosure mark is set at 10,000. Let every one help to reach it.

Des Moines County, Iowa, Organized.

Pursuant to a notice published in the Christian Cynosure by order of the Spring Creek Baptist church, the people of Des Moines county, Iowa, opposed to secretism in general and Freemasonry in particular, met at the Bethel Baptist meeting-house six miles west of Burlington, Iowa, and were addressed by Rev. W. P. Johnston of the Reformed Presbyterian church.

The Des Moines county Iowa Christian Association was organized by the adoption of the usual constitution of auxiliary associations, and the election of Rev. T. P. Robb, of Linton, Iowa, President; Rev. J. A. Pollock, of Burlington, Vice President; Hon. S. A. Flanders, Burlington, Secretary, and Dea. John Storer, of Burlington, Treasurer.

The Association was then addressed by the President, Rev. T. P. Robb, Rev. C. D. Trumbull of Morning Sun, Rev. J. A. Pollock, of Burlington, and Elder E. G. Elsey, of Columbus City.

At the meeting Thursday, Nov. 7th, Rev. C. D. Trumbull offered the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Christians "are the children of the light and of the day;" and

WHEREAS, The command of Christ is "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven;" therefore,

Resolved, That we hold it to be inconsistent with the Christian profession to have any connection with any secret association.

Resolved, That we hold it to be the duty of every Christian to lift up the voice of testimony against all forms of secret, oath-bound societies and orders as ensnaring in their nature, pernicious in their tendencies and perilous to the liberties of both church and state.

The following named persons were elected delegates to the State Christian Association:

T. P. Robb, S. A. Flanders, J. A. Pollock, J. H. Austin, Robt. Brown, A. F. Carrithers, R. R. Armour, J. I. Montgomery, S. E. Wilson, T. L. Stephens, James Hilleary, Irene Hilleary.

The attendance was small on account of unfavorable weather, but the earnestness and determined spirit of those present promises hopefully for the future.

The addresses were of a high order and will long be held in remembrance by those who listened to them. Thursday evening a powerful sermon was preached by Rev. T. P. Robb from the text "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden. Take my yoke upon you for my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Correspondence.

A Danger to be Avoided.

CAMERON, Marshall Co., W. Va., November 2, 1878.

Editor Cynosure,

DEAR SIR:—Allow me through the columns of the Cynosure to call attention to a very important danger to which I believe our Anti-masonic reform is exposed. I refer to a certain tendency on the part of our Anti-masonic lecturers and writers to forsake the solid facts of secretism as we have them in the lives of its devotees of the present day, a certain tendency to wander off in the regions of speculative refinements upon the principles, ceremonies and symbology of the Masonic institution.

I first noticed in the astute mind of Mr. Woodward an undue tendency, as I thought, to overwork the esoteric lode in the mine of Masonic clap-trap to such an extent that very few of the hood-winked even would be able to follow him. And now I see Mr. Ronayne in a measure letting go his great work of exposing the rotton carcass of the old handmaid that all may take warning and flee from her embrace, and straining after the Baal, Osiris and Astarte of a former period of confederated wickedness.

These speculative investigations, though not altogether without utility—and they will come in place by and by—are not now, I believe, the work which the present stage of the reform demands. This linking of the humbugs of the past with those of the present is not without foundation in truth, though I would object to Mr. Ronayne's persistent calling of that "identical" which is only similar. The contents of one of Mr. R.'s articles on the "identity" of Baal-worship and Masonry would be news to the Masonic trickster who would not be likely to know so much as whether there be any Baal, Osiris or Astarte. No, brethren, the spirit which dwells in the Masonic temple is not one which reverences either the follies or the virtues of the past, but one which seeks present advantage without merit, and the precious privilege of committing crime without the fear of punishment. In the business world what do the Winslows care for the rascalities of former times, or the Averys and Haydens for the false worships of old.

Let good men be confronted with the evidence that the secretism against which we war is the venemous serpent it really is, with forked tongue of deceit, and fangs of deadly poison, and sly, insiduous crawl, gradually and most surely, if not resisted, gathering church and state and family in its deadly embrace. JONATHAN W. MOSS.

Masonic Sabbath-school Instruction.

RICEVILLE, Pa.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I wish to ask a few questions in relation to a diagram in the M. E. Sunday-school Journal for the month of June. This diagram appears in the 12th lesson for the second quarter. In it are represented a trowel and also a square. What I wish to know is, do the authors of said diagram design teaching the youth Freemasonry. On the handle of the trowel is written "Faith," and on the blade "Love," and across the square was written "Obedience." Being superintendent of our sch ool, I said to them that if the illustration was designed to promote the order of Freemasons I wished to have nothing to do with it. Now if you are in possession of any facts relative to this matter, please let me know and oblige. For my own part I think that the fidelity of king Cyrus and his prompt action in liberating Israel could be represented better than by this illustration, and so avoid leading young minds to think highly of the institution of Masonry.

Respectfully your friend and coworker for the cause of truth,

LEWIS KETCHUM.

[ANSWER.—The above has been held till we could see the picture referred to. There is nothing objectionable in it, except the choice of such symbolism to illustrate the passage (2 Chron. 36: 22, 23). It is what would be expected only from a Freemason who wanted to thrust the order upon the attention of every one. We have no means of knowing the facts in this case, and the designer of the engraving, if he had a Masonic policy in the matter, would not be apt to proclaim his hypocrisy.—ED.]

"System Needed."

In reply to an article under the above heading a friend says, "organize!" That is good, so far as it goes. We have organized largely. The writer of this has been at the birth of more than he can now remember of State, county and town organizations; but where are they now? In far too many cases echo only answers, where?

Organization is indispensable, and is easily secured in many places; but the organizer is not always able to breathe into these organisms a "living soul," for want of which they speedily collapse without effecting anything. This has been the history of many a town and county organization. They were born—children with a beautiful form, opened their eyes on their parents, smiled, were named, and then—died of neglect. As a people shall we never learn anything? After a great furore we awaken the people; get possession of legislatures; pass reform laws; rub our hands with delight; shout victory, and then fold our hands and wait for Maine law, or whatever it may be to--execute itself; which it never does of course. Is there not wisdom enough in a given community in any of these States of ours to contrive and run an efficient State, county or town association opposed to secret societies? Can it be that we are so stupid? To look upon the present condition of our associations, State and others, one might safely answer these questions, the first in the negative and the second with a plain yes!

In every State where we have an organization we have thousands of professed Anti-masons, and yet in no State is there a State lecturer supported as he should be. The facts in the case are such as should bring a blush of shame on our cheeks, and make our ears tingle at their recital. Under such a state of things the wonder is that any progress has been made. Men with the call of God upon them have been in the field, and a few are left nobly struggling, not half paid and growing lean with their suffering families on unfulfilled pledges. Why is this? Is there any necessity for such a state of things? The writer believes there is none; and further believes that the much longer continuance of matters in this shape will be a sin, bringing upon the wilfully guilty the just displeasure of the Holy One.

I know there are difficulties in the way to the success we crave. So there are and ever have been in the way of every reform. But let Anti-masons know this, that no obstacles exist, or can arise, over which the right shall not eventually triumph, under the impetus of wise and manly and persevering effort. "But," say the faint-hearted, "these efforts cost." Ah! there's where the shoe pinches! Of course they cost. To put all these reforms in motion toward the final victory of right over all wrong cost the Son of God his life; and he is no true follower of his who shrinks from sacrifice of money, labor, time or even life, when imperilled truth, God's honor, or the best interests of humanity are in need. Will so-called reformers take these things to heart?

To carry on our reform against the modern idolatry now housed in the lodges, labor is needed; live organizations are needed; money is needed; consecration is needed; trust in God is needed. All these are with the professed Anti-masons, or are possible to them; and for what we have and for what is possible to us we are responsible to God, to our generation, and to those who shall come after us. Is this true? If so, think! men and women of God whose consciences are enlightened, think, pray, plan, and then act.

In our State and other societies there are executive committees. Does it ever occur to the gentlemen composing these bodies that they have any duties to perform? As far as I have known them such committees seem to think not. But let me suggest. It is yours to keep the machinery in motion. You are the soul, the spirit of the organization. It is yours to take the State lecturer in hand; plan work for him; devise money for his support; make yourselves acquainted, through your agent and lecturer, and by correspondence with the friends of the cause, with all parts of your field; know the wants, so far as light is needed, and supply it; know the capacities of your field, for raising money to pay your lecturer, and for carrying on the work,—in short make yourselves felt all over the State as a power. Set your vice-presidents in the counties at work at organizing, and raising money for the general work. Call upon the ministers and churches friendly to the cause for a yearly collection for your treasury. Have solicitors in every county and town to gather up the littles, that nothing be lost. "Where there's a will there's a way." I am satisfied the above is possible, and if possible it will be somebody's shame if it is not done. Where is the State executive committee who will put this, or some better devised plan into execution? What say you, Halleck Floyd, Dr. Champ, and others of Indiana? I am mistaken in you if we do not see the cause in better shape in your State next year. Gentlemen of said committees in other States, what say you? J. L. Barlow.

The Order of American Mechanics.

York, Pa.

Editor Cynosure:

The following is taken from the York, Pennsylvania, Evening Record:

"Sermon to Mechanics.—Last evening Rev. L. A. Gotwald, D.D., by request preached a sermon to Codorus Council, No. 185, Jr. Order American Machanics, from the words, "Is not he a carpenter?" After speaking of the true dignity of labor and the respect which he entertained for the laboring men, the speaker took up the mottoes and principles of the order and recommended them to the careful consideration of all young men, and then closed by telling them that there was one thing of greater importance than even these, and asking them to come to the feet of the humble Carpenter of Nazareth, and there learn the way of life."

Now, upon more than one occasion the writer left anti-secret documents at the residence of the above named minister for him. We hardly believe it possible, for many reasons, that he is ignorant in regard to the real character of secret societies.

It may be well to state here that the "American Mechanics" is a Masonic trap, training school and recruiting concern. They wear aprons containing the Masonic square and compass. There are many other marks on them showing where they originated and where they are bound for. As a feeder for Masonry and Roman Jesuitism this young order is very successful. The crafty Jesuits took great pains to make it attractive to young Americans and Protestants. They gave it some very good mottoes, so as to aid Protestant ministers in their sly efforts to get young Americans to kneel at the feet of the Pope, by degrees, like the late Grand Master of English Masons.

Mr. Gotwald is one of our Lutheran ministers, who preaches to a large congregation of those who should be followers of Martin Luther in his opposition to the Roman priests. As we have scattered many tracts, papers and documents amongst people supposed to be Lutheran, without even hearing a groan, we have often wondered if the Jesuit poison has caused actual death, or whether the Lutheran body is only very sick and unable to show signs of life.

There can be no doubt that the Jesuits are in earnest. They will use all the Protestant pulpits they can to build up secret orders, Masonry and the Romish priesthood. Protestants and Americans must now awake and go to work with a will or they will be too late. "Delays are dangerous." Yours very truly, E. J. Chalfant.

Rev. W. O. Dinius, Monroe, Mich., writes:

"May heaven's choicest blessings rest on your earnest efforts and labors to overthrow the foundation of all conspiracies, viz., secrecy. God bless brethren Stoddard and Ronayne."

A friend in Ypsilanti, Mich., sends the name of a young physician as a new subscriber, and writes:

"He has just gone to settle and start his business in that very new place, Glyndon, Minn. He appears to be on the top of the fence about secret societies. If we can get him down on the right side, it may help to tell whether the valley of the Red River of the North shall be ruled by secretism or not."

Daniel Rowley, Fabius, N. Y., writes:

"I am in my 82nd year of age. I don't take the paper for myself, but give it away. I made up my mind in the time of Morgan, and it is the same now. I bought fifty of Mr. Woodward's Masonic courthouse books. Have sold two and given away a good many. If you have any free tracts, please send me some. I could dispose of from one to twenty a day."

Mrs. L. W. Rowley, Utica, Minn., writes:

'God bless the Cynosure, and the means that are being used to pull down the strongholds of Masonic influence, is my daily prayer. The church has always endured persecution, but cannot be crushed by human power, having the divine Christ for its head, and being his body.'

C. W. Sherman, Pink Prairie, Ill., writes:

"I most heartily sympathize with the work you are prosecuting. May God speed this great reformation which you are leading on."

James F. Brooks, Stafford Springs, Ct., writes:

"A certain rumseller said, 'I joined the Masons for protection, and it pays.' Now if Masonry controls the courts, what does it not control?"

J. W. Moss of Cameron, W. Va., writes:

"God speed the new departure—The United Churches in Christ. Let 'separation' be the watchword. We can never slay the serpent of secretism while it has a place in our bosoms."

B. Williams, Warren, Ill., writes:

"It is amusing to hear the Masons refer to a Christian, or a professed Christian minister who belongs to the lodge as though his authority could put an end to all controversy about the moral character of the institution; when at the same time it has no confidence in the Christian obligations of the same men and will not trust one of them in the lodge a single night without swearing them with penalties of death that they will not cheat a "brother Mason;" or the lodge, or violate the chastity of Masons' wives and daughters. It is a wonder how Christians can accept such obligations as above those of God."

LESSON XLVII.—November 24, 1878.—JUDAISM OVERTHROWN.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 21: 8-21. Commit to memory vs. 16-18.

8. And he said, Take heed that ye be not deceived: for many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them.

9. But when ye shall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for these things must first come to pass: but the end is not by and by.

10. Then said he unto them, Nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom.

11. And great earthquakes shall be in divers places, and famines, and pestilences; and fearful sights and great signs shall there be from heaven.

12. But before all these, they shall lay their hands on you, and persecute you, delivering you up to the synagogues, and into prisons, being brought before kings and rulers for my name's sake.

13. And it shall turn to you for a testimony.

14. Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye shall answer:

15 For I will give you a mouth and wisdom, which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist.

16. And ye shall be betrayed both by parents, and brethren, and kinsfolks, and friends; and some of you shall they cause to be put to death.

17. And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake.

18. But there shall not a hair of your head perish.

19. In your patience possess ye your souls.

20. And when ye shall see Jerusalem

compassed with armies, then know that the desolation thereof is nigh.

21. Then let them which are in Judea flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midst of it depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it." Luke 19: 41.

CORRESPONDING TEXT.—"And it shall come to pass, that as the Lord rejoiced over you to do you good, and to multiply you; so the Lord will rejoice over you to destroy you, and to bring you to nought; and ye shall be plucked from off the land whither thou goest to possess it." Deut. 28: 63.

[From Am. S. S. Union Advanced Lessons.]

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1 Events in the life of Jesus between the last, and the present lessons.

2. The time, place and persons associated with this prophecy of our Lord.

3. Jewish expectations of a Messiah.

4. Relation of the Jews to the Roman authorities.

5. Terrific natural phenomena before the destruction of Jerusalem.

6. Names of the apostles who suffered martyrdom.

7. Persecutions of the early Christians.

8. The destruction of Jerusalem. (See Josephus.)

OUTLINE.

I. Signs of the overthrow. A time of strong religious feeling is always the opportunity for fanatics and impostors. The Jews were expecting a Messiah. Deceivers would take advantage of this expectation. Jesus forewarns the disciples. The final destruction was not to be until about 40 years after Jesus' death; but the intervening period was to be one of great civil commotions, and fearful events in the natural world.

II. Sufferings of Christians. Believers would be betrayed, arrested, persecuted, imprisoned, tried, put to death.

III. Safety of Christians. But God should protect their souls. They should not be losers in the end. What confessor of Christ, now in heaven, would wish to have endured less for him? (Tradition says that all the Christians escaped from Jerusalem before it was surrounded, and not one of their lives was lost in the siege.)

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. The fidelity of Christ to the disciples in giving these terrible warnings.

2. The confidence he had in his ability to qualify and sustain them, as shown by these words.

3 Human nature is essentially evil. Mutual slaughter is one of the ways in which organized evil is put down.

4. Christians have to conquer the world by the Word of God, by their Christian graces, by their victory over themselves.

5. The world, as such, can never like them. Its friendship is evidence that at some point we are not true to God.

6. But Christians go not on this warfare on their own charges, nor shall they be losers in the end.

7. Yet this is not to prevent their use of all prudent precautions, according to their Master's will, against their lives being thrown away.

[From the Evangelical Repository.]

SIGNS OR INDICATIONS OF THE GREAT CATASTROPHE.

First. The appearance of impostors claiming to be Christ, v. 8. Many, he says, would come in his name, each alleging himself to be Christ, and announcing that "the time," meaning probably the time for throwing off the Roman yoke and establishing the long looked for Messianic kingdom, was at hand. There are hints contained in the account given by Josephus of the scenes which occurred about the destruction of Jerusalem that the Jews were led on to their ruin by the agency of impostors who claimed to be able to work great wonders, and to lead them to certain victory.

Second. Civil commotions and broils, vs. 9, 10. That there were such agitations in the period immediately preceding the downfall of Judaism is attested by the historians Josephus, Tacitus and Suetonius, although to adduce specific statements on the point would demand too much space.

Third. Convulsions in the material world, v. 11. Some suppose that the earthquakes spoken of denote civil upheavings; but these had already been foretold in plain terms. Hence it would seem proper to understand the earthquakes to be literal terrestrial shakings. History tells of such occurrences during the time which we suppose to be alluded to, four notable earthquakes at least being mentioned as happening within the space of about fifteen years before the destruction of Jerusalem.

Fourth. Calamities in the form of famine and pestilence, v. 11.

Fifth. Portentous signs in the heavens. Josephus, a Jewish, and Tacitus, a Roman historian, have recorded certain wonderful appearances that preceded the overthrow and dispersion of the Jews; such, for instance, as the semblance of armies in the sky engaged in battle, and this also during the daytime.

Sixth. Persecution of Christians. This, our Lord intimates, would even precede the other signs of which he gives notice, and we need not pause to show that the followers of Christ were, during the years that elapsed from his death to the destruction of Jerusalem, bitterly persecuted by both Jews and Gentiles.

Seventh. The investment of Jerusalem by armies, v. 20. After severe fighting in different parts of Palestine for more than three years between the Jews, who had risen in revolt, and the Roman armies, Jerusalem was encompassed in the spring of the year 70, and, after a terrible siege, captured in the month of August of the same year. It may be added that when the siege began the Jews were gathered together in the city for the observance of the Passover; and thus hemmed in, they became the victims to an enormous extent of famine and disease, while the hostile factions into which they were divided were more dangerous to one another than to the common foe. We are not aware that the annals of the world present a parallel to the siege of Jerusalem in all the elements of horror. Not less than eleven hundred thousand of the Jews perished in that siege, according to the calculation of Josephus, and of the wretched survivors ninety thousand were sold as slaves. The temple, contrary, it is alleged to the wish of Titus, the Roman general, was consumed with fire, and became the tomb of six thousand Jews who had taken refuge in it.

ENCOURAGEMENTS.

First. He holds it out as an inducement to patience that during the days of tribulation that were coming they would have the opportunity and honor of bearing witness to the truth. This seems to be the import of v. 13, "And it shall turn to you for a testimony."

Second. He announces that even though they should fall victims to the malice of enemies, they should suffer no real injury. Even after intimating that some of them would be put to death, he says, "But there shall not a hair of your head perish," v. 18. The two statements are reconcilable in the way just indicated.

Third. Special strength and wisdom for special emergeneies are promised. When summoned before councils and kings, they were not to premeditate what they should say—that is, feel nervously anxious about framing their defense, for he, their Lord and Saviour, would give them such help that their adversaries would be confounded before them. Illustrations of the fulfilment of this promise are found in the Acts of the Apostles.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOV. 14, 1878.

THE CYNOSURE AT $1 50 A YEAR

FOR EVERYBODY

UNTIL MARCH 1ST 1879.

This great reduction in the price of the Cynosure is only for the winter months and is made for the purpose of encouraging every subscriber who loves the paper and the cause it represents, to make an earnest effort NOW, in the hope of making the Cynosure truly a mighty power for good, owned and felt in every village of our land, before which the hosts of darkness shall tremble and fall under the mighty hand of our God. Is not the cause a glorious one? Will not YOU be a co-worker with us, yea with God in this great work of enlightening the nation concerning the soul-destroying influence of secretism, which blights and withers everything that is dear to the patriot and Christian?

ELDER W. S. SPOONER of the West Nebraska Conference, has, for good reasons, recalled the appointment of the State Convention at York for organizing a State Christian Association. Elder Spooner writes full of purpose and hope, that when full preparations are made a strong meeting can be held. Rev. J. M. Snyder, now pastor of the Wesleyan church Wheaton, Ill., expects to be in Nebraska for a time in the month of February, and if corresponded with would make a respectable convention by himself. Bro. John Viall resides ten miles out of Kearney, Neb., and would be an able and good counsellor.

THE LATE DEA. ICHABOD WASHBURNE, of Worcester, Mass., it appears left materials for an autobiography of himself. His brother-in-law, Rev. Henry T. Cheever, is to edit and bring out the book. Mr. Washburne was altogether a very remarkable man. He began life poor, accumulated wealth by mechanical genius, and was widely known as a philanthropist, a Senator in the Massachusetts legislature; and besides a multitude of benevolent acts, has left monuments of himself in several public buildings and institutions in the city of Worcester, including the beautiful Washburn hall, where the National Christian Association is now assembled. The book cannot fail to be interesting and valuable.

ELDER BARLOW and friend Moss criticise this week with freedom, yet certainly with an honest purpose. While the admonition of the latter cannot be disregarded, we are bound to say that the line of argument pursued by Bro. Ronayne should be pushed first, midst and last. And why? Because it reaches to the real character of our enemy, probes into its real secrets, and opens to all eyes the hideous blackness of the heart of Masonry. When we understand this we know what it will do, what business it will follow openly before men. There are doubtless many who need Elder Barlow's reprimand. Let them read it carefully every day for a week; then go to work for ten subscribers for the Cynosure; and then they will want a lecturer enough to pay according to his merit. We believe the majority of those who support this reform are liberal in their gifts as they are fervent in their prayers. From our standpoint, too, the auxiliary associations are not nearly so much under the cloud as from his. The State associations show an efficiency we believe on the whole seldom equaled. Local organizations meeting only once a year and supported by volunteer agencies cannot be expected to be so much heard of, and their real work is largely done through the non-fellowshiping churches, as it should be. Lectures or expositions, also, largely supply the need of county and town societies; so that, while some of them have not met regularly, they will not be wanting when their time for work comes.

A CO-LABORER.—The Herald of Gospel Freedom, established last year at Auburn, Ind., has just removed to Wolcottville in the same State. Elder Lowman, the editor and publisher, has purchased printing material and will hereafter issue the paper from his own office. Our readers will recollect the struggles for the truth in the Northern Indiana Eldership of the Church of God, out of which the paper grew of necessity. A circular announcing a new departure in the affairs of the Herald is received which says:

This paper was started one year ago, as the organ of the Northern Indiana Eldership of the Church of God, a body of Christian workers who were raised up under the following circumstances:

Several ministers of the Church of God in Indiana, through a scrupulous regard for truth and righteousness, refused to fellowship men who were "YOKED TOGETHER" in the dark leagues of secrecy. For thus reproving the works of darkness, their licenses were withheld.

Accordingly, through the providence of God and the force of circumstances, they formed themselves together as an independent body; recognizing God as the founder of his own church, and all true Christians as her real membership. The Bible is their only creed, and Christian character their only test of fellowship.

The labors of this little band have been signally blessed of God and their members increased. The Herald, all things considered, has been a decided success. At a recent session of the Eldership, Elder I. W. Lowman was re-elected editor, and also publisher for two years, and Elder D. S. Warner was elected associate editor. The Herald is to be enlarged to a 5-column folio and issued semi-monthly. The second volume commences January 1, 1879. Price 75 cents a year.

THE MEETINGS. PLEASE NOTICE.

The National Convention at Worcester is in the midst of its sessions at the date of this number. Let it be followed as well as preceded by our prayers to God. After his mass meetings were dispersed, the Saviour often went away alone to pray; for the devils, who were routed by his teachings and cast out by his power, were then assailing our afflicted race at new points of attack.

The Illinois State Convention at Wheaton comes next Wednesday, 20th inst., 7 o'clock, evening. It is the first time any public meeting has convened there for this reform, except local or county gatherings. We hear that Rev. Mr. Ames from north Wisconsin is to attend with some delegates from that State. Bishop Wright from Iowa makes an address. Mr. and Mrs. Pettengill of Peoria, Mr. Plumb of Streator, Elder Parker Hurless of Polo with friends from his conference, Elder Barlow, Mr. E. A. Cook and family, with other earnest and devoted friends have declared their purpose to attend, and we look for the presence of Christ and the Pentecost "tongues of fire."

There will be hospitality for all who come, and the entertainment committee will send a team to Naperville, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road, on Wednesday at 6 o'clock P. M. for all who may at that hour come in on that road. Will all the friends on that line take notice. The Wheaton people will joyfully welcome and entertain all who come.

PREMILLENNIAL AND POST-MILLENNIAL.

Doctrines, like men, are to be known by their fruits. For at least fifty years (and thirty years are reckoned as a generation), two leading ideas have prevailed concerning the second coming of Christ to this earth. Even before the Baptist deacon, Miller, arose and insisted that the time of Christ's appearing was then at the doors, giving his name to a wide-spread agitation known as Millerism, Bishop Henshaw of Baltimore, and other prominent Episcopalians, had insisted there were to be no thousand years of millennial glory and goodness on earth before Christ's return; but that period so long looked for was to be ushered in by Christ himself, by the actual destruction of wicked men, leaving them no longer the option of an easier choice; and that "The acceptable year of the Lord" was to be thus "the day of vengeance of our God."

On the contrary, Dr. Cogswell, (Congregationalist) published a book entitled "Harbinger of the Millennium," in which he held that harbinger to be the American Board of Foreign Missions, and other like movements. Alexander Campbell entitled his denominational organ "The Millennial Harbinger," and, forty years ago next year, many friends of the reforms inaugurated at Oberlin: opposition to slavery, personal sanctification, etc., regarded the type of religion taught there as the dawn of a new dispensation preceding the coming of Christ; the promised thousand years before he should come appeared.

These two classes of interpreters, pre-millennial and post-millennialists, both assumed there is to be a millennium, and that men know what it is: whereas, Christ's comings have hitherto taken the world by surprise. Almost none supposed a his first coming as the babe of Bethlehem, that that was He! Moreover one would think those who believed he was soon to appear would have set themselves to "prepare his way" by pulling down Satan's strongholds, as slavery and the lodge; but they did not. Neither did those who first believed and taught a thousand years millennium, before Christ shall appear in the clouds of heaven "a second time unto salvation" (Heb. 9:28), set themselves to "prepare the way of the Lord" and "make his paths straight" as John preached; but, too generally, they have ranked themselves with "star-gazers" and "prognosticators," by trying to find literally or proximately the times which the Father "hath put in his own power."

Take Dr. E. P. Goodwin, of the First Congregational church in Chicago, as one of the best specimens of the pre-millennialists. Some ten years ago when Mr. Carpenter happened in his congregation, he declared that the "question of secret societies was providentially brought up, as temperance and slavery were, and it must be met." Since that time the only influence he has exerted on the discussion is: to consent to lead a prayer meeting in Carpenter Hall provided Bishop Fallows, a Freemason, and others would do so; to persecute and help cast me out of the State Association to which he belongs; and lately, to help call a "Prophetic Conference," made up of in part, and led by Freemasons. I hope this brother, who is really an able and excellent man, will think on his ways and set himself to preparing Christ's way to come, by removing the Christ-excluding worships. "Blessed is he who shall be found so doing."

CHURCH DISCIPLINE IN THE HANDS OF FREEMASONS.

Rev. R. Faurot of St. Louis, Mich., and the members of the State convention held in the First Methodist church of this city in 1874, will be interested in learning a few facts respecting Robert McMurdy, rector of Trinity Episcopal church of Niles, Mich. The former would like to hear from his sometime antagonist on the lodge question who was permitted to fill some half dozen long columns with Masonic rhapsody, while Bro. Faurot could hardly be spared a corner for reply. The others want to know what has become of the pompous gentleman who wanted to send the convention on his errands after a Grand Lodge report with which to clear himself of the charge of falsehood. He was then preaching in Hyde Park, a suburb of this city, and was believed to be the same Rev. Robert McMurdy who was, while in Washington, D. C., one of the company who were instrumental in establishing Masonry in the national capital, and who was one of the founders of Mackey's National Freemason, which no longer able to live alone crept into the same nest with the Voice of Masonry in this city.

Mr. McMurdy, it is reported, has fallen into sin like the deposed Bishop McCoskry. Whether the report be true or no, we cannot say, but can only hope it is false. It was so far credited by his bishop, Gillespie, that the alternative was lately offered him of an investigation or a suit for libel. He chose the former and it is the manner of conducting the business that deepens the suspicion of guilt. The committee are said to "care more for the dignity of the Episcopal church than for its purity, and will make a white-washing report." If this be true it means a Masonic report,—that McMurdy's grips are being put to their only natural use and that his "brother" lodgemen will get him through with a whole skin. Thus the lodge may be used to break down the purity of a church, which is the source of its power. "He who covereth his sins shall not prosper," no more can an organization calling itself a church.

The Knights of Honor.

This is the title of another of the swarming horde pouring out from the dens of the lodge upon the nation, like the winds from the cave of Eolus upon the Ægean sea. Masked under the forms of an application for insurance, the petition for membership contains in fine type a paragraph which the applicant is unlikely to read, but which binds him to as gross a slavery as ever could Freemasonry. Read it honest Americans, and say if such sentiments should be allowed to exist and be practiced by a secret irresponsible order in our land?

"I have not within six months been rejected, and never have been suspended or expelled by any lodge of this order. I am a believer in a Supreme Power that rules and governs the universe; and should I be accepted, I will never reveal to any one, not entitled to them, any of the secrets or mysteries of the order, nor any of the business transactions of any lodge of this order. I will obey all commands of superior officers that do not conflict with my religious or civil liberties, and I will faithfully comply with all laws, rules and usages of the order. Should I ever violate this pledge and covenant, I will submit to any and every kind of punishment that the lodge of which I am a member may see fit to inflict, and should I know of any one who violates this pledge, I will shun him as being unworthy the appellation of man. All of which I covenant and pledge to keep inviolate, in consideration of the benefits vouchsafed by the constitution of the order."

Remember the special price till March 1st. 1879, is $1.50 a year for the Cynosure.

—Elder Rathbun writes that he is moving his family and they will reach Clarence, Iowa, in a few days. His injury, from being thrown from a wagon fracturing his shoulder, has been painful and prevented his attending the Des Moines county meeting at Burlington, of which a report appears elsewhere. He is now so far recovered as to give partial attention to his work, and will respond to invitations from any part of the State. He can also attend meetings if desired in Minnesota and Indiana, but would prefer to remain in Iowa if work enough is arranged for him. The State convention, meeting soon, must provide for this.

—Bro. Jonathan S. Persham, of Brookfield, Vermont, calls upon all praying brethren and sisters in the State to pray the Lord that a lecturer may be sent them, and also that God's will may be done in power and great glory at the national meeting. Let the exhortation be heeded. Pray and work, and the old Green Mountain State shall feel the spirit of reform rekindling with the breath of God and the victory of faith.

—Prof. E. G. Paine, of Wasioja. writes that arrangements are progressing finely for the organization of Minnesota for the State work. A call has been numerously signed for a convention at St. Charles about the 11th of December. Notice will appear soon.

—Past Master Ronayne started for Worcester Monday evening with his stuffed "Hiram-killer" packed away in a soft place. We bade him good-bye till New Years. Till then let New England blaze again as in the days of old. Bro. H. H. Hinman, who will report for the Cynosure accompanied him.

—The Indiana Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons met last month at the State capital. The "Grand High Priest" in his annual address reported gloomily that the ranks of the order were failing in numbers, the roll being shorter than the year before. There is also a deficit of nearly a thousand dollars ($915) which the supporters of the "High Priest" and his worship were requested to make up. They were also promised a probable annual deficiency. The lodges are beginning to make a good record. They will soon have no material left, but refugees from human law.

—The Advance, in an item on the battle now going on between the lodges of France and the rest of the world, makes a clear distinction in respect to the principles of American Freemasonry thus:

The Freemasons of France have solemnly resolved that they will no longer recognize the existence of a God in any Masonic rites. Well, this at all events is frank and honest; these French Masons decline to regard Freemasonry as a religion, or to make of the order a kind of secretly substituted church. The Grand Lodges of Ireland, England and Scotland, have formally repudiated fellowship with their brethren across the channel. If one must make a choice between atheism and a religion meant to be so comprehensive of men of all sorts of belief and unbelief that it must needs wholly reject all reference to Jesus Christ, the Saviour of the world, one may choose the latter; but how a Christian can consistently choose either, is a point on which some of us entertain a very clear conviction.

The New Work on Masonic Symbolism.

My new book proving that Freemasonry corresponds in every ceremony, symbol and legend with the old Osirian worship of pagan Egypt or the Baal worship of Samaria, is now ready for the printer and from estimates received from some of the leading book publishers in Chicago will cost about $500. It will be a book of about 300 pages and well bound. It is indispensably necessary to have this book in our present and future controversy with Masonry and I trust my numerous friends throughout the country will help me to get it out at once.

I want five hundred subscribers at a dollar each for which each subscriber will receive two books. Each one to pay when he receives his books. All I want now is the names of subscribers so that I may go to press as soon as possible.

Please be prompt in this matter and send names to 104 Bremer street, Chicago. E. Ronayne.

Lift up your Heads.

"Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, rejoice... the Lord is at hand."—Phil 4:4.

Lift up your heads ye mighty gates,
Behold the King of glory waits,
The King of kings is drawing near,
The Saviour of the world is here;
Life and salvation doth he bring,
Wherefore rejoice and gladly sing
Praise, O my God, to thee!
Creator, wise is thy decree!

The Lord is just, a helper tried,
Mercy is ever at his side,
His kingly crown is holiness,
His sceptre, pity in distress,
The end of all our woe he brings;
Wherefore the earth is glad and sings
Praise, O my God, to thee!
O Saviour, great thy deeds shall be!

O blest the land, the city blest,
Where Christ the ruler is confest!
O happy hearts, and happy homes,
To whom this King in triumph comes!
The cloudless sun of joy he is,
Who bringeth pure delight and bliss;
Praise, O my God, to thee!
Comforter, for thy comfort free!

Fling wide the portals of your heart,
Make it a temple, set apart
From earthly use to heaven's employ,
Adorn'd with prayer, and love, and joy,
So shall your Sovereign enter in,
And new and nobler life begin.
Praise, O my God, be thine,
For word, and deed, and grace divine.

Redeemer, come! I open wide
My heart to thee; here, Lord, abide!
Let me thy inner presence feel,
Thy grace and love in me reveal,
Thy Holy Spirit guide us on Until our glorious goal be won!
Eternal praise and fame,
Be offer'd, Saviour, to thy name!

Dress and Religion.

My conscience constrains me here to censure what I wish I could let pass in silence. I refer to the gay, dressy religion of the age. If dress had no moral character, or was harmless in its effects, most gladly would I say nothing about it. But it is not so. It is most pernicious. Scarcely anything is more so. To a few points illustrative of its evils allow me to advert:

1. To the amount of money uselessly spent for costly and extra material.

2. To the amount of extra sewing required thereby, and to the deleterious influence of so much sewing on the female constitution, and thereby on the race. I do feel that a vast number of our blooming daughters first lose their health and are renderered miserable for life by sitting and sewing so steadily. I call attention to this point. Ye who regard suicide or self-murder as sinful, open your eyes, I beseech you, to this lamentable subject. If our wearing apparel and household clothing were made plain, strong, and comfortable, and a uniform fashion prevailed in this and all other necessary furnishing for life, I venture to affirm that, at the lowest estimation, nine-tenths of the labor, sewing, and money spent worse than uselessly might be avoided, and men, women and children be just as comfortable as now, and infinitely more happy than following these fashions can possibly render them.

3. Look and weep, in view of the vast sacrifice of life and virtue caused by tight-lacing and other damaging habits of fashionable life. I will not enlarge. Nearly half of the deaths of women and children are caused by these accursed fashions, besides an amount of aggravation and misery which no tongue can tell, no finite mind conceive.

"And what has religion to do with this or this to do with religion?" says one. A story: In making a recent phrenological examination of a woman, it was told her that she had almost ruined both body and mind by tight-lacing and following the vanities of fashion. She answered that she scarcely ever did these things but one day in the week. Reader, what day in the week do you suppose that was? In what day of the week is committed more suicidal and infanticidal corseting than in all the other six, and that by hundreds to one? And yet ministers administer the sacrament to women by thousands while in the very act of committing both suicide and infanticide. I pity clergymen—an excellent class of men, taken by and large. They would fain do their duty, and speak out. But the daughter of the rich church member mentioned above, exercises her pious approbativeness by attending church richly dressed and tightly corseted, in order to be the ton, or gayest lady of the meeting. Let the clergyman open his mouth (unless he does it in a joke), against this life-destroying sin, if he dare, and he will get his walking papers pretty soon. Some ministers defy consequences; but alas! what can they do? A living they must have, and they must yield to stern necessity. They put on the shackles and bow their knees.

But, ye ministers of God and of truth, I submit whether it is right thus to let this crying sin pass unrebuked! Starve, if you must, but tell the truth, "whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear." Be no longer "dead dogs" who can not bark at this enemy of mankind who will be the cause of destroying many, both soul and body, in hell. Your silence gives consent. Band yourselves together, and you can rid the land, our world by God's grace of a far greater sin than intemperance is or ever was. If you do not know its evils and their extent, it is high time for you to learn them. If you do know them, but dare not, or do not sound the alarm, abandon your calling, yield your posts to to those who will not let a sin as glaring as this go unrebuked. Do your duty; imploring millions yet unborn; say, Do your duty.

But I have not yet lashed this lacing and these fashions on where they belong. They go along with, they are propagated by, religious meetings, particularly on the Sabbath. Where do those who wish to learn the fashions as soon as they come out, go? To church, of course. Nor need they go anywhere else. Neither the ball-room, nor the theatre, nor the social party, get the fashions as soon, or propagate them a hundredth part as effectually, as do our religious meetings on the Sabbath. I am plain to declare, what every mind of common intelligence will admit, that if I wished to amass a fortune by the popularity of some fashion, even though it might be pernicious or ungodly in its tendency, I would not attempt to introduce it into the ball-room or theatre, but if I could introduce it among the ton or ladies and gentlemen of some D. D.'s church in some populous city, my end would be attained, for then all the other dressingly-religious maids and matrons must also have it both in that church and all the churches of the land, save a few branches of the Dunkard church [There are a few other exceptions.—Ed. Cyn.] and if so many have it, surely those who do not profess religion must also have it. Besides, who does not know that unless a woman dresses well at church she loses caste.

And I submit to any candid observer of the facts of the case, whether nine-tenths of those women who labor for wages do not spend nine-tenths of their scanty earnings for something called "decent;" that is, fashionable, with which to appear in church on the Sabbath? Nearly every new coat, new hat, new form of moustache, new bonnet, new dress with camel-hump, new everything, goes to church first—goes to church mainly. And sometimes the pitiful wages paid to our laboring women do not allow them to get as many decent things as fashion requires, with which to go to meeting on Sunday; and not having father or brothers on whom to rely for "pin-money," much as they love virtue, much as they abhor moral pollution, bedeck their persons on the Sabbath with the wages of sin! If even religion so-called did not compel them to dress, they had retained their virtue; and I verily believe more than half the prostitution of the land, private as well as public, is chargeable to the Sabbath dressing sanctioned, aye, even demanded by the religion of the day. But not by the religion of Jesus Christ. He nowhere requires his followers to wear bustles or corsets, dresses that are every way notched, indented, scalloped, and pinched up in ridges, so that they would need a couple of hands more than their Maker has furnished them with to lug their superfluity along with them, or fashionable attire. He dressed in swaddling clothes. He loves you none the better, ye painted, padded, bustled, ribboned, and milliner-made lady and gentleman Christian, because you go up to the sanctuary attired in the latest fashions (to hear your dead preachers), with your gilt-edged prayer-book or Bible in hand, etc., in that nipping, swinging, artificial walk and affected manner, the natural language of self-esteem and approbativeness—indeed, such he does not love at all (as his children.) Ye cannot serve two masters. If ye will dress fashionably, ye cannot be the disciples of the meek and lowly Jesus.—Fowler.

Family Worship.

The practice of family worship is the castle of Protestantism. It is the grand defence against all the attacks of whatever kind of a priestly caste, who set up their temples and tell us to pray by their mediation. Nay, but our houses are temples, and every man is a priest in his own house. This is a brazen wall of defence against superstition and priest-craft.

Family prayer is the nutriment of family piety, and woe to those who allow it to cease. I read the other day of parents who said they could not have family prayer, and one said: "If you knew that your children would be sick through the neglect of family prayer, would you not have it? If one child was smitten down with fever each morning that you neglected prayer, how then?"

O, then they would have it.

"And if there was a law that you should be fined five shillings if you did not meet for prayer, would you find time for it?"

Yes.

"And if there were five pounds given to all who had family prayer, would you not by some means arrange to have it?"

Yes.

And so the inquirer went on with many questions and wound up with this: "Then it is but an idle excuse when you, who profess to be servants of God, say that you have no time or opportunity for family prayer?"

Should idle excuse rob God of his worship, and our families of a blessing? Begin to pray in your families; and especially, if things have gone wrong, get them right by drawing near to God more distinctly. Did I hear you say, "We do not want to be formalists?" No, I am not afraid you would be. I am afraid of your neglecting anything that tends toward the good of your household and your own spiritual growth; and therefore, I pray you, labor at once to acquaint yourselves with God and be at peace. Draw near the Lord again, more thoroughly than you have done before; for it is the only way by which the backslidings of persons and families are at all likely to be corrected.—Spurgeon.

Room at the Top.

Never you mind the crowd, lad,
Or fancy your life won't tell;
The work is the work for a' that
To him that doeth it well.
Fancy the world a hill, lad,
Look where the millions stop;
You'll find the crowd at the base, lad;
There's always room at the top.

Courage and faith and patience,
There's space in the old world yet,
The better the chance you stand, lad,
The further along you get.
Keep your eye on the goal, lad,
Never despair or drop;
Be sure that your path leads upward;
There's always room at the top.

How the Digger Wasps make their Home.

July had come again, and brought with it such warm, sultry days that it almost seemed as if no living creature could stir abroad. Nevertheless, there was a wonderful deal going on in our garden. Through the air and over the flower beds hastened hundreds of little people. Some lived in trees and bushes, others in the ground, and all were hard at work.

One morning, especially, there seemed to be something unusual going on; the buzzing and humming was fairly deafening.

Whirr-r-r! whirr-r-r! What was that great creature that darted past my face? And here came another; and another; why, the garden was full of them?

Big brown-and-yellow wasps these strangers were, and all in most desperate hurry. Scores of them were already hard at work digging away in the firmly packed sand of the path.

As these new comers seemed to care very little who watched at their work, I sat down on an upturned flower pot in the shade of a friendly lilac, determined to make their acquaintance.

Hardly had I settled myself before one of the wasps approached. She seemed searching for something, for she flew rapidly back and forth, now alighting for a moment—now darting away again. At last she dropped upon the ground close to me and began to bite the earth with her strong jaws. When quite a little heap lay before her she pushed it to one side with her hind feet and then returned to her digging. In five minutes she had an opening big enough to get into; every time she appeared she backed up out of it pushing a huge load of sand as big as herself behind her. Soon around the hole was a high bank of earth, and she found it necessary to make a path across it, and push her loads over that. Two hours' hard work, and the house was finished. It was very simply planned, and had only one room down at the end of a long, narrow passage. But simple as it was, the little creature had done more work in two hours than a man could do in a day. That is, of course, taking her size into consideration. And she did not even now stop to rest. Not she! With one last look into her house, to make sure she was leaving all as it should be, she flew away. In a moment her strong wings had taken her quite out of sight but it was not long before she reappeared. Back and forth she hastened, at one moment flying through the grape arbor, at the next wheeling above the cabbage bed All this time the object of her search, a fat young locust, was quietly sitting on a gate post, quite forgetting, as even locusts sometimes will, that he had an enemy in the world.

A moment later and the wasp's sharp eyes had found him out; and then, quick as lightning, she darted down upon him, and pierced him with her sting. When locust lay perfectly still, wasp seized him and flew off. Arrived at her hole, she tumbled him head foremost in at the door, expecting him, of course, to fall quite to the bottom. But her calculations had been slightly at fault; the locust was too fat to go in, and there he stuck with his head and shoulders in the hole and his body in the air. Here was a dilemma! But my wasp friend was evidently not to be overcome by the difficulties of this sort. She flew off again, and this time returned with two other wasps; they crowded around the hole, and began digging away the earth which pressed close about the locust. In a short time they seemed satisfied, for they stood up and pushed at the object of their toils. Slowly he slid down out of sight, and she who had brought him hurried after. She laid an egg close to him in her house; then, hurrying up, began to carry back the earth she had before taken out, and in a short time the door was securely closed. Then she scraped away and patted down all the loose earth, till she had made it quite impossible for any evil-minded creature to find any trace of her home.

The wasp knew very well that her egg would soon hatch out; that the little white grub, her chick, would at once begin to feed upon the locust, which would supply food till the young one was full grown.—E. A. E., St. Nicholas.

The Wit of a Dog.

Winks, for his part, after an hour or two of it, got bored with the levity of the conversation, and rustled about so that he was put out of the carriage, to run for the benefit of his health. He went along for a mile pleased enough, gathering dust in clouds about him. But when he intimated a desire to be taken in, the boys, hard-hearted beings! laughed in the face of Winks. "A run will do you good, old fellow," said Dick, with cruel satisfaction. A short time afterward, I am sorry to say, a dreadful accident, nature unknown, happened to Winks. He uttered a heart-rending shriek, and appeared immediately after, making his way toward the carriage, holding up one feathery paw in demonstrative suffering. The anxious party stopped immediately, and Winks made his way towards them, laboriously limping and uttering painful cries. But when, all a-dust as he was, this hypocrite was lifted into the carriage, holding up the injured member, and was laid upon the softest cushion to have it examined, words fail to express the sardonic grin with which he showed his milk-white teeth. There was no more the matter with the little rogue's paw than with yours or mine.—Our Dumb Animals.

Puzzle Corner.

The correct answer to A. M. Paull's enigma, Oct. 24th, has been sent in by Mrs. C. H. Perry, T. A. Funk, Laura T. Scott, and Cyrus Shigley. "But I say unto you that for every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment."—Matt. 12:36.

Dressing Babies without Pins.

To dress an infant without pins: Take a piece of flannel eighteen inches long and six inches wide, gradually slope off the ends to four inches in width, quarter distant from one end, cut across the band to within an inch of each side; bind the slit, also the entire band with narrow ribbon or tape; sew two pieces on each end of the band to tie it. Place the center of band in front; bring round smoothly under the arms and across the back; pass the opposite end through the slit and tie with the tapes in front; next put on a flannel skirt made with sack-waist, buttons at the back and long sleeves; then a linen or cambric skirt made in the same way, except being sleeveless; dress according to taste. I prefer a plain white wrapper, open the entire front, edged with Hamburg or something as simple, and fastened with buttons. A waist seven inches, sleeves six inches, skirts five-eighths of a yard long, is as I like them; wrappers three-quarters of a yard in length. They are easier to laundry, to make, take less material, and common sense teaches us that they are more healthful for a child to wear than when made longer.

Laundry Process of Doing up Shirts.

First, at the drug store procure one pound of white wax, one-half pound of spermaceti, one quarter pound of gum arabic (the white pulverized). Melt slowly together, and cool in little cakes. After washing—while yet wet—starch your shirts in boiled starch made in the usual way, only not very stiff; dry, and the night before you iron them starch again in boiled starch, with a piece of the cake added the size of a hickory nut, although of course that should be in proportion to the quantity of starch. The above will starch a half-dozen shirts. The starch must be thoroughly rubbed into the linen, or else it will blister when ironed; roll tightly, and let them stand until morning. Iron in the usual way, rubbing the linen with a clean cloth wet in cold water if it is inclined to stick, or is lumpy; iron until perfectly dry. The best plan is to hang by the stove a few minutes after ironing to be sure no dampness still remains, as the steam generated by it will prevent the polish so much desired. When perfectly dry, put your shirt-board—from which all cloth should be removed—under the linen to be polished, and with your polishing-iron heated very hot, give quick, short rubs with the heel of the iron (never use the broad surface of the polishing iron). I find a quicker result from rubbing crossways of the cloth. Before beginning your polishing process, however, rub the linen very lightly with a cloth wrung out of cold water, as dry as possible; any little spots of dirt may be removed in the same manner. Nothing but experience will teach one just how to manage those dreadful shirts, but if you will persevere I am sure you will be successful—Cor. Inter-ocean.

A Virginia paper describes a fence made of such crooked rails that every time a pig crawls through he comes out on the same side.

Many times, florists, instead of removing a plant to a larger pot, simply wash the soil from the roots, and return it to the same pot, but in new soil.

To make silk which has been wrinkled and "tumbled" appear exactly like new, sponge it on the surface with a weak solution of gum arabic, or white glue, and iron it on the wrong side.

It has been discovered by Minnesota farmers that two acres of sunflowers will supply a family with fuel through a long winter. The wood of the stocks and the oil of the seed make roaring and cheerful fires.

Not only are the Maine farmers raising many potatoes for their starch works, but they are paying great attention to the production of beet sugar. At least two thousand of the farmers are cultivating beets for this new business, which the State aids by a bounty.

In England 40 bushels of wheat per acre is not an unusual yield and 50 or 60 bushels per acre is often realized as the result of high farming. Nevertheless England is obliged to import each year about 100,000,000 bushels in addition to her own crop to feed her people.

A housewife writes to the Maine Farmer that eggs may be "kept as long as you wish" by simply placing them in a colander, pouring boiling water over them sufficiently to cook the thin outside skin, which excludes the air, and then set them away in a cool place.

It is said by a farmer who has tried the experiment so often as to be sure of his ground, that buttermilk poured over the back of a scurvy pig will entirely and speedily remove the scurf. The remedy is simple. Almost every farmer can boast of one or more scurvy pigs, and if buttermilk will cure it, it should not be spared.

Fertilizers for Grape Vines.—Bone dust, wood ashes and such like fertilizers are best for grape vines in low ground. Stable manure in large quantities on damp soil will produce diseased vines. On dry ground the effect is beneficial. The best soil for grapes is dry, light, warm and rich. On such soil apply top-dressings of well rotted manure, alternating every third year with a dressing of slacked lime. Where grapes are being raised on damp ground care must be taken to keep the roots near the surface.—Western Rural.

Frost Bitten Plants.—A correspondent of an English contemporary gives his experience with regard to frosty nights that sometimes occur late in the spring or early in the autumn. He says that when he suspects that there is or has been a frost on his vegetation, he at once goes out into his garden, gets his watering-pot, and sprinkles with water those tender plants which are liable to be frost bitten, taking care to do this before the sun rises. By this means he has never failed to obviate the disastrous effects of frost, when his immediate neighbors have suffered severely from them. The remedy is simple, not very laborious, and well worth trying.—Germantown Telegraph.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The American Wesleyan furnishes us with a note on that most blameless and sincere of men, Bro. Woodruff Post, now preaching at Little Marsh, Tioga county, Pa.—"Rev. W. Post, of the Methodist Episcopal church, an old time friend and a faithful worker for Christ and reform, has been stationed, first on Hardscrabble Hill, then at Dogtown Corners and now in Starvation Hollow, because he will work and does not feel at liberty to pass in his commission of 'Go preach the Gospel to every creature.' He has the temerity to hold to the opinion that a man cannot follow a ritual which denies the name of Christ a place, nor worship at an altar where the soul of man is fitted for heaven with a stone-hammer. He is opposed to Masonry and this is the way he pays for it. He and his devoted wife lived last year in a shanty of rough boards, winter and summer, 18 by 22 feet, but have determined not to die before their time comes. He used to live well in Rochester, built a chapel for the church of his choice, and for them and by them has lost all his earthly estate, which was not small. Not the whole church is to blame of course, but those men who have sought to use his conference for his overthrow. They have succeeded wonderfully. The ground seems to be fruitful of such results."

FREE METHODIST.

—The report of the committee on reforms as adopted by the late General Conference is as follows: "We are in hearty sympathy with the great moral reforms of the day. We are more than ever convinced of the evils of organized secretism, from Freemasonry, the great mother of them all, down to the secret temperance society and rural grange. We believe that none of our people can apologize for or countenance any of these without compromising their covenant vows to the church, and bringing hurt to their souls.

"We regard Freemasonry and its offshoots with increasing abhorrence, as new revelations appear showing its corrupting influence upon things political, social and ecclesiastical. We feel assured that in more than one instance juries and church councils have been controlled by it, and the ends of righteousness defeated. We abhor its Christless mummeries and sacrilegious usurpation of the office of the ministry of Christ in performing the holy ordinance of baptism, and other religious rites, mixed up with barbarous oaths and murderous penalties. In our opinion, no person who is known to be a Freemason, should be allowed to preach or to administer the sacraments among us.

"While regarding with deep interest the temperance movements of the day, we are satisfied that the traffic in strong drink ought to be suppressed by the strong arm of positive prohibitory law, and we are more and confirmed in the position always maintained by us as a people, that true reform is based alone in grace, and therefore our supreme aim should be to secure that change of heart which involves salvation from all wrong.

"Our country has been agitated of late by the revolt of multitudes of railroad employes and miners, and other workmen, against the companies employing them. This has resulted in the loss of many lives, in the destruction of millions of dollars worth of property, in the paralysis of some of the most important departments of business, and in great loss to the laborers concerned. While we most emphatically condemn capitalists and business corporations for oppressing the hireling in his wages, we must also condemn this action of the laborers. We think this excitement and violence is largely due to the workings and suggestions of certain secret organizations patronized by many of these laborers, which form a kind of communism. This, when fully developed, can only bring ruin to its members and great injury to the public. We protest against this communism, and exhort our people to firmly discountenance it.

We would call attention to the efforts of a number of the most influential clergymen and reformers in our republic, to secure an express recognition of the Lord God, by name, in the Constitution of the United States. We would second these efforts. We consider this omission of the name above all names, and the neglect and refusal to thus distinctly and expressly recognize the Supreme Jehovah, as a stain on our national government, also as bordering on impiety, if not actually impious. We regard it as similar with those works of the devil exhibited in rank infidelity, and in those principles and efforts by which Satan would, through papal machinations, crowd true recognition of Deity out of our public schools by excluding therefrom the Holy Bible."

The report further continues on the topics of worldly extravagance, tobacco, Sabbath observance and the raising of farm produce to be used in the manufacture of intoxicating liquor.

—Rev. E. Mathews of Brooklyn, Michigan, expects to dedicate a new church at Jefferson, near by, December 1st.

—Bro. M. L. Vorheis reports in the Free Methodist that his work is extending into the country for miles, and he is in great need of an assistant.

METHODIST PROTESTANT.

The principles for which this denomination contends, and for which it became separated from the old Methodist Episcopal church are briefly told in the following: 1. A constitution by which the mutual rights of the ministry and laity are well defined and guarranteed. 2. Eligibility on the part of the local ministry to seats in the General Conference. 3. Lay delegations in both the Annual and General Conferences. 4. The exercise of the right of suffrage on the part of the laity. 5. The right to elect their own class leaders. 6. The right to elect the trustees to hold their own church property. 7. The right on the part of the laity to exercise a legal and constitutional right in the government and regulations of the pulpit, the press, and literary institutions of the church. 8. The advantages and blessings of a republican church government, based upon the principles laid down in the New Testament, and which are in perfect unison with the principles upon which our civil government is founded.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—At a communion season in the Seventh Avenue church, New York, Rev. R. W. Kidd, pastor, on the 13th of October, fifteen new members were received—thirteen on profession of their faith in Christ and two by certificate. With forty-one that were received at the last communion, this makes fifty-six that have been added to the roll of membership since the report was made to the General Assembly. Henry Harrison, well known for his interest in our reform is a prominent member of this church.

—Xenia Theological Seminary is said to be the oldest formally organized school of theology in this country. It was founded first at Service Creek, Pennsylvania, in 1794, under the instructions of Rev. John Anderson, D.D., and was specially the theological seminary of the Associate church. In 1821, when the synod had resolved upon an Eastern and Western seminary, this was constituted the Western one, and was removed to Canonsburgh, in Pennsylvania. The Eastern one was located at Philadelphia, under the professorship of Rev. John Banks, D. D. Afterward the two were combined, and after continuing in Canonsburgh over thirty years, it was removed to Xenia, O., in 1855, where it occupies a permanent and useful position. In 1874 it had incorporated with it the seminary at Monmouth, Ill., which had been originally an Associate Reformed institution at Oxford, O.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. C. F. Hawley, well known as a holiness and revival evangelist, has been laboring with success in Steuben county, N. Y. The Wesleyan says that any desiring the early services of this brother in holiness meetings or conventions, or lecturing on the religion of Freemasonry, which having heard we pronounce a masterpiece, should correspond at once with him at Cohocton.

—Rev. J. A. Richards reports from the Western Iowa conference the presence of Elder Rathbun in this wise: "On Thursday evening, that anti-secret 'lion,' Rev. D. P. Rathbun, presented to a crowded house the wicked deception of Freemasonry. Brother Rathbun is a workman and ought to be sustained. All were highly pleased with the exposure and lecture, unless it was the victims of this great evil system of darkness."

—The Seminary at Wasioja, Minn., has opened this fall with brighter prospects than ever before. Prof. Paine, Bro. Shepardson and others, who have prayed and sacrificed to establish an institution of Christian learning there, are much encouraged. What is better than all temporal prosperity is a glorious revival of religion which followed the meeting of the annual conference at Wasioja.

—Rev. J. A. Richards of Ft. Scott, Kansas, called at this office and at Wheaton on his return from the annual conferences to his home work. He has been sustained and blessed in undertaking the work which the sickness of General Agent Kinney thrust upon him. His work in Fort Scott is of the first importance; begun only a year and a half ago without a Wesleyan member and only $3, but with abundant faith in God, the reward was just such as the Lord promises to give. There is now a strong church of some 100 or more, though poor in this world, rich in faith. They have a stone building ready for the roof and inside fixtures, and $600 will help them through. It would be a blessing upon any soul to help such an object. Bro. Richards' work deserves aid from those who are able. The sisters of the College church, Wheaton, are preparing a box of clothing and other needed articles for Bro. Richards.

—Rev. N. Wardner left Wheaton on Wednesday morning for Boxley, Indiana, where he began his next holiness convention on the same evening. His visit to Wheaton was the means, under God, of a precious blessing to Bro. Snyder's church. The work will be carried on by the church, assisted by Pres. Blanchard, Dr. Hiatt and others from the College church, and a large ingathering of souls is compassed by the faith of the brethren.

BAPTIST.

—Elder J. L. Barlow yet remains in Chicago, where he may be addressed at 342 Vernon Ave. His reputation as an able preacher of the Gospel should gain him work without delay. The Baptist churches will find his record for faithful adhesion to Christ against all forms of irreligion is such as many ministers might well emulate.

—Prof. Edgren of the Scandinavian department in Morgan Park Baptist Theological Seminary is an independent thinker on the relations of Christianity to the secret order system. His views are eminently Scriptural and so can be maintained against all opposition. He issues a Swedish monthly which is an important aid in the work of evangelization among the Scandinavians in the Northwest.

—Elder A. L. Post, of Montrose, Pa., is so out of health as to probably be unable to attend the National Convention this week. He is under orders from his physician to refrain as much as possible from mental exertion.

—Several of the Baptist State conventions of the West have united in recommending a day of thanksgiving and thank-offering to God for the wonderful blessing that has fallen on the missions in India. The first Lord's day in December will be thus observed by the Baptist churches.

—D. F. Carnahan, Knight Templar, who lately occupied a pulpit in Streator, Ill., has become financial secretary of Wayland Academy, Beaver Dam, Wis.

LUTHERAN.

—The students, with the officers of the Augustana (Swedish Lutheran) College, celebrated Thursday, Oct. 31st and the day following as the 361st anniversary of the reformation, by song, orations, discussions and music. The President, Dr. T. N. Hasselquist, delivered the salutation. The Rev. E. Carlson spoke on the importance for the Christian life of the chief doctrines of the reformation. An oration was given by the Rev. J. Wickstand, on the traffic in indulgences and Luther's ninety-five theses. The following discussions were participated in by the students and professors:

Thesis: 1. How can a living interest for our church best be awakened and maintained among our youth?

2. What can and ought to be done for the distribution of good tracts?

3. How can purity of doctrine and a fervent and sincere life of faith best be promoted and sustained by us?

An oration by the president on the true worship of God restored to the church by the reformation.

The exercises were all in the Swedish language, except one delivered by the Rev. E. Beltour, of Chicago, who spoke on the mission of the Lutheran church in America.

This college is in a very flourishing condition, where Swedish students can receive a first-class education.

The Augustana, the Swedish Lutheran monthly, to which the professors of this institution are chief contributors, takes the Gospel ground on lodgery. Prof. Cervin of the college, translated one of the ablest addresses of Pres. Blanchard into Swedish and it is now printed in the list of Cynosure tracts.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The following from the Baptist Weekly should be a reminder to the patrons of ex-parte verdicts: "In Vermont, recently, the Windham Congregational Association passed a vote withdrawing fellowship from the Rev. David Shurtleff for "untruthfulness, deception and making a disturbance in churches." As the vote was passed unanimously, after a full consideration of the case, many people inclined to believe that the Rev. David was guilty of all the meanness alleged against him, but he concluded that he was badly treated and sought reparation by commencing a course of law in secular courts. As a first fruit of his appeal to Cæsar he has scored a verdict of $273 against the Rev. Dr. Stevens, of Westminster."

GENERAL.

—D. L. Moody and family have reached their new home, 163 Lanvale street, Baltimore, where they expect to live in quiet, free from all intrusion from committees desiring the services of the noted evangelist. He hopes for rest and quiet, and a benefit to the health of his family by the removal from Connecticut. It is reported that Mr. Sankey will rejoin him in the spring and they will resume their work together.

—The report of the treasury of the General Missionary Committee of the M. E. church shows the total receipts of the year ending Oct. 31, 1878, to be $551,365 05, and the disbursements $511,169.90. The present net cash is $42,629.56, a decrease during the year of $51,452.88. The total amount raised and expended by the society during the last ten years is $6,442,129.31. In addition to this sum, the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society has raised and expended $379,798.98 during the same time.

—A Christian Conference was held in Toronto, Canada, Oct. 22-25, to promote the coming of the kingdom by awakening a larger interest in the study of God's Word, and inciting Christians to deeper personal consecration. During the days' sessions, which were fully attended and excited marked interest, addresses were made by several eminent preachers and Bible readings were given by the Rev. Mr. Erdman late of Chicago.

—The fourth general conference of the Waldensian Mission churches was held at Turin a few weeks ago, and was followed by the annual Synod of the churches in the Valleys. The Waldensian church proper consists of fifteen parishes in the Valleys and two outside. The conference was composed of 101 members and presided over by Prof. E. Comba of the Theological Hall, Florence. A report on "contributions" brought out the following interesting statistics of the mission work: 39 churches, 24 stations, 62 places regularly visited, 4,203 regular attendants on divine service, 15,323 occasional hearers, 2,530 members in full communion, 393 catechumens, 291 members received during the year, 1,840 pupils in day schools, 1,749 in Sunday-schools, 43,385 lire (about $8,000), amount of the year's contributions. Reports made to the Synod represent the state of the church as being most gratifying. On the roll of the Waldensian ministry there at this time sixty-six names, fifty-six of professors and ministers in active service, seven of ministers emeriti, and three of ministers to whom special leave has been granted to serve temporarily other churches in Paris, Vienna and Neuchatel. At the Theological College in Florence seventeen students have been in attendance during the year.

The Cynosure mark is set at 10,000. Let every one help to reach it.

Political.

PLATFORM OF THE AMERICAN PARTY.

We hold: 1. That ours is a Christian and not a heathen nation, and that the God of the Christian Scriptures is the author of civil government.

2. That God requires and man needs a Sabbath.

3. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks as a beverage, is the true policy on the temperance question.

4. The charters of all secret lodges granted by our Federal and State Legislatures should be withdrawn, and their oaths prohibited by law.

5. That the civil equality secured to all American citizens by articles 13th, 14th and 15th of our amended Constitution should be preserved inviolate.

6. That arbitration of differences with nations is the most direct and sure method of securing and perpetuating a permanent peace.

7. That to cultivate the intellect without improving the morals of men, is to make mere adepts and experts; therefore the Bible should be associated with books of science and literature in all our educational institutions.

8. That land and other monopolies should be discouraged.

9. That the government should furnish the people with an ample and sound currency, and a return to specie payment as soon as practicable.

10. That maintenance of the public credit, protection to all loyal citizens, and justice to Indians are essential to the honor and safety of our nation.

11. And finally, we demand for the American people the abolition of Electoral Colleges, and a direct vote for President and Vice-president of the United States.

— A. S. Kendall, of West Swanzey, New Hampshire, who was prohibition candidate for governor in the late election, is neither a Mason or an Odd-fellow, while the other nominees, Republican, Democrat and Greenback, were all adhering Freemasons. A friend in that State urges that there should be harmony between the American party and the Prohibitionists. There is no doubt of that. The former are all prohibitionists, and the latter should all maintain the principles of our platform. They are sometimes, however, tangled up with Good Templarism or other follies of that nature. There will be more and more union and harmony in all true reform politics as their principles are disseminated; for all have their basis in the Gospel and so are by nature one.

—The Americans of College Springs, Page county, Iowa, carried their principles to the polls in the late election, nominating a full local ticket which elected the two justices, two of the town board, a constable and assessor. Their vote ran from 38 to 125. Last year on the State ticket they polled 22 votes. Make way! Let the Anti-masons of College Springs run up their flag.

Remember the special price till March 1st, 1879, is $1.50 a year for the Cynosure.

News of the Week.

—The elections last week resulted in considerable Republican gains throughout the North. In most of the States there was gain in Republican Congressmen. Butler was defeated in Massachusetts by some 15,000 majority. In South Carolina the tactics of Wade Hampton repressed all opposition, but in several Southern States the Republican and Independent votes were numerous and in some cases a majority. Alexander Stephens was re-elected to Congress, and the Republican candidate in central Georgia. The Republican gain in Congressmen is 16, but there is a loss of 9 in the Southern States. Our next Congress will have a Democratic majority in both branches.

| Last Wednesday night a party of robbers broke into the vault, in St. Mark's churchyard, New York' containing the remains of A. T. Stewart, the great merchant prince. They bore away undiscovered the decomposing remains and the police find hardly a clew yet to them. Mrs. Stewart has offered a reward of $25,000 for the return of the remains. There is no other opinion of the affair than that it was undertaken to get money in this way.

—Fifty Indian boys and girls, collected from the agencies on the Upper Missouri, arrived in Chicago a week ago on their way east. They were in charge of Lieutenant R. H. Pratt, of the Tenth Cavalry, who is taking them to Hampton, Va., to be educated. It is the intention to teach them the English language, agriculture, mechanic arts, and, in short, fit them to earn a livelihood. The experiment originated with Secretary Schurz and Indian Commissioner Hoyt.

—It came out in the evidence in the Miles case in Salt Lake that forty-five marriages were consecrated in a single day; how many were first or legitimate, and how many polygamous, of course cannot be told, but probably never in the history of the Mormon church were there so many of these polygamic marriages contracted, and never was there such manifest apathy on the part of Congress to do away with it.

—The news that Edison had solved the difficulty of electric lighting caused a decline in London gas stocks of seven per cent. The paid up capital of the London companies is about $36,000,000, and the yearly income about $11,000,000. The companies hold exceptional powers from the government, and all shares have been at a heavy premium. The fact that a simple anouncement as to Edison's success on a point on which it was believed the electric light would prove a failure illustrates curiously the faith of the world in Edison's ability to accomplish whatever he undertakes.

—The Afghans, the dominant race in the Kingdom of Shere-ali, now menaced by England, call themselves Jews and claim to be descended from King Saul. In defense of these claims it is asserted that they are unquestionably of the Jewish type, are divided into tribes, clans, and families, that they practice the ceremony of the scape goat, and celebrate their religious rites on the hills. There is, however, no trace of Hebrew dialect in their language. In other respects their religion is that of the Mohammedan Sonnites, and they regard the Sultan as the legitimate successor of the Caliphs.

—General Grant dined with King Louis of Portugal on the 1st inst. All the ministers were present and some of the distinguished nobility. The General was received with great cordiality, and was tendered by the King the highest decoration of knighthood. He thankfully declined the honor, as not in keeping with the spirit and laws of his country.

—The Manchester Guardian's London correspondent says: "Before the plenipotentiaries left Berlin Lord Beaconsfield and Count Andrassy signed a treaty providing that if Russia should endeavor to remain on Turkish territory after May 1879, England and Austria will insist on her complete withdrawal. If Russia should urge that Turkey is unable to protect the Christians, owing to the disturbed state of affairs in Roumelia, England and Austria will furnish a garrison to relieve the Russians. The purport of this treaty was communicated to Russia."

—A Vienna dispatch says it is believed the adoption in the lower house of the Reichsrath of the address in reply to the speech from the throne will secure the assent of the Austrian members' delegation to additional credit for accomplishing the occupation of Bosnia, but at the same time commits them to record a vote of want of confidence in Count Andrassy's foreign policy.

—A telegram from Constantinople says Russia is establishing a second line of defense at Adrianople. Several prominent Turks, believing that the attitude of the Russians in Roumelia will lead to war with England and Turkey, are anxious to convince Mr. Layard that the best mode of fighting Afghanistan would be to engage Russia in Europe.

—The correspondent regards the recall of Count Schouvaloff from London as preliminary to his supplanting Prince Gortschakoff, and considers Bismarck is doing his utmost to bring about that event. Schouvaloff's accession to power would be the signal for a policy on the part of Russia and Germany aiming at a common reactionary end. Schouvaloff's foreign policy would not be pacific, but rather the opposite.

LIST OF

Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the offiee or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Haneock, Millard Filmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanehard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged eaeh week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Traets has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is espeeially desirable that there should be a full supply of Traets for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such ealls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION.

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract,

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World.
This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract, Publishers' Department.

A Mistake—$2.20—

Was made in not changing the price of the Cynosure in our renewal and discontinuance notices for November, and notwithstanding our offer of the paper at $1.50, a few have been led by these notices to send $2.20. All such have been credited seventeen months.

Wm. R. Morley, Brush Creek, Iowa, sends sixteen subscriptions for one year each; all new.

J. S. McClelland, Oberlin, Ohio, has been sick but writes: "Canvassing to day. Hope to forward other subscriptions with mine soon."

G. N. LeFevre, Lancaster, Pennsylvania, sends two new subscriptions for one year each, making in all eighteen. He writes: "Some of us in this neighborhood propose making arrangements to have Mr. Ronayne to deliver a course of lectures exposing Masonry in several of the cities and towns of eastern Pennsylvania. After we have Ronayne you can look for one of your largest clubs from Pennsylvania."

A gentleman at Ada, Kent county, Michigan, writes Nov. 6, 1878: "I have before me the first number of of the Christian Cynosure that I have ever seen, of date October 3d last. I am delighted with the stand you are taking against Freemasonry. * * * I will try to canvass some the coming winter."

Are there ten adult readers within five miles of you who have never seen the Cynosure? Who do not know that there is such a paper? Friends push the canvass for subscribers.

Several send the full price, $2 20 per year, for the paper, although the price is reduced for the winter. We will extend the time of such proportionately, or if they authorize us to do so, apply the extra seventy cents in sending the Cynosure to some worthy person who is not able to take the paper, sending his name and address to the donor.

Mason and Hamlin Cabinet Organs are of such established reputation as the best of their class of instruments, that they scarcely need further commendation. Their makers commenced business twenty-five years since with the determination to make only the very best organs possible, and to this resolution they have constantly adhered, notwithstanding the strong temptation to the use of poor material and workmanship in order to compete in price with other makers.

Experience has shown the wisdom of this course. Every year adds to the substantial proof of the superiority of their organs, and consequently to their reputation. This year they have the honor of a grand gold medal from His Majesty Oscar II., King of Norway and Sweden, and the gold medal, the highest distinction in the power of the jury to confer, at the Paris Exposition. The significance of this award is greater from the fact that it is the only gold medal awarded any American musical instruments.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

Terms begin

Dec. 10th, 1878.
Mar. 18th, 1879.
Sept. 2nd, 1879.
Dec. 9th, 1879.

WINTER TERM BEGINS DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

We desire to ask the attention of every one interested in education to the advantages offered by this Institution. An able and experienced Faculty, thoroughly devoted to the work of the Institution, are now harmoniously laboring to make this College thorough in each department, and so economical that its advantages can be secured by all.

FOURTEEN TEACHERS

are engaged in the College, the Preparatory School, the Sub-preparatory Department, the Department of Music and the School of Drawing and Painting. In each of these Departments, students can enter at any time and advance as rapidly as their abilities will permit. Prof. Baker in Vocal Music and on the Organ gives instruction at very reasonable rates while Miss Brownehas charge of the Piano Room.

PENMANSHIP

German, Free-hand Drawing and Book-keeping are taught by excellent teachers without any extra charge. Vocal Music costs only one dollar per term. Hereafter, as for some time past, special attention will be paid to the study of Elocution and Rhetoric as connected with practical

ORATORICAL WORK.

The charge for tuition is eleven dollars per term. Young ladies can have Room, Board and Tuition for forty-five dollars per term of thirteen weeks. Persons from neighboring towns who wish to be at home from Friday evening to the following Monday can have a reduction of one fifth on the charge for board.

BOARDING PLACES

in private families can be secured at from three to four dollars per week. Persons who board themselves can get along at an expense of from one to one and a half dollars per week. In short any one who can live at home can live in Wheaton and secure a thorough education.

OUR GRADUATES

are successfully teaching, preaching, practising law and conducting mercantile affairs in many parts of the country. Young men and women who have a fair elemental English Education can graduate from our Preparatory or Normal School in two or three years.

DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

Our next term begins on this date, at which time we hope to greet many old and many new students. If you wish any further information write to the undersigned and it will be cheerfully furnished.

IOWA.

The annual meeting of the Anti-secret Association of the State of Iowa, in accordance with the known wish of a majority of the officers, as also at the request of other friends, is hereby called to meet at Cedar Rapids (instead of Chariton) on Tuesday, Dec. 10, at 2:30 P. M. to continue through the following day. Important matters will demand attention. Able and interesting addresses may be expected. Auxiliary associations and churches in sympathy with the movement are hereby urged to send delegates. All friends of reform are hereby invited to attend this Convention.

C. D. TRUMBULL, Rec. Sec'y.

DODGE COUNTY, MINN.

The Dodge County Christian Association will hold its third annual meeting at Wasioja, Dec. 4th and 5th, 1878. The meeting will be opened on the evening of Wednesday, the 4th, with a lecture by Rev. Wm. Fenton of St. Paul. Arrangements are being made to have a full and interesting programme served up by our home talent and speakers from abroad.

Come and join in a free discussion, all who are unwilling to submit to the terrorism of the lodge—hardly less exacting and potent, though enforced secretly, than that of the Spanish Inquisition. Come and get warmed up for the State anti-secret convention at St. Charles, the week following. Free entertainment.

W. F. HILLMAN, Pres.
E. G. PAINE, Cor. Sec.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN MINNESOTA.

We, the undersigned, hereby invite all those who are opposed to organized secretism and all who are willing to hear a fair discussion of the character of the secret organizations, to meet in convention at St. Charles, Winona county, Minn., on Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1878, at six o'clock P. M., the convention to continue during the next day and evening, at least.

The object of the convention is to effect a State organization auxiliary to the National Christian Association, and to make arrangements for a thorough canvass of the State in the interests of this reform. Edmond Ronayne, or D. P. Rathbun, will be present and work the degrees of Freemasonry. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent for the National Christian Association, is also expected. Other able speakers from Illinois and Wisconsin, as well as from our own State, will be in attendance. We hope to make this a profitable time for that branch of the cause of Christ, represented by this reform. St. Charles is on the line of the W. and St. P. R. R. Free entertainment will be provided.

Topics of the Time.

—It is a Providential arrangement, but no less remarkable, that our national meetings are following a seven-year series. The first gathering at Pittsburgh, at which the National Christian Association and the Cynosure originated, was held in 1868. The following conventions were held respectively in Chicago, Cincinnati and Worcester. In 1875, seven years after organization, we met again in Pittsburgh, the next year in Chicago, in 1877 in Dayton, near Cincinnati, and last week Worcester received the friends of our reform again, seven years after 1871. There has been no design in this recurrence, and probably it has never been noticed before this writing; and, when we remember the Scriptural significance of the number seven we may indulge a hope that our efforts for the crown and kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ may be made perfect in success in his own time.

Secretary Evarts and Lord Salisbury have come to a disagreement in the settlement of the Halifax fishery claims. The Geneva arbitration settled the principles on which the demands of England against our fishermen were to be settled; and the arbitrators allowed her five and a half million dollars. The time of payment expires in a few days and the money is in the hands of New York bankers for shipment, when there arises another difficulty. The provincial authorities have made a decision that if carried out annuls all the privileges so dearly paid for by our government. Mr. Evarts calls a halt, saying, Let the provinces be compelled to honor the treaty. Lord Salisbury replies, holds to the decision and claims that it was thorough and final. Their voluminous arguments are read by few, but the American press generally sustain Mr. Evarts, and demand that he withhold the award until this new question is equitably settled.

President Hayes and his Cabinet are busied over their annual reports. The Southern question is necessarily the most prominent. In this the second effort toward conciliating the South, Mr. Hayes believes the action of South Carolina and Louisiana is a base betrayal of his confidence and violation of their obligations to give all voters, white or black, equal privileges under the law. In both these States the Republican vote has been suppressed by intimidation and murder. The United States authorities are under orders to prosecute every case and enforce the laws. What they may be able to do with the army removed by a hostile Congress cannot yet be known; but that the rigid enforcement of the laws is the only resort is well understood at Washington. In regard to a change in his policy toward the South the President says his position is the same now as indicated in his letter of acceptance, his inaugural address and first message, to use all the authority given him for the preservation of the legal rights of every citizen. From the present indications it may be necessary for him to go beyond this authority. Will he do it?

The opening of the new Catholic cathedral on Fiftieth street, New York for a fair to aid its completion, has given the country a new stock of figures in respect to that fallen church. The Catholic Review estimates the papacy to have three hundred million followers, and in this country alone six and a half millions, which number had grown from 25,000 in the first hundred years from 1776. These figures may be exaggerated from the custom of estimating by families; but there are other items in the list which have a fearful significance for our country. They are such as these: 5,358 priests; 56 bishops and archbishops; 5,046 churches; 3,711 chapels and mission stations; 95 monasteries; 225 nunneries and establishments for women; 64 colleges and 200 girls' schools. The great marble cathedral in New York capable of holding 17,500 persons and the tenth on the list of buildings of the kind in the world is another mark of this growing power. It would be pleasant to read this list, were it not too well known that, like the lodge, the spirit of popery does not change. Its doctrines and rites are the same as in Luther's day only the power of Protestantism restrains it.

Right is right, though only one man in a thousand pursues it; and wrong will be forever wrong, though it be the allowed practice of the other nine hundred and ninety-nine.

To the Freedmen Satan Calls.

BY MRS. ELI TAPLEY.

To the freedmen Satan calls,
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
Come try Freemasonry,
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
A blessing it will prove;
Bring money, friends, and love.
Land you in the lodge above;
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
Shall they, by his lies deceived,
Bow the knee, bow the knee?
Shall they in idolatry,
Bow the knee, bow the knee?

To the freedmen Satan calls,
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
Come now try popery,
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
To priests your money pay,
To take your sins away,
To the saints and angels pray—
Bow the knee, bow the knee!
Shall they, by his lies deceived,
Bow the knee, bow the knee?
Shall they in idolatry
Bow the knee, bow the knee?

Once Satan called to you,
Bow the knee bow the knee!
But Christ the Son of God
Set you free, set you free!
And now he asks of you
Each one, What will ye do?
Shall your brethren in your view
Bow the knee, bow the knee?
To the lodge and popery,
Bow the knee, bow the knee?
Shall they in idolatry
Bow the knee, bow the knee?

Let each one ask in prayer,
Ask of thee, Lord, of thee!
What wilt thou have me do
Lord for thee? Lord for thee?
What work of heart or hand,
To save our own dear land?
O forever by her stand—
Set her free, set her free!
From infidelity
And all idolatry
And from secret lodgery,
Set her free, set her free!

A Victim of Masonic Charity.

To the Free and Accepted Masons of the State of Illinois, Greeting:

My Dear Brethren—You will remember that in the spring of 1875, when I first worked the Masonic degrees and thus laid bare the "true inwardness" of your grand swindle, brother Benj. F. Prince, the then secretary of Keystone Lodge, No. 639, was kept busy almost night and day for weeks, sending out letters and circulars to the various lodges in this and neighboring States, giving notice of my defection and contumacy and warning all to "take notice thereof and govern themselves accordingly." You will doubtless remember these circumstances, my brethren, and allow me to say, and in this public manner too, that on Tuesday evening last, the 5th inst., I picked up that very same Benj. F. Prince from the gutter at the corner of Townsend and White streets in this city, where I found him in a beastly state of intoxciation; gave him some money; put him in an omnibus and directed him on his way home to his wife and two baby children. Instead of going home, however, he left the omnibus; returned to the low grogshops on Chicago avenue; bummed around all night and about 6:30 on Wednesday morning I found him asleep on my back stoop.

This proves to you, my dear brethren, that your former correspondent and secretary has more confidence in me though a wicked, seceding Mason than he has in his sworn brothers(?) of the lodge and chapter.

Well, of course, he was kindly cared for by Mrs. R.; comfortably warmed and fed and, conducted to a bedroom where he was permitted to sleep off his drunken debauch. At his urgent request and on his promising he would go straight home, I gave him a little more money, but to my utter astonishment he returned again about eight o'clock that same evening in a much worse condition than at first and requested that he be allowed to stay all night. I immediately notified brother Dixon, the Past Master of the lodge and cousin to brother Prince by marriage, of his demoralized condition and immediate steps were taken to remove our brother to his home and family. And this is the man who notified all the lodges within the jurisdiction of Illinois three years ago of my wicked renunciation of Freemasonry and warned all true and loyal Masons to beware! My beloved brethren, how do you like your former secretary and correspondent?

I have known Ben. Prince for a number of years and before he became a Mason there was not a more respectable young man in North Chicago, but to-day I don't know that I could find a more despicable object in this city; and what brought him to it? Himself could best answer if you could only hear him when he angrily exclaims, "Mr. Ronayne, Freemasonry has ruined me;" and that he has been made a drunkard from his association with the members of the lodges and chapters of Masons in Chicago.

I could enumerate hundreds of such cases right here at my very door if I saw proper to do so and I merely mention this case of the former secretary of Keystone Lodge to mark to you, my beloved brethren, the great difference between Benj. F. Prince and myself; the one an adhering Mason and my former secretary, and myself, of course--well, as you are pleased to call me a "perjured villain." But, my dear brother Masons, after all you don't believe one word of what you say, and what is more you know that I know you don't. But after all, I wish you could get just one small peep at your honored secretary and then come over to 104 Bremer street where the latch-string is always out and mark the contrast presented in the home of

Your sincere friend, and former brother Mason,

Edmond Ronayne.

P. M. Keystone Lodge, No. 639.

☞ Will the friends everywhere oblige me by calling the attention of Masons, especially in Illinois, to the foregoing statement. E. R.

The Cynosure mark is set at 10,000. Let every one help to reach it.

Muffled Drums.

BY O. S. O.

The leaven of reform is silently and surely working throughout the nation. The brazen effrontery of secretists strutting and swelling in our streets has well nigh disappeared. The lofty toss of nodding plumes and brass mountings and warlike weapons on worshipful recruiting officers and their caged votaries, and noisy drums and trumpets desecrating almost every hour of the sacred Sabbath is now seldom witnessed. It now requires an effort, self-sacrifice and an unknown quanity of conceit to perform this Jack Falstaff part of the play with becoming gravity and dignity, and run this branch of the mountebank's time-honored, Solomon-renowned and pre-Adamic live-animal show to make it remunerative and replenish the treasury of the stockholders and directors of the concern.

Long ago when the decorated and full-jeweled tramps strutted on our streets, every step and footfall seemed to anounce to our citizens, "Let no dog bark when I speak!" The Cynosure has poured a steady, effulgent light on the performers in the show and revealed to public view the enormities of the cloven feet and the "mark of the beast."

A bitter, profound hatred of the Bible and Christianity is the base and superstructure of every one of these lethean pools of Satan's device. Every clergyman in this nation knows it, and will openly and boldly declare it when possessed of courage to assert his manhood and declare the truth for the truth's sake. To such an extent has the Cynosure caused the Masonic mill and funds to run low, that an infuriated Hessian in Philadelphia, insane with malice, has equipped a pantomimic troupe of hirelings to caricature and blacken worthies and lecturers who endorse the reform, as Masonic rule requires, "by opposing them in their business and crossing them in their enterprises." These foam out their malice to inspire rage in the most approved manner. After deriding the Cross and the Christian Sabbath, one of its public notices closes: "Many have found us an adder in the way, and been made to fall backward and be seen no more."

So you see the beast in secret tosses and writhes and foams, being attacked in a vital point. The question must be met, decided and acted upon, Is the church, or the lodge of Divine planting for mankind?

The lurking assassin, Masonry, claims silence, submission, falsehood, blasphemy and concealment to the extent of lying and perjury—a non-revealment irrespective of truth, right or conscience. It rules its minions by force. Its cohorts are subjugated by threats of defamation, torture, death. Death to all opposition is its watchword. Emboldened by the numbers it has corrupted and chained to its chariot, it consents to tolerate nations, church and society only when these are brought into obedience to its behests. It demands influence, wealth, power; or busy as Satan in a gale it unmasks itself and whirls to assume its undisguised attitude of tyrant and assassin. Its infectious virus breeds corruption and pollutes the church, society, and the government wherever it infixes and infuses its Satanic venom; and struts in public to emblazon forth its shame and bid defiance to all law human and divine. It promotes and instigates to crime by promise of concealment, protection and rescue. By deception and imposture it impoverishes and corrupts the citizen. The church instead of being an independent power, speaking as of authority, is so diluted and infused with Masonry as to be in its hands a puppet show instead of vanquishing with a word this foe of God and humanity.

These wolves in sheep's clothing, gilded mountebanks, plumed jackdaws and corrupt charlatans must be hurled from power and place, where by insolence they have intrenched themselves; smoked out of their hiding places where they now lurk in ambush, and although the entire brood hiss like vipers, claiming their "time has not yet come," this nation must rid itself of them, ere it is too late. The beast is now corralled and between two deadly fires when he refuses to tramp and flaunt his fantastic trappings to the view of a virtuous public, and relies on working in secret his designs for rule, power and empire.

A Great Truth!

BY ELDER J. L. BARLOW.

"No true woman can be a friend to Freemasonry!" With great earnestness and apparently from the depths of a feeling heart, this expression was made to us by a lady, while we were giving out tracts at the exposition a few days since. She went on to say, "Once my husband and myself were one. Now," and here great pearly drops gathered in her eyes, "a dark, impassible barrier has risen between us which I cannot and he will not pass!" A lady companion in the same sad case stood by her side and assented to what she said; and both wished us "God speed" in our work of exposing this ruthless destroyer of the peace of otherwise happy homes.

Surely she told us the truth. No one enlightened as to the degrading ceremonies, the Christless principles, and the true aims and tendencies of the institution, "can be a true woman and be friendly to Freemasonry." As well might a "true woman" be friendly to the siren who with with wanton witcheries beguiles her husband to the house of assignation. As well be friendly to the saloon-keeper who entices her husband to his bar, and robs her and her children of husband, father and support. As well be friendly to villain or villians who should strip by violence or cajolery the garments from her person and lead her helpless and blinded, a spectacle and object of rude mirth, as to be friendly to an institution which has thus outraged her husband, whose person is as sacred to her as her own.

She was right. "No true woman can be friendly to Freemasonry!" The woman who can look with complacency upon this profanation of her husband's person, for the sake of any benefits to accrue to him or her from a connection with an order demanding such degradation, subjects herself to suspicions that would mantle the cheek of every true woman with the blush of shame.

Only Forty-three Years Ago.

On the 22d of October, 1835, Wm. Lloyd Garrison was mobbed in the streets of Boston by the citizens of that city because of his anti-slavery opinions and his persistent advocacy of them. Lately the friends of Mr. Garrison, to the number of sixty, among them the leading men of Boston and Massachusetts, assembled at the parlors of the Woman's Club to celebrate the anniversary of the event. Ex-Mayor Buffum, of Lynn, in referring to the day of the riot, said that he happened to be sitting in his buggy on Court street just as the carriage containing Mr. Garrison came up from State street on the way to Leverett Street Jail, where Garrison was conveyed to save him from the mob. The crowd had hold of the wheels, endeavoring to stop the carriage to take Garrison out, while the driver was lashing his horses to get away from the mob. Just as he came toward the buggy the horses drew off to the side nearest it, and, in doing so, the hubs of the two vehicles came so close together as to brush off the rioters from one side. This relief enabled the horses to get a headway, and they went off at a gallop, and Garrison was saved. Mr. Bronson Alcott, who that evening called upon his friend in jail said that he found him in very cheerful spirits, rather exulting that he was permitted to be a martyr in so good a cause. A curious part of the proceedings on Tuesday was the reading of a letter from Mr. James L. Homer, of the Boston Commercial Gazette of that day, acknowledging that he was the author of the handbill which caused the mob, and confessing himself to have been the chief instigator of the outrage.

Mr. Wendell Phillips left his office to see the cause of the disturbance. He expressed his disgust that the mayor did not order out the regiment to suppress the mob. Colonel Park, who was with him, replied: "You fool, don't you see the regiment is already out?" And Mr. Phillips said: "On looking about me, sure enough there were the men who should have been, and usually were, law-abiding citizens on every side of me." Things have somewhat changed in the forty-three years which have intervened.—Inter-ocean.

The Unequal Yoke.

FROM THE STANDPOINT OF RELIGION.

No doubt, the remnant, in the days of Ezra, must have appeared excessively intolerant in refusing the co-operation of the surrounding people in building the house of God; but they acted upon divine principle in the refusal. * * *

So, also, in Nehemiah, we read, "And the seed of Israel separated themselves from all strangers, and stood and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers." (Chap. ix. 2.) This was not sectarianism, but positive obedience. Their separation was essential to their existence as a people. They could not have enjoyed the divine presence on any other gronnd. Thus it must ever be with God's people on earth. They must be separate, or else they are not only useless, but mischievous. God cannot own or accompany them if they yoke themselves with unbelievers, upon any ground, or for any object whatsoever. The grand difficulty is to combine a spirit of intense separation with a spirit of grace, gentleness, and forbearance; or, as another has said, "to maintain a narrow circle with a wide heart." This is really a difficulty. As the strict and uncompromising maintenance of truth tends to narrow the circle around us, we shall need the expansive power of grace to keep the heart wide, and the affections warm. If we contend for truth otherwise than in grace, we shall only yield a one-sided and most unattractive testimony. And, on the other hand, if we try to exhibit grace at the expense of truth, it will prove, in the end, to be only the manifestation of a popular liberality at God's expense—a most worthless thing.

Then, as to the object for which real Christians usually yoke themselves with those who, even on their own confession, and in the judgment of charity itself, are not Christians at all, it will be found, in the end, that no really divine and heavenly object can be gained by an infringement of God's truth. Per fas aut nefas can never be a divine motto. The means are not sanctified by the end; but both means and end must be according to the principles of God's holy word, else all must eventuate in confusion and dishonor. It might have appeared to Jehoshaphat a very worthy object, to recover Ramoth Gilead out of the hand of the enemy; and, moreover, he might have appeared a very liberal, gracious, popular, large-hearted man, when, in reply to Ahab's proposal, he said, "I am as thou art, and my people as thy people; and we will be with thee in the war." It is easy to be liberal and large-hearted at the expense of divine principle; but how did it end? Ahab was killed, and Jehoshaphat narrowly escaped with his life, having made a total shipwreck of his testimony.

Thus we see that Jehoshaphat did not even gain the object for which he unequally yoked himself with an unbeliever; and even had he gained it, it would have been no justification for his course. Nothing can ever warrant a believer's yoking himself with an unbeliever; and, therefore, however fair, attractive and plausible the Ramoth expedition might seem in the eye of man, it was, in the judgment of God, "helping the ungodly, and loving them that the Lord." (2 Chron. xix. 2.) The truth of God strips men and things of the false colors with which the spirit of expediency would deck them, and presents them in their proper light; and it is an unspeakable mercy to have the clear judgment of God about all that is going on around us: it imparts calmness to the spirit, and stability to the course and character, and saves one from that unhappy fluctuation of thought, feeling and principle which so entirely unfits him for the place of a steady and consistent witness for Christ. We shall surely err, if we attempt to form our judgment by the thoughts and opinions of men; for they will always judge according to the outward appearance, and not according to the intrinsic character and principle of things. Provided men can gain what they conceive to be a right object, they care not about the mode of gaining it. But the true servant of Christ knows that he must do his Master's work upon his Master's principles and in his Master's spirit. It will not satisfy such an one to reach the most praiseworthy end, unless he can reach it by a divinely appointed road. The means and the end must both be divine.

The Situation in Turkey.

Within a few months three treaties have been made to settle the affairs of the East. If that of St. Stephanos had not been resisted by England and Austria we should at least have known where we were. We should have been under Russian influence, but we should have had peace and a period of repose. The treaty of Berlin and the Cyprus treaty have placed us in such a position that confusion reigns everywhere in the empire, and no one but a prophet could pretend to predict anything of the future.

I can do no more than give you an idea of the situation as it exists to-day. In European Turkey Austria was to have peacefully occupied Bosnia and Herzegovina for a few years; but she has thus far failed to come to any understanding with the Porte, and has been forced to conquer these provinces at a cost of millions of money and thousands of lives. It is generally believed here that she will not only annex these provinces but come on, in the spring, to Salonica.

Montenegro was to have had an addition to her territory, but she has not yet obtained possession of it. A formidable insurrection, under the name of the Albanian League, not only resists this annexation to Montenegro but now defies the Turkish government and is murdering the Turkish officials. It is understood here that this movement was originated and fostered by the Turkish government to furnish it with an excuse for not giving any territory to Greece, and to this day it is spoken of with favor by the Turkish newspapers in Constantinople; but it has now gone beyond the control of the government, and there is talk of sending 50,000 troops to put it down. It is more than doubtful, however, whether Turkish troops will fight against their Mahommedan brethren in Albania, and what the end will be no one can foresee. Coming a little nearer to Constantinople, we have another insurrection in the Rhodope mountains, which is directed by three Englishmen and is supposed by the people there to be under the patronage of the English government. It will probably unite with the Albanian League.

A little further off we have Greece threatening war to compel the rectification of her frontier which was recommended at Berlin, but which the Turks have no idea of granting.

Near at hand we have the new Province of Eastern Roumelia which is still occupied by the Russians, but the Berlin Congress appointed a commission to organize this province and decreed that the Russians should leave it in three months after the work of the commission was completed. At the same time the Turkish troops were to occupy the Balkans between this province and Bulgaria. The commission is now holding its sessions in Constantinople, but the Bulgarians declare that they will not accept the decision of the Congress which divided them into two provinces. They have organized an army and are prepared to resist by force. The impression here is that the Commission will fail to come to any unanimous conclusion and that the Russians will remain to assist the Bulgarians. Who will undertake to drive them out?

Crossing the Bosphorus into Asia we have all Armenia in a state of ferment, the Christians leaving in crowds to emigrate to Russia and the Kurds in open rebellion. Farther west we have a formidable rebellion in the Kozan Mountains, and the Arabs in a state of discontent as far south as Bagdad, a rebellion in Arabia and general insecurity all through Asia Minor.

At Constantinople the government seems paralyzed. There is no man among the Pachas strong enough to rule and no such unity of sentiment as might result in a strong party combination. The Sultan is no doubt a well meaning man who would be glad to do the right thing if he knew what it was, but he is constitutionally timid, not to say cowardly, and he can know but little of the true state of the country. In practice he simply obstructs everything and defends his absolute power as the only hope of the Empire.

When we consider the difficulties which now beset this feeble and tottering government the only wonder is that it can stand for a day. Aside from the funded debt of $1,000,000,000, upon which it pays no interest, it has an enormous floating debt representing all the expenses of the war, its employees are unpaid, its army has not been disbanded or even reduced, its paper money has become almost worthless. The people have lost heart and expect every day some new revolution or a renewal of the war. The government does not know which to distrust the most, its friends or its enemies. It fears that England intends to appropriate Asia Minor and Austria to take what is left of Turkey in Europe. The Sultan is almost ready to throw himself into the arms of Russia as his only refuge. Indeed it is difficult to see what else he can do unless he is ready to become the vassal of England, and so far as the immediate humiliation is concerned it would be greater than would be involved in a close alliance with Russia.—Constantinople Correspondence Christian Union.

THE ELEVENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Held in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13th to 18th.

Grand Opening — Two Thousand Present—Thirteen States Represented.

2,500 to 3,000 out on the last evening.

Wednesday—The Opening.

The sessions of the eleventh national convention in Worcester were opened in the usual informal way, with an afternoon meeting for prayer and brief relation of experience. Friends who arrive early are thus made acquainted with each other and the work of the convention facilitated as well as consecrated.

The noble building in which the meeting is held contains two halls, the large upper room, known as Mechanics' Hall, is probably the finest in Massachusetts outside of Boston. On the floor below is a convenient, but smaller room known as Washburn Hall, which was used seven years ago for the business meetings of the day, the evening sessions occupying the great room above.

The gathering of Wednesday afternoon was at 3 o'clock and was opened by the reading of the eighth chapter of Ezekiel by Rev. H. H. Hinman, followed by prayer by Rev. H. T. Cheever and others. Remarks were made by Prof. S. C. Kimball of New Hampshire, who spoke of encouraging prospects in his State. Several important witnesses had been raised up to testify to the truth of Masonic revelations. Three prominent ministers and one layman had recently renounced Masonry and confirmed the testimony of the many seceders who had preceded them.

Bro. D. J. Ellsworth, of Windsor, Conn., also gave cheering facts from the work in his State.

Mr. E Ronayne, of Chicago, spoke of the prophetic references to anti-Christ in the Scriptures. Elijah, he said was sent to destroy the ancient Baal worship among the Hebrews; and though his work was with wonderful demonstration of Divine power, yet that worship survives in the form of modern Freemasonry. He believed that Elijah would come again, in some God-sent representative of the truth, and complete the grand work begun on Carmel by the Great Sea, before the second appearing of our Lord in the heavens.

Bro. J. S. Perry of Thompson, Conn., said, whatever might be true as to the coming and work of Elijah, there was one thing of which we might be certain, Christ said, "Every tree that my Father hath not planted shall be rooted up." Freemasonry was not of God and must fall. He said that he had been employed as a detective in the enforcement of the license laws, and that his knowledge of Masonry had been of great use to him. At a certain place it was evident that liquor was illegally sold, but it was impossible to find exactly where or by whom. On going there he met a man who wore a key-stone and gave him a Masonic grip, which was responded to. He was then asked, "Are you a traveler?" He answered, "I am." "Which way do you travel?" From the West to the East." "Why do you travel to the east?" "In search of light." He then asked where he could get a drink of liquor and was directed right to the bar and the man who sold it. Who shall say that Masonry is not a good thing?

In the evening a vast audience of about 2,000 gathered in the great hall, and the first session of the Convention was called to order by the General Secretary, J. P. Stoddard, of the N. C. A., and in the absence of the chairman, President S. B. Allen, of Westfield College, Illinois, Rev. A. M. Milligan, D.D., Vice-president from Pennsylvania, was called to preside. He took the chair with a few introductory remarks, when Rev. Henry T. Cheever, of Worcester, made the following

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

At the request of the Committee of the National Christian Association at Chicago, and on behalf of such of the Christian people of this city as sympathize with the objects had in view in your Association, I welcome to Worcester your Tenth Annual Convention. I welcome you cordially to our halls for discussion and to our homes for hospitality. And while we offer you this hearty welcome, we confidently expect that a public advantage will be derived to us and to the community at large, whose attention you will have, through what shall be heard by the ear, seen by the eye, and reported by the press, of your sayings and doings among us. It is in place to remind you that this spacious Hall of your assembly was built largely at the beginning by the generous aid of an honored citizen and friend of reform (Ichabod Washburn), whose name it bears, one of whose cherished principles was hostility to secret oath-bound societies. And I note with special approval that in the platform of your principles you emphasize: The suppression of such secret anti-Christian societies by law and by the withdrawal of their charters; the national and State prohibition of the sale of intoxicating drinks; a just recognition of the Sabbath, and of the Bible to be associated with books of science and literature in our educational institutions; the election of President and Vice-President of the United States by direct vote of the people; equal protection and rights for all loyal citizens, white or black; justice to Indians and aliens of whatever race; the maintenance of the public credit intact by keeping exact faith with the public creditors.

This is public morality, and no truer thing was ever said by our Massachusetts sage of Concord, Ralph Waldo Emerson, than this in his late lecture at the historic old South, Boston; "That the end of all political struggle is to establish morality as the basis of all legislation. Morality is the proper object of government."

In the interest, then, of morality —public, governmental and social morality—I bid you welcome to our goodly city, as to what Milton called an open field and fair encounter for the truths you bring. And in the same interest of public and social morality, speaking not merely for the Christian men and women of Worcester, who afford you their present hospitality, but for all Christian New England, and the country at large, who will hear from you through the press—I venture the suggestion that you give suitable expression, in the course of your sessions among us, to our Christian abhorrence of the immoral practice of polygamy, now represented in our National Congress by a polygamous delegate, and protected and sealed in the National Territory of Utah, in the name of religion, by a secret system of guilt-concealing and barbarous oaths that defy Heaven, and find no counterpart on earth, but in the worst abuses of that secret order of Freemasonry with which you as a Christian Association are openly at war. May the All-Wise God our Heavenly Father bless the deliberations and doings of your patriotic body to the benefit of our common country and of all mankind.

Past Master Ronayne was then introduced and proceeded, after prefacing his work with an explanation of the principles of Freemasonry, showing their antagonism to Christianity and honorable citizenship, to work the Entered Apprentice degree.

At the close of the exposition, announcements were made for the next day and the meeting adjourned

Thursday—Forenoon.

At nine o'clock, before the opening of business, a season of prayer was had for a half hour. Rev. David McFall of the Reformed Presbyterian church, Boston, conducted this meeting, reading from the third chapter of John.

At the close of this interesting and profitable season the Convention resumed its sitting with Vice-president Rev. A. M. Milligan of Pittsburgh, in the chair, and various committees were appointed as follows:

On Enrollment: Rev. J. A. Spee, New York; D. J. Ellsworth, Connecticut.

On Finance: J. A. Conant, Conecticut; S. A. Pratt, and David Manning, Worcester.

On Resolutions and Address to Pastors: Prof. C. A. Blanchard, Illinois; Rev. H. T. Cheever, Massachusetts, Rev. A. A. Phelps, Pennsylvania.

On Seceding Masons: E. Ronayne, Illinois; General Phelps, Vermont: Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire.

On Programmes: Rev. J. Travis, Philadelphia; Rev. W. T. White, Massachusetts; J. S. Perry, Connecticut.

On Report on Unity of Churches against Secret Orders: Rev. H. H. Hinman, Wisconsin; Rev. D. McFall, Boston; Rev. W. O. Tobey, Dayton, Ohio; Rev. L. N. Stratton, Syracuse; Rev. W. Gould, Brooklyn.

On Nominations: Revs. L. N. Stratton, New York; H. H. Hinman, Wisconsin; A. M. Paull, Rhode Island.

On Correspondence: Revs. D. McFall, Boston; A. L. Deering, Massachusetts; W. M. Gould.

On Prosecuting the Anti-secret Reform Work in New England: Rev. H. L. Hastings, Massachusetts; Prof. S. C. Kimball, New Hampshire; John A. Conant, Connecticut.

General J. W. Phelps of Brattleboro, Vt., then read a lengthy paper on "The Relation of Freemasonry to our Republican Government" which was voted to be sent to the Christian Cynosure for publication. At the close of this able address the The Convention took a recess till afternoon.

Afternoon.

The session opened at two o'clock and after devotional exercises, Gen. Phelps spoke, urging that the convention take such action and set in operation such forces as would counteract the influence of the lodge on our government. Dr. Milligan and General Secretary Stoddard remarked briefly on the need of co-operation among Christians and churches for the suppression of the secret lodges.

At three, the hour fixed for the exposition of the second degree of Masonry, Past Master Ronayne resumed his gavel and arranged his lodge. His effort in raising the Entered Apprentice to a Fellow Craft was well received by the convention and its visitors, and at its close adjournment was had till evening.

Evening.

At seven o'clock Gen. J. W. Phelps, Vice-president for Vermont, took the chair and prayer was offered by Rev. A. L. Deering of Monument, Mass. The chairman took occasion to remark, in introducing the speakers of the evening, upon the importance of a knowledge of Freemasonry as a great power in conflict with the true interests of our nation. He then introduced Dr. A. M. Milligan who said that the interest manifested by the general public in the expositions of Freemasonry should be regarded with great satisfaction. He did not wish to break up a social organization. It is ideas that govern the world. They are more important than the tread of armies. Masonry claims to be a religion to forgive sins, and to take men to the Grand Lodge above and yet it excludes Christ. Is it a matter of no moment that we strive to save the 500,000 Masons of this country from a fatal delusion? He was here not as a minister, not simply as a Christian, but as a citizen and philanthropist. Masonry is the twin sister of Jesuitism. One is a great system of moral slavery. Masonry is simply Jesuitry. What Jes-uitism is to Romanism, Masonry is to infidelity. It breathes the spirit of Voltaire and bears the impress of his workmanship. Jesuitism is warring on oneside; secretly, craftily, Masonry is doing the same thing on the other. This National Christian Association is not alone against Masonry, but against all organized secretism. Communism, Socialism, Nihilism, Internationalism, are all one and the same. The platform set forth in France is that "The Commune is Atheism." What is an atheist? Until man is reduced to the level of a brute he cannot be an atheist. Atheism in communism is in the assertion that there is no God in government. There is no more sacred truth than that of the sovereignty of God in government. Majorities cannot make right wrong, or wrong right. Legislatures do not makelaws; God makes them. Government only declares them. The magistrate is not the servant of the people, but the minister of God. Communism says that all laws are but the voice of the people. The second plank in the platform of communism is, that all oaths, all worships and Sabbaths shall be abolished. Communism says that these enslave men. Communism does away with the idea of Divine justice. The fourth plank is that marriage shall be abolished. Marriage with them is but an experiment which may continue, or may be overthrown. The child with them is but the ward of the state. The fifth plank is, "No rights of inheritance." This principle of communism means the equal division of property. This would destroy all property.

What are the opportunities of communism? The constitution recognizes no God, but claims to be the supreme law of the land. God's law is alone the supreme law of the land. The oath of the President of the United States is no oath at all, for it contains no appeal to God. President Hayes was the first President since Washington who swore a real oath to support the constitution. American legislators passed the fugitive slave law and American jurists made the "Dred Scott" decision.

When the silver bill passed one-third of the United States Congress were drunk. The corruption in our cities is fearful. The plotting of the trades unions in our cities fills us with alarm. The commune drenched Paris with blood. They sought to arrest the Almighty. We thought Pittsburgh was the religious center of the nation, and yet we saw twenty squares of the city in flames, and nothing but the intoxication of the rabble prevented the complete destruction of the whole city. What saved Massachusetts from communism in the last election? Is there no danger? The danger is in the Jesuitism and the Masonry on the one side and communism on the other. Amidst all these conflicting claims the danger is that the people will seek refuge in a despotism.

Dr. Milligan was followed by Prof. C. A. Blanchard, of Wheaton College, in an exceedingly eloquent address, which we hope to give more fully than any mere report could convey.

At the close of Prof. Blanchard's address, announcement was made of the leading items of business for the morrow and the convention adjourned.

SEVEN YEARS OF WORK IN SOUTHERN MICHIGAN.

ANOTHER SECEDER OPENS THE LODGE TO ALL THE WORLD.

WESTON, Mich., Nov. 6, '78.

It is some seven or eight years since the writer, in connection with Mr. H. C. Pratt and Rev. John Thomas, now deceased, opened the anti-secrecy warfare in Fairfield, Michigan. Since then the work has been pushed more or less steadily by lectures and the circulation of books and tracts.

Lectures have been given by persons from abroad, as for instance, Powell, Baird, Rathbun, Barlow, Springstein, Levington and others, much to the disgust of the secret fraternities and with many prophecies on the part of the enemy that we would only strengthen Freemasonry by our efforts.

It may not be amiss therefore to look back and see if any real progress has been made and what is the out-look for the future. It is true Freemasonry has tried to strengthen itself by encouraging the formation Mason, (whose parchment certificate of his being such lies before me as I write, signed by the Senior and Junior Warden and secretary of the lodge in Ohio of which he was a member, recommending him to be received as such by all Free and Accepted Masons in all parts of the globe) is now engaged in organizing a lodge to work the degrees in public. He proposes to make it a regular company, each one doing his own share of the work in entering, passing and raising a candidate to the sublime degree of a Master Mason. The young men he has engaged to assist him take hold with much spirit and doubtless will make it a success. Friends of the anti-secrecy cause desiring to have the degrees worked in their vicinity can address him at Fairfield, Mich.
of some of the minor secret orders, but Freemasonry itself is not near so popular nor so strong as when the contest was opened; and the Fairfield lodge according to reports finds it difficult to maintain its existence. And now comes another era in the good work, an outgrowth of the heroic work of Ronayne and Rathbun in working the degrees in public.

Mr. Benjamin R. Pratt, a Master

Thus the good work goes on; one after another of the devotees of this great Christless institution breaks off the shackles and assists in exposing its hollowness and innate wickedness to the gaze of the world. People will soon wonder why men have stood in awe so long of such a miserable sham and soon it will be so poor that none will be found to do it reverence.

I see Bro. Mathews suggests Nov. 19th, etc., as the best time for our Michigan meeting. Will not the notice be too short? I do not wish to seem to dictate, but hope the executive committee will secure the services of Mr. Ronayne if possible. What we want to get before the public is not so much the ceremonies, signs, etc., but to demonstrate, as he does, that Freemasonry is a revival of ancient Baal worship. When the people come to see that, Freemasonry will have to get out of our churches and then it can be throttled, and not till then.

Yours for the war, C. QUICK.

MICHIGAN STATE MEETING.

LINDEN, Mich., Nov. 11, '78.

DEAR CYNOSURE: — The many readers of your excellent paper have been requested to give their views and agree upon some place in which to hold our State meeting. Only two have responded. One mentioned Flint another Adrian. Bro. Liscomb states he has the consent of the managers of the Reform Club Hall for the meeting upon three days' notice. I am in favor of Flint myself, as being a suitable and convenient place, easy of access by railroad; besides there are many good and true workers in our reform who will make an earnest effort to add to the interest of the meeting. Should Flint be decided upon as the place of our meeting we at the earliest opportunity will make arrangements for the same and provide entertainment for delegates from abroad free of expense.

And now I wish to say to all of my Anti-masonic friends through the Cynosure: Brethren, come forward. This is no time to falter. Let us uphold the hands and sustain those standing at the front battling against a secret foe. Let us not skulk away. We are engaged in an irrepressible conflict with the emissaries of darkness. The contest increases in violence. The cohorts of his Satanic majesty are becoming desperate. But Jesus is our Captain and victory is sure.

Yours in the cause of God and humanity, GEORGE M. SMITH.

Bro. E. E. Jones of Lenawee Junction is in favor of Adrian for the Michigan meeting. A hall can be had there for $8.00 per day which will hold 800 and has a suitable platform for working the degrees. He also says there are friends in that city who will entertain delegates from a distance. If the Michigan brethren wish Past Master Ronayne they must remember that he will in all probability be full of work in New England until the close of the year, and arrange accordingly.

THE REWARDS OF A FAITHFUL MINISTRY.

ZANESVILLE, Ind., Nov. 5, '78.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—We are "holding the fort" for anti-secrecy. We have met the enemy and victory is ours. A Freemason of this place asked the writer some time ago if he was not afraid to visit a Mason. We replied, "Not afraid of a Mason nor the devil." The same person afterward listened to our discourse from the words of the Saviour, "If any man will come after me let him deny himself," etc. While speaking of the fact that we must deny ourselves of all needless recreation and ornaments, he with others of his sort sanctioned it with frequent nods; but when we came to burning denunciations of secret societies, you should have seen the squirming. But the pressure was too heavy and they confessed the truthfulness of our position by requesting a copy of our sermon to publish in one of their secular papers. The Masons here bragged after a former course of lectures that they would get more initiations than the U. B. church would get members. The church in the meantime has had twenty-seven accessions and the lodge not more than three or four. I have offered frequently to furnish them some more lectures if they would bear the expense or the half of it. But this always drives them to the wall. A certain Rev. gentleman here was at a loss for a long time to know which side he was on (having once belonged to the lodge, but left for policy's sake); but the truth plainly spoken finally drove him to take the side of Baal, which makes him wonderfully unpopular just now even among his own brethren. Would to God that all the people would drive their ministers to one side or the other.

A certain aged man died here a few months ago, who belonged to the tribe of White Aprons; who, being asked when dying, "If he had any hope," answered, "If Masonry does not save me I am lost forever." Poor deluded soul! The chaplain of the lodge here, a local minister of the M. E. church, preached at his funeral, in which he took occasion to exalt Freemasonry to such an extent that all present, relatives and members of the order got ashamed of him, and some actually left the house.

So far as I can learn there are but two Masons in all this country round about who belong to any church, and neither of them have a particle of religious influence. It is plain to the casual observer that associations with men of the world to the rejection of Christ must and will soon destroy a man's religious influence with the good. About two years ago while residing in Southern Ohio, I became acquainted with a certain P. G. of the Odd-fellows, who was a member of the M. E. church. I heard him invite fourteen men to join the lodge and never one to unite with the church; and again I heard his leader come into his store one evening and say, "Bro. O., the brethren are needing our help out at Butlerville in the protracted meeting." When O. replied by saying, "Bro. B., its enough if I attend meeting when it's at home, and I'm too tired to walk two miles on that rough pike to-night." But no sooner had Bro. B. gone than a member of the lodge came in and says, "Bro. O., let us go down to the Cozaddale lodge to-night;" and no sooner uttered than off they start three miles for the lodge, over the rough railroad. Now if this is not plain proof that he loved the lodge more than the church, I acknowledge my ignorance of the plain import of words and actions.

Again, to show what kind of material the lodge in southern Ohio is made of: The night of the dedication of their lodge at Pleasant Plain, the saloon-keeper sold seventeen gallons of whisky and nine kegs of beer, or more than he had sold before (according to his own statement) in nine months; and Mr. O. himself acknowledged to me next morning that many of their number were so drunk they couldn't get them up stairs.

Were there Christians in that crowd? "Tell it not in Gath."

P. B. Williams.

Work! Work! Work!

Mr. Editor:—Among the readers of the Cynosure who are proposing plans to enlighten the world on secretism, I would like to cast in my mite (with all my might), which is as follows:

First, procure a good assortment of Anti-masonic and other tracts that will expose its dark deeds;

Second, take one of each kind and roll them close, binding them with a wrapper or cord, then you are ready for work.

Third, on your way to business, or home again, or if you are called to attend your county court, as you meet an old acquaintance or a stranger of the right look, hand him a roll.

Fourth, if you are a good worker you may do an untold amount of good in that one week; even if you put out only one dozen rolls.

Fifth, try it. I have; and expect the seed sown to bring forth thirty, sixty, yea, an hundred fold; like leaven, I see it already beginning to work.

Sixth, work quietly and surely; do not commence an argument unless you are attacked, then discharge your heaviest artillery, and in charity to your weak brother give him a roll also.

Seventh, now, readers, let us hear from you; propose your plan, so that if a better plan is forthcoming we may have it, and so act in concert and thus expose the Christless systems to the world.

Eighth, I am now 71 years old and know all about the Morgan abduction case, and have been an Anti-mason ever since. Now the veil of the temple is almost rent from top to bottom. What your hand findeth to do, do it with all your might. I am not rich, but feel like helping all I can, and it has cost me considerable; and, brethren, if you wish to be successful workers in this cause it will cost you time and money. But what of that if you can do good to your fellow-creatures, and especially save our young men and the church of Christ. Know you not that we shall all be judged according to the deeds done in the body; and they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever? Now, brethren, let us consecrate ourselves to this great work as God has given us the ability, and pray over it in faith believing; then, and then only, will God put us in the right place at the defiance of all lodge influence.

Yours in love, Philip Kribs.

Masonic Glory Cheap.

Azatlan, Wis.

The following incident I copy from the Jefferson County, Wis., Union:

"A little four-year-old, golden-haired boy arrived in Chicago from New Orleans, with a card on his neck inscribed, 'To the Masonic fraternity—Forward the boy to San Francisco. Signed, Howard Association.' He was on the way to a distant relative. He was as well taken care of by the strangers he met as though he had been a prince, and when he left the hotel he was showered with kisses and presents from ladies, and tears and money from Masons. There is a minister in Wisconsin who says Masons are the children of the devil. What the country needs is more such devil's children and less such ministers." —Peck's Sun.

We expect that the above story is true; and possibly some Wisconsin minister did call Masons children of the devil; but if he did, he proved his assertion from the Masons' own standard works backed up by their deeds. The Masons have no Christ in their creed and prayers, nor does the devil. The devil would be satisfied with cheap glory, so will the Masons. The devil would get his cheap glory by lies and hypocrisy, so will the Masons. Look at the story above; the poor boy got only kisses and presents from the ladies, but from the Masons he got tears and money. Pshaw! Every man who knows human nature, knows very well that women shed the most genuine tears, and the most of them over such golden-haired orphan boys, all that was left by yellow fever of a family of seven. Besides, would it be wise to give an orphan child, or any child, much money? Masons know better than that, when a few cents or nickels will suffice for candy money. Money glory is cheaper than than real glory, and sometimes money glory don't cost much. When hypocrites gave alms they sounded a trumpet (Mat. 6:2), and the Masons do precisely the same thing, only they have paper trumpets instead of ram's horns or brass. Verily the Wisconsin preacher was about right. S. C. Rice.

"Christian Co-operation."

Persons wishing to do something organic, permanent, quite effectual and evangelical in the anti-secret reform, will do well to send for "Christian Co-operation." It is a book of 404 pages, 12mo., on good paper, bound in muslin, and in clear type, terse and vigorous in style, and costs only $1.50, postpaid, with the latest revision of the discipline of "The United Brethren in Christ." It treats, in a systematic way, of the origin, doctrine, discipline, principles and institutions of this very interesting people.

Any person wishing to study this form of faith and order, can get nowhere the same amount of compact information about "The United Brethren in Christ," for so small an outlay of money as in these two books — "Christian Co-operation" and "U. B. C. Discipline." Both books will be sent postpaid to any address for $1.50.

Those getting these books and studying them carefully will see how they can go to work at once for the Master, and at the same time do a little for themselves in the world to provide for their temporal wants.

North Robinson, O.

Brazen-faced Liars.

York, Pa.

The poet says:

"O, what a tangled web we weave
When first we practice to deceive."

The men who originated Freemasonry were grog-shop liars. They made Freemasonry a very great lie. As a prominent seceder and eminent Presbyterian divine has said: "It is a lie all over."

Perhaps no one could count all the lies both great and small that have been told to deceive the public as to the true character of Masonry. Lying is as essential to Masonic life as water is to shark life. And by the way, there don't appear to be much difference between the character of a shark and that of a true Mason. The shark would no doubt lie like a Mason if it could.

The foregoing ideas have been suggested to our mind by the following from the York, Pa., Daily:

"Gerritt Smith wrote, 'If a Mason lives in accordance with his vows as a Mason, his is a holy religion.' Two of America's greatest heroes were Masons, and in every part of the globe Masons are to be found in all stations of life. In the most remote parts of the earth a Mason can find a brother and be at home with him."

As Gerrit Smith was well known to be as strongly opposed to lodge slavery as he ever was to negro slavery, the above lie is enormous. It is just what we might expect from a copperhead conspirator who got his education in a Masonic den, the same as Tweed and some other famous liars.

And now let us ask, how much longer are those ministers, editors, Christians and others who disapprove of lying and deception to remain silent? Is it not time to speak out?

E. J. Chalfant.

Our Mail.

John Finney, Mansfield, O., writes:

"We had a blacker time once on the anti-slavery question. The same God who took off the fetters of four millions of slaves, will take off the fetters and gags and padlocks from the mouths of Freemasons and Odd fellows, and from members of the whole list of secret orders which are feeders of Masonry. Let me urge on all praying men and women, who desire the advancement of Christ's kingdom, to pray in faith that God will yet use for the overthrow of Masonry all those ministers who have left the Book of books for light, and have gone to the devil's den for it, with a bandage over their eyes and a cable-tow about their necks."

Mrs. J. B. Nessell, Ellington, N. Y. writes:

"I would rather do without one meal per day than do without the Cynosure. I have read it from the first, then a little wee bit of a sheet. I keep some of the copies as almost sacred relics. I rejoice in the increasing interest in the cause, and may the good Lord continue to open, blind eyes."

J. P. Stoddard at Harrison, Maine writes:

"Hard as times are and sterile as is this soil, the people in spite of all find money to pay for being swindled in these lodges."

D. Burtch, Antwerp, N. Y., writes:

"I have taken your paper for three years, and it has gone the rounds. I give Masons the grip and signs and the Mahha bone. We have a lodge here. It was large and flourishing, but has now dwindled away to half its former size. We have six stores, three are Masonic and three are not. The Masons fail or make an assignment very often, and many of them are drunkards, and all are given to the flesh. The most of our crimes are committed by them. The two last Master Masons here ran away. I would go twenty miles to hear Mr. Ronayne lecture."

H. Johnson, Delevan, Wis., writes:

"The news from all points is very encouraging, for which I thank God and rejoice. I have felt that God is in this great reform movement and that he has signally blest the efforts which have been made. I am now in my eightieth year and cannot do much. Have been opposed to Masonry since the murder of Morgan. Am also opposed to all secret orders. I do not know as I shall live to see the church and state rid of this great sin, but the ball is rolling with increasing velocity. I felt from the commencement of the National Christian Association that God was in the movement, and it must succeed. 'God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform.'"

E. B. Ball, Columbia City, Ind., writes:

"I like the Cynosure better and better. I hope to see it made a perfect success."

LESSON XLVIII.—December 1, 1878.
THE LORD'S SUPPER.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 22: 10-20.

10. And he satd unto them, Behold, when ye are entered into the city, there shall a man meet you bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the house where he entereth in. John 4: 7.

11. And ye shall say unto the good man of the house, The Master saith unto thee Where is the guestchamber, where I shall eat the passover with my disciples? Luke 19: 5.

12. And he shall shew you a large upper room furnished: there make ready. Acts 1: 13.

13. And they went, and found as he had said unto them: and they made ready the passover. John 4: 52.

14. And when the hour was come, he sat down, and the twelve apostles with him. John 2: 4; Mat. 10: 2; Luke 6: 13.

15. And he said unto them, With desire I have desired to eat this passover with you before I suffer: Is. 53: 5-7.

16. For I say unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. Acts 10: 41; Rev. 19: 9.

17. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and said, Take this and divide it among yourselves: Is. 55: 1.

18. For I say unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God shall come.

19. And he took bread, and gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, saying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. Is. 26: 8; Ex. 16: 15.

20. Likewise also the cup after supper, saying, This cup is the new testament in my blood, which is shed for you. 1 John 1: 7; Heb. 13: 20, 21.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."—1 Cor. 11: 26.

CONNECTION WITH THE LAST LESSON.

The discourse of the last lesson continues, Luke 21: 22-36; Mat. 24: 18 to 25: 46; Mark 13: 16: 37. Then follows the narrative of the conspiracy of the rulers, the supper at Bethany, and mention of the approaching passover. See Mat. 26: 1-17; Mark 14: 1-13; Luke 22: 1-9; John 12: 2 8. Parallel with the lesson are Mat. 26: 18-29; Mark 14: 14-25; John 13: 1-38; 1 Cor. 11: 23-25. Here also belong Luke 22: 31-38, the discourses in John 14: 1 to 16: 33, with Jesus' last prayer for and with his disciples, John 17: 1-26; though John 14: 31 seems to show that part of the discourse was delivered on the way to Gethsemane, after the supper. The place is Jerusalem.

LESSON NOTES.

10. When ye are entered into the city: Jerusalem, coming from the Mount of Olives, where Jesus was now staying every night (Luke 21: 37).

A man bearing a pitcher of water: An earthen jar of water. This would seem to be a servant (slave, most likely) of the master of the house. Carrying water was, and is, a menial occupation.

11. Goodman of the house: Same word as that for "master of the house" in Luke 13: 25.

The Master: The Teacher.

Guestchamber: Or, Lodging-room.

12. Upper room: Such was frequently used for prayer and worship: for example Acts 1: 13.

Furnished: Probably with couches for the meal around the table, which were usually on three sides of it, forming what was called the triclinium.

There make ready: See the directions in Ex. 12. But tradition and custom had introduced additional rites.

14. The hour: Probably the legal hour of beginning: at evening.

15. With desire I have desired: I have most earnestly desired.

This passover: Or, This very passover. It would be his last. Naturally he would ardently long to eat it with his disciples before his sufferings should commence.

16. Until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God: Until the passover be fulfilled by the sacrifice of Christ the Lamb, the passing over of wrath from the redeemed, and the celebration of their deliverance from all bondage of sin.

17. And he took the cup: Or, And receiving the cup (not the same word as with the bread, below), probably, as handed to him.

Gave thanks: From this act the Lord's Supper is sometimes called the Eucharist, which means the [meal of] thanksgiving.

Divide it among yourselves: Each one taking his portion.

18. I will not drink: The better texts add "henceforth."

Until the kingdom of God shall come: In glory.

19. Which is given for you: Given up in your behalf.

This do: What we have done together with the wine and bread.

In remembrance of me: Especially of his greatest work and chief office in coming into the world; his death, which opened the kingdom of heaven to believers.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

How long before the institution of the Lord's Supper was the passover appointed?

From what loss were the Israelites spared by the angel who passed over their houses?

In what month of the Jewish year was the passover held?

Where was the passover lamb eaten, and by whom?

Which of the two cups mentioned in Luke was the cup of the Lord's Supper?

What was the other cup?

What sanction have we for giving thanks when we eat?

What is a testament, and how was this cup one?

What person in the Old Testamen came with a pitcher as a sign to God's servant?

What passage calls Christ our passover?

What passages show that Jesus ate and drank with his disciple after he rose from the dead?

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOV. 21, 1878.

MORMONISM.—Our readers will notice a very sensible suggestion by Rev. Henry T. Cheever in his address of welcome at the Worcester Convention, for the enlargement of the platform of the American party by the addition of an anti-polygamy plank. We endorse it fully, and hope the Worcester meeting will act on his suggestion. We have often explained that Mormonism is Masonry, and Masonry Mormonism. The same secret oaths; the same despotic, iron constitution; the same impudent use of Christ as the minister and shield of their blasphemy and sins are found in both. And, above all, the Mormons in their order of Danites, or avengers of their church, identify themselves as the religious descendants of Cain, a religion of murder and lust. And as the constitution of the National Christian Association provides for opposition not only to the lodges, so called, by name, but to all that bear their hateful and inhuman nature, we hope the platform of the American party will be amended as Mr. Cheever suggests.

VAIN VOWS.—The Chicago Woman's Christian Temperance Union has carried on a daily prayer meeting for several years. This meeting has been used of God in saving many not only from a drunkard's grave, but from eternal death.

The following incident well illustrates the folly of trusting in the obligations of any secret order to restrain a man from sin. Near the close of a recent meeting when an opportunity was given for requests for prayer a gentleman spoke as follows:

"I wish you would pray for an engineer, a young man who could command a salary of $50 a week if he could only keep sober. He belongs to the same lodge with me, and we have re-obligated him over and over again. He was at my house to dinner yesterday. His wife says that if he will remain sober for a few months she will receive him again."

A silent prayer arose from our hearts for the subject presented, and it was succeeded by another prayer that all those who are now endeavoring to elevate the fallen through the instrumentality of secret orders and man-devised obligations will come to Christians, imploring them to take these cases to the Lord in prayer. May the day be hastened when every conscientious philanthropist will be a follower of Christ, the only genuine model, and observe his teachings in their efforts for the elevation of the human race.

Till March the Cynosure for $1.50 a year.

THE WORCESTER NATIONAL CONVENTION.

This august assembly opened on the 13th inst., with two thousand persons present from thirteen States. But numbers are nothing in such a cause, compared with the steadfastness of will and purpose which has drawn together such a mass of mind in New England in behalf of this cause. Mr. Stoddard writes that as soon as the ministers of the churches, who have treated him with great courtesy, come to know a little of the lodge's working nightly on the mind all around them, they manifest a profound interest on the subject. Hundreds have been in at the Worcester meeting who will soon learn that their church organ, the Congregationalist, has kept them and their people in ignorance on this great subject in which they are vitally concerned; and that large and influential print will soon be compelled to give its subscribers information which they so much need.

Before our next number issues Mr. Hinman, who is in attendance, will give us further intellignce concerning the great meeting and we shall insert what arrives to the latest hour before going to press. There are thousands of clear, calm, conscientious minds in the New England churches who will be horrified to learn the personal degradation to which Drs. Quint and Manning, and their pastors Fisher, Knight, Currier, Stratton, and, alas, so many others in Congregational churches, with hundreds of ministers in other denominations, have descended. And many of these poor ministers who have been taken in these mantraps of Satan, as was Aaron, will, like him, repent and turn with loathing from the abominations of the impious and blasphemous false worships.

But we must, above all things, avoid the error of supposing that our work is done when the lodges are destroyed. The "god of this world" will contrive to rule his votaries in one way or another till they come to Christ. Prof. C. A. Blanchard writes, that if possible he will reach home before the adjournment of our State meeting at Wheaton, which will be in session on the day of the issue of this paper. Next week you will have a full account of it.

OBSCENE LITERATURE.

Mr. Anthony Comstock who has a national reputation acquired by his zeal and efficiency in prosecuting the venders of obscene literature, addressed a crowded audience in lower Farwell Hall on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 14th inst., on the above subject. The audience, called together by cards marked "confidential" and addressed only to men crowded the hall. An assembly of equal number could scarcely be drawn together in the city of Chicago, or, indeed, anywhere else, containing more intelligence or power over the popular mind. The committee who reported a constitution for an organization to aid in enforcing the laws against the vile creatures engaged in the wholesale business of corruption were Hon. Lymam Trumbull, long U. S. Senator; Dr. W. E. Willing, Presiding Elder of the M. E. church in Chicago and vicinity; and U. S. Commissioner Phil. A. Hoyne.

Mr. Comstock spoke above an hour. He had found one hundred and sixty-three vile books in circulation for corrupting youth, and had discovered and destroyed the plates of one hundred and sixty-two of them. Three hundred scoundrels had been prosecuted and two hundred convicted. A large proportion of them were in the penitentiary, and fifteen are now awaiting their trial. These miscreants sell small sheets with obscene pictures and instructions for abortion and self-abuse, for from five to fifty cents each. To ply this devil's trade in uncleanness they were wont to get catalogues of all female seminaries, and corrupt and convert into agents all the young girls they could reach. He had found three hundred thousand names in possession of one house gathered for such correspondence. His facts under this head were harrowing and horrible in the extreme. One was forcibly reminded of the "unclean spirits" which are to "go forth to the kings of the earth and the whole world," by the vastness and vileness of their plans and measures for the corruption of our race, more especially young children of both sexes. Mr. Comstock, to whom the country and world are deeply indebted, is a calm, matter-of-fact person who gives no outward tokens of the power to do and to suffer as he has done in this cause.

FRUITS OF PROSCRIPTION AND PERSECUTION.

Rev. N. Wardner, missionary evangelist of the Wesleyan denomination writes to the American Wesleyan at Syracuse an earnest exhortation to all Wesleyans to send their sons and daughters to Wheaton College. He bases his exhortation upon the real excellence of the institution; the learning and ability of its Faculty; the marked ability and success of its students in the business of life; and on the farther fact that while Congregational associations cherished and sustained myself as President, and the College church was one of their associated churches, Wesleyans were in danger of losing their sons from their own ministry; but now that we are cast out by the Elgin and State associations, the danger that Wesleyan students will become Congregationalists has passed away.

We are grateful to Mr. Wardner, who is a most estimable, talented and devoted man and minister, for thus coming to the aid of the College while suffering under persecution from the lodge and its friends and tools, who are aiding its designs without knowing what they do. Meantime we rejoice in God that all which Mr. Wardner says in favor of Wheaton as a place for the education of youth is true. We are closing a term of prosperous study, in which there have been interesting conversions to Christ among the students, and "If God be for us who can be against us." We fully endorse, too, the remark of Mr. Wardner that our Faculty are in favor of both the theory and experience of holiness. I some years since procured the assembling of a holiness convention in Wheaton, which, so far as I can judge by its fruits was a great benefit and no injury to our people.

Our winter term commences Dec. 10th and the prospect of the customary increase of students is greater than usual. We shall be happy to welcome all that come to a winter of intellectual, moral, religious and social enjoyment and prosperity.

HOW A SOVEREIGN INSPECTOR GENERAL TALKS.

Since Butler's defeat for Governor of Massaahusetts his highest honors are associated with the thirty-third degree of Freemasonry. As he is believed to be planning for the Presidential nomination in 1880, it will be a fine race between him and Knight Templars Conkling of New York, and Blaine of Maine, who shall most adroitly manipulate the Masonic vote. That Butler undertands the business we have proof in the following from the Boston Daily Globe of the 4th inst., taken from the report of a speech made by him the day before at Lynn, at a Masonic fair:

I could, perhaps, find, said he, no more fitting subject than the institution which has organized this fair, an institution founded for the highest and noblest purposes. There is hardly a civilized nation in the world where the institution of Masonry is not to be found, in some one of the forms, drawing closer everywhere the bonds of friendship and brotherhood among men. Masonry has at some times, and in kingly countries, found itself objected to by the government, because that institution in the Union, its methods and its grand objects seeks the amelioration of the human race. But here in our country, following the example of the illustrious father of our country, and one of the highest and noblest of the Grand Masters of the order, George Washington; it is an institution peculiarly democratic. Its secret is only a scientific language by which the bond of the brethren in all lands and among all people can be made known. It is the common universal language of the world. Masonry is union; Masonry is brotherly love; Masonry is the guardian of the widow and orphan; Masonry is that feeling which draws the brother Mason everywhere to his brother by a higher than common love, when he may know the members as true sons of the order. The glory of the order is the fact of the members knowing each other and thus making themselves as worthy associates of men in all the walks of life, and therefore it acts as a bond everywhere. Masonry is strength; it causes good Masons to stand together always for good and not for harm; Masonry is high benevolence. It has a first duty of relieving the mourning widow and orphan; still the greatness and the goodness and the munificence of the order is never confined to that. Masonry is a religion of the highest and noblest type; it recognizes the common Father, and it endeavors to square the action of all its members, and to keep within the true law of love to God and piety and of duty to its members, which is morality; and the square and compass all tell to the members of the order that the eye of God is upon their every action. That is the institution of which you are a part, and I am glad to meet you, my friends, all here, because it shows that in this town, in this city of workingmen and working-women the order is doing its true functions, and I shall only detain you further to say that the heart of all men should come to this institution as the heart of all brethren in the institution go out to all the world, in benevolence and charity and love. (Long-continued applause.)

—Bro. Conant of Connecticut did his part toward the good attendance at Worcester by sending 500 printed postal card notices to pastors and papers throughout the State.

—Bro. Childs of Lima, Ind., reports a very satisfactory death in his town, namely, that of the Freemason lodge, which closed up about a month ago. This result is largely attributed to Mr. Ronayne's lectures and expositions there last March.

—A. H. Quint, D.D., of New Bedford, Mass., the leader of the National Congregational Council has just been elected chaplain of the Commandery of the Loyal Legion of Massachusetts. The denomination must keep pace with the lodge in putting honors upon this man's shoulders or it will lose him through the superior attractions of secretism.

—It is with gratitude to God that we read Bro. Stoddard's letters from Worcester written just before the National Convention, so great is the contrast between the pastors there and the case above. He was given one half the time in the Worcester ministers' meeting, who for their next gathering agreed on a full discussion of the lodge question. The opinion seemed unanimous that the orders were hostile to pure religion and an injury to the church. He also attended a conference at Holden, near Worcester. Rev. H. T. Cheever, our New England correspondent, prepared an address to the churches of New England which was adopted by the Convention. Work like this carried on faithfully and in a Christian spirit, will soon cause such men as Quint to go clear over to the lodge or else renounce it forever.

—Dr. Cook, Indiana State lecturer, wishes to hear from all the friends in that State immediately who can arrange for expositions by Elder Rathbun, who has written that he can visit Indiana after the Iowa State Convention at Cedar Rapids, Dec. 10th and 11th. Dr. Cook wants a dozen places in the State. Let him be immediately notified of the points where Elder Rathbun's work is wanted and the time will be set. Let all act promptly in this matter.

—The Sacramento, Cal., Bee tells of the arrival of the little boy noticed in the letter of Bro. Rice on another page. In a long and fulsome account it states how a Past Grand Master boarded the train at that point and took him off instead of letting him go on to his destination in San Francisco under the kind care of the train officials who had helped him so far from New Orleans. So wonderful is the charity of Masonry! The little fellow is a walking advertisement of boasting Masonry; every lodge that could get hold of him fastening on him a letter or shipping tag with instructions and notices of what had been done. No sane man would have refused to do what they have done; but none but Freemasons would make their good works a pack mule for such self-adulation. Yet the Voice of Masonry says, "Masonry is not a beneficial society; it is a charitable institution." "Blessed charity!"

—Rev. J. P. Lytle of Ohio has secured the publication in the United Presbyterian of the very able appeal to the Presbyterian ministers of the United States by Rev. Warren Taylor. Although not intended for the ministers of that denomination as a class, yet there are even among them those who need to breathe long and deep from the atmosphere of Christian self-denial and steadfastness in which Bro. Taylor has been living. In remarking on the sad indifference of the General Assembly Presbyterians to this vital question Mr. Lytle remarks:

"A ministerial brother of this church said, with tears in his eyes, to my friend, Dr. Pollock: 'You can discuss Freemasonry. You are free. But we dare not.' It will not always be so. The faithful ministers of this church, with whom conscience already works, will find their tongues and will be found alongside of those who 'turn the battle to the gate.'

It is with deep significance that Bro. Taylor refers to Freemasonry as an enemy, not only to the peace and purity of the church, but to its existence. This enemy now wears a mask of friendship, but the time will come when this disguise will be thrown aside, and the irreconcilable and deadly hatred of an anti-Christ will be revealed. Friendship between the Mediator and an institution which disavows his Mediatorial character, indeed! When Jesus and Satan are reconciled then will this also be!"

The Chicago Christian Association.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Christian Association was held in the reading room, Carpenter Building, 221 W. Madison street, Tuesday evening, the 12th inst. C. R. Hagerty, Esq., presided. After prayer was offered by the Rev. E. S. Cook, the secretary read the record of the previous meeting which was duly approved. Officers for the ensuing year were chosen as follows: President, Thos. Hodge, Esq.; First Vice President, Rev. J. P. Stoddard; Second Vice President, C. R. Hagerty; Third Vice President, Mr. E. Ronayne; Secretary, Mrs. E. A. Cook; Ass't Sec. Miss Retta O. Lewis; Treasurer, Miss Ella F. Hagerty. The Association appreciating the faithfulness with which the retiring officers performed their respective duties, tendered them a vote of thanks. The following order of exercises was arranged for the next regular meeting of the society: 1. Reading of a paper treating of "Secret Societies on the Railroad," by Mr. T. F. Hamilton. 2. Paper —original or selected—by Mr. A. G. Laird. 3. Reading poem by Mrs. J. B. Blank. 4. Report of superintendent of reading-room. After listening to the treasurer's report the meeting adjourned.

Father Preston's Dinner Party.

Three years ago we published an entertaining account of the sixtieth wedding anniversary of the veteran Isaac Preston, of Lockport, Illinois. Father Preston yet survives with his companion the storms of time, although both are 86 years old and have shared together the good and ill of life for over sixty-three years. Their wedding anniversary was a very unusual occurrence indeed in the West, but probably it must yield in novelty to another party gotten up at the home of our old friend in Lockport a week ago last Saturday, Nov. 9th, which was of the nature of an old folks' reunion and dinner party. On this occasion there were present Hon. Zimri Streeter and lady, from Cedar Falls, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Levi Savage, of Homer, Illinois, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Burdick and Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Preston of Lockport. The aggregate age of this party of eight persons is over 645 years, and that of their married life is over 55 years to each married pair. But the most interesting feature in their history is, they were all intimately acquainted in the period of their youth, all lived in the same school district—a quiet, rural neighborhood in North Granville, Washington county, New York.

The party all attended the same school in the same school-house where that forty-years prayer meeting of tract notoriety was held and which was continued twenty years after the tract was published, and they all found their partners for life in that quiet, rural school district, and all married there and all scattered off and settled in different localities in this broad republic. And now, after a lapse of more than sixty years, in the good providence of our Heavenly Father, are all brought together again here in Lockport—not all in perfect, bodily shape, form and symmetry, one being blind, another minus a right arm, one a little lame and some a little deaf; but all in the perfect use of their reason and mental faculties, and surrounded by their children, grand-children, and great grand-children, and other relatives and friends, all in sympathy and offering them words of cheer and comfort, wishing to let them gently down the last declivity, to the brink of the river over which they all know they must soon pass, and as they hope and trust, to the better land on the other shore.

All the party, ladies and gentlemen, were old line abolitionists; as to temperance, total abstainers; in politics originally Whigs, more modern. Republicans, and for the last fifty years, staunch and orthodox Anti-masons; believing that all secret oath-bound organizations, and especially Freemasonry, are in their tendencies and general influence, hostile to the fair and equal administration of justice; to Christian morality, and civil government.

The repast was prepared and served up by Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Gillett, who are now keeping Mr. Preston's house, and was pretty thoroughly discussed by the party, as we believe, to general satisfaction. After dinner an hour or two was spent in social chat, on the current events of the last seventy years; they had seen or known all the great improvements that had been made within those seven decades, in the arts and sciences, agriculture, mechanics and manufacturing; they had all seen the first carding machines, the first factory spindles, the first steamboat, the first canal and the first railroad cars ever run in northern New York. Some of them had lived under Washington's administration, and well remember the general gloom that overspread the country at the time of his death, and were familiar with the first missionary movements in America, for sending the Gospel to heathen lands, also with the first religious papers published in New England, the organization of the first Sunday-schools, temperance societies, missionary societies and the American Bible society.

These different topics furnished stock in trade for thought, reflection and remark; some expressed a wish to live another half century, so as to see what other wonders will transpire.

Home Circle.

"Fear Not."

The pathway is dark that the Christian is treading,
His faith can discern but a glimmer of light;
Grim doubts cling around him, which cause him to waver,
And wonder in weakness "if all will be right."

"If all will be right!" Ah, believer in Jesus,
That is not a question for thee, or for me.
All is right—is now—every step thou art treading
Is known and appointed beforehand for thee.

The way is the Lord's, for his wisdom hath planned it,
And though it is dark, there is glory in store;
The cross of thy Saviour but casts a deep shadow
As far as the threshold of heaven's bright door.

It vanishes then in the joy and the beauty,
The sunshine and peace of the ransomed above;
Walk now in its shade, it will lead thee to Jesus
Who watcheth to welcome the child of his love.

Give Like a Little Child.

Not long since a poor widow came into my study. She is over sixty years of age. Her home is one little room about ten feet by twelve; she supports herself with her needle, which in these days of sewing machines, means the most miserable support. Imagine my surprise when she put into my hands three dollars and said:

"There is my contribution to the church fund."

"But you are not able to give so much!"

"O, yes!" she exclaimed, "I have learned how to give now."

"How is that?" I asked.

"Do you remember," she answered, "that sermon of yours three months ago, when you told us you did not believe one of your people was so poor that, if he loved Christ, he could not find some way of showing that love by his gifts?"

"I do."

"Well, I went home and cried all night over that sermon. I said to myself, 'My minister don't know how poor I am, or he would never have said that.' But from crying I soon got to praying; and when I told Jesus all about it, I seemed to get an answer in my heart that dried up my tears."

"What was the answer?" I asked, deeply moved by her recital.

"Only this: 'If you cannot give as other people do, give as a little child.' And I have been doing it ever since. When I have a penny change over from my sugar, or loaf of bread, I lay it aside for Jesus; and so I have gathered this money, all in pennies."

"But has it not embarrassed you to lay aside so much?"

"O, no!" she responded eagerly, with beaming face. "Since I began to give to the Lord I have always had money in the house for myself; and it is wonderful how the work comes pouring in. So many are coming to see me that I never knew before!"

"But didn't you always have money in the house?"

"O, no! Often, when my rent came due, I had to go and borrow it, not knowing how I should find means to repay it. But I don't have to do that any more, the dear Lord is so kind."

Of course I could not refuse such money.

Three months later she came with three dollars and eighty-five cents, saved in the same way. Then came the effort of our church in connection with the memorial fund; and in some five months she brought fifteen dollars, all saved in the little mite box I had given her. This makes a total of twenty-one dollars and eighty-five cents from a poor widow in a single twelve-month. I need hardly add that she apparently grew more in Christian character in that one year than in all the previous years of her connection with the church. Who can doubt that if, in giving as well as other graces, we could thus become as little children, there would result such an increase in our gifts that there would not be room to contain them.—Exchange.

The True Christian and the Sham.

We judge of a sovereign by his subjects, of a husbandman by his farm, and of a father by the state of his family. It may be, it were, indeed unfair, to apply this rule to our faith and its Founder. Yet men have done, and will do so; and thus the cause of God and of religion has had to suffer grievous injury at the hands of its nominal friends. By their coldness, their worldliness, their mean selfishness, their open sinfulness, the little apparent difference between them and those who make no profession at all—nay, sometimes by their glaring inferiority to the latter in the bloom and fruit of their natural virtues, professing Christians, like venders of bad coinage, have exposed genuine piety to suspicion. Their hands have inflicted its deepest wounds in the cause of Christ. In true kindness of heart, sweetness of temper, open-handed generosity, the common charities of life, many mere men of the world lose nothing by comparison with such professors; and how are you to keep the world from saying, "Ah! your man of religion is no better than others; nay, he is sometimes worse!" With what frightful prominence does this stand out in the never-to-be-forgotten answer of an Indian chief to the missionary who urged him to become a Christian. The plumed and painted savage drew himself up in the consciousness of superior rectitude, and with indignation quivering on his lip and flashing in his eye, he replied: "Christian lie! Christian cheat! Christian steal, drink, murder! Christian has robbed me of my lands, and slain my tribe!" Adding, as he haughtily turned away: "The devil, Christian! I will be no Christian!" May such reflections teach us to be careful how we make a religious profession! And having made the profession, cost what it may, by the grace of God let us live up to it, and act it out. It is better not to vow, than having vowed, not to pay.—Dr. Guthrie.

The Other Side.

In the fall of 1871 I went into the southwestern part of Indian Territory, as a teacher of an Indian school. At that time the Kiowa tribe was regarded with terror by all who knew them. But I resolved to reside with them for a season, in order to try the influence of peace and good will among them. I accordingly made the offer in the spring of 1872.

The succeeding summer they were very hostile, murdering not less than forty white people, stealing several hundred horses and mules, and taking three white children captive from the frontiers of Texas. I went among them late the following fall, alone and unarmed, carrying nothing that could be regarded as a weapon of defense. Our camp varied from twenty-five miles to one hundred and fifty miles from the nearest agency. At first they were suspicious of my motives in coming among them, and watched me with jealousy and distrust, but by being very careful and watchful over myself, they discovered nothing that they could construe into acts adverse to their welfare, and in time began to acquire confidence and listen to what I would say to them.

I then used what influence I possessed in discouraging their young men—braves and warriors — from hostile demonstrations, and to show them the advantages of civilization. I remained with them in most of their wanderings, until the summer of 1874, when I was obliged to leave them on account of the permanent breaking down of my health.

This hostile and terrible tribe, with the exception of a very small number, came in desiring farms, registered their names as friendly, and have continued to maintain a friendly attitude toward the government to the present time, raising corn and sending their children to school.

Now I may be permitted to ask, without any degree of arrogance, how many years of war and rapine, carried on as Indian wars are usually conducted, would have been necessary to produce the same happy result? What would have been the difference in the sacrifice? One man has sacrificed his health on the altar of peace, instead of hundreds of lives offered at the shrine of war. What is the difference in the cost of government treasure? One man maintained for a few months in peace, instead of an army in hostilities for the same or a longer period of time.

Here we see a hostile and desperate tribe, with the exception of a small number, led from a savage life to that of peaceful avocations in the short space of a few months, through the power of peace and good-will. How many have been brought into the pale of civilized life through all the years of war? If like begets like, then love begets love, hate begets hate, hostilities beget hostilities. If we approach a man with the weapon of death presented in advance, we should not be surprised should he make use of similar weapons in his own defense. If we advance with the open arms of good-will, we shall in all probability be similarly received. Permit me to illustrate this from my own experience. White Horse, a desperate character and chief among the Kiowas, whose whole life for many years had been a continued series of murders and depredations against the whites, returning from one of his raiding expeditions soon after my settlement in their camps, resolved that no white man should be a resident among them unless as a captive, and entered my tent with his bow strung and three iron pointed arrows in his right hand—the signal of death. I arose, met him pleasantly but firmly, and offered him my hand, which he at first refused, but at length reluctantly accepted. I bade him be seated, sat down by him and entered into conversation with him. He was effectually disarmed, and ever after remained a firm friend to me, came in with the rest of the tribe, registered his name as a friendly Indian, determined ever after to remain at peace. He was then placed under arrest for past crimes, and without a trial is now a prisoner at Fort Marion in Florida. In associating with the Kiowa and Comanche tribes, I found that but a very small portion of those tribes were really hostile. These were the reckless, restless, discontented spirits, which among us go to fill up our jails and prisons, or form bands of outlaws on the frontiers.

Among the Indians, this uncontrollable class become raiders against the whites of the frontier settlements, and the whole tribe, though the most of them are peaceable, have to suffer on their account.—Thomas C. Battey.

We are so little that if God should manifest his greatness without condescension, we should be trampled under his feet: but God, who must stoop to view the skies and bow to see what angels do, looks to the lowly and contrite, and makes them great.

Childrens' Corner.

Popping Corn.

Look into grandma's kitchen;
Can you find a prettier sight—
Than George, and Fred, and Susie,
Popping their corn to-night?

Outside it is dark and dreary,
And swiftly falls the rain;
While the wind in fitful dashes,
Drives it against the pane.

Within the glad fire-light is shining,
And the shadows dance on the wall;
Old Tray is asleep on the hearth-stone,
And pussy curled up like a ball.

In the ashes the chestnuts are roasting,
Near, the apples of crimson and gold,
While the basket of corn in the corner
Is a mine of wealth untold.

Fred gleefully shakes the popper
As the white corns rise and fall;
And the laughing, happy faces,
Are the prettiest sight of all.

Tired at last of their frolic,
They watch the fire-light fade,
And trace out wonderful pictures,
In the shapes which the coals have made.

And they build for themselves bright castles,
Where never a shadow shall fall!
Ah! thank God, that the dear All-father
Is able to plan for them all.

But some time (with delight at the picture,
When the long, long years have flown),
They'll look back to the dear old kitchen
Where they merrily popped their corn.

Perfect Faith.

A story was told of a street-boy in London who had had both legs broken by a dray passing over them. He was laid in one of the beds of the hospital to die; and another little creature of the same class was laid near by, picked up sick with famine and fever. The latter was allowed to lie down by the side of the little crushed boy. He crept up to him and said:

"Bobby, did you ever hear about Jesus?"

"No, I never heard of him."

"Bobby, I went to mission school once, and they told us that Jesus would take you to heaven, when you died, and you'd never have hunger any more, and no more pain, if you axed him."

"I couldn't ask such a great big gentleman as he is to do anything for me. He wouldn't stop to speak to a boy like me."

"But he'll do all that, if you ax him."

"How can I ax him, if I don't know where he lives? and how could I get there with both legs broke?"

"Bobby, they told me at the mission school as how Jesus passes by. Teacher says as he goes around. How do you know but what he might come to this hospital this very night? You'd know him if you was to see him."

"But I can't keep my eyes open. My legs feel so awful bad! Doctor says I'll die."

"Bobby, hold up yer hand and he'll know what you want when he passes by."

They got the hand up; it dropped. They tried it again; it slowly fell back. Three times he got up the little hand, only to let it fall. Bursting into tears, he said, "I give it up."

"Bobby, lend me yer hand. Put yer elbow on my piller; I can do without it."

So one hand was propped up. When they came in the morning the boy lay dead, his hand still held up for Jesus. You may search the world, and you cannot find a grander illustration of simple trust than that of the little boy who had been to the mission school but once.—John B. Gough.

"I Grabbed Quick."

Johnny one night climbed up into his mother's lap, and laying his head on her shoulder, said in a low, sorry tone:

"I took that glass marble, mamma."

"Took it from whom?" asked his mother.

"Took it from the ground," said Johnny.

"Did it belong to the ground?" asked his mother; "did the ground go to the shop and buy it?"

Johnny tried to laugh at such a funny thought, but he could not.

"I saw it on the ground," said he.

"What little boy had it before?"

"Asa May's it is, I guess," whispered Johnny.

"When you put out your hand to take it, did you forget, 'Thou God seest me?'" asked his mother. "Did you not hear a voice, saying, 'Don't, Johnny! don't, Johnny!'"

"I didn't hear it." said the boy, sobbing, "I grabbed quick!"

Johnny is not the only one who has "grabbed quick" at some forbidden thing—too quick to hear the still small voice within. It is better not to grab too quick, to take time for thought and prayer; to watch and pray, and to resist temptation, and to avoid the stings of a guilty conscience, and the sorrows and stains that it brings upon the soul. —Selected.

An Old Puzzle Re written.

"If you please, sir, I'm a poor boy, but I'm awfully smart and I want work."

The store-keeper looked at his customer in astonishment. The boy was a little bit of a fellow, and his chin came just over the top of the counter.

"Well," said the store-keeper, "you seem to have a pretty good idea of yourself."

"That's so," said the boy, "I lost my last place 'cause I was smart."

"All right, then I'll show you where you make a great mistake, when you say your're smart. Do you see that jug over there?"

"No, sir," said the boy, looking hard at a box marked "Six gross safety pins."

"Not there; 'way back in the store."

"O, yes," said the boy.

"Now that jug is full of vinegar; it holds eight quarts. I've an order for four quarts, but haven't any empty measure excepting one holding five quarts, and one holding three quarts. Now, if you're as smart as you say you are, perhaps you can measure the four quarts from the eight quarts by using the three and five?"

"I can do it," said the boy, "just as easy as fishing."

"If you do, I'll give you two dollars a week and your clothes. No guessing, now, you must measure exactly."

"All right," said the boy; "have your tailor here in fifteen minutes to measure me, please."

The tailor might have come even earlier, as the boy had the four quarts of vinegar measured out in less than five minutes.

How did he do it?—Ex.

Canal Dover, O., Nov. 5, 1878.

Dear Mr. Editor:—I take much interest in reading your valuable paper. I wish the girls and boys that read your interesting paper would make the Puzzle Corner livelier. I will send you an enigma if you think it worthy for your paper.

I am composed of fifty-three letters.

My 1, 19, 20 and 38 is not to keep secret.

My 2, 11, 13, 19 and 30 is one of the books of the Bible.

My 35, 36, 37, 50 and 39 is hard to get but light to hold.

My 15, 23, 28, 43 and 49 are termed as false Christs.

My 6, 53, 7, 9, 14, 19 and 31 is one who lives in ignorance.

My 3, 8 and 29 is not young.

My 10, 12, 42, 44 and 41 is what a soft answer turneth away.

My 35, 4, 5 and 17 is a command.

My 18, 21, 43 and 26 is a term signified as religious.

My 40, 33, 34 and 16 is a conveyance across the ocean.

My 24, 41, 47 and 48 is a relative pronoun.

My 45, 22, 48 and 53 is not false.

My 25, 34, 38 and 43 is an elevation of land.

My 27, 36 and 32 is whom we should serve as long as we live.

My 49, 10, 19, 51, 52 and 53 is to deviate.

My 46, 47, 35 and 53 is the dearest place on earth.

My whole is the words that Jesus spoke when he was tempted by the evil spirit.

Yours truly,
W. Andreas.

Treatment of Burns.

A Boston physician announces a discovery, which, if its merits are substantiated, will deserve almost to rank with ether. This is the use of soda, in some of its forms, as a curative for burns and scalds. Dr. Waters, the physician in question, a surgeon-dentist, if we mistake not, relates the history of the discovery in considerable detail, and gives a variety of instances in which this soda cure has afforded instant relief. Some of the cases are very remarkable, and go far toward establishing his theory, if they do not so wholly. No unpleasant effects, he avers, have ever followed the treatment to his knowledge. He says: "My treatment is to apply to the burned surface bicarbonate of soda, if it is a wet surface, in fine powder; but if it is a dry burn, use a paste of bicarbonate of soda and water, or a strong solution of bicarbonate of soda in water and apply to the burned surface. This relieves sunburns as well as burns from hot coals, melted sulphur, hot iron, steam, etc. Always dispose the burned surface so that the blood can gravitate toward the heart if possible, as otherwise a continuous pain may be felt, due to dilation of the blood-vessels from the weight of the contained blood. If bicarbonate of soda is not at hand, bicarbonate of potash is the next best; biborate of soda does as well, but is not often found handy. Then the emulsion of lime-water with oils makes a good dressing where the skin is broken. But vaseline is preferable, as there is no odor from it, and it is quite as bland.

Beans.—Dried beans are perhaps used in more ways than fresh ones. The baked beans of Boston are famous and the secret of their superiority lies in the way they are baked. A stone-ware jar, called a Boston bean-pot, which is low in height, with a wide mouth three or four inches across, receives the beans after they have been boiled till nearly done. The piece of pork boiled with them and which should be large enough to fill the opening, is laid on the top, rind side up, this having been scored in strips, or diamonds. The beans thus arranged are baked in a slow oven for hours, at the end of which time they will be reduced to a rich, unctuous mass, very unlike those exposed in a dripping-pan, however carefully cooked. The Bostonians prepare these pots and send them Saturday evening to the baker's where they stand in the ovens all night and are returned hot Sunday morning.

If string beans are young and tender they will be done after boiling half an hour in salted water, or as some prefer, cooked with a piece of salt-pork. In either case drain off all the water, flavoring with butter and black pepper, or pour over cream previously thickened with a little flour.—Exchange.

Alum Baskets.—The framework of alum baskets is usually made of thin wire, woven in and out, and wound over in every part, to produce a rough surface. Dissolve the alum in rather more than twice the quantity of water that will cover the basket, handle included. Put in as much alum as the water will dissolve, and when it will take no more, filter it through a piece of brown paper into a saucepan. If you wish the basket to be colored, the dye must be added before the process of filtering. To produce crimson, use an infusion of cochineal and madder; for bright yellow, boil gamboge, muriate of iron, or turmeric in the solution. Blue crystals may be obtained by preparing sulphate of copper, commonly called blue vitriol, in the same manner that alum is prepared. For pale blue, equal portions of blue vitriol and alum; and for green, add to these last ingredients a few drops of muriate of iron. The solution being filtered boil it gently until it is reduced to half the quantity; put it in a vessel large enough to admit of the basket; suspend the latter from a stick laid across the top, so that both basket and handle are entirely immersed. It must then be put in a cool place where there will not be the slightest motion to disturb the formation of the crystals. It is well to bear in mind that the colored baskets should be kept quite out of the reach of children, as they look very tempting, but are decidedly poisonous.

Value of Coal Ashes.—I have got all I could gather for several years; but now some others speak well of them. A professor in Miami University made walks in his garden with the ashes from the college. He found that when he dropped turnip or other seeds they grew finer than any other. I had a pile of anthracite ashes three feet high in my garden, hauled there in May, 1875. There was ice on the bottom of the heap. I thought it would save ice better than tan. On the top of the heap there grew a number of pumpkins, which had been thrown in when rotten in the village. I thinned them to three vines and they were the finest and largest I had that year. They were three feet from the ground. That is, the crown. The vines covered more than 150 square feet.—Cor. of the Tribune.

WESLEYAN.

—The following paper was unanimously adopted by the Western Iowa Wesleyan Methodist Yearly Conference, as reported by the committee on reforms:

"Experimental holiness when applied to the heart is found the central truth or doctrine of the Scripture, both in the old as well as the new dispensation. The above statement will not be denied as a theory by the orthodox of the present professed Christianity. But while correct in general doctrines on the ritual question, there has been a tendency to evade real thorough personal heart discipline, that converts and purifies the whole man, by the substitution of a mere external profession for an inner work as clearly required by the word of the Lord. This is no new device of Satan. All along the history of man has this evasive exterior been substituted, until at times the inner work has almost been lost sight of, as in the case of Nicodemus. Although "a master in Israel," yet he was entirely ignorant and destitute of the experience of the spiritual birth. To make a mistake in this point is fatal to the soul and will prove a failure in this and the world to come.

Hence the admonition and exhortations so frequent in the Scripture, "Watch and pray;" "stand fast;" "put on the whole armor of God," etc. Showing the tendency of things and that vigilance in this most exacting state of things is necessary, in personal experience, as well as in the relation which we sustain to others. Also the almost entire failure of the administration of church discipline in the popular organizations as well as our own little Zion somewhat. The awful and astounding fact is, that church discipline is a dead letter in the general, and the real administration of discipline is the exception. How common for pastors to say that "it won't do to be too particular in the administration of discipline. To enforce discipline in the church as things are in our church would rend our little band," and so sin is winked at and passed over, discipline put to defiance, and all through a humane policy and no trust in God and the policy which he requires. Thus has the church beecome a by word and hissing to the outside world, and her power is gone. Alas! alas! How fallen; how far beneath the pattern shown to us in the Mount.

Nothing more common than to preach holiness, purity, sanctification and entire conformity to the will and law of God. Many also profess this higher state of grace; but it is made of little account for the real life so far as worldly conformity. The laws of the New Testament are not the laws of life of many who profess to be wholly sanctified. "By their fruits ye shall know them." Envy pride and jealousy are manifest with their fellows, for they act it out in their real relations. Putting on of gold and costly apparel; here we refer to the following out those ungodly fashions so satanic in their nature: Taking of such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus; here we allude to the festival games and other popular church practices used for the double purpose of diversion and to gratify a covetous state that is idolatry.

Reading of those books which do not tend to the knowledge of the love of God. Here we call attention to the loose state of things in the literary world and a wicked want of care of parents and guardians in the selection of pure reading matter for those under their care. The excuse is a want of money, but that family who have means to buy wholesome bread can supply a portion of pure reading for to feed the mind. All the above is bad fruit, consequently bad tree and spurious religion.

Again the church is made to bow at the heathen altar of secrecy and pay her devotion to strange gods, other than the God of the Holy Bible. Sometimes the god of Bacchus, or perchance the god of licentiousness; and in fact no crime too dark to be concocted in their infernal dens (lodges) guarded with murderous oaths as a bond of corruption; also to screen from popular censure; while if any dare to object to the moral character of such or any right to connect with such associations, or an intimation of doubtful purity, here is met a host of lodge men and their apologizers and defenders who wield such an opposition to any real reform and discipline, that New Testament law is set aside for human policy. A very eminent minister of a popular denomination was asked the question, Can a Christian be an adhering Freemason and retain purity of heart?

Answer—I don't know.

Said minister had been a Freemason. Such evasion needs to be branded with hypocrisy. Another minister in a recent private conversation thought best not to make secrecy a test of church fellowship. The above ministers both professed holiness of heart.

In view of these things as they go to-day with popular sanction, we wish to take the real Bible track, although we have to number our days with the Gideon band, and be called unpopular, yet, No compromise with the unfruitful works of darkness, we write anew on our banner, and a little higher than ever. By the help of the triune God we do hereby renew the holy fight and vow eternal hostility to all secret organizations as being opposed to the religion of the Bible, and that state of heart purity and holiness which seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, etc. All of which we shall fail of meeting except we repeat our visit to our spiritual Jerusalem.

Not only is our holy Christianity polluted by the anti-Christ of the lodge, but the free institutions of our republican government are being demoralized by the same ungodly power of the combined influences of the lodge. And Masonic law claims a higher standard of religion than the atonement of Christ. Here is unrebuked blasphemy. All of which we are told to let it alone, for so many good men are in fellowship, and hence it cannot be anything very bad. But we are told that a good tree cannot bring forth bad fruit, but here is bad fruit. Lord help us for Jesus' sake to stand clear, for this tower will fall and great will be the fall of it.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—The Medina Conference held an interesting meeting with the church in Wadsworth, Ohio, Oct. 29, 30. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. E. F. Baird, subject, "The duty and qualifications of the ambassadors of Christ." "Congregationalism—its distinctive characteristics and their importance" was discussed by Rev. H. Thrall; "How to treat the doctrine of holiness," Rev. O. W. White; "Relation of the church to sacred music," Rev. A. T. Reed; "What the Bible directs the pulpit concerning the rebuke of sin," Rev. J. Scott; "Importance of systematic works of charity in our churches," Rev. J. L. Whitman; "How to secure the united efforts of church members to save souls," Rev. E. F. Baird. Closing sermon by Rev. T. E. Monroe.

On the afternoon of the first day the conference gave place to the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society. A paper from Miss Helen Peabody, Principal of Oxford Female Seminary was read; also an address by Mrs. E. J. Gray.

A praise meeting of much interest was held in the evening by Rev. A. T. Reed and W. C. Lyon. The topic which attracted most attention was that of systematic charity presented by Rev. J. S. Whitman. In the course of his remarks he took occasion to say that whilst he did not place secret societies above the church yet some of those societies had a better system of organized charity than the church, thereby drawing a comparison between the churches and said societies which was not very favorable to the former. Rev. T. E. Monroe replied to his remarks at considerable length, affirming that there could be no just comparison whatever between the Christian church and said societies.

First; because those societies carefully select all their members, receiving none but able-bodied men who are not likely ever to become objects of charity. Secondly, every member of said societies is bound by the law of the lodge to pay a stipulated sum into the treasury weekly or monthly for charitable purposes, and in case of a failure he is expelled from the lodge. Whereas, on the other hand, Christ's church is open for all classes, the poor, the halt and the blind; in a word, all the unfortunate who are excluded from the lodge have access to the Christian church and her charities. The lodges, he affirmed, ought to care grandly for their poor because thereby they would only be refunding what had already been paid in by the recipients of said charity. He closed by re-affirming that it was not just to institute such comparisons.

His reply was a nail driven in a sure place, and when he sat down Mr. Reuben Gardner (who is an old citizen of Medina county) rose and clinched the nail by stating that to his certain knowledge not less than four Masons had died in our own county poor-house, neglected by their lodge simply because they had become so poor that they were not able to pay their lodge dues. So much for the boasted systematic charity of such institutions.

E. F. B,

BAPTIST.

—Rev. R. C. Childs of Lima, Ind., had $12 put in his hands last week to found a circulating library of Anti-masonic books including some Masonic works, which have often the best arguments against the lodge. He immediately sent it on to Chicago for investment.

—Rev. W. W. Ames of Menominie, Secretary of the Wisconsin State Association, reached Chicago last Wednesday on his way to the Illinois Convention in impaired health. He will remain in the city a short time under medical treatment. Unless he is benefitted here, he may conclude to spend the winter in northwestern Texas with his son in hope of full recovery.

—The Anti-slavery Baptist Association, of Ohio, an organization of colored people, held a meeting in Columbus, Ohio, a while since with about 200 delegates, representing nearly 100 churches.

GENERAL.

—Rev. Dr. Mackay of Hull, England, and one of the most eminent English Presbyterians is visiting Chicago this week. He preached in Chicago Ave. (Moody's) church Sabbath evening and in Farwell Hall several afternoons.

—On the first of the new year the evangelists Pentecost and Stebbins will visit Chicago and hold revival services here. The Rev. Mr. Pentecost has devoted himself exclusively to evangelistic work for some time, and his labors have been attended with such success that it has been decided to have him and Professor Stebbins come to this city and commence a series of services Jan. 1st.

—The report of Gen'l Superintendent Frankland, of this city, on the work of the Western Seaman's Friend Society has some facts of interest respecting railroad and prison work which is supervised by Rev. W. D. A. Mathews, of Onarga, Ill. He is largely engaged in supplying the State's prisons of the West and Southwest with religious reading. Last year he gathered over a million pages and distributed them among the prisons of nine States. He collects religious papers and books which the railroads carry free to their destination. Mr. Mathews finds many evidences of the good this work is accomplishing and is carrying it on with true Christian enthusiasm.

OUR PILLARS—FINANCIAL AND OTHERWISE.

DEAR CYNOSURE:—I see you are more than half-inclined to look on me through my last article as a "scold!" Now I don't like that. Perhaps, however, I do need a little of the "giftie" Burns sings of—to see myself as others see me—but I declare to you, I believe I told the truth, so far as I went. The "truth" to some people is very unpleasant medicine, but it is exceedingly wholesome, and willingly taken often works radical cures. You say: "We believe the majority of those who support this reform are liberal in their gifts as they are fervent in their prayers." Why bless you! Those are my sentiments exactly! "The majority of those who support this reform." Yes, yes, that is all right; but I was after those who don't "support this reform," except by taking all the official positions they are elected to in State, county and other associations—talk large against Masonry where it don't cost; but never take the Cynosure; do nothing in their own neighborhoods to advance our reform—put a nickel into the hat when a collection is taken, when for an example and encouragement to others they ought to cry out, "John Jones, ten dollars." That's the kind I was after, good Cynosure. As to the sort you speak of, they need nothing from me. Their record is with a higher than any of us. Liberal? Yes, I know them, and have seen them staggering under burdens that would break a camel's back! "Lift," I have seen them lift until, in sympathy with them, I could "see stars!" and when they asked for help from these "nickel men," have seen them put their soft hands into the upper stories of their pockets and sigh out—"Oh, I'm an Anti-mason, but—"

Perhaps you think that kind are scarce. I wish they were. When the class you speak of have gained the victory, and come out with ragged uniforms, thinned ranks and tattered banners, you will see the others, with glossy garments and gloved hands jumping on to the car of victory and out-shouting the battle-worn veterans, with—"See what a great victory we have gained!"

News of the Week.

—Favorable reports come from the Russian oil regions near the Caspian Sea. From one well there flows a stream of oil, free from gas and froth, forced into the air to a height of seventy-five feet, and yielding at the rate of ten thousand barrels a day. Americans with American machinery are doing their best to improve these wells.

—An incomplete list of the public subscriptions for the yellow-fever sufferers in forty-eight cities in this country, Canada and Europe shows a total of $1,359,000. New York stands at the head with $395,000. Philadelphia gives $132,000; Chicago, $100,000; Boston, $55,000; Cincinnati, $35,000. It is estimated that the entire amount contributed exceeded $2,000,000. Even poor Mexico sent liberal donations.

—Attorney-General Devens was last week engaged in arguing before the Supreme Court the question whether the United States has the constitutional right to prohibit polygamous marriages in the Territories. George Reynolds had been convicted in the Territorial courts, and in his appeal mainly rested on the plea that polygamy was a religious duty, which Mr. Devens most effectually disposed of by comparing Mormons to East India thugs, in that they rioted in murder as a religious duty.

—The competition in Eastern-bound passenger rates from Cincinnati, which, it is asserted, have been secretly cut for three or four months past, have finally forced prices down to the lowest figures known for years. Last Friday the Atlantic and Great Western announced New York and Philadelphia tickets at $1 each; Pittsburgh at $2.75; with fares to some common points in Ohio at a nominal sum.

—It is alleged in New York on good authority that startling frauds are being brought to light in the manufacture of refined sugars. A surprisingly large number of refiners have, it is believed, been using poisonous adulterations, with the double purpose of defrauding the Government and obtaining a high price for a cheap and deleterious article.

—It was reported last Thursday that the New York police had found the whereabouts of A. T. Stewart's body and were ready to arrest the gang that stole it. Two men have been arrested and that was all last week. Nothing satisfactory could be gained from the police and the belief was strengthened that the robbers were yet unknown.

—The Mormon women held a meeting at the theater in Salt Lake last Saturday, and passed resolutions avowing belief in the patriarchal order of marriage, as revealed to God's people in past ages, which, if lived up to, is conducive of long life, strength and glory. They indorse it as one of the most important principles of their holy religion, and claim the right of its practice.

—It is reported in London that intelligence has been received that a further outbreak of the Kaffirs is imminent. The rebel tribes are massed in great strength under Cetewayo, the King of the Zulus. The British force on the frontier is in danger of being overwhelmed unless promptly reinforced.

—The fine promises of Spain in regard to religious toleration have not been realized. On the contrary, the persecution of Protestants is bitter and cruel. The Christian Union relates the following: A report comes from Spain of the ill treatment of the Protestant pastor in Alcoy which forcibly recalls the memories of the Inquisition. Pastor Ben Oliel Tanti, as it appears, interfered to prevent the Romish priest from molesting a dying woman, who was and had been for several years a Protestant. Under a trumped-up charge Ben Oliel was thereupon arrested, tried and sentenced to prison for two months. Here he was exposed to the worst indignities. We quote the following, which appears in one of the Spanish liberal journals, and which the ministerial papers, though challenged to do so, have not denied: "His prison is very small, damp, hardly with any light or air in midday, the walls bear traces of human blood, the roofs are eaten up by foul insects, of which numbers are visible on the walls, at night these insects attack the wretched prisoner, causing sharp and unceasing pain from the stings. He has not been allowed, like other prisoners, to use one of his own beds, but has to sleep on a hard and filthy board. He begged that for mercy's sake the door of his prison might be left open to allow him to breathe air freely during some hours at least, and this petition was denied. He eats on the floor without knife or fork; they do not allow him any light, and he is obliged to drink water out of a foul jug which would make any dog recoil in horror."

A Berlin dispatch states that Count Schouvaloff will go to Baden Baden on his way to London, to deliver to Prince Gortschakoff an autograph letter from the Czar.

OBITUARY.

At Somerset, Nova Scotia, on Saturday 28th September, in the 79th year of his age, Rev. William Sommerville passed away to his eternal rest and reward. This devoted servant of Christ had been actively engaged in the work of the ministry for more than half a century, and had labored in the midst of many difficulties and trials, yet with no ordinary success, for at least forty-seven years, as a missionary from the Irish Reformed Presbyterian church to the lower Province of Canada. His last illness, both lingering and distressing, was borne with unaffected resignation to the Divine Will, and proved to those who were privileged to be with him, the power of the religious principles that ruled his conduct during life.—Our Banner.

The New Work on Masonic Symbolism.

My new book proving that Freemasonry corresponds in every ceremony, symbol and legend with the old Osirian worship of pagan Egypt or the Baal worship of Samaria, is now ready for the printer and from estimates received from some of the leading book publishers in Chicago will cost about $500. It will be a book of about 300 pages and well bound. It is indispensably necessary to have this book in our present and future controversy with Masonry and I trust my numerous friends throughout the country will help me to get it out at once.

I want five hundred subscribers at a dollar each for which each subscriber will receive two books. Each one to pay when he receives his books. All I want now is the names of subscribers so that I may go to press as soon as possible.

Please be prompt in this matter and send names to 104 Bremer street, Chicago. E. Ronayne.

Capt. Wm. Morgan was Mr. Greene's neighbor in Batavia, N. Y., and a member of the same lodge with him at the time of the great excitement in 1826. The titles to these chapters are sufficiently exciting to give the book a large sale:—"The Storm Gathering;" "Abduction of Morgan," "Attempted Abduction of Miller and his Rescue;" "What became of Morgan;" "What Morgan Actually Revealed;" "Confession of the Murderer;" "Allegadons against Freemasonry, etc."

THE ANTI-MASON'S SCRAP BOOK,
CONSISTING OF 21 CYNOSURE TRACTS.

In this book are the views of more than a Score of men, many of them of distinguished ability, on the subject of Secret Societies.

The dangerous tendency and positive evil of organized Secrecy is here shown by the most varied and powerful arguments and illustrations that have ever been given to the public.

Lecturers and others who wish to find the best arguments against the Lodge, should send for this book.

Those who wish to circulate Antimasonic Tracts ought to have the book to select from.

Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward. James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D.L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 435,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 5.

EXTRACTS FROM MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES,

As Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a re-print of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 6.

HON. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' LETTTER,

Giving his and his Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831).

—AND—

HON. JAMES MADISON'S LETTER,

Giving his opinion of Freemasonry (1832.) Both of these letters in one 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO, 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 12.

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry. An 8-page tract.

TRACT NO. 13.

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY

AND

HOWARD CROSBY, D.D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 14.

GRAND LODGE MASONRY,

Its Relation to Civil Government and the Christian Religion.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRESI. BLANCHARD of Wheaton College. A 16-page tract.

TRACT NO. 15

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction.
A 4-page tract

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A. Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party,

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RONAYNE

To the correctness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract.

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH,
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M.E. Church, Worchester, Mass.
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract.

THE PROSPECT FOR 10,000 SUBSCRIBERS.

Geo. Cowley, Rio, Columbia county, Wis., sends nine names for one year each, and two for six months each. Seven of these are renewals. Will each member of this club secure one more?

Riley Wilder, Baraboo, Wis., sends five names for one year each and writes: "I shall try to send you in some more names for the Cynosure and help make up the 10,000."

Five persons, vis., James Kennedy, San Jose, Cal., Andrew Mitchell, Philadelphia, Pa., D. P. Rathbun, Clarinda, Iowa, J. S. Rice, N. Pownal, Me., Geo. Brokaw, Washington, Iowa, send two subscriptions for one year each. One of them writes: "Anything I can do to advance the good cause and help the Cynosure along I will willingly and cheerfully do free of charge."

Another writes: "You will hear from me again soon I trust."

Another: "Please send me a few envelopes and subscription lists or papers to get subscriptions on."

A. Showalter, Vermillion, Ill., sends one name for a year and four names for one month each.

D. B. Neckert, Ogden Center, Mich., sends four subscriptions for three months each.

J. H. Hanna, Pittsburgh, Pa., and H. S. Limbocker, Litchfield, Mich., are at work gathering their clubs.

Philo Millard, Woodhull, Steuben county, N. Y., writes: "I think I can get some new subscribers soon."

Stephen Cranston, Sr., Raymond, Ohio, (85 years old) writes: "I am doing all I can for the cause * * and trying to get subscribers to your paper."

Mrs. S. B. Allen, Morrison, Ill., writes: "I am trying to get subscribers."

Hannibal Lee, Brighton, Mich., writes: "I wish to procure one or two towards the 10,000."

Nelson Daniells, Wanconsta, Mich., writes: "I am confident I shall be able to send you in a very few days two or three additional subscribers."

James Mathews, Jordan's Grove, Ill., sends "the first installment of a good club" and writes: "I hope to send at least ten yearly subscriptions * * to help in getting the 10,000 subscribers for the Cynosure this winter if it is hard times."

John Milner, Greenfield, Highland county, Ohio, is preparing to canvas and writes: "I want to do all that I can to keep the ball rolling until every man has plenty of money to take and pay for the Cynosure."

These words and deeds from eighteen workers in this reform are very encouraging. Let us have more of them.

Watch, pray, work, until from every town where now even one copy of the Cynosure is taken the glad news will come.

"THE CAMPAIGN RAGES!"

"THE CAMPAIGN RAGES."

Bishop J. Dickson, Westerville, O., writes: "I hope the 10,000 will be rolled up in due time. I think you did wisely to reduce the price of subscription. * * I know, however, you cannot afford for less than the regular price with its present subscription list."

Geo. Dawson, Toronto, wr ites: "I do not think your publications are known here at all. I met with a gentleman traveling from Chicago to Portland a couple of weeks ago who had a copy of the Cynosure and from who I learnt of its existence."

Friends, advertise the Cynosure. Let all in our land groaning under the burdens of secret societies see its light.

A clergyman at Auburn, Maine, (a Mason and an Odd-fellow) writes: "When I am convinced that I am wrong, or doing wrong by continuing my membership, then will I renounce them (the orders of Freemasonry and Odd-fellowship).

"I want more light."

He sends for an exposition. Thousands of secretists, like poor plants in a dark cellar, struggle upward. "They WANT MORE LIGHT." Teach them first of all that blessed promise in John 8: 12, then circulate the Cynosure.

GOLD MEDAL

has been awarded at the Paris Exposition of 1878 to

J.&P.COATS,

for their best Six-Cord Spool Cotton, confirming the estimate placed upon their goods at all the World's Expositions from that at London, 1862, to the Centennial Exposition of 1876, where they took a Diploma for "SUPERIOR STRENGTH AND EXCELLENT QUALITY."

A Second Class Prize of a Silver Medal was taken by the Willimantic Linen Company, which claims to be the special champion of American industry, and which has extensively advertised a Grand Prize at Paris.

NO GRAND PRIZES were awarded for Spool Cotton at Paris.

J. & P. Coats have established in Pawtucket, R. I., the largest Spool Cotton Mills in the United States. Every process of manufacture, from the raw cotton to the finished spool, is conducted there. Their American-made Spool Cotton took the award at the Centennial, and while they have never claimed special merit for their American made Spool Cotton over that manufactured in their Scotch Mills, we have the satisfaction of announcing that they have so identified themselves with this country, that

AMERICA as represented by J. & P. COATS, IS STILL

NEW ENGLAND.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN NEW ENGLAND:—The annual meeting of the National Christian Association at Worcester was a grand success. A deep impression was made in that city and one that will be felt throughout New England. In order to follow up and continue the good work the delegates from New England have secured the services of Rev. H. H. Hinman of Wheaton, Ill., who has had much experience in this work, and whose name is familiar to the readers of the Cynosure. Mr. Hinman will respond to all calls for lectures when not engaged. Correspondence in reference to the lecture work may be addressed to Mr. Hinman or to me at Willimantic, Conn.

JOHN A. CONANT.

IOWA.

MORNING SUN, Iowa, Nov. 21, '78.

For reasons deemed sufficient the meeting of the Iowa State Association opposed to secret societies, called to meet at Cedar Rapids, Dec. 10th, is postponed until further notice.

C. D. TRUMBULL, Rec. Sec'y.

WESTERN COLLEGE, Iowa, Nov. 22, '78.

The call for change of the Iowa State Christian Association from Chariton to Cedar Rapids is, by misunderstanding, unauthorized. The President, Rev. R. A. McAyeal, D. D., has moved East, and the Vice-President, Rev. E. B. Kephart, and the friends here knew nothing of it until they saw it published in the Cynosure. Pres. McAyeal wrote me on going East to attend to it and I have been preparing the way for Chariton where the State meeting put it. We are now divided. We propose to put off the convention until spring and give time to make it a grand success.

M. S. DRURY, Cor. Sec.

E. B. KEPHART, Vice-Pres.

DODGE COUNTY, MINN.

The Dodge County Christian Association will hold its third annual meeting at Wasioja, Dec. 4th and 5th, 1878. The meeting will be opened on the evening of Wednesday, the 4th, with a lecture by Rev. Wm. Fenton of St. Paul. Arrangements are being made to have a full and interesting programme served up by our home talent and speakers from abroad.

Come and join in a free discussion, all who are unwilling to submit to the terrorism of the lodge—hardly less exacting and potent, though enforced secretly, than that of the Spanish Inquisition. Come and get warmed up for the State anti-secret convention at St. Charles, the week following. Free entertainment.

W. F. HILLMAN, Pres.
E. G. PAINE, Cor. Sec.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN MINNESOTA.

We, the undersigned, hereby invite all those who are opposed to organized secretism and all who are willing to hear a fair discussion of the character of the secret organizations, to meet in convention at St. Charles, Winona county, Minn., on Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1878, at six o'clock P. M., the convention to continue during the next day and evening, at least.

The object of the convention is to effect a State organization auxiliary to the National Christian Association, and to make arrangements for a thorough canvass of the State in the interests of this reform. Edmond Ronayne, or D. P. Rathbun, will be present and work the degrees of Freemasonry. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent for the National Christian Association, is also expected. Other able speakers from Illinois and Wisconsin, as well as from our own State, will be in attendance. We hope to make this a profitable time for that branch of the cause of Christ, represented by this reform. St. Charles is on the line of the W. and St. P. R. R. Free entertainment will be provided.

10,000 SUBSCRIBERS.—The Illinois State Convention responds with a list of a hundred.

Happy the man who gets up a club for the Ten thousand.

CARD FROM H. H. HINMAN.

To the Wisconsin Christian Association opposed to Secret Societies:

Having been called in the providence of God to labor in New England, I hereby resign my agency for your association, earnestly praying that the blessing of the Lord may rest upon you and that he will send up a faithful man to labor in this reform. Yours fraternally,

H. H. HINMAN.

THE OUTLOOK for the winter campaign for reform is exceedingly hopeful. Following the Worcester Convention, Rev. H. H. Hinman, whose long experience and earnest piety well fits him for the work, will speak through the New England States for several months, probably until early summer. He will open the way for expositions by Mr. Ronayne at prominent points. Already a fund is projected to obtain Tremont Temple, Boston, for this purpose. In Indiana Dr. Cook is giving his attention to the work. A series of appointments is being planned for Elder Rathbun by him. Rev. R. Faurot is expecting to open a series of meetings at Salt River, Michigan, and the State Convention, under the management of Secretary Mathews will rouse new enthusiasm in the Peninsular State. In Wisconsin the work will not lag although the friends have failed temporarily in obtaining an agent. In Illinois there should be more and better work done than ever with Elder Browne as State agent, and Bro. I. R. B. Arnold working up the rural districts. Rathbun in Iowa, and Needles, Stewart and Orr in Missouri will soon hear their voices echoing in the empty lodge halls. In nearly the whole North the banner of reform is advancing grandly. Let the standard bearers always have a strong and gallant company at their back, pushing the battle to the very altars of the lodge.

THANKSGIVING DAY is here again. Aside from the usual topics, the common objects for which all men should bow in thanks to God, the readers of the Cynosure have several special objects of gratitude in connection with the great work of reform. The mention of two or three will suggest others, and there are many of local interest. The completion of the Publishing House fund and donation of the Carpenter building will ever be a hinge point in this reform; and the establishment of a Christian alliance with free mission work is another. For New England, doubtless, if our faith is strong, the late convention at Worcester is the beginning of a great deliverance, let us hope not alone for that section but for our nation. Truly, we should rejoice before God this day.

THE GALLED JADE WINCES.—The call of the Cynosure for 10,000 subscribers, has aroused the conductors of the Voice of Masonry, and in the November number is a loud call for 10,000 subscribers too; and the call is emphasised by such statements as these: "Never has there been more at stake—the fundamental principles of Freemasonry being violently assailed by foes within and without the fraternity." The foes within are said to be the Grand Orients of France and Belgium, who appear to have been struck with a streak of honesty, and who seeing no real difference between a god in name only and no god at all, have cast off the mask and now stand out before the world in their true colors—as atheists. Their English and American brethren kick at this, but we suggest that those of the brethren claiming to have scruples, either come out from the order entirely, or imitate the honesty of their French associates.

Exclusive Grand Lodge jurisdiction is also said to be imperilled. Scotland going on the rampage, with "England half inclined to back her." All this within, while "without are the Cynosurists virulent as possible!"

"Virulent" means poison, and the Voice is not far from the truth in intimating that Cynosurism is poison to the Masonic institution; as nothing can be more poisonous to falsehood than the truth. Masons may well tremble at the developments of honesty in the Grand Orients and the thundering blows of truth rained upon them by the Cynosurists; but by all means give them the 10,000, as the more they print the worse it will be for the craft.

—The treasure of some of our Chicago preachers is laid up in the lodge, not in heaven, if we may judge from such an item as this: "The Rev. Henry G. Perry, Grand Master of Siloam Council of Royal and Select Masters of Chicago, was unanimously elected Grand Chaplain of the Grand Council of the State of Illinois at its late annual assembly."

Common Objections.

BY T. HODGE.

1. How do you know? For Masons are sworn to secrecy, and if they break their oaths they are perjured, and who would believe a perjured man?

2. If Masons pretend to tell what goes on in the lodge and don't, then you can't know; and so in both ways you have no right to ask people to believe what you say of Masonry when you never was a Mason. Therefore join them and then you'll know. That's the only way to find out.

3 I want to hear both sides. You say Masonry is a religion, and I can't believe that because there are so many Christian men who are Masons, and they would renounce it if it was a religion, I should think. If it is a religion then they should come out of it, of course.

REPLY.

1. We know from the testimony of repentant men of Christian character, who found out by experience in the lodge that they had been deceived in their ideas and hopes of the true meaning of Masonry. Such witnesses as the late Bernard, and Finney of Oberlin, both of the highest Christian character as preachers of the Gospel, and hundreds of others whose names have been published as renouncing Masons. These believed the oaths taken to be sinful, therefore to be confessed and forsaken and did so; thus vindicating their right to be considered as men exercising themselves to have a CONSCIENCE void of offence toward God as well as toward men. Such men are the very best witnesses, and in every age are recognized as being the most trustworthy of mortal men. Why! Christianity itself, by Divine Wisdom, was established by such men! Who was Peter but one who swore he did not know Christ, and then at Pentecost was the first witness for him? and three thousand believed this "perjured" man, and testified of their faith in the resurrection of the Christ.

2. Such words may fill the ear but are destitute of force. They do good work however for Masonry with weak young men who are anxious for some excuse to join the lodge. Yes, "join them and then you'll know all about it." Eat the apple and find out that the devil is wiser than God! But alas for such knowledge! The bait tempts the fish, but the hook is concealed until it "finds it out." The bird is "snared" by good picking until the trap is sprung. Such is the plan to catch the unwary. "Join them and then you'll know!" But then also you are regarded by the whole of your sworn brotherhood as bound to conceal and never reveal, and are branded as a base perjurer if you do repent and warn others against the danger. Apply this reason to other things: e. g., Why should a sober man declare himself against drunkenness? He don't know it for he was never drunk! Therefore keep silent! until you get drunk, and then be silent STILL!

3. How can you accept the testimony of any one who regards himself as bound to conceal the very evils which which are declared to exist by the renouncing witness? There is always a class of men who are are blind to moral evidence. In the time of Christ such men were blind to the testimony of Moses and the prophets and to the evidence of THE TRUTH who stood before them fulfilling the very prophecies in which they professed to believe.

Let it be clearly understood that when we say "Masonry is a religion," we are merely repeating the claims of Masonic authors in the sense of their own words. Let not our readers imagine that we mean to say that Masonry is the Christian religion. No; not at all. It is, however, quite willing to be regarded as such, or as its handmaid, or as its superior, which graciously permits Christians to unite with others in its worship in the lodge who may be, out of it, Jews or Mohammedans or of any other religion, but all must, when they do, unite in the Masonic forms of prayer, in singing their songs, etc.

4. If it is a religion then Christians should come out of it. Good. For if they did, it would be left entirely in the hands of non-Christians—as now is the case in France with the great body of them. But this recent incident (viz. the repudiation of faith in the god of Masonry or any other God) proves what we say, that Masonry as it is taught in this country and in Great Britain and as it was in France, is a religion, for its authorities have protested against the new departure of the French Masons, a departure we take leave to say, quite in keeping with the essential character and tendency of Freemasonry so far as Christianity can regard it because in the world over there is no Christ in the genuine Masonry. When he is admitted it is that he may be compelled to acknowledge the reign of this Cæsar and stand on the level with Barrabbas, or some other who robs him of his glory and goes uncondemned while the Christ is crucified. Christians, come out of it!

The tide of subscriptions begins to rise. It will reach the 10,000 notch and never fall below it.

Evil Suspicions.

The motto of the ancient and honorable Order of the Garter is, "Evil to him who evil thinks." It is a very good motto, in its way; for evil minds are very apt to entertain evil suspicions.

But then, on the other hand, there are certain things which excite evil suspicions even in the best and purest of minds. As there are some substances which give out foul and repulsive odors, so, there are certain things which inspire evil suspicions. Such is the order of nature, and man cannot change it if he would.

Among the things that give rise to evil suspicions among decent men, we know of nothing worse than Freemasonry. No one can help entertaining evil suspicions, wherever it exists. As the man who is said to have confected some of the streets of New Orleans with garbage, is suspected of having aided to bring the yellow fever, so the men who work the lodge are suspected of bringing upon society much of the evil which it endures.

As an evidence of the evil suspicions which Freemasonry excites, we may mention a case that occurred during the war of the rebellion. A newspaper editor, a naturally very good man, though idle, a politician and a Mason—and hence a favorite with Masons—went to the war and was soon killed; or was supposed to be. A corpse was brought home to his wife, and due ceremony was made over it, calculated to soothe a widow's feelings, and exalt the pious virtues of the mystic brotherhood. But the man in question was a tall, fine looking man; and it was noticed by some that the coffin containing the corpse appeared to be very short. And it was also observed that the saying was carefully circulated that though it would be some consolation to the widow's feelings to see her husband's face, yet the corpse was so far gone that it would not do to expose it to view.

Had the man really been killed? Did he not resort to this means for getting rid of his wife and his debts? Was the corpse indeed that of the man of whom it was said to be? Were not the fraternity playing off a Masonic trick upon the wife and upon the community, for their own benefit? Such were some of the evil suspicions that the event gave rise to.

Now we are willing to admit that not one of these evil suspicions might prove to be founded on fact; but the question is not whether they were true, but whether Freemasonry will not always excite just such suspicions, wherever it plays off its deceptive arts. The man who is so sly and crafty in his manners as to always excite the evil suspicions of his neighbors, is generally detested by every decent person. Though the honest man will confess that it is degrading and mean to to entertain mean suspicions, yet nothing will ever shake his convictions that of all mean things in this world, Freemasonry is the meanest. If Freemasonry were a mere person, instead of an institution, it might be endured; nay, hoped for, prayed for, and treated with consideration and respect; but as an institution it merits the disgust and desecration of every honest man and woman in the country. Its rights are not personal. It has no legal rights. It is a sheathed mob; a concealed weapon, bore alike to the detriment of law and liberty.

Secret Assassinations in South America.

A Buenos Ayres paper says: "An important discovery has just been made. For some time past well-known residents in San Isidro have frequently disappeared without anything being subsequently heard of them. A train from the north recently left a case at San Isidro station, and the persons to whom it was consigned immediately applied for it, and left for a farm in the neighborhood on which there is a solitary house. Rumors of revolution which had been current led the Justice of the Peace to be on the qui vive, and, happening to notice the case, he imagined it might contain arms for the use of some of the suspected rebels. He therefore ordered some policemen to follow the case and examine it on its arrival at its destination. It was carried into the house through a doorway so narrow that entrance even one at a time was difficult. They found themselves in a narrow and short hallway, and, pushing on, entered a room about five yards square, in which were a number of skeletons and bones, and other human remains. On the wall in the end was an inscription in Italian, meaning—'So die all traitors.' Another small room was then examined and a large cellar. Nothing remarkable was found in the first, but in the cellar a large number of stilettoes, daggers, knives, pistols and other murderous weapons, were found. On many of these instruments the same inscription, 'So die all traitors,' was found, and it may not be out of place to remember that the same words were found on the dagger which some years ago caused the death of the Italian Consul in Buenos Ayres. The cellar was also full of bones, and among them the head of a woman was observed to which the hair still adhered."

We read that two Chinamen were lately examined in Philadelphia to test their understanding of the nature of an oath. They were Hap Lee, a laundryman, and Ah Fong, his interpreter. Ah Fong said that he had been in this country ten years, had attended school and understood the Bible. In his country they swear by the breaking of a plate, the burning of a paper, and the cutting off of the head of a chicken. He knew that the Bible tells us of God and believed what it said, and he considered that when he kissed the book he was bound to tell the truth. The judge deemed that satisfactory, and directed the interpreter to be sworn. Hap Lee was then interrogated, and in the course of his examination he said that he believed in both ways of swearing. He had heard a little about the Bible, and knew he was to tell the truth and not lies. He was asked if he had not a Chinese god in his pocket, when he answered that "Chinaman no more put God in his pocket than you put God in your pocket." He believed that if he did not tell the truth he would be punished.

THE ELEVENTH NATIONAL CONVENTION.

Held in Mechanics' Hall, Worcester, Mass., Nov. 13th to 18th.

Friday-Forenoon.

The devotional exercises that opened the grand work of the last day were conducted by Prof. W. O. Tobey of the Religious Telescope, Dayton, Ohio.

At their close the Vice-president from Vermont, Gen. J. W. Phelps, took the chair and business proceeded.

Prof. S. C. Kimball of New Hampshire, in behalf of the committee on the best method of prosecuting the reform work, especially in New England, made their report, which recommended organization in the different States, publication and general circulation of tracts, discontinuance of religious papers that refuse to publish facts, and that Christian people be earnestly urged not to contribute funds to missionary boards managed by Masons.

Rev. H. H. Hinman State Agent of Wisconsin, in behalf of the committee on the expediency and possibility of forming a union between the churches testifying against secret societies, reported as follows:

REPORT ON UNION OF CHURCHES.

Believing that the institution of Freemasonry is the fruitful parent of, and model for, all the different forms of organized secretism and that it is only a modified and revived form of ancient paganism; and believing that the churches cannot be faithful representatives of our Lord Jesus Christ and his Gospel while they have fellowship with it; therefore

Resolved, That we recommend to the different evangelical churches to unite in an alliance which shall in no wise interfere with the denominational character or work of such churches, and shall have for its object to make a united resistance to the encroachments of organized secretism.

Resolved, That, until a more mature plan is adopted, we recommend the Board of Directors of the National Christian Association to appoint three of their number a committee on independent missions who shall serve without pay, except for necessary postage and stationary, and who shall receive contributions for both home and foreign missions and disburse the same according to the directions of the donors; or at their own discretion in case no specific directions are given; but only in the support of such missionaries and churches as bear an unmistakable testimony on this subject and for the promotion of the Gospel that shall have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness but rather reprove them.

Resolved, That both home and foreign missionary societies should refuse to send out missionaries or aid any local church known to be in complicity with this form of evil, and that we cannot consistently oppose paganism abroad while we apologize for it at home.

The report of the committee on resolutions was made by Rev. A. A. Phelps, editor of the Bible Banner of Philadelphia, as follows:

PREAMBLE.

The lapse of years only deepens our conviction that all secret societies stand in the way of the world's progress. We freely admit that some of these societies profess to have commendable objects, but we are fully persuaded that they greatly err in their methods. A good cause does not need the veil of secrecy and a bad cause does not deserve it. Truth has no dread of investigation but challenges the severest scrutiny. All valuable knowledge is for the world, and not the legacy of a favored few. The better class of secret societies would have a more honest face and do more effective work if run on the open basis. As to the common claim of being benevolent institutions, they are at best mere mutual protection societies, securing advantages to the few at the expense of the many. And if this be true of the best what shall be said of the worst? While we do not place all secret societies on the same level we would rejoice to have them all replaced by those in favor of an open field and fair fight with the elements of evil.

Concerning Freemasonry, the oldest and most objectionable of the mystic fraternities now in operation, we express the sense of the National Christian Association in the following resolutions:

Resolved, That Masonry has no business with the sacred precincts of the Christian church. Masonry is a system of darkness, while Christianity is a system of light. The principles of that mystic order are directly antagonistic to the teachings of the New Testament. Its ceremonies are a strange mixture of silliness and sacrilege. Its obligations yoke the Christian with unbelievers, and require what clashes with an enlightened conscience. It places the Word of God on an equality with the spurious revelations of false religions, and in Christian countries it debases the Bible below the level of the square and compass. It mutilates the Scriptures and rejects Jesus Christ, the foundation of all our hopes.

Resolved, That Masonry is a dangerous element in the state. It is especially incompatible with the genius of our republican institutions and form of government. It interferes with the rights of citizens and often defeats the ends of justice. It is a dangerous conspiracy, capable of working vast mischief to society. Its horrid oaths are extra-judicial, but are generally felt to be terribly binding. Its mandates are more authoritative than the civil law, and if either must be set aside, it is the latter. For this reason many a Masonic culprit goes "unwhipped of justice." Our governmental offices are largely filled with devotees of the lodge, and while these titled monopolists grow fat, the unsuspecting masses groan under their burdens and mourn over the general corruption

Resolved, That Masonry is a standing insult to woman. While it claims to be the promoter of piety and the source of wondrous knowledge, it denies its so-called benefits to half of the race on the ground of sex alone. It builds a high wall of exclusiveness between man and woman. It robs the Mason's wife of the society and confidence which she has a right to enjoy. We therefore call upon all our American women to investigate this subject, and to throw the weight of their mighty influence against a system which is so false in its claims, so exclusive in its spirit, and so demoralizing in its tendency.

Resolved, That appreciating the need of more general information on the part of the people, we do hereby recommend to the cities and principal villages of our country to secure the valuable services of Mr. Edmond Ronayne in their lecture courses of the coming winter.

Resolved, That the National Christian Association, in its mission of reform, and as one of the guardians of the public morality and honor, is constrained to notice with righteous reprobation the debasing form of polygamy practiced in Utah, and now virtually repudiated in our national Congress, by the allowance of an apostle of polygamy, having himself four acknowledged wives, to sit in our House of Representatives at Washington, the peer of Christian legislators from pure households. Therefore, we protest against the admission of Utah to the sisterhood of States until it is thoroughly purged of this heathen abomination. And we commend also to the Christian women of the United States the late appeal of the non-Mormon women in Utah, urging them to arouse and organize a public sentiment against the odious enormity that is maintained only by a system of oath bound secrecy, in the "endowment houses" of the Mormon church, like the oaths of Masonry within the walls of the lodge.

Resolved, That we commend the French Freemasons on the honesty of their present position, in lately passing an authoritative order to strike the name of God from their ritual. Being atheists, and members of an atheistic association, we rejoice that they have cast off the flimsy veil of deism, and now appear before the world in their true character. And we recommend the good example set by the Grand Orient of France to the Grand Lodges of other countries, especially of the United States. Since the order is atheistic and idolatrous, we earnestly desire that it should appear to the world in its true color, and no longer deceive men by the vain use of the name and word of God.

The discussion introduced by these papers and their adoption consumed the forenoon session.

Afternoon.

As the Convention opened for business after the noon recess, Rev. A. L. Deering of Monument, Mass., led in prayer. Prof. C. A. Blanchard then, in behalf of the committee to whom the subject of an address to pastors of New England had been referred, made the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

The Lord Jesus Christ, the great Head of the church, has by his Word, his Providence and his Spirit, led us to feel and deplore the evils arising from secret societies. We find these associations multiplying rapidly, practicing various rites, imposing various obligations, but all interfering with the administration of law and lessening the spirituality of the church. We learn that the members of those orders are counted by hundreds of thousands and their funds by millions, while their temples, rivalling those of pagan antiquity and dedicated to an unknown god, are rising in imposing grandeur on every hand. The obligations of those orders are substantially the same, though the words in which they are couched differ. They alike bind men to conceal secrets not yet revealed to them, to a so called charity which is only a cloaked and hypocritical selfishness, and to obedience to signs summons and tokens which may involve them in the aid and protection of crime. Those obligations of the Masonic order are enforced by a system of penalties which are not only unchristian but inhuman, which are revolting to man and suited only to devils and wild beasts. If those obligations were mere wordy scarecrows to frighten men into obedience, they would be sufficiently objectionable, but we have melancholy proof that they say what they mean and mean what they say. The systematic defamation, the attempted assassination, and the accomplished murder of those who have renounced the order, are decisive evidence on this point. Such fraternities are thus unfriendly to the churches of God, over which the Holy Ghost has made you ministers. Is it not notorious that the churches of to-day are made up almost entirely of aged men, women and children? Are not the young and middle-aged men in the secret fraternities and not in the army of Jesus, Immanuel? And if those young men turn their backs on the house of God and give their manhood, their money, and their time, to association in secret lodges, what must be the results to their own souls? These things being so, what warning voice is lifted from the New England pulpit, and from the religious press, to save the church from ruin? Considering the direful results of too long silence on the slavery question, what imagination shall conceive, what tongue shall utter the fearful consequences of silence on such a theme as this? When we reflect that the single institution known as Odd-fellowship spends each year more than twice as much as all North America gives for foreign missions, that Masonry spends each year more than four times as much as all Christendom gives for the conversion of all heathendom, and that these orders conduct balls, suppers and other entertainments, which are very costly and unspiritual in their influence, we are constrained to ask that you, the Christian ministers of New England, should charge men to have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

The sword of a secret atheistic religious philosophy is roaming over the land. It is emptying our churches, corrupting our courts and destroying the souls of men. Dear brethren, God's appointed ministers, we pray you to utter the warning cry, that the blood of those who perish be not required at your hands.

The Committee on Correspondence reported through Rev. A. L. Deering. A large number of communications had been received. It would be impossible to read all, and he had selected three which he read, one from the Indiana State Convention, one from Rev. Eli Tapley, Columbus, Miss., and one from Dr. A. L. Post, of Montrose, Pa. These letters made important suggestions for the advancement of the objects of the Convention, and gave cheerful representations of the work of reform.

The Committee on Nominations reported and the report was unanimously adopted. [The official list was printed last week.] The President-elect, Rev. H. T. Cheever, was conducted to the chair, and accepted the position with brief remarks thanking the Convention for the honor, and pledging himself to do all in his power to promote the interests of the great work now engaging the attention of the meeting.

Prof. C. A. Blanchard improved the opportunity to present the claims of the Christian Cynosure to the Convention, urging that each member be sure that his name is enrolled as a subscriber, and that every effort be made in every quarter for an increased circulation.

Rev. J. P. Stoddard, Agent and Corresponding Secretary of the National Christian Association, presented his report of the year's work, which was in some respects more favorable than for any season previous.

The remainder of the afternoon was occupied with reports from various fields, in which H. H. Hinman, State lecturer for Wisconsin the past year, led. These reports were of an encouraging nature, showing a steady and hopeful progress, in spite of the bitter opposition and proscription of enemies.

Evening.

At the evening session the great hall was packed to its utmost capacity. From 2500 to 3000 persons crowded the floor and gallery. No more convincing proof could be asked that the discussions of the Convention had taken a strong hold upon the popular mind. Every delegate rejoiced in the grand work quietly but surely being wrought for Christ and the truth. All knew that prayer had been answered and Satan defeated in his busy operations to destroy the influence of the Convention and send its supporters homeward dejected and beaten in the glorious warfare they had undertaken in the name of their God.

The evening was given up to Mr. Ronayne, and the exposition of the killing of Hiram proceeded under his skillful hand, unfolding to many astonished minds the enormity and sin of the Masonic system, as they heard for the first time the clear and undeniable logic that proved it to be the reproduction in Christian America of the heathen follies of Egypt and the East. As he closed by raising the representative of the murdered Osiris by the mesmeric influence of the Freemason's "Mah-hah-bone," and thanked the citizens of Worcester for their respectful attention, the many friends, whose efforts and prayers for the Convention had been so graciously blessed, blessed His name in whose power they had gone forward. They saw the dark wall of mistrust and fear breached and crumbling, and they breathed new courage and zeal as they girded themselves to enter and take possession in the name of the Lord Christ.

Address of Prof. C. A. Blanchard at Worcester.

Ladies and Gentlemen: In asking your attention for a little while to the subject which is in your thoughts I desire to remind you first, that every age has had its own work: in 1620 to plant free institutions in this land; in 1775 to defend them against tyranical aggression; in 1860 to cleanse and purify them from remaining corruption, and in 1878 this work is not yet completed. In 1860 the question was, Is it a right and Christian thing to buy and sell men, women and children as cattle in the market? The question then was whether a government ordained to establish justice and secure the blessings of liberty shall be used for the perversion of justice and to promote a system of oppression as wicked as the sun ever saw. Nor is this work yet fully accomplished so long as the freedom of the ballot is only nominal; so long as the shot-gun clubs of South Carolina are stronger than her ballots; so long the work of justice and humanity remains to be accomplished.

Two hundred and fifty years ago the work was to drive out a dead and fruitless ritualism and bring in the Bible; one hundred years ago to resist the "half-way covenant" and the jeering skepticism of Voltaire, Rousseau and Paine. Fifty years ago it was to drive the liquor trade out of the house of God, and the trader in human beings out of the pulpit. The work of those days was not less arduous than that of the present. Then as now the man who stood for pure Christianity was confronted by a public sentiment that regarded him as a disturber of the public peace, an aggressor on the vested rights and interests of his fellow men. Now unless the present is separated from the past by an impassable gulf, there is special work for us to-day.

Has a citizen of the United States any rights that South Carolina is bound to respect? The events of the past few weeks admonish us that this question cannot be evaded. We must meet it and decide it on its merits. Is it any better for a Christian to vote to license men to make their fellows drunk than to get drunk himself? If he gets drunk you put him out of the church, but if he votes permission and authority to make others drunkards, if the principle in law is true that what we do by another we do ourselves, then to license men to make drunkards, or to vote for such license is to be guilty of liquor selling and all its concomitant woe. Nay more it is infinitely meaner to commit rum-selling to the vilest class of men than to do it ourselves.

Secret societies—ought the Christian world to have any opinion of their nature, and ought that opinion to be expressed? These are loud questions that stand knocking at your doors for an answer and refuse to away unanswered.

You cannot say that they do not concern you, or that they are unimportant. That I may aid you to answer this last question, permit me to submit a few statistics from the fraternities best known in this country, Odd-fellowship and Freemasonry; and also some special facts relating to Masonry in governments of the city and county of Worcester.

ODD-FELLOWSHIP.

The statistics from 1830 to 1875, show that there were:

Initiations	997,428
Members relieved	724,285
Widowed families relieved	97,065
Members buried	64,654
Paid for sick, funeral expenses, widows and orphans	$22,981,772
Receipts	59,850,774

That is, Odd-fellows, many of them poor men, have in forty years paid in thirty-seven millions seven hundred and sixty-nine thousand and two dollars more than has been paid out. This should make Odd-fellows pause. The present statistics:

No. of members	463,087
Receipts	$4,590,000
Members relieved	38,400
Widowed families relieved	6,000
Paid for relief, funerals, etc.	$1,590,000

Thus the Odd-fellows, many of them poor men, have paid in one year three millions of dollars more than has been paid out in this so-called charity.

Now if, instead of keeping up the order, they had relieved one another as men, they would have had six dollars for each of the half million of members and as much for charity as they have paid out.

The above figures are taken from an article in Johnson's Cyclopedia by Jas. S. Ridgeley, Grand Corresponding and Recording Secretary of the R. W. Grand Lodge of the United States.

The above figures represent only what is paid into the order directly. If we estimate the expense of balls, suppers and other convivial entertainments at an equal sum we shall probably not exceed the facts, as these entertainments are very costly. Allowing this estimate the members of this fraternity paid last year the sum of more than $9,000,000. A little more than one and a half millions went for so-called charity, the rest was swallowed up by the order.

FREEMASONRY.

It does not keep statistics of its so-called benevolence and we can only estimate it by the number of Masons and cost of initiation.

The members in the United States are	600,000
In the rest of the world	3,000,000
Initiations in the United States $25 each	$15,000,000
Initiations in the world	75,000,000
Annual expenses in the United States	6,000,000
Annual expenses of the world.	30,000,000

Contrast this with

FOREIGN MISSIONS.

There was contributed for foreign missions in North America in the year 1874	$2,268,000
In the world	6,990,220

Thus we see that Masonry costs the people of North America more than twice as much as they pay for the conversion of the heathen. That is, we spend twice as much to perpetuate pagan worship at home as we give to suppress it abroad; and Masonry costs the world four times what the world gives to spread the Gospel in heathen lands.

Take now the lowest ground and assume that Freemasonry is a harmless folly. What ought a Christian—a Christian minister—to say of a folly of this kind, which costs the world four times as much as all the missions to all heathendom. Take the true ground, that Masonry and its branches are destroying the churches of Christ; rendering our courts a laughing stock and our prisons sieves, and it becomes a crime about which we have no right to be silent.

THE CITY OF WORCESTER.

The relation of this city to the secret fraternities may be seen from the following table of statistics. It is presumed that this city is not peculiar in this respect and that a similar state of things exists in all the cities of the United States:

Chas. A. Pratt, Mayor, Odd-fellow, salary	$1,500 00
G. E. Boyden, Pres. Com. Council, Mason, salary
S. Hamilton, Clerk Com. Council, Mason	300 00
E. H. Town, City Clerk, Mason.	1,500 00
W. H. Barton, Treasurer & Collector, Mason	2,500 00
Chas. Marvin, Messenger, Mason.	1,100 00
Chas. A. Allen, City Engineer, Mason	1,400 00
L. H. Hammond, City Physician, Mason	700 00
D. H. Parker, Com. of Highways, Mason	1,900 00
C. H. Peck, Supt. of Public Buildings, Mason	1,200 00
R. H. Chamberlain, Supt. of Sewers, Mason	1,500 00
W. A. Washburn, As't City Marshall, Mason	1,600 00
E. W. McFarland, As't City Marshall, Mason	1,200 00
John W. Hadley, As't City Marshall, Odd-fellow	1,200 00
A. Atkinson, Capt. of Night Police, Mason, $2 50 per day
Ezra Churchill, Detective, Odd-fellow, $2 50 per day
Three Assessors, Masons	3,900 00
Simon E. Combs, Chief Engineer, Mason	1,200 00
Total	$25,900 00

Besides these there are A. R. Sprague, Sheriff, Mason; twenty-seven deputies, all Masons, and Benjamin Dunnell, jail-keeper, Mason, who probably draw as much more.

From the above statistics you will observe:

1st. That while only a small proportion of the voters of this city are Masons, yet nearly all the offices are filled and the salaries drawn by members of that fraternity, and that the people are taxed directly and largely for the support of these institutions. It will be easily seen that when the Masons or Odd-fellows make their grand entertainments or purchase costly presents for some of their members it is the people who foot the bill.

2d. It will be seen that the sheriff, marshalls, deputies and assistants, being nearly or quite all Masons, Masonic criminals have a chance for at least fair treatment. Should any of these officers give to a brother Mason that he was about to arrest "due and timely notice that he might ward off approaching danger," it would be because he was too good a Mason to be a good public officer.

3rd. Persons may believe as they will about the forces that produce this result, but the result itself none can deny, and it demands your earnest attention. There is not another monopoly so grinding, no other power so oppressive.

The speaker then read the following indictment of the secret orders. Of Freemasonry it has been proved: 1st. That its pretended antiquity, charity, etc., are frauds; that it is partial and unfair. It aims to help its members at public expense.

2d. Its ceremonies at the very best are silly, childish and absurd. At the worst they are profane, sacreligious and wicked.

3d. Its oaths under any interpretation, are abhorrent to every principle of honor and humanity, not to mention religion at all.

4th. It is a system of false and idolatrous religion; as much heathenism as the systems of Africa, India or China.

Of all other secret fraternities we know—

That they are fostered and supported by Masons.

That their rituals, oaths, etc., are identical in spirit and related in form to the parent society.

That their religious character is substantially the same with the parent organizati on.

That their adherents always stand by, aid and assist the Masonic fraternity.

Since these facts are known to so large a proportion of our people to what can we attribute the fact that Masons and members of other fraternities are permitted to hold office, sit on juries, and officiate as members and ministers of churches? I answer:

1st. To the fact that this evil has been, as was to be supposed, secret and hidden in its operations.

2d. That the demagogues and wire—pullers are the predominant force in political affairs—too often in church matters, and they of course favor whatever facilitates the practice of their arts.

3d. Ministers of the Gospel who ought to lead in this and all reforms, are often ignorant, are willing to remain so, and are followers instead of leaders in public opinion.

4th. Common Christians wait for the clergy; the clergy wait for the press; and while both are waiting Satan is tying their hands and lessening their power. John Browns are born but once in a thousand years, compromisers and worshipers of worldly success are spawned by thousands in every year.

WHAT THEN IS THE DUTY OF THE HOUR?

The lecturer here pointed successively to the pictures of Washington, Lincoln, William Lloyd Garrison and Gov. Andrews, and in an eloquence which no written statement can describe, urged all people by the memory of these men whom they delight to honor, to emulate their virtues in opposing the wrong and defending the right. He showed how Garrison was thrown into prison; was led by a rope round his neck through the streets of Boston, because he held that man could not hold property in man; because he said, "I will make no compromise. I will not suppress my convictions, AND I WILL BE HEARD." And he pointed to the wonderful triumph and vindication that he achieved. Such a triumph awaits all those who stand for the right regardless of the fear or favor of man.

The Illinois State Convention.

HELD IN THE COLLEGE CHAPEL, WHEATON.

"The Associated Churches of Christ" and Free Missions.

This important convention, heralded by many prayers, opened on Wednesday evening of last week. From the first meeting for prayer at 6:30 in the lower chapel, to the end, the Holy Spirit was manifestly present. Elder J. F. Browne, late of New Hampshire, touched a key to which every heart responded when he began the 97th Psalm, "The Lord reigneth, let the earth rejoice." The devotional meeting was continued after the Convention had assembled in the upper hall.

Bishop Milton Wright took the chair at 7:30 and called on Elder Parker Hurless, of Polo, to offer prayer. The invitation of the College church to the Association was read together with the letter of President S. B. Allen, of Westfield, yielding the Convention till next year.

Pres. J. Blanchard then addressed to the Convention a few words of welcome. He said:

I wish to say in behalf of the College church and the friends in Wheaton, we not only extend to you a welcome, but we hail your coming!

A few words as to the reason of our assembling. Let us refer back to another meeting in an upper room. The disciples of Christ were met and had fastened the doors against the world they were to win to Christ. The proposition which they were going to maintain was the same which we hold up to the world. Salvation by Christ alone.

Their struggle was the same as ours, opposing traditions which made void the law of God, and religious ceremonies invented by men which made their worship vain.

There they waited and prayed until suddenly there was a sound of a rushing, mighty wind and the place was shaken, and the tongues of fire descended and sat on each of them, being in number an hundred and twenty—hardly so many as are here. And this is what we want, the baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire; and we expect it.

This meeting has not been called as a mere Anti-masonic convention, but to displace everything and all measures that prevent the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ; to aid in uniting men against false worships and false gods. This is the reason we are here. This great work must be done; no one who examines the character of lodgery can deny its necessity; and the blessings that will flow to all mankind from it are beyond all estimation.

Elder Parker Hurless of Polo, said it was altogether unexpected his being called upon so soon. Still he would say a few words. He thought it should be an occasion of thanksgiving to God that in the last ten years since the first Anti-masonic meeting at Aurora, there had been so much progress made. The press was now fast becoming free to the discussion of this question and men were every where waking up to the importance of this subject and seeking light in regard to it. The same agency, the power of truth quickened by the Spirit of God, would soon overcome this great enemy against whom we are come up.

Rev. W. W. Ames of Menominee, Wis., the representative of the Wisconsin State Association, was introduced. He said he was reminded of the slavery times in this convention by the presence of Father Preston, with whom he used to be a coworker. He rejoiced that this is a Christian Association. Christ assures us that nothing shall be hid. The light of the sun cannot be shut up; so the wicked reflectors of Christ's light may try to hide his truth under a bushel, but it cannot be done. We must speak the truth in love; but we must speak it. Men who stood out strong in God were safer than the weak and vacillating. We must get euery church member every minister who is entangled in the lodge to come out and take a stand against it for Christ. To illustrate how the truth is gaining ground among the churches he said that when a few years ago he brought forward a resolution condemning secretism in a Baptist association, a minister said, "I'll fight that resolution, and fight it down. I'm a Mason and Oddfellow and ain't ashamed Bro. Ames should know it." That man has now left the lodge. He heard B. F. Jacobs preach a powerful sermon last Sabbath evening and learned from his own lips after meeting that he was opposed to the secret lodge, and a friend told him that Mr. Jacobs would not allow even the casual meeting of a Good Templar's lodge or red ribbon club in his Sabbath school hall, so earnest was he to exalt Christ only. The Secretary of the Baptist State Convention said, on reading the Moody tract, that he was heartsick in seeing young people fritter away time in secret societies. He afterward wrote a paper for the Convention against worldly amusements, in which he condemned these organizations. This paper will be printed and read by the Baptists in all the Northwest. We have got to suffer contumely and contempt a little longer, but the time will come when all will see that all secret societies are alike, as the alcohol in beer is like that in whisky.

Elder J. L. Barlow had been appointed to speak this evening, but on account of sudden sickness felt unable and put forward Mr. Ames in his place. He felt like using a few minutes, however, and spoke briefly in his pointed and popular style. He was glad to get to Wheaton. There was a healthful atmosphere about the place in which he always felt strong. He wanted to say to some who were with us in heart, but who do not say or do anything to prove it, There is a great battle raging. Jesus Christ is leader on one side, the Grand Master of Masons is on the other. God is against all wrong. Negative goodness is positive sin. To be with Christ is to be with his plans, bearing his arms, with his uniform on. It is an evil that men who will not stand in the breach, will not pay a dollar, claim to be Anti-masons. The world looks upon them in contempt. Men want to get along easy. "I thank God," one said, "that I never got into a church difficulty." We have a great deal of the "gospel of gush" now-a-days. Men say, Preach Christ. Do they know what Christ preached? how he denounced hypocrites? It costs something to tell men they are wrong, but some one must do it. God commands us to cry aloud. It costs something to do it. It cost Christ life and friends. We must count it all joy that we may be permitted to suffer in the name of Christ. The Elder then referred to the agitation in the Masonic ranks at the falling off in their number and revenue, and read from a prospectus in the last Voice of Masonry appealing for 10,000 subscribers, commenting on it sharply. He gave a number of incidents showing the progress of the reform, and closed by referring to those ministers who shut themselves from the light and are bulwarks of the reform. If we can get the ministers out of the way we can break down the lodges in six weeks.

The remainder of the evening was occupied in necessary business. Bro. I. R. B. Arnold was nominated secretary pro tem but declined because of the absolute necessity of leaving on the morrow. Elder J. F. Browne was then elected and the following committees constituted:

Enrollment: Prof. H. A. Fischer of Wheaton, and Rev. W. H. Chandler of Mendota.

Business: Elder J. F. Browne; Dr. E. R. Robinson, Mt. Palatine; H. L. Kellogg, Chicago.

Nominations: Isaac Preston, Lockport; E. A. Cook, Chicago; Rev. N. E. Gardner of Coleta.

Correspondence: Rev. J. M. Snyder, Wheaton; Philo Elzea, Marengo; Rev. Israel Brown, Olney.

After announcements and instructions to the enrollment committee the convention adjourned till morning.

THURSDAY.

After an earnest devotional meeting of an hour, Bishop Wright resumed the chair and Elder Barlow opened with prayer to God. Further committees were chosen:

Resolutions: Elder J. L. Barlow, Chicago; Rev. D. F. Baker, Sycamore: Rev. L. S. Chittenden, Westfield.

State Agency: Dea. Moses Pettengill, Peoria; Mrs. E. A. Cook, Chicago; Dea. Geo. G. Gurnea, Tonica; Dr. E. L. Sheldon, Union.

Church Co-operation and Free Missions: Bishop Milton Wright; Pres. J. Blanchard; Rev. W. W. Ames; Rev. D. P. Baker; Rev. J. M. Snyder; Prof. E D. Bailey; O. M. Brown of Oberlin.

A full understanding of the purpose of the last committee was gained in the discussion pending its appointment. In regard to the mission work Bishop Wright saidthat his position was well known. He should never assist in the formation of a missionary organization which should in any way interfere with the work of the mission boards of his church. But he conceived that the objects proposed by the appointment of this committee would in no wise be detrimental to mission work of any denomination opposed to the lodge.

President Blanchard explained his position to be in large degree to get help from independent churches and individuals in Masonic churches to aid in mission work in the South. He spoke eloquently for aid for Rev. Eli Tapley of Mississippi, and expressed hope that Prof. P. S. Feemster of Kansas could yet be supported in Christian labor. He did not believe in establishing a new sect, or working especially for any existing denomination, but to establish churches free from the lodge, letting each settle for itself what denomination it should join or whether it should be independent. The discussion revealed a harmonious feeling on the subject among the representatives of the nine denominations present and the committee was unanimously appointed.

Reports on State and local work being in order, H. L. Kellogg, Treasurer of the Association, read the following.

REPORT ON REFORM WORK IN THE STATE FOR THE YEAR.

In the absence of both our secretaries the duty of reporting the progress of our reform work in this State during the year falls upon me.

Hating and Embracing.

"I hate Freemasonry as bad as any man can; but I believe in letting it alone!" So said, in effect, a member of a Canada Presbytery of late; and then joined the lovers of the lodge in dissuading from his pulpit Rev. James Donaldson, who not only hates Freemasonry, but feels that his commission to preach the Gospel contain no clause permitting him to make peace with any enemy of his Lord.

In reality which does this Presbyterian minister hate most the lodge which he professes to hate, and against which he will not lift a finger, or James Donaldson—a brother in the Gospel ministry—against whom he will raise his hand and record his vote in driving him from his pulpit, and his family and himself into poverty and unmerited contempt? Will said Presbyterian minister and others of like "let-the-lodge-alone" policy, rise and explain?

These men ostensibly hate Freemasonry, and yet joyfully baptize and admit to Christian fellowship its lovers and upholders; and then turn around, and assist Freemasons in ostracising and crushing out their Christian brethren who cannot embrace what they can justify themselves in hating. If "consistency is a jewel" I for one would be glad to see it worn in a conspicuous position by these self-styled haters of Freemasonry, who are yet so ready to do her cruel work.

How to Make Seceders.

LETTER FROM A RENOUNCING MASON TO A FRIEND IN THE LODGE.

Dr. R. C. G.—

Dear Friend:—I think you are wise in not letting your zeal lead you into an argument in defense of Masonry. I can promise you that if you will discuss the subject you shall be completely routed. I know that I understand it reasonably well and am just as confident that you do not, from the fact that I know you so well as to feel sure that a man of your integrity and love of liberty, and justice, and truth would not remain connected with the institution. But in spite of your resolution not to argue, you allow yourself to draw a comparison altogether unjust to me. I do not take offense. I have been called "perjured wretch," "liar," "insane fool," etc., often, and all I ask is a chance to reply to these tender epithets to the face of the accuser. So of course you will let me examine your comparison just here. I now quote from our letter:

"I will say if I should take you by the right hand and pledge you that I would not repeat a confidential conversation I would stick to the text if it took the hair off, more especially if its repetition would not be of advantage to me or any one else, but would rather serve to lessen the confidence of my neighbors in me."

These are your words. Now to show you that the comparison is unjust. My promise was obtained under false pretenses. The W. M. assured me that the obligation contained nothing to conflict with my duty to my God, my country, my neighbor, my family, or myself, when in fact the observance of several clauses of the obligations will in many instances lead any man from his duty to all these. For instance, the promise to keep Master Masons' secrets; the promise to obey all due signs and summons; the promise to give a brother Master Mason due and timely notice that he may ward off approaching danger, etc., etc.

Confidential conversation indeed! If in that "conversation" you and I entered into a league contrary to the laws of God and of our country it is our duty to repent, confess the sin, and ask the forgiveness of our Maker and our fellow citizens.

But you are mistaken also in your second point in supposing that its repetition would not be of advantage to any one. The repetition of an ordinary "confidential conversation" might, it is true, be of no advantage to the public, but to spread the truths of Masonry broadcast is of inestimable benefit to the public. Men who are disposed to fool away time and money, wear the hoodwink and cable-tow, and bind their consciences with a set of unlawful and profane oaths, may know beforehand what they are to receive for all this. And the "Ancient and Honorable institution" must then stand or fall on its own merits, just as political parties and all business undertakings do.

You are just as much mistaken in your third point of comparison as in the first and second. My repudiation of the truths of Masonry has not lessened the confidence of my neighbors in me. Some of my Masonic neighbors are bitter enemies, but I am certain that the people of this community, as a mass, have as much confidence in my integrity to-day as when I was a Master Mason. However I do not try to shape my conduct according to my neighbors' opinions, but by the teaching of my Maker, and though I may often fall far short of his precepts, I have no doubt at all in regard to my course in this matter. I hardly think I have lost your confidence, for you say, "I hope you have a clear conscience, and while I do not approve of your opposition, I earnestly believe and hope it is prompted through pure motives." I thank you for this admission, and will say that I never did any work more gladly, nor earnestly, nor conscientiously than this in opposition to Masonry.

I have spoken many times to large audiences in Henry, Benton and St. Clair counties, and have sometimes lead in working the degrees publicly, and I know it has done good. I am in the fight for life, and though you now expect to "stick to the text" (obligations I suppose) "till it takes the hair off," I think you will yet find that the institution is, like the body of "Grand Master Hiram Abiff," so rotten that not only does the "skin slip from the flesh" but "the flesh cleaves from the bone." It is my opinion that as sure as slavery of the bodies of blacks has died, so sure must slavery of consciences of both whites and blacks decay. Right must and will triumph over wrong. It is a great pity that Masonry does not allow her advocates to defend her cause with argument. But she found in Morgan times that it was losings game.

I know from sad experience that you are an eloquent advocate of your political principles, and Dr. K. can testify that you know something of theology, but Masonry must win her devotees and conquer her enemies by silence. So mote it be. Hoping that you may yet be brought to the true light,

I am your friend,

John V. Baker.

Our Mail.

Mrs. A. B. Hubbard, Philadelphia, Pa., writes:

"I rejoice at the dawning in the East. God bless his own work there. Also I am glad of the victory at Wheaton over the terrible foe after a hard struggle. God be praised! I look and long, pleading for this city of churches to be delivered from Freemasonry, this monster of the nineteenth century, more to be dreaded than the beast or false prophet, having stolen more of God's good things to shine in."

J. W. Margrave, Salem, Neb., writes:

"When times grew so very hard, I was forced to let the Cynosure stop. Times are still very hard, but I feel that I must try to take it once more, if only for a short time. I cannot learn anything from any of the papers in regard to the operations of the Christian brethren who are opposing the lodge and its midnight work."

Mrs. L. E. Packard, Appleton, Wis., writes:

"There are many secret society people here. Masons, Odd-fellows Temple of Honor, Good Templars and I do not know how many more."

Fred. Lorenzen, Red Wing, Minn., writes:

"The German Evangelical Lutheran church throughout the United States is against the secret societies."

Rev. H. Gregory, Canandagua, N. Y. sends his renewal with two other subscriptions for a year each, and writes:

"I last year sent the Cynosure as a present to the first two men named above, and now I do the same again, but probably shall not hereafter. My work on earth is nearly done. God bless you in your noble work and prepare you for a place among the sanctified around the eternal throne."

E. P. W., Maplewood, Mass, writes:

"I have just received specimen copies of the Cynosure and wish to become further acquainted with your work. Was born in western New York almost in sight of Morgan's home, and am quite familiar with the leading features of the excitement at that day. Am thoroughly opposed to secret societies especially for Christians. Our money in this vicinity comes hard, and secret societies are plenty. I will do all I can to set the tide going in this place, as I hardly know of a man here who is opposed to such organizations from principle."

LESSON XLIX—December 8, 1878—THE CROSS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 23: 33-46.

33. And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand and the other on the left. Isa. 53: 12.

34. Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots. Acts 7. 60; 3: 17; Is 53: 12; Ps. 22: 18.

35. And the people stood beholding. And the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God. Ps. 22: 17; Luke 4: 23; Ps. 22: 7, 8.

36. And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar. Ps. 69: 21.

37. And saying, If thou be the King of the Jews, save thyself.

38. And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS.

39. And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. Ps. 69: 7, 26.

40. But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

41. And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss. Is. 53: 8, 9.

42. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom. Is. 53: 10, 11.

43. And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise. 2 Cor. 12: 4; Rev. 2: 7.

44. And it was about the sixth hour, and there was a darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour. Amos 8: 9.

45. And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst. Ex 26: 31, 33; 2 Chron. 3: 14.

46. And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said thus, he gave up the ghost. Ps. 31: 5.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." Gal. 6: 14.

BIBLE READINGS.

Luke 23: 33-46; Is. 53: 4-11; Ps. 22: 7-19; Mat. 9: 18, Acts 13: 32-41; Heb. 9: 24-28; Heb 10: 11-22.

[From S. S. Times Quarterly.]

CONNECTION WITH THE LAST LESSON.

After Jesus' last discourse and prayer with his disciples, he underwent the agony in Gethsemane; was betrayed; was taken before Caiaphas and the elders; then to Pilate; then to Herod and again to Pilate, who released Barabbas but delivered Jesus to mocking, scourging and death. Judas hung himself in remorse. Jesus was led away to Golgotha to be crucified. The record of these events is found Mat. 26 30 to 27: 34; Mark 14: 26 to 15: 23; Luke 20: 19 to 23: 32; John 18: 1 to 19: 17; Acts 1: 18 19. The place of the lesson is Jerusalem. Parallel are Mat. 27: 35-50; Mark 15: 24-37; John 19: 18-30.

LESSON NOTES.

33. "Malefactors:" Law-breakers, criminals.

34. "Forgive them:" Not so much the soldiers who were doing their legal duty, as his enemies, who had sent him to death. See also 1 Cor. 2: 8.

35 "The rulers:" The chief rulers of the Jews.

"Derided:" Made sport of.

"Christ:" Or, The Christ, The Messiah.

36. "The soldiers also mocked:" See Mark 15: 34-36; but mocking was not en tirely the purpose of the vinegar (John 19: 28 30).

37. "King of the Jews:" Referring to the writing mentioned in the next verse. Though he had the title, the Jews would not rescue him.

38. "Superscription:" Writing above. "Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew:" All three languages were then current in Jerusalem. Greek was the language of commerce, Latin of the courts, and Hebrew (not that of the Old Testament, but altered, somewhat like the Chaldee and Syriac) that of the Jewish homes.

39. "Which were hanged:" Hanged on their cross.

"Railed:" Or, Blasphemed.

40. "Seeing:" Since, or, Because.

"The same condemnation:" Condemned to the same punishment.

41. "We receive the due reward of our deeds:" We are getting back proper pay for what we have done.

42. "And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember," etc: The better texts read: And he said, Jesus, remember, etc.

43. "In paradise:" See John 17: 5-24; 2 Cor. 12: 4, 2; Rev. 2: 7.

44. "Darkness:" No solar eclipse, for passover was at full moon; nor can total eclipse of the sun last more than nine minutes.

PROMPTINGS TO FURTHER STUDY.

What was the customary method of crucifixion?

How many and what forms of the cross were used?

Why, probably, did Jesus refuse the draught of vinegar?

Who framed the superscription, and who objected to it?

What was the veil of the temple, its material, colors and decorations, its place and use, and what did its rending signify?

What reason is given in Scripture for Jesus' being crucified outside of the city?

When and where is Jesus to appear with penitent malefactors on his right hand, and impenitent ones on his left?

What passage shows that Jesus is to be king over all nations?

What passage that he shall be adored in many languages?

What miraculous signs, not here related, accompanied the crucifixion?

What other intervening thing besides the temple veil is stated to have been broken down by Jesus on the cross.

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

MANUAL OF THE ORDER OF THE EASTERN STAR.

Containing the Ritual, Symbols Lectures etc., of the four Degrees of "Adoptive Masonry;" Jephtha's Daughter, Ruth, Esther, Martha and Electa, profusely illustrated and handsomely bound.

Price.....$1 00

GENERAL ALBIAN TEXON AND FREEMASON'S GUIDE.

BY DANIEL SICKELS, 33°

The most perfect Masonic Monitor published in the United States. Embellished with nearly 800 Engravings, and Portrait of the Author, Containing Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow-Craft, and Master Mason, with Explanatory Notes and Lectures; with the Ceremonies of Consecration and Dedication of New Lodges, Installation of Officers, Laying Foundation Stones, Dedication of Masonic Halls, Burial Services, Masonic Calendar, Ritual for a Lodge of Sorrow, Masonic Trials, etc.

Bound in one extra large 12mo.....$2 50

SICKELS' FREEMASON'S MONITOR,

CONTAINING the Degrees of Freemasonry embraced in the Lodge, Chapter, Council, and Commandery, embellished with nearly 300 symbolic Illustrations, together with Tactics and Drill of Masonic Knighthood. Also, forms of Masonic Documents, Notes, Songs, Masonic duties, Installations, etc. By D. SICKELS; 32 mo. Tuck. Price, $1.50. Cloth, $1.

DUNCAN'S MASONIC RITUAL AND MONITOR.

PROFUSELY Illustrated with Explanatory Engravings, and containing the entire Ritual and work of the Order for the Seven Degrees, including the Royal Arch. Scores of Masons have privately admitted that this is a Standard Text-Book in the Lodge, and is strictly correct; but publicly it is not acknowledged as authority, though almost every officer of the Lodge makes use of it. Price in cloth, $2.50.

HACKEY'S MANUAL OF THE LODGE.

Or Monitorial Instructions in the Degrees of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft, and Master Mason, with Ceremonies Relating to Installations, Dedications, Consecrations, Laying of Corner stones, etc. Price, $2.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, NOV. 28, 1878.

Illinois State Convention.

We hear on all hands but one testimony concerning the meeting of this body, November 20-22, in Wheaton College chapel. Several gentlemen of character and standing who never have met with us before, among them two pastors of important Congregational churches, attended throughout, and express their delight in the character and tone of the Convention. The prayer meetings, as usual, were a principal feature. The aged veterans who saw with horror the government of New York bullied, badgered and defeated by the lodge at the death of Morgan felt as did the aged men who wept at the dedication of the new Temple on the ruins of the old.

The address of Bishop Wright was calm, clear, dignified and very forcible. The speeches by Rev. D. P. Baker, Rev. J. M. Snyder, W. W. Ames and others representing several different denominations were eloquent and earnest. Rev. J. L. Barlow prepared the resolutions, and a large number of venerable men spoke and prayed in the meetings.

The Association commended the union of all anti-secret churches inaugurated as "The Associated Churches of Christ," and a body of eleven good men were put in charge of the execution of the plan in connection with missions free from the lodge. The whole meeting reminded us of those gatherings where "the disciples were all filled with joy and the Holy Ghost."

A laudable zeal and purpose were manifested to enlarge the list of the Cynosure, and an able State agent, Rev. J. F. Browne, was appointed who will at once take the field in Illinois.

A Question of Duty.

A friend asks: "Is it just or proper for one whose conscience has driven him from the lodge to pay up all past dues and then ask a demit?"

Answer:—No. When the lodge took him in, it obtained his money on false pretenses, that is, swindled him; sold him secrets which they well knew were not secrets; and he owes them no more than the bird owes the serpent when she has escaped his fangs.

Again, a Masonic lodge being neither church nor state, nor any other legitimate organization, can impose no just obligations on any one; any more than a clan of conspirators or company of idolatrous priests. There is in Hindoostan a temple where monkeys are worshiped. If a dupe of that degradation and sin should get his eyes open to its turpitude, is he to pay them money to enable them to keep up the vile delusion, and ensnare others?

Again, if one think by paying up his dues and taking his demit, he will conciliate the lodge and be less persecuted by them, he will find himself utterly mistaken. The better he treats them, the worse they will hate to have him leave them, and the more they will seek to cripple and destroy his influence against them. Since Cain the spirit of false worship is the spirit of murder. It is the spirit of its father the devil, and he was a murderer and liar from the beginning; and any act or payment by which we recognize the lodge as any thing else than what it actually is, a club-house of Satan, is a sinful act. If the lodge is not a swindle and a lie, why does he leave it? If it is, why does he pay money to it. No. The good Baptist, Dr. Colver, was right when, after much agony about his Masonic oaths and obligations, whether they were binding, he discovered that all he had to do with these oaths was to repent of having taken them.

10,000 Subscribers. — We give twice as much to perpetuate pagan worship at home as to suppress it abroad.

—Our types were in error in giving the resolutions of the Wisconsin Convention. That expressing sympathy for Rev. W. W. Ames should read, "in being subjected to what seems to us most manifestly a malignant Masonic persecution." Also in the Worcester resolutions read, "virtually represented in our National Congress," in the resolution against Mormonism.

—Past Master Ronayne returned from Worcester Saturday night, and will visit Minnesota to attend the State Convention at St. Charles, He can attend a convention in Michigan at any subsequent date.

—On Monday morning after the National Convention the Ministers' Association of Worcester, attended by all the pastors of the city, gave the whole time to the discussion of the lodge. Past Master Ronayne was present, and by vote was requested to speak at length. His statements must have roused them to a closer examination of their duty on this vital question, and if we mistake not the New England churches will soon lose their dread of the lodge and arise for its quick destruction.

—Owing to some misunderstanding among the friends in Iowa respecting the location of their annual meeting, we have withdrawn the notice until further correspondence. Bro. Dorcas has some wise counsel in respect to the gathering in another column. He does not fix the day of the committee meeting at Cedar Rapids. We suggest that it be done by correspondence with the members of the committee, by the secretary.

From Secretary Stoddard.

Willimantic, Conn., Nov. 22, '78.

Dear K.:—I left Worcester this 6:15 A. M., and reached Putnam in time to take breakfast with brother and sister Buck. I was much refreshed with their good words and kind deeds, and on leaving found myself wiser and richer by four subscribers to the Christian Cynosure. Bro. Buck has recently been re elected to the State Legislature and that too, I am happy to say, without compromising his principles or withholding his testimony against the lodge, the dram-shop and other sins.

I find Bro. Hinman here, although as yet I have had only a glimpse of him as he "dodged around the corner" on his way to dinner. Near me as I write in Bro. Conant's office, is an ominous bundle that has just come in from the clothiers, which I am told contains overcoat, vest, etc., etc., and I feel a trifle desirous of securing an interview with Bro. H. before he becomes invested, lest it should work such a change in him that he could not readily recognize his friend in storm-stained garments. Bro. Ronayne, when he comes to New England again, may rest assured that he will find his candidate at the working of the second degree in Worcester, "duly and truly prepared." I begin already to see that "it helps a man to be a Mason."

I suppose that your columns will be full of convention news for the next two weeks, and will therefore make haste slowly to report the effect following as seen and heard in the few days immediately after the Convention in Worcester. There are several incidents worthy of note, but for the present I will only say, the effect was excellent. The secretists are confounded and the "profanes" filled with amazement. I hope the effect will be lasting and shall use my best efforts to make it so. It is raining fearfully and has been since early this morning. If it slacks I shall be off for New Haven on the next train

J. P. Stoddard.

The Iowa State Meeting.

Shiloh, Iowa, Nov. 19, 1878.

Editor Cynosure:—I wish to call attention of the executive committee of Iowa State Association to the fact that the time is near at hand when the anniversary of the association will take place, and that all should be done that can be to make it a success. If I mistake not there was a resolution, or at least a request that the executive committee meet at least some time before the annual meeting and see that every thing as far as possible be in proper shape. Now, whether I am correct or not, I would suggest that all the members of the executive committee meet at the Rapids, at the law office of A. D. Collier, at 2 P. M. To all friends of reform: Do your utmost to make the meeting the best in every respect that we have had. We must have a good man to represent us during the interval of our meetings or our labor will be partly lost. We must take stronger political action than heretofore or we lose much that we otherwise might accomplish. Come, then, prepared to do active work. Time is precious. Time is short; and what some of us do we must do quickly. Let every heart be engaged in prayer to God that his blessing may rest upon and crown our efforts with abundant success. John Dorcas.

OBITUARY.

Another pioneer died at the residence of his son, Preston Allen, in Decatur township, Marion county, Indiana, Joseph Allen, in the 85th year of his age. Joseph Allen and his wife Elizabeth were among the first settlers of what is known as the White Lick settlement, then a wilderness, having removed from the State of Ohio in the year 1822, fifty-four years ago.

Being born and raised a member of the Society of Friends he was a firm believer in their doctrines, often lamenting over the condition of the poor slave, the sinfulness of war and the evils of intemperance, and of late was a constant reader of the Cynosure, often using the expression that he could not see how a man professing to be a Christian could be a Freemason. Besides other reading matter he was a daily reader of his Testament until within ten days of his death. He was often heard speaking of that glorious company above, that mighty throng, and how he longed to be there, his wife Elizabeth having died two years ago. Preston Allen.

A daughter of Thos. Hodge, Esq., died at his residence, 56 Warren Avenue, Chicago, Tuesday, Nov. 19th, after a long illness. She was a young lady of intelligence and sweet, Christlike spirit, and the last message found her peacefully waiting. "Gently, without a tremor she fell asleep in Jesus, conscious and calm to the last."

THE CYNOSURE AT $1 50 A YEAR

FOR EVERYBODY

UNTIL MARCH 1ST 1879.

This great reduction in the price of the Cynosure is only for the winter months and is made for the purpose of encouraging every subscriber who loves the paper and the cause it represents, to make an earnest effort NOW, in the hope of making the Cynosure truly a mighty power for good, owned and felt in every village of our land, before which the hosts of darkness shall tremble and fall under the mighty hand of our God. Is not the cause a glorious one? Will not YOU be a co-worker with us, yea with God in this great work of enlightening the nation concerning the soul-destroying influence of secretism, which blights and withers everything that is dear to the patriot and Christian?

Illinois State Convention.

work it must be observed that the State has been without an appointed lecturer and agent the past year, Rev. H. H. Hinman, who had acted in that capacity for three years previous, having resigned at Streator, to undertake the lecture work in Wisconsin. The last Convention recommended the appointment of Rev. D. P. Rathbun, then laboring in Michigan, but his preference was for Missouri and Iowa, to ich field he was appointed in June at the annual meeting of the N. C. A. Although without a regular laborer in the State there has been a large amount of work done. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, agent and secretary of the National Association, has spent a month in southern Illinois in Washington, Randolph and St. Clair counties, where he met with great success in arousing the churches and securing aid for the Publishing House. He has also given one or more lectures in the towns of Lanark, Lostant, Sycamore and Tonica.

Past Master Edmond Ronayne has lectured here in Wheaton, in connection with the Dupage County Convention; in the Free Methodist church and in Carpenter Hall, Chicago; and has given a full series of expositions in Lostant, Kewanee, Wyanet, and in a Wesleyan chapel in the neighborhood of the latter place. It is needless to speak of the popular enthusiasm that has attended all these meetings, for there are many in this Convention who were personal witnesses of their wonderful effect.

Elder J. L. Barlow on his return from Canada lectured one evening in Carpenter Hall.

Rev. Edward Mathews, of Michigan, spoke in this hall last winter on his return from Iowa.

Rev. Philo Elzea lectured with good results in Kane, Kendall, Grundy, Lasalle, and DeKalb counties some two months last winter and spring.

Bro. I. R. B. Arnold of Sycamore, has lectured against the lodge and the false worships of which it is the modern type, and has exhibited with the sciopticon the disgusting nature of the Masonic initiation. His work has been confined to the northern counties of the State and has been conducted with great success in the smaller towns since last June.

A strong meeting was held by the Dupage County Association in the lower chapel of this College in August.

It will thus be seen that a large amount of effective work has been done by self-sustaining agencies during the past year at no expense to this organization, and the experience may be profitable in deciding our arrangements for the next year.

TRACT WORK, ETC.

It would be difficult to give the figures in regard to publications. A large number of copies of the Cynosure are taken in the State, and the tract work has had good patronage. At the late Inter-State Exposition in Chicago about 125,000 pages of tracts were distributed gratuitously and 1300 copies of the Illustrated Supplements and of the Cynosure were sold.

FINANCES.

Having no State agent no funds were raised for this branch of our work during the year. The last convention voted to pay Rev. J. P. Richards of Bowensburg, what could be collected on unpaid pledges, amounting to $25. The Treasurer endeavored to fulfill the wish of the Convention but has not yet succeeded in collecting the amount. It is not probable that anything can be realized on those old subscriptions now. If it be decided at this meeting to engage a State lecturer the proposition of the Wisconsin Association should have the first consideration, that one man be employed for both States $200 being raised there and $300 with us. This amount can quickly be raised in one hundred $3.00 shares.

This brief review presents the main features of the work in the State during the year. There has, beyond what I have mentioned, been a great advance toward the unity of Christians against all forms of lodge worship and in favor of entire separation from them. In no year has such progress been made since Antimasonry revived. The reasons which underlie this progress are

1st. The better understanding of the true spirit of the lodge, that it is devil-worship, the same pagan systems as enraged the furious Jehu and roused that mighty iconoclast Josiah to put forth the whole power of his realm to stamp out and destroy and make horrible these idolatries.

We have the same fearful foe. Let it be the prayer of this Convention that the Lord God of Hosts will raise up some holy power to march through the land with power from on high to stamp out with fury and indignation every semblance of this dreadful idolatry.

Philo Elzea of Marengo, reported in brief respecting his work of last year. He had gone out independently, had met the usual oppositon but believed good had been done. He expected to begin the work again in a short time.

Dr. Sheldon spoke encouragingly of the work in McHenry county; in its political features especially there was reason to believe that proper effort would soon give a wonderful success.

Rev. D. P. Baker, editor of the Free Methodist, and Rev. J. M. Snyder also spoke of many interesting and hopeful signs of progress that had come under their observation in their respective fields of labor.

The afternoon was given to the reports of committees.

The business committee to whom the financial matters were referred, reported the expenses of the convention merely nominal ($3.00) and recommended a hat collection to defray this amount and provide a small fund for correspondence during the year.

The committee on nominations reported, and after slight amendment the following officers were elected:

PRESIDENT: Rev. Samuel B. Allen, Westfield.

VICE-PRESIDENTS: Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Chicago; Rev. D. P. Baker, Sycamore; Rev. L. S. Chittenden, Westfield; Dea. Moses Pettengill, Peoria; Rev. D. S. Faris, Sparta; Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Geneva.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY: Thos. Hodge, Chicago.

RECORDING SECRETARY: Elder P. Hurless, Polo.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY: Prof. H. A. Fischer, Wheaton.

TREASURER: H. L. Kellogg, Chicago.

Time at this hour having been set aside for brief addresses from Dr. J. B. Walker, of Wheaton, and Elder J. F. Browne, of Wisconsin, Dr. Walker being introduced said he wished to say a few things respecting the Masonic oath. In taking this obligation to keep secret the proceedings of the lodge Freemasons place their oath above the legal oath. This had many proofs, but two were mentioned, that of S. L. Keith, of Belvidere, Illinois, the murderer of Ellen Slade, and Vanderpool, of Manistee, Michigan, who murdered his partner in business. The responsibility of those commonly called good men who remain in the lodge was pointed out. The worthless Masons who have something to gain in the lodge stay in it and attend its meetings, while men of character, disgusted may be with the proceedings, stay at home; they are thus made responsible for the rascality of the bad men who adhere and do the business. The only safe way is for good men to renounce all relation to the lodge. Masonry is anti-Christ, the anti-Christ. It is Masonic law that Christ's name shall not be mentioned. The Masonic oath is taken on a mutilated Bible. What a fearful charge!

Elder Browne spoke with great indignation and power upon a portion of Mackey's Ritualist where the Keystone of the Royal Arch with its legend, "H. T. W. S. S. T. K. S.," was made to illustrate the Scripture, "This is the stone which was set at nought of you builders, which is become the head of the corner." Acts 4:11. He referred to the work in New Hampshire and Maine where he had lectured. He had found the same Satanic, bitter foe in the lodge there as here. Our lecturers need to be careful to lay well the foundation of their work. They must show the blasphemy and idolatry of the lodge, and not deal too gently with it as an institution of good moral principles which may accomplish much good after all. This they could do from such books as Ronayne's Exposition. There can be no doubt of the character of Freemasonry from them. A Mason acknowledged to him, "There is but one opinion in regard to Freemasonry as revealed in that book," referring to Ronayne's Hand-book. We must be cautious about believing a Mason who edges out—who don't come out fairly and openly. A man who comes out honestly is soon known as a seceder. Once in a while men are foolish enough to try to defend the lodge. One case was mentioned of a Mason who tried to explain and defend the oath clause by clause as the speaker would repeat them. After getting through the oath he was asked about the farce of Hiram Abiff. "If that part," said he, "was acted as it should be, it would draw tears from your eyes!"

The committee on correspondence read several letters, among them brief but friendly communications from Rev. H. H. Hinman, now in New England, Rev. A. J. Bailey of Hennepin, and P. P. Chapman, Esq., of Farmington.

The committee on resolutions then reported through Elder J. L. Barlow. The report was discussed and adopted item by item as follows:

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, That, encouraged by the manifest tokens of the Divine approval during the past ten years of effort in our specific reform; the changed attitude of public opinion, once actively hostile or coldly indifferent; the decreasing strength of the lodges and the expressed fear of leading Masons, we hereby pledge ourselves to God and to one another to faithfully prosecute the work committed to our hands, in the assured hope of ultimate and glorious success.

Resolved, That we are both Christians and citizens; we recognize that there are responsibilities attaching to us in both these relations which must be intelligently and faithfully met if we would stand guiltless before God or the bar of our own consciences. As Christians we are so far as lies in our power, using all Scriptural means, to sever the worship of Christ in the churches from all alliance or affiliation with the worships of the lodges. As citizens it is our duty to do all that lies in our power to save the state from the encroachments of the lodge by electing to all offices men who are free to serve the state without dictation from or allegiance to any other power.

Resolved, That as Christians and citizens we are in favor of using both moral and legal suasion, to break down and utterly destroy the traffic in intoxicating drinks and that whatever other agencies may be engaged in this work we hold that the church should shake off all lethargy and lead in this reform.

Resolved, That we look upon polygamy, as practiced by the Mormons, and so long tacitly tolerated by our government, as a stench in the nostrils of all decent people, a disgrace to our nation and an offense to God, and we call upon our Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their utmost exertions to procure its outlawry and destruction in this country.

Resolved, That we most heartily congratulate the President, Trustees and Faculty of Wheaton College on Thanksgiving.

PHOEBE CARY.

O, men! grown sick with toil and care,
Leave for awhile the crowded mart;
O, women! sinking with despair,
Weary of limb and faint of heart,
Forget your cares to-day, and come
As children back to childhood's home!

Follow again the winding rills;
Go to the places where you went,
When, climbing up the summer hills,
In their green lap you sat content;
And softly leaned your head to rest
On nature's calm and peaceful breast.

Walk through the sere and fading wood,
So lightly trodden by your feet,
When all you knew of life was good,
And all you dreamed of life was sweet:
And let fond memory lead you back,
O'er youthful love's enchanted track.

Taste the ripe fruit of orchard boughs,
Drink from the mossy well once more;
Breathe fragrance from the crowded mows,
With fresh, sweet clover running o'er;
And count the treasures at your feet,
Of silver rye and golden wheat.

Go, sit beside the hearth again,
Whose circle once was glad and gay;
And if from out the precious chain
Some shining links have dropped away,
Then guard with tenderer heart and hand
The remnant of our household band.

Draw near the board with plenty spread,
And if in the accustomed place,
You see the father's reverend head,
Or mother's patient, loving face;
Whate'er your life may have of ill,
Thank God that these are left you still.

And though where home hath been, you stand
To-day in alien loneliness;
Though you may clasp no brother's hand,
And claim no sister's tender kiss;
Though with no friend or lover nigh,
The past is all your company—

Thank God for friends your life has known,
For every dear, departed day:
The blessed past is safe alone—
God gives, but does not take away;
He only safely keeps above
For us the treasures that we love.

Thanksgiving Day.

The truly pious and grateful heart is at all times and in all places thankful even for the common blessings of life. Some people never have time to thank God for food, for health, for home, for friends, for the thousands of mercies strewn along their pathway. Others, again, make every pressing care give place to the primary duty of first thanking God. Neither place nor circumstance deter them from such an obligation. Paul found time amid wind and waves of a raging sea to bow down and thank God that it was no worse. We should most certainly be thankful for even our common blessings. The Divine thoughtfulness is all about us for good, and keeps us whether we wake or sleep. We have been permitted to see earth yield up her fruits for another year. Granted that for some it may have been a year of deep sorrow, of adversity, of dark shadows with no silver linings, nevertheless, it has, for that very reason been the more full of spiritual helps and deliverances. Except the Lord had been on our side we had utterly perished. He has given us songs in the night, streams in the desert, and beauty for ashes. It is a mercy to be thankful for that we are not consumed, and a greater that, smitten by the rod, we can yet trust in him.

Again, there is an appropriateness in observing this day, for Thanksgiving is the oldest of the holidays. Full of goodness and gratitude, of food and shelter, of friends and associations, it looks back over nearly six thousand brief summers to its birthday, when "the morning stars sang together" over the new creation.

The Feast of Tabernacles was a Thanksgiving for harvests, and a season of social and sacred enjoyment. It occurred in the middle of August, as the "feast of ingathering" and corresponded in its characteristics very closely with our Thanksgiving, as Deut. 16:13-15 clearly shows.

In England, under Edward III., there was a national Thanksgiving after the battle of Cressy.

At another time a Thanksgiving of eight days was ordered by the Black Prince.

The noble young king Henry V. after the battle of Agincourt, when a few English had conquered many Frenchmen, in the first joy of victory collected his army about him for a thanksgiving, and there he repeated with them, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory, for thy mercy, and for thy truth's sake," and the remainder of the 115th Psalm.

The Puritans brought the custom to America. On December 11, 1621, the first Thanksgiving on American shores was celebrated at Plymouth. The colonists had not been quite a year on shore and had gathered one crop.

It was from twenty acres of corn, which turned out well, whereupon Governor Bradford proclaimed a Thanksgiving in the colony, and sent out four men to provide meat for the common feast, that the people "might after a special manner rejoice after they had gathered the fruit of their labors."

In 1630 a general Thanksgiving was appointed by the governor throughout Massachusetts, for the safe arrival of Winthrop and his party. In 1631 there was a Thanksgiving for the arrival of provisions.

Thus, in all ages and upon every fitting occasion, the generations of the past observed Thanksgiving. And it is well for us if we return thanks not only for our well-stored barns, for our continued health, for deliverance from disease and death, but, let us also be thankful for our aches, our pains, our afflictions, our sorrows. It is best so, or God would not have sent these purifiers. The loss of muscle is something, but the gain of grace is more. The bereaved heart is lonely for lack of a sweet presence gone heavenward, but a dearer Presence has crept into the bereaved heart. You have lost money, it may be in the failing banks, but you have a better hold on heaven and the true riches. You have less worldly honor, but the Giver of eternal life to as many as ask him has written your name in life's fair book. Every loss below has against it a greater gain above. Is it not so? Unhappy man that you are, if you cannot say, though the outward man perish yet the inward man is renewed day by day. Is it possible that you have only perishable good, and that while that slips away you grow ever poorer? Lazarus was happier than that. Be thankful if the reflections of Thanksgiving Day lead you to seek the unfailing compensation of religion.

Be thankful that this mortal shall put on immortality, and that death shall be swallowed up of life. It will give you power and peace to remember on this day the far off and yet near country of which you are a citizen only absent on a journey, nightly pitching your moving tent a day's march nearer home. Life has bruised you; think of the healing excellence of the world out of sight. Be glad and take the cup of salvation into the trembling hands of your faith, calling on the name of the Lord. Bless his holy name, and for all his benefits offer up a vow to be worthier of his goodness and more zealous in his work. —Ex.

"Thanksgiving Ann."

In the kitchen doorway, underneath the arch of swaying vines and dependent purple clusters, the old woman sat, tired and warm, vigorously fanning her face with her calico apron. It was a dark face surmounted by a turban, and wearing just now a look of troubled thoughtfulness not quite in accordance with her name—a name oddly acquired from an old church anthem that she used to sing something on this wise:

"Thanksgivin' an' de voice of melody."

So the children called her "Thanksgiving Ann;" her other name was forgotten, and Thanksgiving Ann she would be, now, to the end of her days.

The early breakfast was over. She had bestowed unusual care upon it, because an agent of the Bible Society, visiting some of the country places for contributions, was to partake of it with them. But while she was busy with a final batch of delicate waffles, the gentleman had pleaded an appointment, and, taking hasty leave of his host and hostess, had departed, unobserved from the kitchen windows; and Thanksgiving Ann's "Bible money" was still in her pocket.

"Didn't ask me, nor give me no chance. Just 's if, 'cause a pusson's old an' colored, dey didn't owe the Lord nuffin', an' wouldn't pay it if dey did," she murmured when the state of the case became known.

However, Silas, the long-limbed, untiring and shrewd, who regarded the old woman with a curious mixture of patronage and veneration, had volunteered to run after the vanished guest, and "catch him if he was anywhere this side of Chainy."

"Wa-ll, I come up with him—told ye I would—and give him the three dollars. He seemed kind of flustered to have missed such a nugget; and he said 'twas a jinerous donation—equal to your master's."

"Only three dollars out'n all der 'bundance!" she murmured to herself. "Well, mebbe I oughtn't to judge; but then I don't judge, I knows. Course I knows, when I'se here all de time, and sees de good clo'es, an' de carr'ages, an' de musics, an' de fine times—folks, an' hosses, an' table all provided for, an' de Lord of glory lef' to take what happens when the time comes, and no prep'ration at all! Sure 'nough, he don't need der help. All de world is his, an' he can send clo'es to his naked, an' bread to his hungry, an' Bibles to his heathen, if dey don't give a cent; but den dey're pinchin' an' starvin' der own dear souls. Well, 'tain't my soul! But I loves 'em—I loves 'em, an' dey're missin' a great blessin'."—London Christian.

Childrens' Corner.

Child's Thanksgiving Hymn.

BY MRS. M. F. BUTTS.

In the lovely spring-time,
Came the seed-sowing;
Fruit and grain were growing—
Fruit and grain in plenty,
Enough for all the living;
Now in cold November
Comes the glad Thank-giving.

How shall we thank thee
For thy constant blessing?
Low on our bended knees,
Sins and faults confessing?
Or in the sacred church,
Where the bells a-ringing
Call us to greet the day
With our joyful singing?

Prayer and song we bring thee;
But a heart of pity,
For the hungry, homeless ones
Who wander through the city—
Who wander through the fields,
And mourn that they are living.
In thy sight, O Lord,
Is the best Thanksgiving.

—Wide Awake.

The Kind Turkey-Man.

It was the evening before Thanksgiving.

The sun had gone down behind the hills of Greenville, leaving them cold and bare against the dull sky. The squirrels were safe and warm in their own little houses, cracking nuts for their Thanksgiving dinner. The trees waved their tall, bare branches in the biting cold, but they knew that their roots were sheltered by the kind earth. The cold wind shouted a merry "good-evening" to everything; as he rushed over the frozen ground.

He raced over the bare hills; the squirrels drew closer together, and exulted over their crowded storehouse; the trees bowed a stately good night, as he whisked away; but he calmed down as he met a little figure on the frozen road, and gave her time to draw her faded cloak tighter over her blue hands, before he rushed on again.

A wagon was heard. "Rattle, rattle!" Even the wagon is cold, the child thought, as she heard the loose spokes rattling in the wheels.

She stepped aside for the wagon to pass; the driver, a pleasant-looking man, stopped his horse, and asked her whither she was going.

"To the city," answered the child.

"To the city!" cried the man. "Why, you will never get there unless you are blown there, or I take you."

"Will you take me?" she asked, not eagerly, but like one accustomed to refusals.

"Now," said he as he put her under the heavy buffalo robe, "what's your name?"

"Mary—only Mary," she answered hastily.

"Mary," said the man softly, more to himself than the child, "I wish it hadn't been that."

"Why, there's lots of Marys," said the child.

"Yes, I know it," he said. "I had a little Mary last Thanksgiving. I—I don't like to see any one named Mary in trouble."

"I aint crying," said the child, smiling, "because I'm in trouble, but 'cause I'm so cold. I ought to have trouble, Granny says."

"Ought to have trouble, hey!" said the man, stopping his horse and drawing from under the buffalo robe a can of hot coffee. "That hasn't been off the stove more than five minutes," he said, as he filled a little tin cup and handed to her. "Take that and drink it to your Granny!"

"It is very nice," she said, when she had drank it all. She did not say, I have tasted nothing before to-day. Why should she when there had been so many days like this in her short life?

The man replaced the can, pulled the robe up even with her chin, and told the horse to "get up" and "go along;" then he whistled awhile; then he said, "It is mighty cold. I hope it will keep so!"

"O, don't!" exclaimed the child, "'cos it makes turkeys cost so much poor folks can't have any."

"Don't you care anything for me!" cried the man pathetically; "here's my wagon full of turkeys."

"I didn't know you were a turkey-man," she said gently.

"Yes, I am a 'turkey-man,' and I think even poor people can afford to buy a turkey once a year, if they are high. The turkey-men have been waiting a year for this day."

There was a twinkle in his eye she did not see; he looked down into the little pale face. "I am afraid you don't care for the turkey-men!" he said soberly.

She hung down her head, started to say something, but stopped.

"Well, what is it?" he said, laughing.

"I do like you," she answered earnestly; "but the poor people—I have known them always."

They rode on for a while in silence. The hot coffee had worked wonders; the blue little hands had stopped shaking, and the child smiled as she saw the city lights in the distance.

"Now you are a little more comfortable," said the turkey-man, "let us hear where you are going, and what your other name is."

"My name is only 'Mary,' and I am going to find my cousin."

"Nonsense!" he said, a little sharply. "Of course you have got a name."

"They call me 'Mary Rent,' but I hate it, and I won't have it!" she cried, passionately.

"Why did they call you that?" he asked, gently.

"'Cause my father ran away, and left me in Granny Cole's house, when I was little. He pinned a paper on my dress, that said on it, 'Left to pay the rent.'"

The turkey-man whistled, and asked if Granny Cole were good to her.

"Pretty kind," said the child, wearily. "Anyway she didn't 'spise me like Sally did."

"Who may Sally be?" asked the turkey-man.

"She is Granny Cole's daughter."

"Did Granny Cole send you alone to the city?" said he, watching her suspiciously.

"She told me the other day," said the child mournfully, "if ever I come home and found her gone, to go to the city and find my cousin. Yesterday she sent me off with Sally, an' when I come Sally ran away from me, an' I couldn't find Granny."

"Are you quite sure you can find your cousin?"

She looked up in his face, and laid her thin hand on his sleeve.

"I never saw my cousin," she said calmly. "If Granny has run away from me, I haven't anybody I know."

"Why, then, did you come to the city?" said the turkey-man, wondering where he could leave her.

"I know the city best," she said; "Granny used to live there till a week ago. It is so dark in the country when you have to stay alone! There are the market-men—see how bright they are!"

It was the night before Thanksgiving, in the city as well as in the country; the markets shone as they always do in the evening before the great feast. Never were garlands more green, never apples more red, or gobblers more plump.

The turkey-man drove up and stopped.

"Here is as far as I go, little one," he said, as he lifted her out and stood her in the bright light of the market.

She was a pretty child, but pale now, with blue lips and shaking hands.

"Poor little thing!" he muttered, "I wish they hadn't named her Mary;" and he entered the market.

The market men beamed on everybody. They rubbed their hands as customer after customer vanished with the cold form of some kind of fowl neatly covered all but its feet, in brown paper.

It was growing late; the turkey-man had sold out; he only waited to get a hot supper before he started for home. He had been thinking entirely of dollars and cents; but as he walked out of the market he thought of his home; his wife waiting alone for him in the great white house, and his little Mary safe in God's home above—he had forgotten the homeless child left alone outside the market.

A heavy hand was laid on his shoulder.

"Stand back a moment!" whispered a voice. He looked up, and saw a large policeman watching a child at a barrel of red apples.

It is his little fellow-traveler.

"That's a sharp youngster!" half laughed the policeman, under his breath. "This sort of thing is going on here all the time. Nothing is safe for a moment."

The little blue hand was already on an apple. It faltered a moment, then grasped it tightly, then dropped it.

She hid her face in her hands. The turkey-man stepped up to her and touched her shoulder gently. She had not seen him; but without looking up, the child knew who it was—it was the only friend she had.

"I couldn't do it! O, I couldn't!" she sobbed. "But I'm so hungry!" and she fell against the barrel.

The stars were shining cold and clear. The turkey-man's wife was looking out, and wishing the thermometer could go up, without the price of turkeys going down. "It is so cold for John riding from the city alone!" she said to herself. She opened the door, hoping to hear the wagon; but the cold wind sent her back to the blazing fire. She thought of a year ago, when she did not sit waiting alone. She imagined she heard the little voice, though it had been hushed nearly a year—how plainly she saw the sweet face, though it had been covered so long! She wiped the tears from her eyes as she heard the rattling wheels; John must not see her sad. She opened the door, holding the lamp high above her head.

The turkey-man came in, with something wrapped in the buffalo-robe; he laid it on the big dining-table. "Don't say no!" he cried; "let us do something for Mary's sake, this Thanksgiving!"

"Are you crazy?" she exclaimed, as he uncovered the pale face.

"Wait till I tell you all," said the turkey-man.

When he had told his story, he said, earnestly, "How could I go to church to-morrow and thank God for his care of us, if I, with no little one to care for, had left this child alone in the great city?"

"You did right, John," said his wife; "you always do."

With these words, the woman—good, practical soul!—hastened to wash the little girl's face and hands. Then she warmed and comforted her, while the kind turkey-man went to take care of his horse.

"I remember this house," said the child, as she looked out of a large blanket before the bright fire. "I saw it one day with Granny Cole; I stopped and looked through the fence, and threw stones at the turkeys. I didn't know he was a kind man then. Granny hates rich men. I wonder where Granny is. I'm sorry I threw the stones—but they wasn't so very big." The little head fell lower and lower; the pale lids closed; the little hands grew quiet; but the little voice repeated in sleep. "I didn't know he was a kind man."

Home and Farm.

How to Live Cheaply.

At the outset, we would say, that the question of how to live cheaply, does not concern the men alone who earn a dollar a day—in fact such men are apt to find out the secret for themselves by an experience more sad than scientific. What we have to say is more particularly directed to those who earn from two to four dollars, or who are in a small business without other means of support.

The great secret of living cheaply is to buy only what you imperatively need. Expensive furniture is frequently purchased simply to prevent a housekeeper from appearing close or mean. This is a mistaken notion. No man who is earning a small salary, will be considered mean, because his house is plainly furnished. None but fools and those who are known in the slang phraseology of the day as "fast," hold such views, and the less regard a sensible man has for the opinions of such people, the better he will get along in the world. A little experience will teach any one that plain, substantial furniture brings quite as much comfort as that finished with the most elaborate carving and covered with the most elegant upholstery.

As with furniture so with clothing and other articles of actual necessity. Purchase in accordance with your ready means, and you will make as respectable an appearance—your status in financial and business matters considered—as does the millionaire of Murray Hill or Brooklyn Heights. The saying that the lowest priced goods are always the dearest in the end, is not true in regard to all. With a person amply able to buy what he pleases, it may be true; but the man who spends all his available money on a pair of extra fine trousers may be obliged to wear them out before he is able to buy a coat to match them. There is a deal of nonsense talked about wearing "imported goods." Some people fancy that they are not even respectably dressed unless they wear cloth manufactured on the other side of the Atlantic. There can be no greater mistake. There are now very few cloths manufactured abroad that cannot be duplicated by the products of our own looms; and, as is well known, garments made from the latter goods cost little more than half as much as those made from the former. Many low-priced articles wear as long as high-priced ones, and in the case of a man with small means, or uncertain prospects, nothing can be more unwise than to lay out large sums of money on expensive clothing either for the sake of appearances or from mistaken notions of economy.

Again, with all whose income is limited it is of the first importance in regulating the affairs of the household to buy only wholesome food. Pastry of most kinds cannot be classed as wholesome food and though its regular consumption may not be found injurious, yet it must be considered as generally detrimental to health—the generator of dyspepsia and headaches. Young housekeepers especially should be warned against the imprudence of buying more of a perishable article of food than is required for immediate use. By a little calculation and watching for a few weeks you can tell very nearly how much you really need for a day or a week's supply. Never, if you can possibly avoid it, keep a butcher, a baker or a grocer's account. The merchant you deal with may be ever so honest, but all dealers who give credit must of necessity charge more for goods credited, than for such as they sell for cash, in order to cover losses by bad debts. Moreover, if you are running an account, it is so convenient, that you are almost certain at times to buy what you do not need, and what you would not buy had you no running account.

There are men and women in this world who, seeming to get along slowly, are seldom or never heard to boast or complain. They live plainly but comfortably and win respect of all who know them. They are students in the science of living and in the end graduate with honors. They are contented with enough, and when more than enough has been earned by toil and saving, then, and not till then, do they indulge in the luxuries of life. Such people if overtaken by sickness or adversity are not at a loss to obtain the means of living. They really enjoy life and find more happiness than many who make a greater display and live in the midst of luxury.—Brooklyn Times.

How many names for the ten thousand list next week?

Illinois State Convention.

the success achieved in providing for its debt and on the victory God has granted it over its enemies; that we recognize in the college a great, an efficient and a necessary helper in our reform, and that we commend it to the friends of true education as an institution giving thorough teaching and earnest Christian training to its students, and that we will give it our prayers and so far as consistent our influence and our patronage.

Resolved, That the large number of papers now open to the discussion of the character of secret societies is cause of thanksgiving to God, and should encourage the friends of reform to avail themselves of the agency to scatter wide the truth against the secret orders of the land.

Resolved, That in the Christian Cynosure we have a publication worthy of the patronage of all Christians who pray for the kingom of Christ in the earth.

Resolved, That the self-sacrificing devotion of Anti-masonic ministers on mission fields, should stir up the friends of truth to hearty co-operation with them in promoting the Gospel free from the taint and poison of the secret fraternities.

Whereas, The courts of justice and public offices are largely under secret society control, therefore

Resolved, That earnest political effort should be opposed to secretism; and

Resolved, That the right of challenge of jurymen because of membership in secret orders should be urged when jurymen are likely to be influenced by their secret obligations.

Resolved, That we assure our loved and venerable brother, Pres. Blanchard, of our deep and hearty sympathy in consideration of the fierce and malicious persecution through which he has passed on account of the uncompromising and fearless stand which he maintains for truth and Christ against the lodge and its Grand Master, the devil; that we appreciate the great and invaluable service he has, under God, done our reform, and that we pledge him our most hearty support in his defense of right and truth.

The committee at a later period presented the following which were adopted:

Resolved, That we believe the practice by professed Christians of worldly amusements indicates a want of piety and is very detrimental to the work of evangelizing the world. We therefore commend those churches which oppose such customs. We furthermore believe that the raising of money for church purposes by fairs and festivals is an evil, not only because it is a resort to unworthy methods but also because it destroys the more honorable motives of Christian benevolence and liberality.

Resolved, That this association give a vote of thanks to Bishop Wright for his noble and eloquent address and request the publication of the same in the Cynosure.

To the second Rev. C. C. Foote of Detroit, Mich., responded in a ringing speech. He said he wished to call attention to the worship of the lodge. The question is, Is there such a worship? He was sorry to say there is. This worship he would describe under different heads:

1st. It is a Christ-repudiating worship. He knew a case where a man was called on to pray in the lodge, and forgetting for the moment where he was he began to pray in the name of Christ. Immediately the gavel came down and he was stopped and informed that it was contrary to the rules of Freemasonry to name the name of Christ in the lodge.

2d. It is a worship of darkness. God in his Word describes himself as dwelling in effulgent light. At the creation God called the light day; the darkness he called night. Of himself the Scriptures are full of reference to the light that is about him. He is clothed in light. Christ is the true light, which lighteth every man. Masonry does not own Christ, the light of the world. Its worship is not a worship of Christ, but of darkness.

3d. It is a lying worship. The speaker had heard Dr. Healey, formerly of the Tabernacle church, Chicago, and later President of Streight University, New Orleans, referred to as a Mason on this floor. Mr. Healey had told him in a conversation that he was not a Mason. President Blanchard explained his reference to the fact, saying that Healey acknowledged to him in his (Healey's) study that he was a Knight Templar, and produced his ritual with the confidential remark that he did not show it to everybody. Mr. Foote.—Well, he did not show it to me.

4th. It is a bloody worship. The terrible oaths of Freemasonry prove this, as well as the actual cases that have been brought to light.

5th. It is an incendiary worship. He had preached in a pulpit in Michigan where the building had been fired three times by a Masonic faction. He had preached in a pulpit where a cup of cold water being given to the minister, it was mysteriously exchanged for a cup of poison. A mouthful was taken, but suspecting foul play he spit it out.

6th. It is a persecuting worship. He had preached in a pulpit where the minister had received a package containing a halter, a bullet, and a package of poison, and a note saying, Take your choice.

8th. It is a murderous worship. A young Freemason had told him that Morgan deserved to die for revealing Freemasonry and he would have helped dispose of him. He had preached in the Masonic temple in Leroy, New York, from whence a company of one hundred renouncing Masons had come proclaiming to the world that Morgan had been murdered in accordance with Masonic law. He had heard Morgan referred to as having been killed. He would say Morgan was murdered.

9th and last. It is a hell-bound worship. He read a brief extract and continued, an adhering Mason is sure of hell. I believe it and can prove it.

He had read the call for prayer for this meeting that the spirit of God might be present and had felt moved to join that prayer and come to put in his testimony for Christ.

The discussion proceeded, taking a political turn. Father Preston of Lockport, objected to being bound by the resolution to never vote for a Mason. He remembered the great slavery issue was not settled yet and could not commit himself. Revs. D. P. Baker, J. M. Snyder and others followed, taking strong and radical ground that we can prevail nothing in politics until we draw the line on every adhering Mason and refuse to vote for him. Dr. A. H. Hiatt said that under the interpretation of some of the speakers he could not vote for the resolution. He took the ground that Masonry was not a government; that its obligations were profane and spurious and we should have no regard to them. He never wished to vote for a Mason if possible, but there might be an instance where he should be constrained to do so. President Blanchard explained his view of the resolution that it bound no one, and gave his experience in this and in the abolition reform. He would not bind his conscience in the matter.

The consideration of the resolutions was not finished and the committee was instructed to present the unadopted part of their report in the morning.

The evening opened with prayer meeting led by Elder Barlow. At its close Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Vice-president, took the chair at the request of Bishop Wright. The congregation sung "O for a thousand tongues to sing," and Rev. Geo. R. Milton, of Geneva, led in prayer.

Rev. D. P. Baker of the Free Methodist, was the first speaker. He said he had come to this convention to see the veterans, to get his sabre sharpened, and throw in a little influence against error. He did not understand that God had called us to denounce the men who were in these secret societies, but their principles, and, besides, we must put the truth against error. Put the truth before the people and you can convince them. God is the author of truth. Put it in contrast with the lodge and common sense will supply the rest. People will see that the religion of the Bible is essentially different from that of the lodge; will see that this reform is of God. We need to put before the world a better sort of religion than is practiced in the lodge. People who can say that a man who can drink wine out of the skull of his fellow and say he is a saint of God; who can say that he can swear the cut-throat oaths of Freemasonry and yet call him a saint of God, must be shown that there is a difference. We must help them understand that there is a better sort of religion. The speaker was glad this was named a Christian association. Let Christ be the great mainspring of all its work.

Elder J. F. Browne, to whom had been referred the interests of this paper now occupied a short time in making a very effective plea for its list. He was supplemented briefly by Mrs. E. A. Cook. Over fifty subscriptions were received. The Reform Song by Dea. Alex. Thompson of the College church, was then sung to John Brown, the congregation joining in the chorus.

Bishop Wright was then introduced and the large audience listened with the deepest interest to his able and logical address on the "Relation of the Christian Church to Secret Societies." His address will be printed in full as requested subsequently by the convention.

Rev. J. M. Snyder of the Wesleyan church, Wheaton, made the closing speech. He spoke with great enthusiasm on the awakened attention throughout the land. That the churches were coming up to the measure of their duty in this reform. He rejoiced in the help that was coming from the United Brethren in Christ, the United Presbyterians, the Lutherans, and others. But we have a greater help than all these in the fact that we are right. This truth gives us the battle. We have God the Father, Son and Holy Ghost for strength. Let us not fail to put our trust in him. He will bring about this reform in his own way, with men or without them, with organizations or with none. If there was not a man to oppose Freemasonry God could find one; he would raise one up.

The Enrollment Committee reported five States and nine religious bodies, beside independent churches, represented on the roll; and the audience dispersed after singing and the benedic tion.

FRIDAY.

The morning prayer meeting was conducted by Rev. C. C. Foote, of Detroit. Rev. Geo. R. Milton, Vice-president, took the chair at its close and presided during the day with excellent judgment.

The remaining resolutions occupied the forenoon. That on Wheaton College called out remarks from a number of speakers, among whom were Professors Fischer, Hiatt and Lumry, Rev. L. S. Chittenden, John McNabb and others. Rev. W. W. Ames spoke of the Scandinavian work in the Morgan Park Theological Seminary, cared for by Professor J. A. Edgren. He found several Scandinavian churches in Wisconsin whose preachers had been educated at the seminary, all taking good ground against the lodge. Five hundred converts had been baptised in five years by these students.

O. M. Brown of Oberlin, said that a few years ago the good people of that place found the Masons were getting everything in politics into their hands. They went to work, attended the caucuses and the polls and now an adhering Mason cannot hold an office in Oberlin.

In the afternoon Rev. W. H. Chandler of Mendota led a half-hour prayer-meeting before the resumption of business.

The committee on State Agent presented their report which was adopted, as follows:

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON STATE AGENT.

First. We recommend that this Association thank the Wisconsin State meeting for their offer in regard to a State agent. But in view of the great urgency of the work in our own State

Second. We recommend that the Association employ a man to give his whole time and energy to the State of Illinois.

Third. We recommend that the Association raise funds for the expenses of the State work during the year which closes with our next annual convention to the amount of $1,000 in shares of $2 00 each.

Fourth. We recommend that subscriptions for shares be started here at this meeting.

Fifth. We recommend that we pay our State agent $2 00 per day and traveling expenses for the time that he is actually engaged in the work.

Sixth. We recommend that the duties of the agent be to lecture, preach, sell publications, take subscriptions for the Cynosure and raise funds for the State Association.

Seventh. We recommend that the agent make a full report of his work to the Corresponding Secretary of the Association every month, and that the same be reported in the Cynosure.

Eighth. We recommend J. F. Browne for that agent.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Later in the afternoon Elder Browne accepted the appointment of State Agent.

The supplimentary resolutions were introduced by the committee requesting the publication of Bishop Wright's address, etc.

The expression of members on the subject of worldly amusements was very unanimous, that they were detrimental to Christian life. A vote of thanks was also given the Chicago Tribune for the fairness of its reports. It was remarked by the chair that Inter-ocean telegram was "unjust and very ignoble." It was understood that their author was N. E. Gary, brother of the Senior Warden of Wheaton lodge, and leader of the Good Templars in the Wheaton M. E. church.

The report of the Committee on Church Co-operation was heard with the greatest interest and was considered with great care. The report reads thus:

The Committee on Church Co-operation and Missions, respectfully report and recommend for adoption the following:

Resolved, 1st. That this State Christian Association repeat and reaffirm our endorsement and fervent commendation of all Christians and Christian churches who "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness" in the lodges of this land "but rather reprove them."

2nd. We commend the effort being made in Mississippi and elsewhere to form a national league or alliance of all such Christians and churches as exclude secret orders, and those who, after gospel labor, refuse to withdraw from their oaths, obligations and worships.

3rd. We recommend that the name of such league or alliance be: "The Associated Churches of Christ;" and that local associations be formed, where, and as fast as possible, in communion and fellowship with the national "Associated Churches of Christ."

4th. We recommend that all members of pro-secrecy churches, or churches fellowshiping Freemasons and members of similar lodges, and all independent churches not already committed to missions free from lodgery; organize as speedily as possible for missionary work, in such form as suits them best.

5th. And we especially recommend the the support of Rev. Eli Tapley and Prof. Paul S. Feemster as missionaries among the ex-slaves and white population of the South.

6th. That while we adopt the foregoing resolutions, and suggest and endorse the work called for by them, we distinctly disclaim all desire or purpose to form a new denomination or to interfere with such churches and denominations as are free from the lodge-leprosy, or to weaken or war on any societies or boards of missions whose churches are free from the idolatry of the secret orders; our sole purpose being to endorse and commend impartially, all Christians and churches who worship Christ in sincerity and keep themselves unspotted from the idolatries of "the god of this world."

7th. That ——— be a committee to carry the above resolution into effect, with power to add to their number and act on their own responsibility.

N. B.—For names of committee of eleven see records.

A letter just received from Rev. E. Mathews, of Michigan, was read during the discussion, expressing regret at not being in the Convention, and stating that his whole circuit "goes United Churches in Christ."

Rev. W. W. Ames remarked that there were already several Baptist churches in Wisconsin which had taken the ground of separation from the lodge and they were ready, he believed, to unite on this basis.

Bishop Wright said that the idea embodied in the recommendation of the committee is that churches be associated in this particular work, not that local associations be formed It is not necessary to bring in the Wesleyans, Free Methodists, United Brethren, United Presbyterians and others who are already occupying this ground, but in localities where these testifying churches do not exist it may be advisable to form an association, in which, however, each church may retain its denominational distinctions and relations.

Bro. O. M. Brown of Oberlin, was given time to explain the distinguishing features of the foreign mission work with which he was associated. He said no one could doubt that the formation of the American Board was of God notwithstanding its pro-slavery views and conservatism on the question of polygamy. When it was formed missions were regarded in a different light than now. Judson and Newell were considered fanatics when they left for India. Since that time there has been a great change. Then the missionary must give up home, friends, and country, probably forever; now it is only a residence of five years abroad, a pleasant journey, expenses paid and $1500 a year. There was no self-denial in comparison. In an address several years ago Pres. Merriam, of Ripon, said that men called of God need not wait for mission boards, but go in God's name to the heathen. He gave the interesting particulars of the work introduced by Mr. Norton at Elichpoor, India, the capital of the great Mogul empire, once having a population of 250,000. Five other workers have joined him. Mrs. Mumford's work just beginning at Philippopolis in Bulgaria was also described, and her labors, faith and peril during the late terrible war.

The report was adopted as a whole and the following committee appointed to carry its provisions into effect, acting on their own responsibility, in such a manner as they may deem wisest:

Bishop Milton Wright, President J. Blanchard, Dr. J. B. Walker, Revs. J. M. Snyder, J. L. Barlow, J. F. Browne, Geo. R. Milton, Dr. A. H. Hiatt, Amos Wheeler and E. B. Thompson.

The Convention then accepted the invitation of the Faculty of the College to view the College building.

In the evening business was resumed after prayer-meeting, Dr. A. H. Hiatt in the chair. The next annual convention was appointed to be held in Westfield. Elder Browne then brought forward the Cynosure subscription list and soon reached 100. In connection a subscription was taken for Mr. Ronayne's new book and 23 names were taken. Rev. J. F. Snyder was asked to call for subscribers for the State agency work and 60 shares were soon taken. To complete this fund, H. L. Kellogg, Mrs. M. E. Cook, Thomas Hodge, Dr. E. L. Sheldon and Dr James Robinson were appointed an executive committee.

Brief addresses were made by Oren Sholes, John McNabb, Prof. E. D. Bailey and President Blanchard. The two latter were among the most eloquent speeches of the convention, their inspiration being the last action of the afternoon. We had come together to begin the great work of separating the churches of Jesus Christ from the false worships of this world. We have not come together to form a new denomination, to add another name to the list of sects, but we have inaugurated a movement which under God will ally the various denominations in one phalanx of light against the darkness of false religions. We have raised up a standard to which all true followers of Christ may rally. We have set free the truth of God, and in the "Associated Churches of Christ" given hope to the world. The distinction between God-worship and the devil-worship must be kept clear, as we have it in the Bible from Abel and Enoch, Noah and Abraham down to the Messiah. We must stand for Christ, and on this simple, naked principle unite the people of God.

The congregation sang "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," with an enthusiasm born of the hour, and the convention adjourned.

Illustrated Supplements.

A large number of these supplements, containing the signs, grips, pass-words etc., of Freemasonry Odd-fellowship, Knights of Pythias and the Grange, have been printed, and deserve a general circulation. They are sent post paid at two cents each, and by express (charges not paid) at 75 cents per hundred, and 1000 for $6.50.

News of the Week.

—Several car loads of coal have just been sent from Colorado to Pittsburgh, Pa. It is being taken there as an experiment. It is believed that it is superior to the Pennsylvania coal, and that it will pay to ship it there. This looks like carrying coal to Newcastle.

—A terrible coal mine explosion occurred at the Sullivan coal mines, Sullivan, Ind., last Thursday. The explosion was caused by the ignition of a lamp's flame with gas, and a terrific velocity was added by the fact of there being eight kegs of powder below. There were thirty men in the mine at the time. The scene beggars description. There were thirteen killed outright, eight or ten wounded, and many of the others are suffering so from suffocation that their lives hang by a thread.

—The Executive Committee of the Society of Friends on Indian affairs was in session in Cincinnati last week. Delegates were present from New England, New York, Pennsylvania and the Western States, including Iowa and Kansas. They reported some 16,000 Indians under their care at seven Agencies at the beginning of the year, since which time three Agencies have been taken from them and placed in charge of agents nominated by politicians. Of those remaining under their care fair progress is reported in education and agriculture, and they consider that their agents have done their work well. The object of the meeting was to protest against the action of the Secretary of the Interior, in taking the three agencies from the care of Friends and giving them to politicians. They express confidence in their method which they claim would, if pursued, cause a steady progress of the Indians toward civilization and self-support.

—In pursuance of instructions from Secretary of State Evarts, the American minister in London, Mr. Welsh, has tendered the British government, in the person of Lord Salisbury, the sum of $5,500,000 gold accompanying the payment with the following communication. The receipt was acknowledged by Lord Salisbury in due form.

—A special dispatch from northern India announces that the British troops are advancing on Afghanistan in four columns one of which has occupied Fort Kapion without resistance, the Afghans retiring hurriedly. Fort Kapion, or Kipiyanga, is a station beyond the frontier, opposite Thal or Thul. Its abandonment was anticipated. No resistence is expected until the upper end of the Kuhrum Valley is reached. The native tribes in the valley profess good will toward the British. The force advancing from Quettah has arrived at Kushlak, ten miles distant. The cold is intense. About 100 men are sick in each regiment. A proclamation of the viceroy has been read to the Belooch chiefs, stating that war will only be waged against the Ameer, and advising the people to remain at their homes.

LIST OF
Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 5.

EXTRACTS FROM MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES,

As Sworn to by the Grand Lodge of Rhode Island.

This tract is a re-print of a tract published in 1834, and is a very weighty document. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 6.

HON. JOHN QUINCY ADAMS' LETTTER,

Giving his and his Father's Opinion of Freemasonry (1831).

—AND—

HON. JAMES MADISON'S LETTER,

Giving his opinion of Freemasonry (1832.) Both of these letters in one 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian: and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 12.

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

Its Relation to Civil Government and the Christian Religion.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRESI. BLANCHARD of Wheaton College. A 16-page tract.

TRACT NO. 15

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction.
A 4-page tract

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A. Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT No. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION.

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on his character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the last fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND ECHATNE

To the correctness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract,

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 16-page tract

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract,

Publishers' Department.

"That Ten Thousand Subscribers Must be Made up."

So writes J. W. Thompson, Pemberton, Dade county, Mo., and so speaks the Illinois State Convention by pledging 104 new subscriptions to be paid before March 1, 1879, and by paying for 38 of these at the convention.

A club of thirty-eight for one year each and one for four months, together with pledges for sixty-six more for one year each from the Illinois State meeting looks as though friends believe that ths 10,000 MUST BE MADE UP. Ninety-one days only remain before March 1st. Ninety-nine more such strong pledges promptly fulfilled will make up the desired ten thousand, but let us report "seven hundred pledges each week." The following are the pledges from the convention yet to be fulfilled:

Robert Colson, Elgin, Ill.,	12	for	one	year each.
R Morgan, Wheaton, Ill.,	7	do	do	do
J C Noe, Paw Paw, Ill.,	6	do	do	do
H L Kellogg, Wheaton, Ill.,	3	do	do	do
H A Fischer, do	3	do	do	do
Moses Pettingill, Peoria,	5	do	do	do
J F Browne, Evansville, Wis,	5	do	do	do
J A Bent, Wheaton, $1.50 pledged.
Jacob Grove, do	2	do	do	do
M A Blanchard, Wheaton,	5	do	do	do
W E Dean, Union, Ill.,	1	do	do	do
Hattie J Gurnea, Tonica, Ill,	1	do	do	do
J L Rawson, Wheaton, Ill.,	1	do	do	do
Rev W W Ames, Menominee,	4	do	do	do
M L Worcester, Kingston, Ill,	1	do	do	do
O Sholes, Morrison, Ill.,	1	do	do	do
Isaac Preston, Lockport, Ill.,	1	do	do	do
Mamie Terril, Morris, Ill.,	1	do	do	do
A H Hiatt, Wheaton,	1	do	do	do
D J Grant, do	2	do	do	do
J M Snyder, do	2	do	do	do
L S Chittenden do	1	do	do	do

One other conditional pledge was received.

If you set your mark for five, ten, twenty or fifty subscribers, or more especially if you forward the money for them, you will be much more likely to reach it than if you indefinitely try to get all you can.

Look over the field, consider carefully the ways and means of working, earnestly ask the Lord "What wilt thou have me to do" in this work? And then with prayer, faith and courage send in your pledge.

Shall we receive pledges of seven hundred a week? Do we mean to secure 10,000 subscribers this winter?

> "'Tis not for man to trifle,
> Life is short and sin is here."

Let us mean it or stop saying it.

J. W. Suidter, Sharon, Wis., sends three for sixteen months each, and four for one year each.

Jas. Auten, Galion, Ohio, sends seven for one year each.

C. A. Blanchard, sends six subscriptions for one year each.

E. S. Livingston, Reynoldsburg, O., sends four for one year each.

J. S. Hubbs, Silver City, Idaho, sends three for one year each.

Robert George, Moore's Salt Works, O., sends one for 16 months and two for one year each.

H. H. Hinman, Massachusetts, R. Faurot, St. Louis, Michigan, and Nelson Daniels, Wacousta, Michigan, send two for one year each.

Mr. George writes that now the price is reduced to $1.50 old subscribers should add one, two or more names when they send their renewals, and pay for them for a year. He sends the names of two "talented, energetic young farmers," men of influence in their present homes.

J. W. Thompson writes: "To the believing and the persevering all things are possible. That 10,000 must be made up."

"He who aims at nothing hits it." How many subscribers do you aim to get?

The publishers, aiming at 10,000, reduced the price to $1.50 per year.

Who will pledge 100 and forward the money for them? Seventy-five? Fifty? Twenty-five? Ten? Five? One?

Ten thousand is made up of units. Do not despise them.

NEW ENGLAND.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN NEW ENGLAND:—The annual meeting of the National Christian Association at Worcester was a grand success. A deep impression was made in that city and one that will be felt throughout New England. In order to follow up and continue the good work the delegates from New England have secured the services of Rev. H. H. Hinman of Wheaton, Ill., who has had much experience in this work, and whose name is familiar to the readers of the Cynosure. Mr. Hinman will respond to all calls for lectures when not engaged. Correspondence in reference to the lecture work may be addressed to Mr. Hinman or to me at Willimantic, Conn.

JOHN A. CONANT.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN MINNESOTA.

We, the undersigned, hereby invite all those who are opposed to organized secretism and all who are willing to hear a fair discussion of the character of the secret organizations, to meet in convention at St. Charles, Winona county, Minn., on Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1878, at six o'clock P. M., the convention to continue during the next day and evening, at least.

The object of the convention is to effect a State organization auxiliary to the National Christian Association, and to make arrangements for a thorough canvass of the State in the interests of this reform. Edmond Ronayne, or D. P. Rathbun, will be present and work the degrees of Freemasonry. Rev. J. P. Stoddard, General Agent for the National Christian Association, is also expected. Other able speakers from Illinois and Wisconsin, as well as from our own State, will be in attendance. We hope to make this a profitable time for that branch of the cause of Christ, represented by this reform. St. Charles is on the line of the W. and St. P. R. R. Free entertainment will be provided.

I shall work the Masonic degrees (God willing) at the Minnesota Convention in St. Charles, on the evenings of December 11th, 12th and 13th. Let there be a grand rally on that occasion and strike one more blow at that miserable, wicked sham which is already fast crumbling to atoms. I can also attend the Michigan convention any time in December.

Topics of the Time.

The second session of the Forty-fourth Congress, which opened Monday will have no more difficult question before it than that lately come into prominence through tne controversy between Secretary Schurz and General Sheridan—the disposition of the Indian Bureau. The army officers have been the chief witnesses against the corruptions of the Bureau, especially since the last outbreak and raid across Kansas and Nebraska. Their reports have pointed out abuses and predicted with accuracy the probable result. They are justly indignant at being made the instrument of punishment to the Indians, when if it was in their power they might remedy abuses and keep the peace. A wonderful example of what may be done is that of a part of the Sioux tribe which took part in the Custer massacre. These Indians had a small fund from the sale of their ponies which has been wisely laid out for them by army officers in seeds and utensils, and an Illinois soldier detailed to give them instruction. They have all gone to work willingly; have raised good crops; are quiet, contented and prospering, and are rapidly acquiring the arts of civilization. In the matter of the transfer of the Bureau to the War department, the army has the best of the argument of late, and the change may be made by Congress before January.

The fishery claims award has been paid to England and there will probably be no further communication on the subject between the governments unless it may be brought up in another form. The facts of the case were against Secretary Evarts, for in the particular instance on which his objection to the award was based, the "local" law as it is called, is a moral and general one also. The case in brief is, that on Sabbath, the 6th of January last, twenty American vessels fishing off the coast of Newfoundland were driven off by the authorities of the island acting under a local law which prohibited fishing on that day. If the other objectionable statutes were like the one in question we need not fear them. So wise and prudent a regulation should rather be maintained by our government for the sake of American fishermen themselves. In prosecuting their work on the Sabbath they were not merely breaking a local ordinance, they were acting in defiance of God's law and of their own nation as well.

It is reported that the Mormon elders, shielded and sustained by their endowment house lodge and its oaths, have hushed up the case of Miss Owens, the young English woman, so that it no more agitates the people of Salt Lake City. They cannot so readily put down the alarm raised by the honorable women of that city nor stop the discussion. The case of Reynolds now before the United States Supreme Court involves the whole question of polygamy and its rights under the Constitution. The prisoner's counsel contended at the first hearing that polygamy is enjoined as a religious duty, and held as an article of faith by the sect to which the latter belongs, and that Congress is forbidden by the first amendment to the Constitution "to make any law respecting an establishment of religion, or to prohibit the free exercise thereof." He argued that polygamy differed from other offenses in that it had no criminal intent and was not considered a crime in the Old Testament and by many eminent and pure-minded men. Attorny-General Devens urged in reply that an interpretation of the Constitution which would restrain Congress from attaching a penalty to the crime of polygamy on account of its being an article of religious faith, would also restrain it from attaching a penalty to any other crime which might be sanctioned by religion. The Thugs of India could legally ply their awful trade in our territories under such an interpretation. We cannot believe that a just and righteous God will allow this question to be settled in any other way than by a thorough cleansing of the evil from our land.

Not Cincinnati alone but the country is alarmed at the revelations of its Gazette, which has been investigating the Sunday theatre business of that city. Over fourteen of these places were found in full blast on a late Sabbath with an aggregate attendance of more than 10,000. The character of the performances is described as vulgar and indecent in all but four; and the mixed audiences, mainly foreigners, were enjoying the vile plays in the stupefaction of liquor and tobacco. While other communities are alarmed lest a like awful condition may be found in them, all are free to express their opinion of a city government that can license such displays. The Christian Standard of Cincinnati closes an able editorial on the subject with these words:

"It is well to know where we are. We may be puzzled, in view of the magnitude of the difficulty, to know what ought to be done to arrest these floods of iniquity. But one thing is certain; it is not a time to tolerate, on the part of Christians, anything like conformity to the world's wicked ways; but a time to antagonize all these corrupting influences with a religious zeal, an earnest godliness, untiring efforts to preach the Gospel and rescue the perishing. It is a time for humiliation and confession of sin; for fasting, prayer and intercession; for more faithful family culture; for larger and more frequent prayer meetings and Bible readings; for greater simplicity of life and purer spirituality, and less of selfish ease, pride and extravagance among professed Christians; for every form of benevolent visitation and effort that can reach the neglected and the tempted and bring them under better influences. Let all Christians understand the magnitude of the conflict now on hand with the powers of darkness, and arm themselves for the contest."

The Roman Catholic Church and Public Education.

BY THOS. E. KENNEDY.

The Roman Catholic church in the United States, boldly and apparently without fear of contradiction, asserts her friendship for popular education and free government. While in our country public education is, at present, the result of free government, yet we believe that such education is the fountain from which shall flow our national life and perpetuity.

When the loyalty of this church to our public schools is questioned,—no matter how suspicious and culpable an act, on her part, may have enforced the questioning,—her clergy, her laymen, and her sympathisers, pour out a stream of vehement contradiction in vindication of her sincerity. In this intellectual age, societies, like men, are judged by their acts. So let her acts define her true attitude toward our public schools.

Some hold that this church is hostile to republican institutions and free schools; yet laugh at all her guileful hostility. Such men are too weak to be noticed. Others characterize this church as the exotic of American institutions; and it has been predicated, that the rigor of our climate alone is sufficient to guard against its growth. This sentiment is undoubtedly expressed by those exulting in the integrity and the love of freedom characteristic of the American heart, in that bulwark of American liberty and stability,—public education, and that deep religious sentiment which has heretofore permeated the hearts of our fellow-countrymen. There is no doubt that such a sentiment lives, not only in the minds of the American masses, but also in those of many of our best thinkers. While it may be true that such a conviction inspires an honest and praiseworthy faith in a glorious and ennobling future for our beloved country, yet it is also true that it gives a sense of safety which lulls our fears, destroys our vigilance, blinds our eyes, and even cultivates our indifference to existing and imminent national dangers.

This church holds the balance of power in one of the great political parties of our country, and in several of the States, if not in the whole country, practically dictates its policy. Many for the sake of power which can be wielded through her, have joined this church. By these means which I have mentioned, and many others, which space does not permit, the spires of her churches point toward the zenith in almost every city, and valley, and prairie in the whole land, and her members are increasing at the enormous rate of one hundred and fifty thousand per annum.

Although the growth of this church was slow at first, and its permanence as a vigorous institution doubtful; yet of late years, its increase in members has been so rapid, and its accumulations of wealth so wonderful, that no one can deny, that it is now a most potent factor in American religious, political and educational life. Thus it seems that those who treat this organization as a sickly exotic, do so from the exuberance of enthusiasm and not from a dispassionate consideration of facts.

Now, if this church inculcates true religious sentiments, is a supporter of free institutions and of general education, we as Christians and Americans, should rejoice and thank God for such an institution. But, if the contrary be true, then we as Christians and Americans, should be earnestly awake to the exigencies of the times and most seriously oppose every encroachment.

In this country, where every issue is settled at the ballot-box, organized societies may become dangerous to the commonwealth. It is in her political relations, if at all, that this church becomes dangerous to the state and to public education.

"The end justifies the means" is the guiding principle of the Jesuit, and his talisman is silence. By implicit obedience to these, have the Jesuits not only ruled the Pope and the Catholic church, but they have established themselves in every land and encroached upon the institutions of almost every state the sun shines on. An open and avowed enemy is not dangerous in comparison to one who carries his hostility hidden by the guise of friendship. Against the one, the imminence of the danger will rouse us to self-protection. Against the other we have no protection, because the danger is unexpected, and like Cæsar, we render our life to the hidden dagger of a Brutus.

The first direct and unconcealed blow struck at popular education, was compelling the city of New York to pay two hundred thousand dollars per annum in support of papal educational institutions. View this act as leniently as possible; when we consider that the city of New York was already loaded with a debt of more than thirty million dollars, it certainly was not a friendly hand that could wrench through political chicanery, two hundred thousand dollars from the cause of universal education. In Cincinnati, through the efforts of Catholic priests, the reading of the Bible in the public schools has been prohibited, and that, too, on the ground that it favors sectarianism.

In 1874, after a brilliant parade on St. Patrick's Day, Bishop Wood said: "That will show the Americans how many voters we have, and how many fighting men we will have when the fight commences and commence it will on the school question." Why is it that such a high prelate as Bishop Wood should so incidentally and naturally speak of a fight and fighting men, and conjure up fields of slaughter in connection with the public schools? The only reasonable answer is, that he being high in position and having the confidence of the church, knew that her secret and hostile intent is the absolute destruction of our public schools. He further asserts that the fight will commence; and as he is a man who knows what the intentions of his church are, he also knows that if the fight is commenced at all, it will be by the enemies and not the friends of public education.

The latest thrust at popular education comes from San Francisco, in the late pastoral letter of the Most Rev. J. S. Alemany, Archbishop of San Francisco. Concerning the subject of schools, the archbishop says:

"Were we under a monarch we could understand why a hundred and fifty thousand in this city, nay, three-fifths of its population, should be overburdened with a crushing weight of taxation to support what they find incomplete, as unprovided with the most important class—that of religion."

Also, "A way could be found to satisfy a far larger number of citizens, [than by teaching German and French as referred to in another part of the letter] of various denominations, loudly calling for a catechetical class, which they consider the most important."

Now as every one very well knows the taxation for the support of public education is neither overburdensome nor crushing, nor comparatively so great as for other things not so important.

But if it is already excessive, why should a teacher of denominational religion, or rather one for each denomination be maintained at the public expense? This would increase the present educational taxation by one half, as the archbishop very well knows. Hence the very plan he proposes, not to mention the evil effects of teaching sectarianism, would, were it adopted, through excessive taxation make the public schools distasteful. Further, there never has been a call in San Francisco, or in our country at large, for general denominational teaching in the public schools. When Archbishop Alemany uttered such a statement he knew what he said was false, and that he was attempting to use the influence of the other denominations in procuring what the Catholic church most ardently desires, that her priests shall be admitted into the public schools as teachers of religion. If that time ever comes the fight will have commenced indeed.

In a republican government, where it is an admitted fact that the very integrity of the government depends upon the intelligence and morality of the people, the government holds to the principle that it not only has the right but is under obligations to provide such a system of education as shall place it within the reach of every child to be qualified to fill any office of honor within the gift of the people. The public school system is based upon the necessities of the State; and while it is so evident that the law, which compels the property of the State to educate its children, is a just one, that it is useless to present any argument in its favor, it may not be out of place to notice the direction in which the argument against such a law leads.

"This system of education fails to meet all the demands of a considerable portion of the community," says the archbishop, hence it is unfair that a "considerable portion of the community should be taxed for its support." If it is on these grounds that he claims such taxation is unjust, on similar ones every noble institution could be annihilated, and even the government itself destroyed; because there never has been an administration since the days of Washington whose acts have met all, or even a considerable portion of the demands of a large part of the people. But who will attempt to say that the taxation which has been levied upon the unsatisfied portion of the people, for the support of the various administrations, is unfair? Neither is it unfair for the State to educate the children of the State without catering to church or sect. Such a flimsy argument cannot be advanced with sincerity by the able and wily leaders of the Roman Catholic church, therefore we take it is simply the pretext which hides the wedge intended to split our common school system. For these prelates know that such a proposition having been admitted it would be unjust to tax the members of any denomination for the support of public schools, and the public school system falls to the ground. They know further that if American children have to be educated in private schools that this means the ignorance of the masses, and a corresponding supremacy of the priesthood.

At last comes the direct prohibition of the attendance of children of Catholic parents to the public schools, and also the punishment for such attendance. Further says Archbishop Alemany: "It is a well known and avowed fact that none can surpass the Jesuits, Christian Brothers and the Sisters in literary accomplishments and in the talent of imparting them to children; and yet some make a pretext for their pusillanimous spirit and sending their children to unchristian schools the plea of their vain superiority. It is true that sometimes parents live too far from Christian schools, or may have some other especially serious impediments; but in the absence of such reasons pastors are not allowed to admit to the holy sacraments parents who either ex pose their children in schools to grow without due Christian training, or take not the proper precaution to see that they be not infected by evil associates." If friendly why this prohibition, and why such a punishment as exclusion from the "holy sacraments" of all parents patronizing public schools?

In Cincinnati the Catholic clergy were hostile to the public schools because the Bible was read in them. In San Francisco the Bible never has been generally read, and Archbishop Alemany denominates them as "unchristian" schools. So it is as clear as truth that the Romish church hates public schools with the Bible in them or out of them, with an enmity as deep and settled as it has been unremitting and disguised.

On the 8th of August, 1878, the Rev. Father Rooney, in a lecture delivered in Platt's Hall, San Francisco, said: "Who are the most successful criminals? Is it the hod carrier? No. It is the public school birds." Now comes the official report of the chaplain of the Toombs, New York, which nails the cowardly slander as a lie. He says of 1030 children confined here for crime, 800 are of Roman Catholic parentage. These, presumably, were not educated in the public schools. Show me a boy or a girl that has taken the regular course of our public schools and I will show you one who is both willing and qualified to work for an honest living.

While it is most apparent that the Roman Catholic clergy are a unit in their bitter opposition to popular education, yet it must be admitted that many laymen are its strong supporters. No doubt this is the reason that this interdiction of the archbishop has fallen on dull ears, and that the number of Catholic children attending our public schools has scarcely decreased.

In this article I have noticed only a few of the out-croppings of Romish policy. But as the out-croppings of a ledge are apt to indicate the quality of the ore hidden in the depths of the earth, so these croppings most surely indicate the bitter animosity toward public schools that lies deep in the heart of the Roman Catholic church.

As the reaper binds the straws which he has gathered into one sheaf before laying them aside, so let me bind the few points I have noticed into one compact whole. She has prohibited the attendance of children of Catholic parents to our public schools. She has used every endeavor to show that the taxation for their support is unjust and should be abolished. She has knowingly misrepresented to their disadvantage the results of public education. She has forced the Bible out of the public schools, and then proclaimed them godless. She has through political chicanery divided the moneys belonging to public schools. And as "Satan worries whom he can't devour" with a malicious joy, so she, with ill-concealed delight, seeks to cripple what she cannot destroy.

San Jose, Cal.

What is Freemasonry?

Editor Christian Cynosure:—Dear Sir: I notice in a late number of the Cynosure a letter written by Jonathan W. Moss of West Virginia, containing some friendly criticisms on what he terms the "tendency on the part of our Anti-masonic lecturers and writers to forsake the solid facts of secretism, as we have them in the lives of its devotees of the present day, and to wander off in the regions of speculative refinements upon the principles, ceremonies and symbology of the Masonic institution;" and as friend Moss rather carelessly alludes to me by asserting that I am "letting go my great work of exposing the rotten carcass of the old handmaid and straining after the Baal, Osiris and Astarte of confederated wickedness," I think it is due to him, to myself, and especially to the numerous readers of the Cynosure, that I make some remarks on this important subject. I am very glad indeed that these criticisms have been offered, because it affords me another opportunity of again calling public attention to the real secrets of Freemasonry—to what, in fact, Mr. Moss himself calls the "rotten carcass of the old handmaid."

Now, in order to understand this question aright, let me ask, What is Freemasonry? I reply, it is a system of religious philosophy, or a religious institution pretending to teach piety and morality, and claiming to convey these instructions to the mind of the initiate through the science of symbolism. So that in reality Freemasonry is at once both a science and a religion. To fully establish this position quotations need not be multiplied, though a few may properly be cited to give point and force to what must inevitably follow. In the "Masonic Jurisprudence," by Mackey, page 95, I read as follows:

"The truth is that Masonry is undoubtedly a religious institution—its religion being of that universal kind in which all men agree and which handed down through a long succession of ages, from that ancient priesthood who first taught it, embraces the great tenets of the existence of God and the immortality of the soul."

This is accurate, authentic Masonic law and clearly sets forth the following propositions:

1st. That "Masonry is undoubtedly a religious institution."

2d. That "its religion is of that universal kind in which all men agree."

3d. That this system of universal religion has been "handed down from that ancient priesthood who first taught it;" and

4th. That its tenets are simply a belief in a god and the immortality of the soul.

Now, let me ask who were the priesthood from whom this peculiar Masonic religion has been "handed down?" There never were, there are not now, and there never will be but two kinds of priests, the priests of God and the priests of Satan; but two kinds of religions, the religion of God and the religion of Satan. Now to which of these two systems does Freemasonry belong, and from which of these two kinds of priests has Masonry been "handed down?" Freemasonry has not and does not claim to be the religion of the Bible, which Mr. Moss and I both believe to be the religion of God, because in another equally authentic Masonic law it is positively affirmed that, "Blue Lodge Masonry has nothing whatever to do with the Bible. It is not founded on the Bible, if it was it would not be Masonry, it would be something else" (Chase's Digest of Masonic Law, page 207). And inasmuch as the religion of Freemasonry is not the religion of the Bible, either of the Old or New Testament, of course it cannot have been "handed down" from the Jewish priesthood, and therefore I would again ask from what priesthood has it descended? There were but two kinds of priests—the Jewish priests and the pagan priests—the priests of God and the priests of Baal; but Freemasonry most distinctly asserts that it has had no connection with the Jewish priests; and hence without any question it must have come to us from the priests of Baal.

But again let it be observed that the Masonic law is very explicit as to how the religion of Masonry came to exist. It has been "handed down from that ancient priesthood who first taught it." It is not a copy of something that had a former existence,—it is not "similar" (as Mr. Moss would have me express it) to some religion which existed in the long ago, but it has been "handed down" from man to man and from age to age, the self-same "rotten carcass" that it always was and always will be until its final overthrow, the villainous Baal or Osirian sun-worship of the pagan world. And to expose Masonry in this light, and in this light alone, is to expose it in its true character. Of course as a system of oath-bound secrecy it is working an almost irreparable injury to the nation at large; its laws and edicts as a sort of theocratic government being considered paramount to the enactments of our government, whether national or local, while its oaths and death penalties are looked upon as being more binding than the oath administered by the civil magistrate; but to expose Freemasonry in its own true unchanged and unchangeable character as a secret system of Jesuitical priest-craft it must be clearly shown to be the self-same Baal-worship of the old pagan world, which God always abhorred and in consequence of which he has destroyed those nations which practiced it from the face of the earth.

When the written law of Masonry clearly states that "Osiris and the Tyrian architect are one and the same," and that "we readily recognize in Hiram Abiff the Osiris of the Egyptians, the Mithras of the Persians, the Bacchus of the Greeks, the Dionysius of the Fraternity of the Artificers and the Atys of the Phrygians," I am not at all disposed to repudiate such a claim; but on the contrary I accept it as a true fact of history, and in exposing Masonry I expose it in all its vicious and soul-destroying wickedness. But Mr. Moss knows nothing perhaps of my mode of exposing the "old handmaid" as he calls it. I would infer from his manner of reasoning that it is enough to expose simple grips, signs and passwords with a little cable-tow and hoodwink thrown in by way of variety. But if this be his idea he is indeed very sadly mistaken. There is no use in performing Masonic ceremonies before a public audience in America to-day unless you fully explain what they are intended to teach, and neither is there any use to cause a candidate to pass through a mimic representation of the death, concealment, burial, search for the body, finding, loss and substitution of the Hiram Abiff legend unless that legend is fully explained and its origin clearly traced out. Then and not till then you strike a death blow on Masonry. Perhaps if Mr. Moss would study Freemasonry a little more and the "lives of its devotees" a little less he may be able to understand that I am not "letting go my great work," that I never once seriously thought of letting it go, and moreover by the help of God that I never shall let go my work of exposing the "rotten carcass of the old handmaid" until I die or until the last vestige of that miserable pagan jugglery be banished forever from the church and nation. If I were to study my Christianity in the light afforded me by the "lives" of professing Christians I would be a first class infidel, and so in exposing Masonry I let the "lives of Masonic devotees" and the "lives" of professing Christians severely alone and expose Freemasonry in the light of God's Word. Yours respectfully.

A Morning Thought.

"Glorious in holiness." This is one of the expressions used to convey to men the true character of the true God, the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Does it bear on my practical duties to-day? or is it only as a fixed star of glory in the immeasurable distance, to be admired when the day is over? Are we not too apt to think so? But is it not of real, practical value? What is "holiness?" It is not merely being right, but it embraces all that can be conceived of as lovable,—in short it embraces and sanctions in us all the fruits of the Spirit, which are thus specified by the apostle: "Love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law."

Let us contemplate what it is to be glorious in "love," glorious in "joy," and in each of the other graces. If the professed children of God were daily to adorn themselves with these beauties of character how their light would shine before men! Their good deeds done from purest motives, no mercenary spirit, no secret society obligation, but all having their power from the one great truth that they are followers of God as his dear children by faith and obedience to their glorified Redeemer.

Some young ladies gather monograms for silver necklaces, and others have golden ones on their bracelets, but how immeasurably do the graces of a Christian character transcend every material ornament of earth! and what a halo of glory will they shed from the heads of those who walk over the golden streets of the New Jerusalem! Christians, are we trying to be like our Saviour, like our Heavenly Father, "Glorious in holiness!" *

Correspondence of the National Convention.

FROM THE INDIANA STATE ASSOCIATION.

DUBLIN, Ind, Nov. 1, 1878.

To the National Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies:

DEAR BRETHREN:—I embrace this method of conveying to you the greetings of the Indiana Christian Association Opposed to Secret Societies.

As co-laborers with you in the work of "bringing to light the hidden things of dishonesty," and revealing the "cunning craftiness of men," we have great reason for devout thanksgiving to the God of all grace and truth for the signal success which has marked the work of the Association during the year now ending.

We recognize the hand of a gracious Providence in leading us to the possession of a Publishing House and in the success attending the publication of the Christian Cynosure, and in the increased publication of books and tracts for the dissemination of light. Also for the extensive and efficient work done in the lecture field, in the revelation of the "mystery of iniquity." And we hail with delight the manifest change that is being wrought in public sentiment upon a question so vitally affecting the interests of all classes.

While our faith comprehends the immutability of the principles of truth as involved in our reform movement, we recognize also the quickening and vitalizing power of the spirit of truth, and are therefore glad to note the unity of spirit and harmony of action of anti-secrecy workers. This reform movement embraces men differing so widely in regard to church polity and minor points of Christian opinions and church tenets that the unity of sentiment and desire which characterize it is a gracious reflection upon the name adopted, viz., "Christian Association."

Allow me, dear brethren, to call your attention to a feature of the secrecy question which, perhaps, has not been as fully developed as its importance demands. I refer to the method of treating the minor orders. We do not find it difficult to show to the masses that Masonry and Odd-fellowship are evil in their nature and tendencies, but our greatest difficulties are to show that secret beneficiary societies, temperance societies, trades unions, etc., are evil. To show how these seemingly innocent orders are connected with the "mother of harlots," and how they become their aiders and abettors in manacling the souls of men, and in manipulating the interests of church and state, is certainly a matter of no little importance; for here are the breast-works behind which the enemy is entrenched. Masonry and Odd-fellowship would die a speedy death were it not for the vitalizing influences of these lesser orders. Therefore I hope you will give us light upon the methods of treating this feature of the subject.

One of our greatest needs in Indiana is organization. We have a strong anti-secrecy sentiment, but because of our lack of thorough organization we cannot make it as effective as it otherwise would be. Can you not point out some plans by which we may more systematically prosecute our work? We have some noble, self-sacrificing men who will stand by the right. We have appointed two of them as delegates to your Convention, viz., Dr. S. L. Cook and Bro. Wm. Leuty.

Having confidence in the final success of every principle of truth and righteousness, we are determined to push this battle to the "gates of the enemy." We feel that we not only have an organic connection with your body, but also a spiritual relationship. We do therefore unite our prayers with yours to the "Great Head of the church," that he would grant you according to the riches of his glory to be strengthened with might by his Spirit in the inner man; that Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith; that ye being rooted and grounded in love may be able to comprehend with all saints what is the breadth and length and depth and height; and to know the love of Christ which passeth knowledge, that ye might be filled with all the fullness of God.

The peace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all."

HALLECK FLOYD, Pres. Indiana Association.

FROM REV. ELI TAPLEY.

COLUMBUS, Miss., Nov., 78.

To the National Christian Association, Greeting:

I bid you a hearty God-speed in your good and glorious work. My heart and prayers are with you. I have been endeavoring as I had opportunity to acquaint the people here with the true merits of secret orders. I have been preaching, distributing tracts, selling and loaning books upon the subject. I have met with less opposition and more success this year than usual and have been much cheered by hearing through the Cynosure of your success. If there is a union of those churches which are opposed to lodgery I think it will do much toward the strengthening of our cause. Separation from every sin gives strength to the church and the cause of Christ. I believe this union of churches, although they might be comparatively few, will have a powerful influence though the world and the mixed churches may not at first see the great good done, yet they will surely in time feel it.

ELI TAPLEY.

FROM A. L. POST, D.D.

DEAR BRETHREN:—I am sorry circumstances forbid my being at your present gathering. The best I can do is to give you assurance of my best wishes and most fervent prayers that you may have the Divine presence, with which you will be an irresistible power, and without which you will be powerless for good. My prayer is and shall be that what your president has called a "mighty council of war" may be led to the adoption of just the war measures which the times demand. The opposing forces are becoming more manifest in connection with every blow struck. The evidences are increasing daily, that there are but two sides to the conflict. God in Christ and his people are on the one side, and Rum and Rome and the Secret Lodge are on the other. At every advance the battle waxes hotter and deadlier. Many of us, as individuals, may and probably will fall on the field, but the cause unretarded will go on to ultimate triumph. God in Christ must reign until he put all enemies under his feet. "The kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven must be given to the saints of the Most High." Surely the "War Council" may take heart and give heart as the "signs there are no mistaking" indicate the rapid approach of its grand consummation. It is enough for us to be assured that all who fight under the banner of the true Cross, shall be victors. The blessing of the Divine Master be upon the deliberations and decisions of your convention, making it a power that shall reach world-wide, and especially where lodge dominion enslaves and degrades humanity.

Such is the prayer of

ALBERT L. POST.

Montrose, Pa., Nov. 11, 1878.

FROM ELDER J. F. BROWNE.

Dear Brethren of the Convention:

My strongest wish when thinking of your meeting is, that God may manifest himself in your convention in such power that all may be convinced that your work is of him. May you think and talk and act as men who realize the immediate presence and supervision of Jehovah. May you realize that you do not simply come together to do business, but that you meet also to seek the Lord and to be "endued with power from on high."

I pray that it may be clearly shown in what you do that your aim in saving men from the lodge is to bring them to Christ. May it be seen that your object is not simply to show men a truth, but to help them to a saving knowledge of "the truth as it is in Jesus." May you make it clear that you are Anti-masons because you are Christians, and may you hold up Christ as the one whose cause you seek to advance. May there be nothing of a bitter or malevolent spirit in your proceedings, but "speaking the truth in love" may you lead men to embrace the truth.

I pray and hope that the subject of "The United Churches of Christ" may receive such thoughtful and prayerful attention from you as it deserves. Dear brethren, we need to be separate from the lodge and from the world, but we ought not to be separate from each other. I hope that you will discuss this matter and reason together on it, and pray earnestly over it, and may God so enlighten and guide you that your own hearts may be more firmly "knit together in love," and that your convention may greatly aid in uniting the true disciples of Christ everywhere. Let us show a united front, and while we work to scatter the forces of darkness let us strive to perfect union amongst ourselves, that we may better carry on the work of overthrowing "the unfruitful works of darkness," and realize the advantage and the blessing of being "one in Christ Jesus."

May God help us all to be unselfish, untiring, wise, earnest and loving in the cause that brings you together, for the sake of Jesus Christ or Lord. In brotherly love,

J. F. BROWNE.

Impressions of New England.

Staffordsville, Conn., Nov. 27, 1878.

Dear Bro. K:—At the dawning of Nov. 13th I found myself riding rapidly over the Boston and Albany railroad in Massachusetts. The high hills the endless succession of stone walls and rocks, the scarcity of any good farming land, and the rapid succession of manufacturing villages, formed a marked contrast with the entire West. My first impression was that none but a people of great intelligence and untiring industry could ever have changed this rough and rugged land into the beautiful and prosperous country that itis.

Of the beautiful city of Worcester and the grand convention that we held I need not speak, except to say that we met there the earnest Christian men of New England; men and women who approximate as nearly the perfect model of Christian character as we often see on earth.

Leaving Worcester on the 18th I went west to Palmer and thence southeast to Stafford Springs, Conn., a large manufacturing village on the Willimantic river. After calling on friends, at 6:30 P. M. I rode five miles to Staffordsville through a heavy rain and in extreme darkness. It was at this place where a great reservoir broke away a year and a half ago causing a great destruction of property, sweeping away one large church and drowning two men who went to the church for safety. This is a pleasant village with four large woollen factories and two churches, Congregational and Methodist Episcopal. A walk of a mile through the rain brought me to the hospitable home of Bro. W. Agard where I was most kindly entertained.

After making arrangements to lecture in the Congregational church, I returned to Stafford Springs and went to Willimantic, where I spent several days with our excellent brother J. A. Conant. Here I met Bro. L. N. Stratton and J. P. Stoddard, and we devised plans for future work. Returning to Staffordville, I got out appointments for several places. Spent the Sabbath attending the Congregational church, and on Monday evening met a large audience of most intelligent people, who listened with strict attention to my lecture on secretism and Christianity contrasted. A deep impression was produced. There are more old people here than we generally find in the West, and most of them had a distinct recollection of the Morgan excitement and were Anti-masons in those days. To the young the facts about Masonry are new and strange.

Last night we had a crowded house. I spoke over two hours and all seemed attentive. Some had come several miles and were anxious to have more lectures in the vicinity. The pastor of of the Congregational church, Rev. H. Smith, thanked me for the instruction I have given his people. The pastor of the M. E. church helped to advertise my meeting by refusing to read a notice of it and charging me with falsehood in what I said about Masonry. I have work for a week to come in this vicinity, and plenty to do in Connecticut to last me for months. The Lord has set before us an open door and no man can shut it. New England is to receive the truth on this question and to take the position to which she is entitled as a leader in this reform. Yours for a pure Gospel,

H. H. Hinman.

Freemasonry on Wheels.

SEVEN MONTHS' WORK BY PAST MASTER RONAYNE.

From January 3, 1878, to date I have lectured and worked the Masonic degrees—Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason—in the following States:

In Michigan, at Ogden, 3 degrees.

In Ohio, at Bedford, Senecaville, Stafford, Huntsville, Northwood, Rushylvania, Hudson, Oberlin, Middlefield, 24 degrees.

In New York, at Batavia and Albion, 6 degrees.

In Indiana, at Yellow Creek, Silver Lake, Roan, Lagrange, LaOtto, Lima, Remington, Green Hill and Oakland City, 27 degrees.

In Illinois, at Lostant, Kewanee, Sycamore, Wyanet and Chicago, 15 degrees.

In Pennsylvania, at Newcastle, 3 degrees.

In Iowa, College Springs, Pella, Adel, Norwalk, Atlantic, Winfield and New Sharon, 21 degrees.

In Wisconsin, at West Milton, and at the State meeting at Waupun, 6 degrees.

In Massachusetts, at Worcester, for the N. C. A. at annual meeting, 3 degrees.

Thus it will be observed I have been during the current year in nine different States and have worked the Masonic degrees 108 times, and if we reckon that at least 500 persons averaged the attendance at such degree work, then I have brought the subject of Masonry in all the beauty and loveliness of form of poor dead Hiram before 54,000 men, women and children. According to this showing I have done more for Masonry; have made more Masons, and have spread a correct knowledge of the "Royal Art" more than have all the Grand and subordinate lodges in the United States and Canada combined; and yet they are not pleased. They call me terribly wicked names, abuse me very shamefully, and in many other respects behave in a very revengeful and vindictive manner toward me. I call the attention of the Voice of Masonry to this state of things, and hope Bro. Brown, K. T., etc., etc., will mention the facts for the benefit of the entire craft, and who knows, perhaps they will make me a good New Years' present. Now Bro. Brown take due notice and govern yourself accordingly. The full time occupied in working those 108 degrees was seven months or an average of a little over fifteen degrees each month. E. Ronayne,

Correspondence.

Thurlow Weed.

Editor Cynosure:—In the Cynosure of October 31st, your correspondent, Wells Springer, refers to Thurlow Weed and his work in a manner which, it seems to me, is hardly justified by the facts of the case. He says: "When he [Weed] wrote his autobiography he omitted doing justice to the most eventful period of his life, in a moral point of view." The question arises, How does Mr. Springer know this? Has he seen the autobiography referred to? He speaks of it as already written, published, its character fully understood, and subject to freest criticism. I am aware that for years Mr. Weed has been writing a history of his life and times, but I have seen no announcement of the completion and publication of the book. If it is out of press I would like to know it, for it is one of the books I want to read.

Mr. Springer's words seem to assume that Weed's book is before the public, and his position on the subject of Masonry and Anti-masonry well known, and that he is found to be "recreant" to his old professions. I must withhold my belief in this for the present. In a letter to the writer of this, dated New York, February 6, 1873, Mr. Weed wrote, over his own signature, among other things, the following: "I reflect also pleasantly upon the part I took as a member of the Morgan Investigating Committee. I feel now as I did then, that the spirit which animated us was what Governor Throop described as a 'blessed spirit.' I avow myself on all occasions as an Anti-mason, and I am now writing out the history of Anti-masonry; slowly however, for my health broke down more than four years ago." I see no hint of recreancy in this. How far Mr. Weed will fail of "doing justice" to himself and subject I cannot tell, but I think he is competent, if health be not wanting, to give the world a fuller and better history of the Masonic outrages of 1826, and of the events which grew out of them, than it has yet had. That he is as much an Anti-mason now as ever, I have no doubt. In consenting, in 1831-2, to merge the Anti-masonic party with the Whig, he co-operated with Wm. H. Seward, Francis Granger, Bates Cook, Albert H. Tracy, Phineas L. Tracy, John Quincy Adams, Thaddeus Stevens, Harmer Denny and others, the ablest of the old Anti-masonic leaders. These men, I doubt not, acted conscientiously, if not wisely; and it is hardly competent for us at this late day to say whether it was in human wisdom to do better than they did at the time. Until we are better able to appreciate the exigencies of that crisis, we can afford to be more sparing of such epithets as "recreant," "apostates," etc., in speaking of these distinguished men.

Hammond's History of New York.

Vienna, N. Y., Nov. 19, 1878.

I have a school district library book entitled "Political History of the State of New York to December, 1840, by Jabez D. Hammond, third edition, revised." In it is a chapter entitled "Political Anti-masonry." I quote from the book: "Its origin was in the violent abduction and murder of William Morgan, committed by infatuated Masons, as the required Masonic punishment for the revelation of Masonic secrets." Speaking of Gov. DeWitt Clinton's death he says: "This melancholy event occurred on the evening of the 11th of February. He had that morning visited the capitol and transacted business, as usual at the room appropriated to the governor. In the afternoon he wrote up his diary (he had for a long time kept one) and perused all the letters received by the evening mail. Within a few minutes after he had finished the examination of his letters, and while in a sitting posture conversing with two of his sons, his head fell forward and he never breathed again."

I quote Mr. Hammond's words: "I was for many years an agent in conducting some of Mr. Clinton's most important pecuniary concerns, and in that capacity held familiar and confidential intercourse with him. I was his personal and political friend."

Church Theatricals.

Allegheny City, Pa.

Editor Cynosure:—"Mother Goose" has the boards this week in the North Presbyterian church, and I am convinced that never has the good old mother been the head of a larger flock of goslings than on this and all other occasions when she holds forth in a regularly constituted and consecrated house of God.

Whether for promoting acquaintance or augmenting funds, the phase of church life which such gatherings present to the world must necessarily be deleterious. If we are to reflect the churches credit, we should avoid fantastic costumes and general buffoonery and walk humbly, righteously and godly. Is God's house to be made a house of merchandise? What a spectacle "Mother Goose" would have presented when Jesus entered the temple with the whip of small cords.

The first of a series of plays was announced from the pulpit of the Fifth church, Allegheny, on last Lord's day, and the programme is said to be replete with decidedly funny features—to take place on the evening of Thanksgiving Day. Preaching in the forenoon at 10:30 o'clock, and the prostitution of God's house and the acknowledged day of humiliation and thanksgiving, with some of God's people, will commence at 7:30 o'clock P. M. The anouncement sets forth that the primary object is the distant heathen and the ultimate object the enhancing of the church's spirituality.

The Lutherans True.

Muskegon, Mich., Nov. 16, '78.

Editor Cynosure:—It may not be generally known to the readers of the Cynosure that Lutherans generally are in perfect sympathy with your grand work. The Synodical Conference, the largest Lutheran body in this country, representing upwards of 300,000 communicants, has taken a decided standpoint against all manner of secret societies. With a few solitary exceptions, members of secret societies are not tolerated in their congregations at all.

There is one body calling themselves Lutherans, who no longer adhere to distinctive Lutheran doctrines, and therefore have no right to assume the name. They are also very loose in their discipline, and not only tolerate secret society members, but even support and defend them, in hopes of gain in numerical strength and external prosperity. To this party belongs the pastor referred to by your correspondent from York. Do not expect anything better from that quarter, nor judge the Lutheran church, as a whole, by the few who dishonestly assume the name, but in heart deviate widely from the principles of Luther.

The large majority of Lutherans then, sympathize with you in your good work, but generally are precluded by language from taking active part in your conventions and other means of helping forward the good cause.

May the Cynosure long continue in its difficult but noble mission of purifying this land of one of the greatest evils under the sun—secret societism. Yours truly,

Abel Anderson.

Our Mail.

F. E. H., Brimfield, Massachusetts, writes:

"I am to speak in a debating society in a few days in opposition to secret societies."

D. Caulkins, Battle Creek, Michigan, writes:

"There are a few Free Methodists in this place who are opposed to the lodge. * * * If I were as able as some Antimasons I would give fifty dollars a year to the reform. If I had an income of five hundred a year I would give half of it to break down Freemasonry. I am now about seventy-eight years old."

Philip Kribs, Lamartine, Pennsylvania, writes:

"I have been working in the anti-secret cause for some years, and have circulated many hundreds of your tracts, and always keep a supply on hand, especially to send or give to those who I think are workers. I sent a copy of the Cynosure and a lot of tracts to-day to a man who left the lodge and took eight members out with him."

W. Sperry, Waupun, Wisconsin, writes; "Mr. Ronayne's expositions here have aroused the people."

Wilson Milligan, Portland, Indiana, writes:

"The lodge power here is not what it was six years ago."

M. Henry Haywood, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, writes:

"I gave away eight papers to my class this week. May God bless the Cynosure."

B. Williams, Warren, Illinois, writes:

"I shall do all I can to forward the reform. I am scattering my papers and tracts broadcast."

C. E. Joslin, Waitsfield, Vermont, writes:

"I do not take the Cynosure because I need any argument to convince me of the sin and curse to the nation, to individuals, and especially to the churches, of secret societies, for I have seen it demonstrated in the place where I reside, and I know of what I affirm. The more prosperous these societies the less religious interest you will see. This is not the exception but the rule."

LESSON L—December 15, 1878—THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 24: 13-22.

13. And, behold, two of them went that same day to a village called Emmaus, which is from Jerusalem about threescore furlongs.

14. And they talked together of all these things which had happened.

15. And it came to pass, that, while they communed together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. Mat. 18: 20.

16. But their eyes were holden that they should not know him. John 20: 14.

17. And he said unto them, What manner of communications are these that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are sad?

18. And the one of them, whose name was Cleopas, answering said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? John 19: 25.

19. And he said unto them, What things? And they said unto him, Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: Mat. 21: 11; Acts 2: 22; 7: 22.

20. And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him.

21. But we trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel: and beside all this, to-day is the third day since these things were done. Acts 1: 6.

22. Yea, and certain women also of our company made us astonished, which were early at the sepulchre; Mark 16: 8.

23. And when they found not his body, they came, saying, that they had also seen a vision of angels, which said that he was alive. Mat. 28: 5, 8.

24. And certain of them which were with us went to the sepulchre, and found it even so as the women had said: but him they saw not.

25. Then he said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken:

26 Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory? Acts 17: 3.

27. And beginning at Moses and all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himself. Gen. 3: 15; 49: 10; 22: 18; 26: 4; Num. 21: 9; 24: 17; Deut. 18: 15, 18; Ps. 16: 9, 10; 22: 1-31; 132: 11; Is. 7: 14; 9: 1, 2, 6, 7; 50: 6; 52: 13 to 53: 12; Jer. 23: 5, 6; 33: 15; Ezek. 34: 23; 37: 24-26; Dan. 9: 24-27; Micah 5: 2; 7: 20; Zech. 6: 12; 9: 9; 11: 12, 13; Hag. 2: 6-9; Mal. 3: 1; 4: 2.

28. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further.

29. But they constrained him, saying, Abide with us; for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent. And he went in to tarry with them. Acts 16: 15; Gen. 19: 2.

30. And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them.

31. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight. John 8: 59; Luke 4: 30.

32. And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures?

GOLDEN T XT.—"And they said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the Scriptures?" Luke 24: 32.

[From S. S. Journal.]

GENERAL STATEMENT.

On the afternoon of the crucifixion, a little before sunset marks the beginning of the Jewish Sabbath, the body of Jesus is hastily taken down from the cross and laid in the tomb of Joseph, a rich Arimathean. There it rests in the sealed and guarded sepulcher, for thirty-six hours. A company of women come early on Sunday morning to give it more suitable burial, when lo, they find the stone removed, and the body gone. All save one, Mary Magdalene, depart. She remains weeping by the open cave, and there, first of all the disciples, sees the risen Christ. Afterward, the other women, and then Simon Peter, behold him. On that day, the first Easter Sunday, and the first Christian Sabbath, two disciples, on a journey from Jerusalem to a country village, behold and converse with their risen Lord.

SCRIPTURE COMMENTARY.

Verse 13, 14, 15. "Two of them." 2 Ki 2: 6. And they two went on.

"Talked together." Mal. 3: 16: Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another.

"Jesus....drew near." John 14; 18, 19: I will not leave you comfortless: I will come to you. Yet a little while and the world seeth me no more; but ye see me; because I live, ye shall live also. Mark 16: 18: He appeared in another form unto two of them.

16, 17, 18. "Their eyes were holden." Mat. 18: 20. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. John 20: 14: Saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus. John 21: 4: But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore, but the disciples knew not it was Jesus.

"Are sad." John 16: 6: But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your heart. John 16: 20: Verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye shall weep and lament, but the world shall rejoice: and ye shall be sorrowful, but your sorrow shall be turned into joy.

19, 20, 21. "Concerning Jesus." Mat. 21: 11: And the multitude said, This is Jesus, the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

"Delivered him." Acts 5: 30: The God of our fathers raised up Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree. Acts 13: 27-29: For they that dwell at Jerusalem, and their rulers, because they knew him not, nor yet the voices of the prophets....they have fulfilled them in condemning him. And though they found no cause of death in him, yet desired they Pilate, that he should be slain. And when they had fulfilled all that was written of him, they took him down from the tree, and laid him in a sepulcher.

22, 23, 24. "Early at the sepulcher." John 20: 1: Cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulcher. John 20: 18: Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

25, 26, 27. "O fools." Mark 7: 18: Are ye so without understanding also. Heb. 5: 11, 12: Seeing ye are dull of hearing. For when for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have need that one teach you again which be the first principles of the oracles of God; and are become such as have need of milk, and not of strong meat.

"He expounded." Heb. 2: 1: Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard. 2 Pet. 3: 1, 2: This....I now write unto you....that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before the holy prophets.

28, 29, 30. "Abide with us." Luke 9: 58: And Jesus said unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

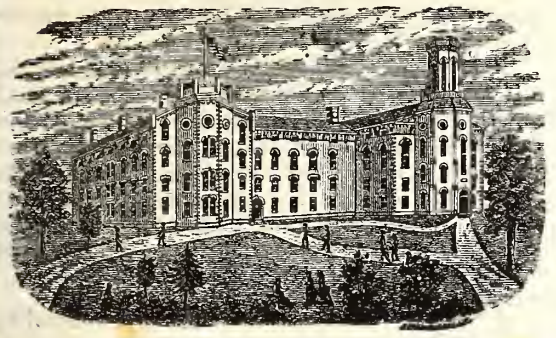
"He took bread." Mark 14: 22: And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them.

31, 32. "Their eyes were opened." John 14: 22: Lord, how is it that thou will manifest thyself unto us, and not unto the world. Mat. 5: 8: Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

"Heart burn within us." Ps. 39: 3: While I was musing the fire burned.

LESSONS.

The early disciples of Christ were no fanatics or credulous dupes. On the contrary, they appear to have been marvellously slow to accept of the evidence given of Christ's dignity and the grandeur of his work. The sneer of Strauss and his followers, that "the church made Christ," meaning that the fervid imagination of his disciples, fired by the reading of the Oriental imagery of the Old Testament, made them see in Jesus a greatness that did not belong to him, is utterly at variance with the tenor of the New Testament narratives.



The duty and advantage of religious conversation after attendance on public worship. Were those who are returning from the house of God to converse together about Christ as did those men in walking to Emmaus from Jerusalem, his gracious presence would be more frequently vouchsafed than it is at present. How prone we are in returning even from the solemnities of a communion, and that too, on the Lord's day, to indulge in mere worldly conversation! Satan is aided thus in his work of obliterating good impressions and snatching away good seed sown.

Christ may be very near us when we do not think he is. Our eyes may be "holden" so that we do not recognize him in his providential dealings with us, and perceive how he is allowing us to pour out our plaint till we reach the proper point for his discovery of himself to us.

Our ignorance of the Scriptures may be a cause of much unnecessary and hurtful gloom to us. Many things which now perplex us admit of a pleasing solution. Many things which seem adverse might be seen working for good did we only understand the Scriptures.

A revealing of Christ is often preceded by a pleading with him. Christ seems to walk a distance with some, conversing with them and giving them light; yet because they do not seize the favorable moment for gaining acquaintance with him, they are left in their original state.—Evangelical Repository.

WHEATON COLLEGE.

Terms begin

Dec. 10th, 1878.
Mar. 18th, 1879.
Sept. 2nd, 1879.
Dec. 9th, 1879.

WINTER TERM BEGINS DECEMBER TENTH, 1878.

We desire to ask the attention of every one interested in education to the advantages offered by this Institution. An able and experienced Faculty, thoroughly devoted to the work of the Institution, are now harmoniously laboring to make this College thorough in each department, and so economical that its advantages can be secured by all.

FOURTEEN TEACHERS

are engaged in the College, the Preparatory School, the Sub-preparatory Department, the Department of Music and the School of Drawing and Painting. In each of these Departments, students can enter at any time and advance as rapidly as their abilities will permit. Prof. Baker in Vocal Music and on the Organ gives instruction at very reasonable rates while Miss Brownehas charge of the Piano Room.

PENMANSHIP

German, Free-hand Drawing and Book-keeping are taught by excellent teachers without any extra charge. Vocal Music costs only one dollar per term. Hereafter, as for some time past, special attention will be paid to the study of Elocution and Rhetoric as connected with practical

ORATORICAL WORK.

The charge for tuition is eleven dollars per term. Young ladies can have Room, Board and Tuition for forty-five dollars per term of thirteen weeks. Persons from neighboring towns who wish to be at home from Friday evening to the following Monday can have a reduction of one fifth on the charge for board.

BOARDING PLACES

Those who wish to know the character of Freemasonry, as shown by its own publications, will find many standard works in the following list.

No sensible Mason dares deny that such men as Albert G. Mackey, the great Masonic Lexicographer, and Daniel Sickels, the Masonic author and publisher, are the highest Masonic authority in the United States.

All the books advertised here are used by Masons, but Duncan's Ritual, Allyn's Ritual and Richardson's Monitor, are not publicly acknowledged as Masonic authority, because they tell too much.

FEMALE MASONRY.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO. THURSDAY, DEC. 5, 1878.

Reviling and Slander.

We are fast returning to New Testament times, "When men shall revile you and persecute you and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for Christ's sake." Mat. 5: 11.

Our readers have noticed the case of Elder Austin of Iowa, declared by a Baptist ex-parte council "unworthy of a name in the Gospel ministry," without one specific charge of crime, immorality or error. Pointless accusation is "railing accusation," which is specifically forbidden. And "if any one that is called a brother be a fornicator, drunkard, extortioner or railer," his brethren are forbidden to associate with him so much as to eat food at the same table. 1 Cor. 5: 11. And in the following chapter we are assured that neither "thieves, drunkards nor revilers," shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. Well, one of that Baptist ex-parte council has written us a letter the real burden and object of which was, to impress us that Freemasonry had nothing to do with the condemnation of Elder Austin.

Such was the late ex-parte council called Congregational here in Wheaton against myself, led by the Senior Warden of the lodge here, and yet they went through the lying, impudent farce of asking some of their witnesses whether they were Masons, to show that Freemasonry had nothing to do with their guilty attempts on me. Some years since just after our first National Convention in Chicago, a similar attempt was made to ruin a Wesleyan brother, only, in this case, the charges were specific, but the letter containing them was anonymous!

The climax case is that of Rev. W. W. Ames, pastor of a respectable Baptist church in Menomonee, Wisconsin. Bro. Ames first offended the craft about a Masonic funeral, and the Masons and their "Jacks" undertook to drive him away. This was some ten or twelve years ago. He was sustained by William Wilson, Esq., an able and determined man, who furnished means and sent his pastor to Pittsburgh to our first National Convention in 1868. From that hour both Wilson and Ames have been pursued, by a set of cunning and malignant creatures like those who brought the woman before Christ on charge of adultery, who were in heart adulterers themselves.

These men, on the information of a man who had once been adjudged insane, lately arrested Ames on charge of adultery, and got a weak girl who had worked in Bro. Ames' family, and who at first indignantly declared her own and his innocence of the charges, to accuse him, (Ames) of improper advances. The judge and several of the jury were Masons, but they would have cleared Ames in ten minutes, but for one Knight Templar who got on the jury by perjury, and swore he would rot there before he would clear Ames. Of course he hung the jury and they were discharged. A nolle prosequi was entered by the prosecution, and thus ended the brutal and inhuman persecution of an innocent man and blameless minister of Christ, whose whole demeanor and uniform behavior are the very opposite of the infamous charges by which he has been sought to be ruined. "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake." "So persecuted they the prophets" of all ages. That a clique of lawyers should assail a man like Ames; fill the country with the bruit of his trial; and then sneak out through a nol. pros., proves the terrible truth uttered by U. S. Senator Pomeroy in Farwell Hall, Chicago, at our first convention here, when he told us that when the masses come to know that the lodge controlled court proceedings, "our court-houses will sink into popular contempt." The discontinuing the prosecution against Bro. Ames by a nol. pros. is not only a clearing of him, but a confession and conviction of crime on the part of his prosecutors.

If our readers will but recall, or recur to the Masonic oaths, they will see how otherwise decent men are turned to malignant fiends and demons by those oaths. Every Mason who adheres to those oaths is a sworn malignant persecutor and slanderer of all who effectually oppose the lodge, and uphold Christ whom the lodge hates and excludes. Many of the Baptist preachers on that reviling ex-parte council, like the pastors of Quincy and Galesburg are men in high standing in that respectable denomination. Yet one of them seeks to convince us that Masonry had nothing to do with the proscription of Austin! Soon after Dr. Edward Beecher's terrible report against the lodge was published, the Masons held a convention of twenty-one lodges in Galesburg, and the Baptist church there got up their lodge-dinner and was reported to have cleared one thousand dollars by it. Masonry has nothing to do with the persecution of Austin by the pastor of that church. Shame!

—To the note last week in which quotations were made from the Voice of Masonry it is thought a word should be added. The Voice says truly that "the fundamental principles of Freemasonry are being violently assailed;" the foes within are correctly mentioned, but the name of the strongest foe without, the editor must have overlooked. The Almighty Triune God of the Holy Bible, "who says, I am the door," and that all professing to save men in any other way than through Christ are thieves and robbers—he is indeed the only outside foe they need fear. We earnestly ask the editor of the Voice, as well as all others who realize the power opposing them, to come out, humbly confessing and forsaking their sins and renouncing the institution which has deceived them; not remaining to be crushed in their own idolatrous temple by the power of God as were the Philistines of old, but rather to flee from it before its fall and devote the rest of their lives to the service of Christ and his kingdom.

"Shame being Lost All's Lost."
MILTON.

The analogies between an adulteress and a minister of Christ complicated with and corrupted by such idolatries as are now represented by the lodge or Romish superstitions, are numerous in the Bible; but in nought more striking than in the loss of shame, and consequent impudence.

Our readers have been made acquainted with the name of the United Brethren Tribune, started some years since in the interest of the lodge. That paper has disappeared from our notice, and the Monthly Itinerant comes in its place. The Tribune publishers boasted to me that they had any amount of funds pledged, which might be needed, yet that paper has disappeared from our exchange list. They dissembled its true character, saying it was anti-secret, "but they needed an Eastern paper," yet their nullification convention recommended its transfer to Dayton! Thus the movement was born in hypocrisy, dissimulation and lies. This monthly now shows its lineage. It sneers at the Religious Telescope, yet lauds the publisher, who has employed Odd-fellows and other secret society men in the Printing House at Dayton; and it enacts the farce of advising its readers to subscribe for the Telescope; adding: "Remember the Telescope is our paper and we do not mean to forsake it, either." It appeals to "Old East Pennsylvania Conference" preachers to "roll up" the Telescope list, and adds: "When you fail to get the people to take the Telescope, then sell them the Itinerant for that is our paper too." This is like the language of a concubine who sticks to both husband and lover; to one for money and character, to the other for whoredom; yet the mistress will poison the husband to get his estate. This the Itinerant already attempts. In a late article entitled "Ahab," this paper discourses thus:

"There is an Ahab that troubles the United Brethren church. His citadel is a vain supposition in the minds of some ministers, a few of whom have sought and obtained position in the church, that the great and only mission of this grand old American church is to oppose secret societies."

"May God speedily deliver the church from this misguided zeal. * * * Then the church's mission as Otterbein, Bœhm and Newcomer understood and practiced it; and as Erb, Glossbrenner, Weaver, Shuey and a host of others understand and practice it, will be so understood by all."

And after thus, by commending other bishops, sneering at and falsely accusing Bishops Dickson, Wright and Castle and others as ambitious Ahabs, troubling the Brethren church, the Itinerant editor puts in the National Christian Association as another of its Ahabs; and proceeds to utter falsehood after falsehood concerning it. He says, for instance, that the National Christian Association has "had candidates in the field for political offices." Whereas all the candidates we have ever supported have been nominated by conventions of citizens, be they infidels or Jews, who will vote against the secret orders. The Itinerant also speaks of our National Christian Association as "This Association or church," etc. Now as many as nineteen different Christian denominations have been represented in our meetings before there was any incorporation; and the Carpenter fund has been aided, it is presumed, by nearly as many. We have from first to last avowed our purpose never to form another sect or denomination, but, leaving their several polities intact, to unite existing denominations in a Christian association against the heathenism of the lodge. The utter impossibility of uniting Seventh-day Baptists, Covenanters, Presbyteriaans, regular Baptists, etc., etc., in one "church" is plain to the meanest comprehension. And if we were wicked enough to profess one thing and practice another, all can see that such an attempt must fail, and we should defeat our own end and object, which is to unite the godly of all sects and denominations against the lodge. And "The Associated Churches of Christ" recently inaugurated has been started as distinct from the National Christian Association, as are the Presbyterians or United Brethren; so that outsiders and persons cast out by lodge-governed churches can co-operate with each other in Christian work and missions. Our universal, avowed and plain practical purpose is and has been to infringe on no denomination which does not allow the worship of devils in its communion.

But all the wicked falsehoods of the Itinerant are outdone by their misrepresentation of the "United Brethren in Christ," and its revered and sanctified founders, OTTERBEIN, BOEHM and NEWCOMER, We appeal fervently to every minister and member of the East Pennsylvania conference against the misreprsentation of the memories of those holy men, who from the first "refused to receive members of such [secret] societies" to fellowship. (History U. B. Church, vol. ii., p. 170.)

Now these men of the Itinerant war on the rule excluding Freemasons and have the shameless impudence to quote the founders of the church as on their side. At its outset, before the Morgan excitement, the Brethren church met, in limine, and excluded Freemasons from their communion. An eloquent preacher, John Brown, prior to 1826, had been drawn into the lodge in hope of better support. He was required to repent. "He repented heartily and was forgiven." (His. U. B. Ch. Vol. 4, p. 172). On the 8th day of June, 1826, three months before Morgan's murder, three more ministers had joined the lodge, viz., Carder, McNamar and Farmer. They were among the most influential of the preachers. Their conference took up their case and unanimously adopted the following paper:

"Whereas, we have members in this conference who belong to the Masonic fraternity, therefore we feel a disposition to bear with them and deal with them as brethren, so long as they do not attend Masonic lodges, * * * but if any of our brethren should hereafter join said fraternity, they shall not only be deprived of the privilege of taking charge of a circuit, or of holding any authority in an official capacity, but they shall thereby expel themselves from the connection. No preacher shall encourage any of our members in joining the Masonic fraternity, nor those who are Masons in joining our society."

Now Bishops Dickson, Wright and Castle fall short of rather than exceed the zeal and stringency of Otterbein, Boehm and Newcomer; and the former rule excluding secret societies was more rather than less stringent than the one now warred on by these men, who are the real Ahabs who trouble Israel with their idolatries and accuse the Elijahs who oppose them!

The ministers who conduct the Itinerant, to wit, G. W. M. Rigor, G. W. Miles, Lewis Peters, I. K. Fisher, J. H. Young, J. L. Kephart, F. Fisher, J. Wesley Etter and J. P. Anthony, unless they are weak and ignorant, must know that they are falsifiers of the history of their church and wicked railers on its anti-secret leaders. There is no use dallying with such men. "Cursed be the deceiver who hath in his flock a male and voweth and sacrificeth to the Lord a corrupt thing." Mal. 1: 14.

The fact that some of those ministers "were once enlightened, and have tasted of the good word of God and the powers of the world to come," makes no difference. The prophet Daniel, 11: 35, who spoke of these days, saith: "Some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge and to make them white, even to the time of the end."

—Next week our readers may expect the able paper read by Gen. J. W. Phelps of Brattleboro, Vermont, before the National Convention. Of this paper Prof. W. O. Tobey says in the Telescope: "We regard this as one of the most creditable papers we have ever heard read on the subject. Free from mere assertion, logical and erudite, it will rank among the addresses that will live."

—Rev. E. G. Cooper, State lecturer for Missouri, is just starting out for an active work with Bro. G. W. Needles of the Albany Freeman, throughout the northwestern part of the State. They will report weekly through the Freeman the effect of their lectures.

—A late number of the Appleton, Wisconsin, Crescent puts the whole Masonic attempt to destroy the character of Rev. W. W. Ames in a nutshell in the paragraph quoted herewith. Now that their villainy is attracting attention away from home the Menomonee Masons are fiercely active; the local editor is greatly agitated over the resolution passed at Waupun; and, doubtless, this influence will be most active in its effort to destroy the Baptist church of Menomonee. The last two sentences should be read with double emphasis. The Masonic editor cannot conceal his hand, but must betray himself in favor of "benevolent organizations" and the Masonic black-ball:

"A nolle prosequi was entered in the suit against Rev. W. W. Ames, of Menomonee, Dunn county, who was tried on an information for adultery, the jury failing to agree. This is the Ames who has attempted to make himself notorious by his unseemly, unclerical and ungentlemanly warfare against 'secret societies.' It is probable that the charge against him was unfounded, but it is just as well to keep an eye upon all men who are blatant against benevolent organizations. As a rule when you come across such a man, you will find him to be one who has been deemed unworthy to be admitted to the fellowship of true men."

Worcester after the Convention.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 27, '78.

The real effect of a convention may often be more justly estimated after the first glow of ardor has subsided and I have been not a little anxious to learn the opinions of calm Christian thinkers in this city after they have had time for reflection. The opposition has now had time to defame and assail and has shown its accustomed generosity in attacking personal character, but so far as I can learn no denial of the exposition given by Bro. Ronayne has been attempted. It is said that letters have been received from Chicago very damaging in their statements, but as usual they are kept out of sight, and there is a very noticeable want of direct or positive assertion on the part of those who attempt to defend Masonry. The craft was fitly represented and duly heard from last Sabbath evening through Rev. St. John, pastor of the Universalist church in this city and Grand Prelate of the lodge, who wisely and studiedly avoided any denial or direct attack, but gave the evening very largely to insinuations and glorifications. Judging from the best information I can obtain the efforts of Masons to destroy the impressions made by our convention upon the minds of thinking people, have only deepened and strengthened their convictions that Freemasonry is a system of iniquity that destroys the integrity of its members so far as they yield to its influence, and that it was correctly exposed and fairly discussed during the convention.

The evangelical ministers of this city meet every Monday morning for conference, etc. The morning following the convention Mr. Ronayne was present and by request spoke for over an hour and replied to such questions as the brethren saw fit to ask. This I have reason to believe was one of the most effective meetings held here. Last Monday morning this subject was again before the pastors' meeting, and for the fourth time. I was absent with the pastors' meeting in Hartford, Conn., but on returning learned with satisfaction that the question was freely discussed and that it is not likely to end with a parlor investigation.

The Worcester Pastors.

Rome, N. Y., Nov. 28.

I left Worcester at 9:55 this A. M., in a thankful mood, for the memory of so many kindnesses received while in New England, but the consciousness that something has been done for the Master and for his bride the church, is best of all. A very great change has taken place in Worcester since I reached that city on the 23d day of October last. What was then a secret known only to a few, is now the common property of men, women and children who have never passed beyond the mystic vail, and the clergy who were ignorant, and indifferent on account of their ignorance, are thoroughly stirred up and sufficiently informed to act intelligently; and now since they know what Masonry is, and what God requires his ministers to do as well with modern as with ancient paganism, we have a right to expect them to quit themselves like men. There are but two or three among the orthodox pastors in Worcester who have not expressed dislike for the whole lodge system, and some of the most able and influential have spoken in very strong terms. I rejoice in this and so do many true and faithful hearts, and I can hardly entertain the thought that these brethren will remain silent on this question in the prayer meeting, or keep back the solemn warning from those who wait upon their ministry and who will with them appear at the judgment seat of Christ. To me it seems a thing incredible that they should longer remain passive in their public ministrations. The providence of God has placed them where every advantage is on their side, and as it seems to me where nothing but that fear which "bringeth a snare" can deter them from bold decisive measures. The people are awake and ready for the plain truth. The lodge trembles and dares not deny the exposition. More than one among the clergy of Worcester testifies from personal experience to the substantial correctness of all that has been shown and said of the inner work of Freemasonry, and not one who adheres will manfully deny a single material point made against the order.

The lodge has spoken by its "Grand Prelate," the Universalist Rev. St. John, who champions the cabalistic crew, and says prayers as chaplain in their worships; to which Sabbath-school superintendents, secretaries in Y. M. C. Associations, deacons and members of evangelical churches are expected to respond "So mote it be"; and now since the glove is thrown into the very face of the Christian ministry in Worcester I cannot believe they will tamely submit. I will not even in my fears for a moment seriously entertain the thought that the priest of Baal in Worcester who advocates the modernized Baal-worship of Freemasonry and prays for its success, should be more zealous, fearless and out spoken in its defense than are the "called and annointed" of God in defense of Jesus and his truth. God and not men has brought the issue. He it is that is weighing his ministers in the balance, and will "they be found wanting?" It is a critical and decisive hour and the destiny of souls awaits the decision. A concerted, united and honest expression on the part of the ministers in Worcester, would shake the dark kingdom of secrecy, not only in Worcester and New England but throughout the entire nation, for many eyes are turned thither and many hearts are anxiously awaiting results, while silence would be construed as a confession of weakness or of fear, such as no man or minister of Christ would willingly make, or remember in after years without a blush of shame. Opportunities like the present occur not often in the lifetime of any one man, and neglected may never again return. With them come responsibilities, which if met in the self-sacrificing, loving Spirit of the Master will surely bring the promised peace, but which if neglected will be the occasion of spiritual leanness and serious regret.

Let us all unite in daily and importunate prayer for the spread of light and truth and especially for Zion's watchmen in Worcester upon whom rest such weighty responsibilities and to whom God in his providence has given such grand opportunities. If we desire faithfulness in others let us inspire them by our example and sustain them by our prayers, lest we be found wanting when called to account for our stewardship.

True Heroism.

It calls for something more than brawn
On bloody, ghastly fields,
When honor greets the man who wins,
And death the man who yields;
But I will write of him who fights
And vanquishes his sins,
Who struggles on through years
Against himself, and wins.

Here is a hero, staunch and brave,
Who fights an unseen foe,
And puts at least beneath his feet
His passions, base and low;
And stands erect in manhood's might,
Undaunted—undismayed—
The bravest man who e'er drew sword,
In foray or in raid.

It calls for something more than brawn
Or muscle to o'ercome
An enemy who marched not
With banner, plume or drum—
A foe forever lurking nigh,
With silent, stealthy tread—
Forever near your board by day,
At night beside your bed.

All honor, then, to that brave heart,
Though rich or poor he be,
Who struggles with his baser part—
Who conquers and is free.
He may not wear a hero's crown,
Or fill a hero's grave;
But truth will place his name among
The bravest of the brave.

Restitution.

I am preaching more restitution than I used to. I believe that it is a sin that is keeping back blessing from the church of God. If you have taken one dollar from a man, you ought to restore not only the dollar, but the interest. If by slander you have tried to ruin a man, or tried to ruin his character, you ought to go to him and do all you can to make restitution—to save his feeling and his character. A man came to me in one of the eastern cities last winter and says, "Mr. Moody, I want to become a Christian, but I can't pray. I have tried to, but it seems as if the heavens protest, and all is dark." I probed him, and tried to find out the difficulty, and at last says I, "Isn't there some sin you are covering up?" And the man colored to the roots of his hair, and says, "Mr. Moody, I am a defaulter for $1500." Says I, "Why don't you confess?" He says, "I am going into business, and am going to try to make it up. I have a lovely wife and family, and I can't confess. It would be the ruin of my family, and my ruin. I am just going into business, and expect to make that money and to pay it back. I don't know but I may be wrong in that." "Yes," says I, "of course you can't pray with that difficulty over you. Going into business with other men's money! Just been robbing men!" "Oh! what shall do?" "Make restitution." "I can't; it would be the ruin of me." "How much have you got out of the $1500?" "$900—some day I'll pay pay back every dollar. I can't go to my employers and confess. They will put me into the courts." "I don't know whether they will or not." He said he couldn't do it, and went away, wanting me to pray for him. "How can I if you are no willing to make restitution?" I told him I would pray that God wouldn't give any sleep to his eyes or slumber to his eyelids until he gave back that money.

The next day he came back and said he could not sleep. "Is there no other way out of this agony?" "No; do the right thing and God will set you right." He shrank from it. "How can I do it? I am sure they will put me into the courts and it will ruin my family." Says I, "Do right and the Lord will remember you." Finally he put into my hands $981.21 in a sealed envelope, and says, "That money follows me, and I don't want it any longer. I have taken the last cent my wife and I have, and if my friends will not save me from the penitentiary it will be the death of us." I went to his employers and got them into a room and told them the whole story. "There is some of your money, and I don't think you ought to ruin him." Tears ran down their cheeks, and I saw they would deal mercifully with him; and so I went down stairs and brought him up, and those three men got on their knees and prayed together. Friends rallied around him, and he has gone into business, and been successful from that hour. God delivered him and he is reconciled and at peace. He had sins, and set his face to do right. If you want power, if you want God to bless you, make restitution.—D. L. Moody.

How a Clergyman was Cured of Using Tobacco.

About forty years ago Mr. John Tappan, one of those genuine philanthropists for which Boston was noted half a century since, lived in an elegant mansion on Summer street. He had retired from active business, but had fitted up an office in the house where he received business calls. He was a scrupulously neat man, and had a particular abhorrence of the use of tobacco in any form. He was as strong in his antipathy to its use as he was to the use of ardent spirits. The surroundings of his office were to the minutest particular indicative of the individual man. One of the leading avenues through which went out his benevolence was that of aiding indigent churches and helping impecunious clergymen. On one occasion a well known clergyman of Vermont came to Boston to obtain aid for his church. He called on good old Deacon Proctor, then a leading hardware merchant, and made known his wants. The good deacon took him at once to the residence of Mr. Tappan, introduced him, and left. On being invited to take a seat, the clergyman put into his mouth a huge quid of tobacco. Looking around to see where he should expectorate, he saw an open coal fire, but the bars of the grate were polished steel. This would not do. Next his attention was directed to a copper coalscuttle, the outside of which shone like burnished gold, and it was heaped with cannel coal. Here was his opportunity, and he discharged his stream of saliva, making a perfect cascade over the coal. Being relieved, he commenced to state his case, stopping frequently to discharge his tobacco juice. Meanwhile Mr. Tappan sat fidgeting in his seat, and finally interrupted the good clergyman by stating that he had made it a rule never to give anything to an intemperate man, and, rising, bowed the clergyman out.

Overwhelmed with grief and mortification the good man sought Deacon Proctor, and burst out with the exclamation: "I have never been so insulted in my life."

Deacon Proctor asked him to give an acount of his interview with Mr. Tappan, which he did, not dreaming that the tobacco had anything to do with his sudden dismissal.

"Sit here," said the deacon; "I will go and see Mr. Tappan."

Arriving at the office he found the windows wide open and a girl scrubbing. "Mr. Tappan," said the deacon, "you have hurt the feelings of one of the best of men, a devoted Christian, and a faithful pastor. What does it mean?"

Mr. Tappan repeated what had happened, and pointed to the coalscuttle. "Why, sir, it will take a week to get this room purified."

The deacon returned and smoothed over the matter as well as he could, and the clergyman took his leave.

In just one year from that day the clergyman again made his appearance at the store of Deacon Proctor, and asked him to accompany him to the house of Mr. Tappan. Arrived there, the clergyman, looking hale, hearty, and clean, extended his hand to Mr. Tappan, exclaiming: "My dear sir, you have been the means of breaking me of a vile habit, which I thought innocent, but which had got a hold on me I little dreamed of. From the day of my last interview with you I have never put tobacco in any form in my mouth, and, by the blessing and the help of God, I never will again."—National Temperance Advocate.

The celebrated Adam Clark, the commentator, says: "I consider dancing a branch of that worldly education which leads from heaven to earth, from things spiritual to things sensual, and from God to Satan. Let them plead for it who will, I know it to be an evil and only evil. 'No man in his senses would dance,' said Cicero, a heathen. Shame, then, on those Christians who advocate a cause by which many sons become profligate, and many daughters have been ruined."

Thousands of good people never half enjoy even enjoyable homes, because they are always looking ahead, and never learn the beauty and value of to-day. They go through life expecting enjoyment by and by, but without the art to take it as it comes. They learn too late that they passed happiness on the road without recognizing her.

Others are never satisfied with anything that happens to be theirs. Their friends' houses, possessions and privileges are much better than their own, and an article once obtained loses fifty per cent. of its value. Of the two habits, that of thinking your own children, home, pictures, books, horses, dogs, cats—everything—the best simply because they are yours, is better for your own peace of mind and your neighbors' comfort; than the opposite habit of depreciating everything for the same reason. Your self-satisfied fellow may be something of a prig, but he is a much pleasanter man to have around than the self-dissatisfied one; and he has, besides, a good deal better time.

The art of life does not consist, as the pleasant cynicism declares, in being well deceived; but it does lie largely within the philosophy of making the best of things, and of seeking to do the common things of life, as the great things, in the best way.

In 1637 an edition of the Bible was printed in Edinburg, in which the line, Jeremiah 4:17, which refers to the commonwealth of Judah, instead of "Because she hath been rebellious against me, saith the Lord," was printed: "Because she hath been religious against me." Numerous fines and penalties were inflicted on publishers in consequence of errors and omissions in printing the Bible. Doctor Johnson in his "Memoirs of Seldon," says: "Archbishop Usher, on his way to preach at St. Paul's Cross, entered a bookseller's shop and purchased a London edition of the Bible, in which to his astonishment and dismay, he found the text he had selected was omitted." This was the occasion of the first complaint on the subject and inducing further attention, the King's printers, in 1632, were justly fined £3,000 for omitting the word "not" in the seventh commandment. During the reign of the Parliament a large impression of the Bible was suppressed on account of its errors and corruptions, many of which were the results of design as well as negligence. The errors in two of the editions actually amounted respectively to 3,600 and 3,000.

Uncle Joe's Talk with the Boys.

I would speak an earnest word to those boys who are thinking of leaving home. You are anxious to push out for yourselves. In many instances there are younger brothers in the family, and you think the farm is hardly large enough for all. Those who live in the East are anxious to go West, and those who live in what is termed the West, desire to go still farther towards the setting sun. At any rate, as you look at it, it seems desirable in order to succeed that you go as far as possible away from home. No doubt many young men have done as well, if not better, by casting themselves among strangers; they have worked harder, and denied themselves more than they would have done at home. But it is a very important step and one which will pay you to look all over, before you take it. If you intend to go among friends of your family, or with a companion of your own townspeople, it will make it much better; but to start out all alone, and throw yourself among strangers in a distant State, is "a hard row to hoe." It is true you may be successful, but the chances are all against you, and it is quite likely you will hear the cry of "hard times," no matter which road you travel. Taking it all in all, as things stand now, there is little difference in favor of one part of the country over another.

The man who works an Eastern farm will have many days of hard labor in the course of the year, on land that don't yield much; but on the other hand he has a good market, and can sell at a fair price all from the farm he wishes to sell; he will live as well, and his home will be as pleasant and well-furnished as that of the Western farmer; the chances of his children getting a good education are as fair, if not better, than in many parts of the West. The only advantage there seems to be is that if you have a little money left when you are at your journey's end, and know how to take care of it, you can do more with it than at the East. But if you have no money, and must go to work for any one who will hire your time, you will find that in order to get into the condition you wish to be, will require much hard work and self-denial. And when, in future years, you visit your old home, you may be likely to find that those of your early companions who remained there have done about as well, and somehow, you will be apt to think, have fared a little better. Doubtless much of this "changing about" in our country is owing in a great measure to our restless disposition. Mr. Greeley remarked, while making his overland journey to California, as he passed many emigrants to that Eldorado, and about as many coming back, that he didn't think there was another such a restless, uneasy people on the face of the globe.

To the boy who has become dissatisfied with his home and its wholesome restraints; who thinks he is hindered from being all he could be; who thinks the family are no help to him; who speaks of father and mother as "old man" and "old woman;" who is determined to leave home whether they are willing or not—allow me to say in all kindness, you are getting yourself into bad shape. Such thoughts are poison. If you continue to cherish them no one will suffer more than yourself. Nothing, absolutely nothing, can be done to better your condition while you are in such a frame of mind. As has been said before, in order to be successful, you will have to move with much caution; all the good counsel your family can give you will be so much clear gain. So let me entreat you to get rid of the thought that they are not willing to help you to be all that you can be. When you go among strangers you will find for a long time that the community have only taken you on trust. There may be nothing wrong about you. We will allow that you are all right, but some one has said that "confidence is a plant of slow growth," so you see if you go among strangers you must for awhile stand before the people "on trial." If the time ever comes when good men are obliged to "let go of you" it will be a sad day for you.—New York Tribune.

Big Joe and Little Joe.

I never can forget an incident during the cholera of 1832. One morning a sailor came to say I must go three miles down the river to a village where it had broken out with great fury. Off I set. We rowed in silence down the dark river, passing the huge hulks, and hearing the restless convicts turning in their beds in their chains. The men rowed with all their might; they had too many dying or dead at home to have the heart to speak to me. We got near the place. It was very dark, but I saw a crowd of men and women on the shore, all shouting for the doctor. We were near the shore when I saw a big old man, his hat off, his hair gray, his head partly bald. He said nothing, but turning them all off with his arm he plunged into the sea, and before I knew where he was, he had me in his arms. I was helpless as an infant. He waded out with me carrying me high in his left arm, and with his right levelling every man or woman who stood in his way. It was Big Joe, carrying me to see his grandson, Little Joe. He bore me off to the poor convulsed boy, and dared me to leave him till he was better. He did get better; but Big Joe was dead that night! He had the disease on him when he carried me away from the boat, but his heart was set upon his boy. I can never forget how terribly in earnest he was.—Dr. John Brown, Edinburgh.

Good Manners at Home.

1. Shut every door after you without slamming it.
2. Never stamp, jump or run in the house.
3. Never call to persons up stairs or in the next room; if you wish to speak to them, go quietly where they are.
4. Always speak kindly and politely to the servants, if you would have them do the same to you.
5. When told to do, or not to do, a thing by either parent, never ask why you should or should not do it.
6. Tell of your own faults, not of those of your brothers and sisters.
7. Carefully clean the mud or snow from your boots or shoes before entering the house.
8. Be prompt at every meal.
9. Never sit down at the table or in the parlor with dirty hands or tumbled hair.
10. Never interrupt any conversation, but wait patiently for your turn to speak.
11. Never reserve your good manners for strangers, but be equally polite at home and abroad.
12. Let your first, last, and best confidant be your mother.—Ex.

How to act in Case of Fire.

Better than all elaborate and costly apparatus for extinguishing fires are constant care and watchfulness, and quick and intelligent action on the part of those who first discover a fire in progress. The fire which at its beginning could be smothered with a pocket-handkerchief, or dashed out with a bucket of water, neglected a few hours lays in waste millions of dollars' worth of property. If there is any time in which a person should be cool and calm, in perfect command of himself, it is when he discovers a fire that threatens the destruction of life and property. The first thing to do is to learn precisely where it is; the second, to consider the chances of extinguishing it. Of course an alarm in cities should at once be sent out, but at the same time a vigorous effort should be made to put out the fire with the means at hand; for sometimes what the fire engine is unable to accomplish when it reaches the scene, can be done by one or two persons who act promptly before the flames have had time to gain headway.

First, then, do not alarmed on account of smoke. Frequently there is a great deal of smoke before the fire has made much progress. Remember that one can pass through smoke by keeping his head near the floor, or by enveloping it in a wet woolen cloth. On entering a room to fight down a fire single-handed, keep the door closed behind, if possible. A pail of water and a tin dipper, in the hands of a resolute person, can be made to work a miracle at the beginning. If the fire has progressed too far to admit of this course, and it is necessary to depend entirely on outside help, then see to it that every door and window is closed. By so doing, where there is a fire-engine in the neighboorhood, it will often be possible to confine the fire to one room. Every person who stops at a hotel should take special pains before retiring to note the location of the stairways, so that in case of an alarm he can find his way out, even though the halls are filled with smoke. Never leave a room where there is an alarm of fire without first securing a wet towel, or, if possible, a wet sponge or piece of woollen cloth, through which to breathe. If escape by the stairs is cut off, seek an outside window, and stay there until help comes. Above all things be cool and have your wits about you. When a lady's dress takes fire, let her fall on the floor at once and call for help, in the meantime reaching for some rug or woollen cloth with which to smother the flames. There is nothing new in this advice. It has been repeated in one form or another hundreds of times; but will bear repeating thousands of times.—American Builder.

Fits.

For a Fit of Ambition.—Go to the the church-yard and read the grave stones. They will tell the end of man at his best estate. "For what is your life? It is even a vapor that appeareth for a little time and then vanishes away." "Pride goeth before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall."

For a Fit of Repining.—Look about for the halt and the blind, and visit the bed-ridden, the afflicted and the deranged; and they will make you ashamed of complaining of your light afflictions. "Wherefore does a living man complain."

For a Fit of Envy.—Go and see how many who keep their carriages are afflicted with rheumatism, gout and dropsy; how many walk abroad on crutches or stay at home wrapped up in a flannel; and how many subject to epilepsy and apoplexy. "A sound heart is the life of the flesh. Envy is the rottenness of the bones."

Hot Water for Wounds.—Hot water in the treatment of bruises and wounds is strongly advocated by certain medical authorities. In proof of its efficacy, the New York Medical Journal cites the following case: The hand of a workman in a machine-shop was crushed under the fall of a trip-hammer weighing 700 pounds. The hammer was arrested when within a half-inch of its bed, but the palm of the unfortunate hand receiving the blow was reduced to a pulp. The metacarpal bones were extensively comminuted, yet, in the hope of saving the member, it was kept immersed in hot water for two or three weeks, and then taken out and dressed. In three months the patient was dismissed from the hospital, and in nine months was able to move his fingers and demonstrate that he still possessed a useful hand. The temperature of the water employed in such cases should be about 103 degrees Fahrenheit.

Harslets for Poultry.—Calves' or sheep's lights and livers, which can be obtained in the market-houses for a few cents apiece, are valuable to feed poultry, for two reasons. They are devoid of bones, and they closely resemble insect diet. We advise the cooking of any sort of meat food always. These "harslets" (or those of swine) should be boiled, seasoned with salt and pepper, and fed, say twice a week, to fowls, where they can be had handily. For laying hens, when confined in winter, this change of food from constant grain feeding is excellent. For young stock, where chickens are confined to small runs or loose cages, this meat, chopped up and mixed three times a week with their soft food, will help the younglings wonderfully.—Poultry World.

Bathing.—Hall's Journal of Health gives some good rules for bathing. Warm water, soap and a hair brush should always be used, and the temperature of the room be at least 70 degrees. Baths should always be taken early in the morning, because the system then has best powers of reaction. Do not bathe after a meal or after fatiguing exercise. If you are restless at night, rub your whole body with your hand. Too much bathing destroys the softness and mobility of the skin.

THE UNITED CHURCHES OF CHRIST.

New Ruhamah Congregational church, Hamilton, Miss., August 25th, 1878.

Pleasant Ridge Congregational church, Sanford Co., Ala., September, 1878.

New Hope Methodist church, Lowndes Co., Miss., October, 1878.

What name shall be next?

—During the absence of Prof. C. A. Blanchard at the East, the pulpit of the College church has been supplied by Dr. A. H. Hiatt, President Blanchard and Dr. J. B. Walker. The latter preached on Thanksgiving day. Prof. Blanchard is expected home this week.

BAPTIST.

—Rev. Nathan Brown, D.D., now laboring as missionary in Japan, has translated about half the New Testament into the Japanese tongue for the Baptist converts.

—Elder J. L. Barlow read, by request, a paper on "The Second Coming of Christ and his Kingdom," in the Baptist ministers' meeting of Chicago, last week The Standard says of it: "He presented quite elaborately the premillennial view of the question, sustaining it by the usual arguments and authorities, well worked out and presented." Rev. Mr. Ames of Wisconsin, and Dr. Everts of this city, took part in the discussion which followed. Elder Barlow's views in presenting this topic are somewhat original.

—Rev. W. W. Ames of Menominee, Wisconsin, returned home last Friday. His visit to this city has been highly beneficial, and he returns home a well man. He has while here encouraged us by a cheerful serenity while suffering from the vilest attacks upon his character at home; and his presence in the State Convention added to the dignity and ability of that body. Let the prayers of the people of God attend him to the ultimate and speedy overthrow of his calumniators.

—Elder Barlow preached in the Baptist church at Oak Park, eight miles west of this city, last Sabbath.

UNITED PRESBYTERIAN.

—Dr. James Harper, late of the Theological Seminary at Newburgh, N. Y., has been chosen by the Faculty of the seminary at Xenia to fill the place made vacant by the removal of Prof. McMichael to Monmouth College. He has accepted and will be in the seminary before the beginning of the year. Prof. Robert Stewart yet remains at Newburgh.

—Rev. Richard Turnbull was installed pastor of a Detroit congregation on Wednesday evening, Nov. 20th. Rev. D. H. Goodwillie preached the sermon; Rev. T. W. Monteith addressed the pastor, and Rev. J. P. Gibson the people.

—On the departure of Rev. R. A. McAyeal, D.D., president of the Iowa State Association, from Oskaloosa to his new pastorate in Lawrence, Mass., his church voted complimentary resolutions to himself and Mrs. McAyeal. The following is an extract:

Resolved, That we desire, in bidding adieu to our pastor, to bear testimony to the ability and devotedness with which, for almost a quarter of a century, he has labored in ministerial services for the good of this community in general and for us and ours in particular. As a preacher, he has been able and fearless, proclaiming the truth of God with a power, regardless of the frowns and flatteries of men, ever holding up Christ as "the way, the truth, and the life." As a worker in our Sabbath-schools and neighborhoods, he has been attentive and efficient, diligent in means and measures to lead believers up to a higher plane of Christian experience; to persuade sinners to be reconciled to God, and to train for Christ's service the children and youth. In the cause of reform, he has always been in the front, battling for right and resisting every form of evil. In our homes he has been our true friend and tireless benefactor through all our vicissitudes of health and sickness, mirth and mourning, success and disappointment. He has been with us in our joys and sorrows; he has led our children to the foot of the cross; he has knelt by the bedside of our sick and dying loved ones to offer the consolations of the Gospel; he has stood by the open tomb committing their bodies to the dust, with tears of spmpathy and words of comfort; he has cheered us through days of darkness and trial.

—The United Presbyterian, Pittsburgh, Pa., announces that its forms will be changed at the beginning of the year from eight pages to sixteen. A sermon from some prominent minister of the church will be published, at least, once a month.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—A new church was dedicated on the 3d ult. near Bethany, Harrison county, Missouri. Ths services were conducted by Prof. C. J. Kephart, principal of Avalon Academy. The church was paid for.

— Bishop Wright went from Wheaton and the State Convention to La Salle county, Illinois, in company with Rev. W. H. Chandler, of Mendota. On Sabbath he dedicated a new church on Ottawa mission three miles east of Harding, Illinois.

—Rev. A. Wimsett, of Streator, reports in the Telescope a gracious revival of religion near that place in the Salem school house. Sixteen found hope in believing and a class of seventeen was formed.

—Editor Hott, of the Telescope, was lately visited, all unawares, on his birthday by the Summit street congregation, Dayton, and presented with a fine study chair by his Sabbath school class, and a student lamp by Bro. John Kemp in behalf of the congregation. The students of the Biblical Seminary joined the company, and all experienced a most enjoyable occasion.

DISCIPLE.

—Bro. J. T. Walsh announces in the Watch-tower the death of Elder B. Franklin, editor of the Am. Christian Review, in Oct. last. He was a preacher about 42 and an editor 30 years, and in the course of his ministry baptized over 10,000 persons.

CONGREGATIONAL.

—Rev. Israel Brown whose very successful work at Olney, Ill., lately closed on account of Masonic opposition, is filling the pulpit of the Independent church at Streator, for a few Sabbaths.

—Hon. Z Eastman delivers his address on John Brown, on the anniversary of that hero's death, in the old Lovejoy church at Princeton, Ill.

—Rev. Henry Avery of Tonica, Ill., has received a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church College Springs, Iowa. A resolution was introduced at the last regular business meeting of the church to withdraw from the Congregational Association because of its position towards Freemasonry. The motion was laid on the table for the present.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. F. A. Pixley, secretary of the Kansas conference, died Oct. 25th, having just reached his appointment. He was buried at Allendale, Mich., Rev. J. T. Kiggins accompanying the remains from Kansas.

—Rev. A. D. Carter of Deersville, Ohio, is spending the winter in New York State. He has served the church at Deersville for seven years; during the remainder of the present year Rev. Geo. Richey, president of the Central Ohio conference supplies the pulpit.

—Rev. L. W. Krahl of Ontario, N. Y., has been experiencing a revival of much interest and power. At Forestville, N. Y., also under the labors of Rev. O. White, a very extensive revival is proceeding.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton of the Wesleyan visited Willimantic and Staffordsville, Conn., after the Worcester convention, expecting also to visit the vicinity of Boston. At the former place he addressed a temperance meeting on Sabbath afternoon. He returned to Syracuse in time for Thanksgiving.

—Past Master Ronayne stopped at Syracuse on his return from Worcester, and lectured in the Wesleyan church on the religious features of Freemasonry.

—Rev. C. W. Hawley expects soon to remove his family to Wheaton. He is now laboring in the holiness work in New York.

FREE METHODIST.

—The last General Conference meeting in Spring Arbor, Michigan, numbered 33 ministers and 25 laymen, 58 in all. The first Conference held in 1862, numbered only 11 members.

—Revivals were reported last week in Fairfield, Iowa; Ravenna, Michigan; Corinth, New York; and Hastings, Nebraska.

—Rev. E. Mathews is at work with great energy in Michigan. On the 20th ult. he raised a new church at Woodstock and hopes to have it ready for dedication at an early day.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN.

—The annual Synod set apart Thanksgiving day for a collection for the Chinese mission in California and Rev. Dr. Milligan, secretary of the mission board appealed in behalf of that object through the denominational press.

—Rev. D. S. Faris of Sparta, was elected moderator of the presbytery of Illinois at its last meeting.

—At the last meeting of the Kansas presbytery at Winchester Rev. J. M. Armour of Sterling, was chosen moderator and Rev. M. A. Gault, late of Morning Sun, Iowa, now at Hazel Grove, Mo., clerk. The presbytery adopted the following among other resolutions presented by Rev. D. McKee, chairman of the committee:

"That we reiterate our testimony against secret societies, rejoice in the success of Christian associations in diminishing their numbers and influence, and exposing their anti-Christian character before the world; and that we recommend this association, and its organ, the Christian Cynosure, to the cordial support of all our members."

—Dr. McClurkin, president of the Ohio State Association, organized a new Covenanter church in Mansfield, Ohio, in Oct. The new organization numbers 40 communicants, and has called S. A. George to be their pastor.

—The report of the committee on the "Signs of the Times" is just printed. It ably reviews the leading topics of national changes, of reformatory efforts, and of the condition of the churches, and recommends that the National Thanksgiving be appointed as a day of annual thanksgiving for the church.

GERMAN BAPTIST.

—Bro. Bashor, of Waterloo, Iowa, began an evangelical visit to the Tunker churches in Illinois and Eastern States about the first of October. At an old church in Union county, Indiana, the first one of the kind in the State, between twenty and thirty were converted.

—Elder J. W. Stein, of Newtonia, Missouri, is engaged in a lengthy debate with Rev. D. B. Ray, editor of the Baptist Battle Flag of St. Louis, on the question whether the Brethren should be considered a church of Jesus Christ.

MISSIONARY.

—At the beginning of this century the Congregationalists contributed an average of eight cents each for missionary purposes; now the average is $7.52 per annum—the largest sum per capita, contributed by the members any denomination.

—In 1809, when the London Society for promoting Christianity among the Jews was founded, it is said that the most diligent search could only discover 35 Christian Hebrews in the whole of England. Since then more than 20,000 have embraced the faith and been baptized.

—The Primitive Methodists of England are considered the poorest Christian community in the country, and yet they raised last year $150,000 for missionary purposes. This was an average of $1.00 for every member of the denomination, and a higher average than that of most of the wealthier denominations.

—There are now in Japan 106 Prostestant missionaries and forty-four organized churches. Of these congregations twelve are wholly self-supporting, and twenty-six partially. There are 1,617 church members (native converts), a large proportion being men, who have contributed in the year 1877 the sum of $3,552.11. Gradually a liberal, self-supporting Christian church is being developed in Japan. As helpful to this end there are now three theological schools, with one hundred students in course of preparation. There are already nine native ordained preachers, and ninety-three assistant preachers. In the mission hospitals nearly 18,000 patients were treated last year.

—Not long since, news was received of the sudden accession of about 16,000 natives to the Church of England missions in Tinnevelly, India; and now similar intelligence comes from Arcot mission under the Reformed churches of the United States. According to the Madras Atheneum, about 6,000 people residing in different villages, have renounced their idols during the past year and accepted Christianity. They consist of the lowest and most ignorant classes, and though the missionaries do not count them as converted, they see the hand of God and believe that it is part of a great movement toward Christianity.

—The Teloogoos in British India are coming over to Christianity in the true Pentecostal fashion. The Rev. Mr. Clouch writes that in a certain district he baptized 3,262 persons, making the total conversions between June 16 and July 31 (about seven weeks), 8,690. Before January 1, 1879, he is confident that the number can be increased to 5,000 more. At one town he was "literally crowded upon by the people who were pressing into the Kingdom of God."

GENERAL.

—Evangelist J. D. Potter has recently held revival meetings with the Rev. J. D. Stewart at Napoli, Cattaraugus county, N. Y., in which the whole town was moved. Over one hundred hopeful converts are numbered.

—The Methodist ministers of Chicago in their meeting last week discussed Mormonism. Dr. Hatfield held that it was not a matter of conscience but a soul-debasing crime, and on the increase under government protection. The vote of the meeting was that good government ought to disfranchise all polygamists.

—It is reported that a nephew of Charles Dickens, Rev. B. Dickens, is a Methodist minister in Freeport, Illinois.

—Mr. Moody will preach at the Baltimore city jail every Sunday morning during this winter.

—Protestant chapels and schools in Rome are evidently a source of disquietude to the Pope. Catholic architects, contractors, artists, etc., are informed that they are guilty of a deadly sin.

—The Evangelical Mennonites, in conference at Coopersburgh, Pa., recently reaffirmed their position in antagonism to insurance companies and expelled two ministers who refused to submit to the rule. The penalty for taking a policy is expulsion.

—The Bible Society of Geneva, Switzerland, has undertaken to send a copy of the New Testament to each school-teacher in France. It will require about 80,000 copies. The society has already sent about 27,000 copies, and needs funds to complete the work. Each copy costs about sixty cents. The society has received many letters of thanks among them one from a Roman Catholic nun.

—The Thanksgiving number of the New York Christian Union will contain a stirring letter from Secretary Sherman on the South Carolina troubles.

CHEAPEST BIBLES EVER SOLD.

See in another column an advertisement of Illustrated Family Bibles at astonishingly low prices. The American Family Bible Publishing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, is fully able to do what they offer, and we understand that every one who has bought a Bible of them is more than pleased; their Bibles are self-explaining, and the amount of extra matter they bind with the Bible, if bought separately would cost more than they ask for the Bibles. The firm is first-class and the Bibles can be returned if purchasers are not satisfied.

News of the Week.

—Congress met Monday noon and received the President's message, which, as we go to press, it is being sent over the wires. But little was known of its contents by the press, and it is reported that the document was never considered in a cabinet meeting. There is a strong feeling that the Southern question will force its way to the front, although both sides profess a desire to get through with business of the session quietly.

—The new Governor-general of Canada arrived at Halifax last week accompanied by his wife, the Royal Princess Louise. The new governor's name is Sir John Douglas Sutherland Campbell, better known as the Marquis of Lorne. He was received with a grand ovation at Halifax, Quebec and other cities, this being the first visit of a female member of the royal family to this continent. The Duke of Edinburgh, a son of the Queen, is with the squadron at Halifax in the capacity of captain.

—Three Hindoos, who recently killed a young man at Mainpuri as a sacrifice to the goddess Kali, have been arrested, and stand a good chance of being hanged.

—The Berlin police have lately found that at least one-tenth of the population of that city live in cellars. The mortality among them is great. Half of the houses of the city are excessively crowded.

—Another terrible steamship accident is reported from Dover, England. As the Hamburg-American steamer Pommerania, from New York for Hamburg, was proceeding toward the Downs, after having touched at Cherbourg, shortly after 12 o'clock last Monday night, she collided with the English bark Moel Eilien, and sunk within forty minutes. Ninety-four out of the crew of 111, and 72 passengers out of 109 were saved. Although the night was dark and rainy the sea was calm and the approaching vessels discovered each other several minutes before the collision. The bark did not change her course, and the Pommerania, in altering her course, seems to have brought her midships section into such a position that it was a fair target for the iron bow of the bark, which was as sharp as a ram. The blow was a terrific one. The bark crushed into the steamship like an ironclad, at once disabling the latter's engines and ripping her iron skin like paper. There does not seem to have been any inattention to the lookout. The captain and one of the officers were on watch on the bridge. Two of the steamer's eight boats were crushed and one was swamped. The rest were inadequate to save all. Captain Schwenzen made every effort to save his passengers, but the crew seems to have been under little control. The captain went down with the vessel but was rescued by a Holland bound steamer.

—Since the cessation of hostilities twenty-nine vessels have arrived at Constantinople, mostly from the United States, with large cargoes of rifles and cannon. The Turkish troops are now as well furnished with arms as before the war.

—The result of Count Schouvaloff's interview with the Marquis of Salisbury is a failure. The Marquis stated explicitly that Great Britain would not permit, on any account, the slightest infringement of, or deviation from, the Berlin treaty, nor any prolongation of the time of the Russian evacuation of Bulgaria, nor any intermediatory interference in the Afghan affair. The Marquis of Salisbury further expressed his surprise that so able a statesman as Count Schouvaloff should be engaged in such a useless endeavor. Count Schouvaloff, seeing that his mission has entirely failed, will probably leave London at an early day.

—The British expedition to Afghanistan has been pushing its way without serious opposition through the mountains toward Cabul. A dispatch from Peshawur on Friday evening reports a dangerous foe in the rear. It says: Gen. Browne's communications have been temporarily cut. Hostile highlanders, estimated at four thousand in number, have collected in the hills below Ali Musjid. They cut off stragglers and fired on armed parties. The section of the pass between Jumrood and Ali Musjid has been closed altogether for the present. A strongly escorted convoy failed to force its way to-day. The situation is serious, and strong measures are inevitable.

—Under the order of the Prussian ministry declaring persons considered dangerous to the public order may be denied the right of residing in Berlin or its suburbs, about forty conspicuous Socialists have received the order of expulsion, among whom were Messrs. Passelman and Fritscheer.

It appears there is some foundation for the report that General Grant has been proposed as a candidate for the throne of Bulgaria. Under the provisions of the first and third articles of the treaty of Berlin, Bulgaria is constituted an automatic principality, under the suzerainty of a Sultan, with a Christian government and national militia. The Prince is to be elected by the populace, and their choice must be approved and confirmed by the Porte and by England, France, Germany, Russia, Austria and Italy. No member of any reigning European dynasty is eligible to the post, and this provision has greatly limited the number of eligible candidates. The brilliant reputation of General Grant as a soldier and a ruler, it is said, has led the Bulgarian nobles, who are now debating among themselves the question of a ruler, and the details of a new constitution, to look upon him as the most desirable prince.

—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Vienna (semi-official) Political Correspondence says that Russia has announced her intention of actively supporting the Ameer in the event of England occupying any points in Afghanistan from which the Russian dominion in Asia might be effectually threatened. This announcement is based upon the assertion that England has violated the alleged Afghan agreement of Lord Clarendon by the occupation of Quettah. The intention of Russia is apparently confirmed by the Moscow Gazette declaring that intervention is indispensable now that the occupation of Quettah has been succeeded by expeditions in the direction of Candahar and Herat.

—Reports to the English press represent India as fierce for war. One voice we hear raised, though only in prayer against war, and that the voice of the non-Christian Brahmo Somaj, in the "Devotional" column of its organ, the Indian Mirror: "Dark clouds are gathering over the frontier. God Almighty, hasten to our rescue. Appalling and sickening preparations for war have already commenced and troops have begun to move. God Almighty, send thy Holy Spirit to those places where our rulers are holding meetings and taking counsel of each other, and so turn their hearts that they may seek peace, and not war. Teach them to war with their own warlike propensities and vanquish those great enemies anger and ambition. Teach them and teach captains and soldiers to believe that there is greater glory in promoting peace than in causing bloodshed and desolation and death. Lord, may peace descend once more on this ill-fated land!"

THE CYNOSURE AT $1.50 A YEAR

FOR EVERYBODY

UNTIL MARCH 1ST 1879.

This great reduction in the price of the Cynosure is only for the winter months and is made for the purpose of encouraging every subscriber who loves the paper and the cause it represents, to make an earnest effort NOW, in the hope of making the Cynosure truly a mighty power for good, owned and felt in every village of our land, before which the hosts of darkness shall tremble and fall under the mighty hand of our God. Is not the cause a glorious one? Will not YOU be a co-worker with us, yea with God in this great work of enlightening the nation concerning the soul-destroying influence of secretism, which blights and withers everything that is dear to the patriot and Christian?

THE NEW WORK ON MASONIC SYMBOLISM.

My new book proving that Freemasonry corresponds in every ceremony, symbol and legend with the old Osirian worship of pagan Egypt or the Baal worship of Samaria, is now ready for the printer and from estimates received from some of the leading book publishers in Chicago will cost about $500. It will be a book of about 300 pages and well bound. It is indispensably necessary to have this book in our present and future controversy with Masonry and I trust my numerous friends throughout the country will help me to get it out at once.

I want five hundred subscribers at a dollar each for which each subscriber will receive two books. Each one to pay when he receives his books. All I want now is the names of subscribers so that I may go to press as soon as possible.

Please be prompt in this matter and send names to 104 Bremer street, Chicago. E. RONAYNE.

Cynosure Tracts.

These Tracts are furnished at the office or sent at the expense of the party ordering them

At 50 cents per 1,000 pages.

By Mail, 75 cts. per 1,000 pages.

In this series of Tracts will be found the opinions of such men as Hon. J. Q. Adams, Wm. H. Seward, James Madison, Daniel Webster, Richard Rush, John Hancock, Millard Fillmore, Chief Justice Marshall, Seth M. Gates, Nathaniel Colver, President Finney, President Blanchard, Philo Carpenter, Hon. J. B. Walker, Chancellor Howard Crosby and D. L. Moody on the important reform which the CYNOSURE represents.

There is a large and constantly increasing demand for

FREE TRACTS

and contributions are solicited to the

TRACT FUND

for the purpose of supplying them. All donations to this fund are acknowledged each week in the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The distribution of these Tracts has already saved hundreds of young men from the Lodge.

During the year 1877 Free Tracts amounting to 415,000 pages were sent out from the office of the CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE. The present demand is fully 100,000 pages per month, but funds are lacking to meet it.

Many of the most earnest laborers in this cause of God are poor men and women who, though glad to distribute thousands of these leaflets, cannot spare the money to pay for them.

It is especially desirable that there should be a full supply of Tracts for distribution at all Anti-masonic Conventions and Lectures, and just as far as contributions to this fund will supply this need, all such calls are responded to promptly.

"The Anti-Mason's Scrap-Book"

Contains twenty-four CYNOSURE Tracts, bound together, and is a good thing to select from. Price, 20 cents. See advertisement, page 14.

TRACT NO. 7.

SATAN'S CABLE TOW.

This is a careful analysis of the character of Masonic oaths, and shows them to be most blasphemous and un-Christian; and the Masonic Cable Tow is clearly shown to be the Cable Tow by which Satan is leading thousands to eternal death.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 8.

This is a double tract, "ILLUSTRATED." The first page represents a Mason proclaiming the wonderful wisdom and benevolence of the order, with an article below, entitled "Freemasonry is only 152 years old," and gives the time and place of its birth. The second side is entitled, "Murder and Treason not Excepted," and shows that the Masonic order is treasonable in its constitution, and is both anti-Republican and anti-Christian.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 9.

FREEMASONRY IN THE CHURCH.

AN ILLUSTRATED TRACT.

Copy of a petition for the higher degrees of Freemasonry, in which Blasphemous and Despotic Titles are enumerated and prayed for. The Copy was printed for the use of "Occidental Sovereign Consistory, S. P. R. S.," 32d degree—a Chicago Lodge and was ordered by a deacon of a Christian Church and Grand Orator of the Grand Lodge of Illinois. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 10.

CHARACTER AND SYMBOLS OF FREEMASONRY.

By its "Grand Secretaries, Grand Lecturers, Perfect Prince Freemasons, Grand Inspector, Inquisitor Commanders, Grand High Priests," etc. The wonderful symbolical meaning of "the Cable Tow," "the Square and Compass," "the Lamb Skin, or White Apron," and "the Common Gavel," are given in the exact words of the highest Masonic authority. The first page shows a candidate prepared for initiation in the Third Degree. A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 11.

ADDRESS OF NIAGARA COUNTY ASSOCIATION, NEW YORK.

TO THE PUBLIC—Concerning the Morgan Murder, and the character of Freemasonry as shown by this and other Masonic murders.
A 4-page Tract.

TRACT NO. 12.

JUDGE WHITNEY AND MASONRY.

This tract contains a condensed account of Judge Whitney's Defense before the Grand Lodge of Illinois, on charge of unmasonic conduct in bringing Samuel L. Keith the murderer of Ellen Slade, and a member of his Lodge, to justice, with Judge Whitney's subsequent renunciation of Masonry. An 8-page tract.

TRACT NO. 13.

DR. NATHANIEL COLVER ON MASONRY
AND
HOWARD CROSBY, D.D.,

Chancellor of the University of New York, on SECRET SOCIETIES. A double 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 14.

GRAND LODGE MASONRY,

Its Relation to Civil Government and the Christian Religion.

Opening address before the Monmouth Convention, by PRES. BLANCHARD of Wheaton College. A 16-page tract.

TRACT NO. 15.

MASONIC OATHS NULL AND VOID.

A clear and conclusive argument proving the invalidity of any oath or obligation to do evil. By REV. I. A. HART, Secretary National Christian Association. Published by special order of the Association. A 4-page tract.

TRACT. NO. 16.

HON. SETH M. GATES, ON FREEMASONRY.

Proof that the Institution that Murdered Morgan is Unchanged in Character.

This is a letter to the Monmouth Convention by Hon. Seth M. Gates who was Deputy Sheriff of Genesee County, and also Secretary of the Leroy Lodge at the time of Morgan's Abduction.
A 4-page tract

TRACT NO 17.

ORIGIN, OBLIGATIONS AND EXPENSES OF THE GRANGE,

With a Constitution of a Farmer's Club.

This little tract ought to be put into the hands of every Farmer in the United States. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 18.

HON. WM. H. SEWARD ON SECRET SOCIETIES.

Extracts from a Speech on Know Nothingism in the United States Senate in 1855.

The testimony of JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, MILLARD FILLMORE, CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL and others added. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 19.

WHAT GREAT MEN SAY ABOUT FREEMASONRY.

WASHINGTON, MADISON, MARSHALL, RUSH, HANCOCK, ADAMS and WEBSTER, give brief clear testimony against the Lodge.
A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 20.

OBJECTIONS TO MASONRY.

By a Seceding Mason of Cornton, Vermont.

This tract contains many strong arguments against the Lodge drawn from personal experience, observation and study of its character.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 21.

MASONIC CHASTITY.

By Emma A. Wallace.

The author, by wonderfully clear illustration and argument, shows the terribly corrupt nature of Freemasonry. No true woman who reads this will ever speak with approbation of this institution.
A 4-page tract.

TRACT NO. 22.

LINUS CHITTENDEN ON FREEMASONRY.

The author, a seceding Master Mason, states his objections to the Lodge, drawn both from experience and observation, in a clear, concise and forcible style. A 2-page tract.

TRACT NO. 23.

MASONIC OATHS AND PENALTIES.

ADDRESS OF REV. A. M. MILLIGAN AT THE PITTSBURGH CONVENTION.

This is the clearest and most conclusive argument to show the wickedness of masonic oaths and the duty to disregard and repent of them that we have ever seen.
A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 24.

SHOULD FREEMASONS BE ADMITTED TO CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP?

The principles and teachings of Freemasonry taken from the highest masonic authorities are compared with those of the Bible, several Masonic Oaths are given in whole or in part with the comments of Rev's. Moses Stewart, Nathaniel Colver, and Charles G. Finney, on this character. Those who love a pure Christianity should aid in the circulation of this tract. A 4 page tract.

TRACT NO. 25.

The American Party.

ITS OBJECT, ORGANIZATION, PLATFORM AND CANDIDATES.

Some of the ablest men in the nation have pronounced our platform the best that has been presented to the American people for the past fifty years. Our Candidates are men of acknowledged ability and honesty, and if every voter in the United States could read this our "POLITICAL TRACT," our Candidates could undoubtedly be elected. One friend pledges a dollar for every other dollar contributed this 8 page tract.

TRACT NO. 26.

FREEMASONRY A RELIGION.

This Tract is made up of quotations from Standard Masonic Authors and nothing could more clearly demonstrate the fact that Freemasonry claims to be a Christless and therefore Anti-christian religion.
An 8 page Tract.

TRACT NO. 27.

Duty and Ability to Know the Character of Freemasonry.

Thousands seem to consider it a virtue to know nothing about the character of Secret Societies. This is shown to be a great error if not a crime and our duty to use the knowledge within our reach, especially when of such vital importance, is clearly enforced.
A 4 Page Tract.

Cynosure Tract No. 28.

FREEMASONRY REVEALED.

A LEGAL ATTESTATION BY EDMOND RCNAYNE

To the correctiness of the published expositions of Freemasonry. The author very briefly states the mode of preparation and initiation in the various degrees, with the mock murder and resurrection of the candidate in the personification of Hiram Abiff in the 3d. degree and the penalties of each.
A 2 page tract.

TRACT NO. 29.

D. L. Moody on Secret Societies.

At his great religious meetings in Philadelphia, New York, Chicago and Boston this man of God has shown clearly that the Bible condemns all connection of Christians with Secret Societies and most emphatically enjoins the Separation of his people from the World. This leaflet contains Mr. Moody's remarks on Secret Societies at each of these places. The general circulation of this tract must have a most powerful influence for good.
A 4 Page Tract,

TRACT NO. 1, IN SWEDISH;
translated by Prof. A. R. CERVIN. A 15-page tract.

GERMAN CYNOSUCE TRACT A.

Six Reasons why a Christian should not be a Freemason.

By Rev. A. GROLE, Pastor, German M. E. Church, Worchester, Mass.
This is our first German Tract, and it is a good one; it ought to have a large circulation. A 4 page tract,

Publishers' Department.

LIFT AT THE 10,000.

J. S. Hickman, Seemly, Illinois, sends two subscriptions for a year each and one for three months. He writes: "Estimating 4,000 subscribers for the Cynosure, if all would send this small amount you would have over ten thousand. FRIENDS, LET US ALL TAKE A LIFT AT THE TEN THOUSAND."

The mail list was carefully counted November 16th and then numbered 3,366 names; 2,089 of these subscriptions expire during the winter months. So 8,723 subscriptions (renewals and new ones) must be received during the winter months in order to reach the 10 000, an average of more than 700 subscriptions each week until March 1st. But the next four or six weeks will be much better for canvassing than the following, we think, and subscriptions should come in at the rate of 2.000 per week at present. Let us "have faith as a grain of mustard seed," and watch unto prayer "with all perseverance," showing our faith by our works, and the number, we believe, will be secured. We must realize the greatness of the work and put forth corresponding efforts.

J. S. Yankey, Fayetteville, Pennsylvania, sends five subscriptions for one year each, two for six months each and four for six months each. He writes: "I expect to send you more names soon."

Rev. J. P. Stoddard; W. Edgerton, Spiceland, Indiana; John Remington, Mundy, Michigan, all send four subscriptions for one year each.

J. T. Mathews, Geneva Lake, Wisconsin, sends three subscriptions for one year each.

Ansel Lake, Gray Willow, Illinois, sends one for a year and three for three months each, and writes: "I will try to get as many as I can."

J. F. Browne, Evansville, Wisconsin; Dr. J. A. Bingham, Mallet Creek, Ohio; I. Jackson, Keene, New Hampshire; W. L. Leister, Oakland City, Indiana; J. H. Wickersham, Rainsboro, Ohio; and J. G. Miller, Coulterville, Illinois, send two subscriptions for one year each. Dr. Bingham writes: "I will do what I can for you. * * * I pray you may succeed for 10,000 and then double twice more, 20—30—50,000 at least should be had." Dr. W. L. Leister writes: "I will be on hand with other subscriptions before long." J. H. Wickersham, Rainsboro, Ohio, writes: "I think I shall be able to add some more soon." John G. Miller, Coulterville, Randolph county, Illinois, writes: "I wish you might have your 10,000 before New Year's day."

A gentleman at West Winchester, Dundas county, Ontario, subscribes for the paper and writes: "Have seen but one number of the Cynosure. * * * At some future day when the Baptist Convention of Ontario meets, of which denomination I am a lay member, I would like to send each pastor a number." Let us perseveringly continue to hunt up these friends of reform who never saw the Cynosure.

E. B. Palmer, Batavia, New York, writes: "I will try and send a respectable club."

E. G. Cooper, Albany, Missouri, orders two papers continued and writes: "I hope to get some subscriptions soon."

Do not be discouraged after one or two days of unsuccessful canvassing. Go home; get thoroughly rested and ask, Why did I fail? Did I talk too much or too little? Was I too timid or too bold and over confident? Did I fail to set before those whose subscriptions I solicited the merits of the Cynosure in their true light? News, Topics of the Time, strong editorials, Sabbath School Department, Family and Children's Departments, articles on secret societies, reform news, pure advertisements, etc. Sixteen pages every week for a whole year at $1.50 if paid for before March first. Look the matter over, slowly, humbly, prayerfully, courageously. If you have done every thing just right, do not be discouraged until you have tried every family, every individual that it is possible for you to reach. Do not forget the hired help. Hired men need the paper and women also. Often they would like to give the paper for a New Year's present to parents, brothers, sisters or other relatives. Do not overlook any one. Make thorough work. Let us all heed Bro. Hickman's call and take a long, strong "lift at the TEN THOUSAND."

NEW ENGLAND.

TO THE FRIENDS OF CHRISTIAN REFORM IN NEW ENGLAND:—The annual meeting of the National Christian Association at Worcester was a grand success. A deep impression was made in that city and one that will be felt throughout New England. In order to follow up and continue the good work the delegates from New England have secured the services of Rev. H. H. Hinman of Wheaton, Ill., who has had much experience in this work, and whose name is familiar to the readers of the Cynosure. Mr. Hinman will respond to all calls for lectures when not engaged. Correspondence in reference to the lecture work may be addressed to Mr. Hinman or to me at Willimantic, Conn.

JOHN A. CONANT.

ELDER J. F. BROWNE, State Lecturer for Illinois, expected to begin work early this week. His first work is to be in Whiteside county in Morrison and vicinity. All friends who desire lectures may address him at Wheaton. Let this work be taken in hand with all energy.

—After attending the organization of the State Association of Minnesota this week Past Master Ronayne will visit Menomonee, Wis., and work the three degrees on the evenings of December 17th, 18th and 19th.

—Rev. J. P. Stoddard reached this office Monday morning. His letter on 9th page tells of his journey here. On Tuesday he started for Minnesota, where he will aid Prof. Paine and other workers in establishing a vigorous State Association.

TEN THOUSAND SUBSCRIBERS.—The special rate for the Cynosure till March 1st next is $1.50. The regular price is $2.00, which will be resumed after that date. Remember, $1.50 till March 1st for old or new subscribers.

Topics of the Time.

A hopeful instance of reform in public Sabbath violation is reported from Connecticut, where not long since a Sunday excursion train was patronized by but six persons, in consequence of the earnest protests from Christians of the locality and faithful warning from the pulpit watch-tower. At the opening of Congress, too, the Sabbath preceding, so often given up to caucusing and "pipe-laying," was disturbed by but a single meeting, and that was of the greenback party which joined the fortunes and labors of Peter Cooper and Ben. Butler for the campaign of 1880.

The secret labor unions are not indifferent to the large vote cast by their socialistic constituents in the fall elections. Last week a hundred and eight delegates, claiming to represent all the trade union lodges of the country, met in Philadelphia to form a national political platform. It was decided to hold a national convention in this city or St. Louis next month, and Presidential nominations will be in order. Butler has expectations in this direction, but there must be a broader basis for his operations than is presented by this lodge coalition, if he would be successful even in keeping himself before the public as a candidate. This movement may be ordered of God, however, to arouse the sluggish patriotism of our people to the dangers crouching in the lodge system, and be a means of hastening its downfall.

The President's message has been too widely read to require particular comment except to note its effect upon the country. The aggregate public opinion esteems it a politic but unsatisfactory document. It is a business-like review of the year, with no recommendations in particular but would naturally occur to men of good judgment. The people of the North, roused and indignant at the continued political persecution in Louisiana and S. Carolina justly expected a trumpet blast at what is believed to be perfidy and murder. They are hardly satisfied with the caution of the message; neither is it likely the Democratic House will do anything but refuse the appropriation asked for to prosecute election frauds, or that the people in those States where "wrongs have been perpetrated will give their assistance toward bringing to justice the offenders." We must remember, however, that the President is dealing with opponents, and his caution may be successful in the end. The country will wait with some anxiety for the fulfillment of the promise "whatever authority rests with me to this end I shall not hesitate to put forth."

While all look to the President to bring to punishment all violators of the laws in these election cases, Secretary Sherman is under as careful scrutiny respecting his financial movements. In his efforts to carry out the resumption law he has, it is believed, the confidence of his constituents in an unusual degree. He is in favor of a gold, silver and paper currency worth all that it professes, and has shown a wise management and forethought in meeting the exigencies of the case. The late opposition of the New York banks to silver money and their attempt to practically demonetize it has produced an unfavorable impression on the minds of many who have supposed that resumption would be an easy matter. The Secretary, however, should feel equal to this emergency. If Wall Street overrides him and the measures which have the known favor of the country, Mr. Sherman need only to appeal to the people, and he will be sustained. The treasury has now about $118,000,000 in gold for resumption purposes, with outstanding legal tenders amounting to $348,000,000. As the time draws near for this important event, the prospect of many contingencies arising to disturb monetary affairs is more certain and an increasing tendency will be felt throughout the country to pursue a cautious policy for some time to come.

Our financial difficulties have not reached so desperate a point as those of Great Britain, bad as they are. The failure of the Glasgow bank has been followed within a week by the suspension of the Caledonian bank, of the same city, with deposits amounting to $5,215,000, and of the West of England Bank, with $17,500,000 liabilities. The consternation in South Wales from this collapse is great, and the effects may hardly be less disastrous than the first Glasgow failure. It is reported that the condition of the cotton, iron, coal and other industries in England have not been in a worse state since the Crimean war twenty-four years ago. Wages in the cotton mills have been reduced one-fifth, and many mills have ceased running. In the coal and iron trade the reduction is nearly as great. In Blackburn, out of 80,000 inhabitants 8,000 to 10,000 cotton operatives are out of employment. In Oldham the mills have had almost constant losses during eighteen months. One of the model workingmen's companies, which used to divide 30 per cent, lost $10,000 the last quarter. In Preston 314,000 spindles are idle and a fearful crisis is anticipated. The average wages of Scotch miners is 75c; Welsh, 85c, and Northumberland, $1.25. At Wolverhampton and other coal and iron centers hundreds are actually starving. Families are without food days in succession. Similar stories come from Sheffield. A reliable correspondent there says: "The distress is deplorable and harrowing to behold. I never witnessed anything like the present scarcity and poverty." The result of this fearful condition must be to check the ambition of the British government, and to largely increase the emigration to our shores of sober and industrious workingmen. We should be prepared to answer large calls upon our benevolence during the next year, to meet this incoming tide with educational and religious privileges, if, indeed, we do not have to help feed the starving who cannot come to us.

While an unusual emigration may be expected from England, the Berlin correspondent of the Christian Union calls attention to a "deliberate proposition" to ship to this country thousands of German Socialists whose presence is no longer endurable in that country, and warns us of the danger. The telegraph informs us that forty leading Socialists were driven out of Berlin in one day last week by the police They will naturally seek our shores, from whence they will operate as far as possible on Europe; but their presence here, in addition to the considerable element of the same kind already poisoning our politics and defying our most cherished institutions, may work untold evil. While the theory is objectionable, we may be compelled to adopt in practice the correspondent's remedy, and establish a moral quarantine to shut out from us this class of emigrants.

The Right of Inspection in the Church.

BY REV. H. H. HINMAN.

Fifty years ago a minister applied to be received into the Chilicothe Presbytery and was asked by the moderator if he was a Mason. He replied that he was. He was then told that there were some of the brethren that thought Masonry a bad institution, and in order that they might all know what were the real facts of the case and be able to judge correctly as to whether it ought to be tolerated in the ministry, he would please tell them JUST WHAT MASONRY WAS and what it required. Who shall say that this request was not reasonable? Has not the church a right to know that the practice of its members is in harmony with its principles and their covenant obligations? The very idea of a church covenant implies that every member shall submit his life to the inspection of the church. Nay more; it is one of the express agreements of the covenant that each member shall exercise this right in watching over his brethren and submitting his life to their watch-care. If you take away this right, you have destroyed the church covenant; you have destroyed church fellowship which can only last while the covenant is kept; and you have destroyed the church.

Organized secretism in all its forms assumes to take away this right from the church and hence is utterly inconsistent with membership in it. That minister of course could not tell the Presbytery what Masonry was and still be a Mason, and of course the Presbytery could not receive him. It had no right to receive what was of questionable propriety. It was not the Presbytery but Masonry that excluded him. If a church member were suspected of drunkenness, and the church should undertake to inquire into the facts of the case, his refusal to state the facts would be held to be sufficient evidence of his guilt. It would be at least a clear case of the violation of his covenant to submit to the watch-care and discipline of the church.

How much more is this true if, when he is kindly asked if he is guilty of the blasphemous oaths of the lodge, and he tells the church that he must not tell, for he has entered into another covenant, confirmed by an oath, that forbids him to tell anything in reference to the matter? Who can fail to see that the two covenants require exactly opposite things, that the one commands him to tell the church while the other swears him not to do it; and hence that he cannot keep the one without discarding the other? How reasonable then that the church make it a condition of entering into covenant with any and every member that he shall renounce all other covenants inconsistent with his church covenant? How reasonable that the right of inspection that the church has solemnly promised to exercise shall be exercised, and that to deny this right is to renounce the church.

What Have You Done?

BY J. G. MATTOON.

Not long ago I was asked the question, "What have you Anti-masons done?"

We organized a little more than ten years ago, and now a majority of the counties in the Northern States have had one or more Anti-masonic lectures. Edmond Ronayne has been kept busy for the last three years, working the degrees in public, free to all who wished to see. Men are seceding from the order all over the land, so that there is scarcely a community that has not one or more seceders that will sit down and chat with you about the secrets of the order as freely as an old farmer would about raising wheat, corn, or hogs. The lodge door for some time has stood open, untyled, and any one that wished could come and see. Children may be seen giving the lodge signs on the streets, and almost any school-boy can tell where the "Worshipful" hangs his hat. The champions of the order have been challenged to defend it in open discussion, but they have, with scarce an exception, wisely kept their jewels. Anti-masons are as well, if not better, acquainted with standard Masonic works than the average of Masons are.

Now, aside from slandering, mobbing, shooting and poisoning a few lecturers, what have you Masons done? Your cry of "perjured villain" against seceders has only recoiled with double force upon your own heads, by adding your perjury to their's.

Let us suppose a case. A Mason admits that Ronayne's exposition is true; he is summoned to appear before his lodge to answer for the crime; he pleads guilty, and is expelled. Does not that whole lodge set their seal to the truth of the exposition? Suppose that this same man had declared in the presence of twenty or more Anti-masons, that Dr. Jayne's Medical Almanac for 1860 was a true revelation of the secrets of Masonry, and he had plead guilty to that charge; does any one believe that he would have been expelled for it? Of course not. Lying is not a Masonic crime. But telling the truth is.

And now, after so much light has been shed on this subject, what are we to think of the minister who "don't know anything about it?" How long are we to accept such a man as our spiritual guide? Is he a fit person to warn the people of their sins, who has taken such prodigious pains not to know what sin is? "And when they were put to death," says the Apostle, "I gave my voice against them." Just what thousands of our ministers intend to do with the lodge, but they want to be sure it's dead first.

They remind me very much of the little boy who found a small garter snake while in the field with the harvesters. His father handed him a rake, and told him to kill it. The little fellow struck at it several times, and then said, "Daddy, I can't reach it." "Well," says the old man, "step up to it." The little fellow took one step forward and two backward (the backward steps first, of course), and tried again. "Indeed," says he, "daddy, I can't reach it." The old man set the heel of his cradle on the snake's head and pressed t down into the loose earth so that there was but a few inches of its tail above the surface. "Now," said the little fellow, "let me kill it."

Yes, J. L. Barlow was right when he said, "When the class you speak of (the workers) have gained the victory, and come out with ragged uniforms, thinned ranks and tattered banners, you will see the others, with glossy garments and gloved hands, jumping on to the car of victory and out-shouting the battle-worn veterans with, 'See what a great victory we have gained!'" You will doubtless laugh at the little boy, and yet he did notice the snake, he did call the attention of the crowd to it, he did go so far as to strike at it several times. Dear reader, has your minister ever ventured so far against the lodge? If he has not, and you are still supporting him, don't laugh at the little boy.

—One of the strongest points against all secret societies is made by Dr. Wayland in his well-known standard work on moral science. He says, "We see the anti-social tendency of all those secret societies, of which the object either avowed or in fact, is to protect the individual members in opposition to the laws, that is in opposition to society. In this case, while the individual receives from civil society the same benefits as other men, and expects from it the fulfillment of its part of the contract, he does not make on his part, the corresponding surrender. He expects to be protected and redressed; but he reserves also the right of protecting and redressing himself, and it may be in opposition to the just operation of those laws which he enforces upon others." This is a solid nugget of reasoning which is of itself enough to break up every lodge in our country and every other land where people are not savages without civil society. From this masterly logic we see that secret societies are not consistent with a form of civil society. They belong, if anywhere, to the savage or barbaric conditions of the race of men. —Telescope.

Happy the man who gets up a club for the Ten thousand.

Did they Abide by Their Oath?

There were more than forty of them that had taken it upon themselves. They were mad against Paul, just as he himself had once been mad against the disciples of the Lord Jesus; and they were determined to have him out of the way. "They banded together and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither eat nor drink till they had killed Paul." They were very earnest about it, and very determined. Their blood was up, and they were ready for the rashest measures. Before a crumb of food or drop of liquid should enter their mouths, Paul should be slain. Such was their purpose, and such their oaths. And how did they come out? Or, failing in that did they die of hunger and thirst?

One thing is certain; and that is, that Paul did not at that time die at their hands. They were not sufficiently cautious in keeping their designs a secret, and providentially, by the interposition of the chief-captain, Paul was rescued from their hands. We read of him, some days after, down at Cesarea, safe and well. And still later, we read of him on his perilous voyage to Rome, where two whole years we find him preaching the gospel in his own hired house. And how much longer his life was prolonged we are not definitely informed. A martyr's fate befel him at last, and it is possible that some of these oath-bound Jews had a hand in shedding his blood. But did they abide by their oath all this while? If so, they went hungry and thirsty for a longer time than it has been our fortune to read of, or to hear of in any other instance—the longest of the kind on record being forty days and forty nights. We are more inclined to think that, when they found that the prey had escaped, they came to the conclusion that their oath would be "more honored in the breach than in the observance," and that, however reluctantly, they yielded to the necessity. Men of their character would not be very likely to endure the cravings of hunger and thirst for the sake of being consistent. When men make an oath they should make sure that they do not bind themselves to do a wicked thing. And they should remember, too, that there is a God above them. They should say, "If the Lord wills, we will do this or that." In a good cause, as in the cause of temperance, or the cause of Christ, looking unto him for all needed grace, it may be proper for one to enter into solemn engagements. Beware of rash and wicked oaths.—New York Observer.

POWERFUL PRAYERS.—Has not the church almost to learn. yet what is the power of prayer? What conception have we of believing prayer, before which mountains depart? What of persevering prayer, which causes us to stand continually on the watch-tower in the day-time, and which sets us in our wards whole nights? What of importunate prayer, which storms heaven with its violence and force? What of united prayer, gathering us together to ask help of the Lord? What of consistent prayer, which regards no iniquity in our hearts? What of practical prayer, which fulfills itself? Let but such prayer be understood, let but our spirit "break with such longing," and the expectations of our bosoms shall not be delayed. "And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear."—Dr. Hamilton.

The Relation of Freemasonry to our Republican Government.

A PAPER READ BY GEN. J. W. PHELPS, OF BRATTLEBORO, VT., BEFORE THE NATIONAL CONVENTION, WORCESTER, MASS.

In order to understand the relation of one institution to another, we must know something of their history and character. We republicans are all supposed to be familiar with the history of our government, but we are told that we know nothing and can know nothing of Freemasonry, unless we join the lodge; and as very few of the American people, it is to be hoped, have done, or will do that, it follows that the American people know very little about Freemasonry. It is time, however, that we should know something about it. And this is the object of our meeting here to-day; it is to call the attention of our fellow citizens to the dangers that threaten republican government from the Masonic lodge.

Secret societies have existed in the world as long as priest-craft has existed in it. Indeed, priest-craft, or the making of a cunning, selfish use of sacred things, is the very essence of all secret organizations. Freemasonry is a modern form of ancient priest-craft, used chiefly by politicians. It is not an American institution, and has never yet been adopted by our laws, or by the people at large. It is an English institution of surreptitious origin, and is entirely foreign to the spirit of our American Constitution and laws, our religion, and our manners and customs. It originated in a London grog-shop, in the year 1717, and is as much out of place in America as the Star Chamber would be. The particular time at which it came into existence, was at the close of a long period of foreign wars, domestic bloodshed and political strife, occasioned, we may say, by Jesuitry, beginning with the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and extending down to the days of George the First. During this long prevalence of civil and religious anarchy in England, the popular mind had become subject to the most demoralizing influences; was worn out and disgusted with Jesuitry; and the politicians, a class of men which then for the first time came into vogue in modern Europe, seem to have acquired a perfect hatred and contempt, not only for Jesuitry, but for the Christian religion generally. Heretofore the people of Europe, England included, had had few rights which kings were bound to respect; but by the adoption of a system of secret politics, which Freemasonry really is, a mere standing political caucus, the tables were turned, and now kings, laws, governments and authorities are to have no rights which secret, irresponsible manipulators are bound to respect.

Some of the worst and most infidel frequenters of the London grog-shops, as well as some of the most learned men of that period would seem to have had a hand in fashioning the institution of Freemasonry. We might mention, as among those whom we suspect as having had a hand in its creation, the names of Bolingbroke, Middleton, Shaftsbury, and Wollaston. That the arch infidel and enemy of the Christian religion, Voltaire, aided in the work, would appear to be very evident. It is well known that he resided in London during a part of the decade in which Freemasonry originated; and his correspondence with Frederick the Great and other fellow Masonic infidels, shows unquestionably that he favored the imposition.

It is from the writings of Voltaire that we get the original design and plan of Freemasonry. The design was, to get up a system of mystic rites and precepts which should take with the lower classes as a religion, and thus defeat Jesuitry at its own game. For this purpose one of the old trades unions, whose arts used to be termed "mysteries" and whose companies were styled "honorable," the brick-layers' union, was taken as a basis, and upon this foundation the speculative workers erected a framework of religious precepts, rites and observances, drawn from various sources, from ancient pagan mysteries, from the Bible, from geometry, from architecture, from the sciences generally, then very limited, and even from Jesuitical practices themselves. This system of practical religion thus ingeniously contrived, and which is only another form of Jesuitry itself, was imposed upon the religious faith of mankind, than which nothing in life is more serious, more tender and more important, as a kind of contemptuous joke, which would better become pirates and bandits, than educated men who had the interests of society at heart. The idea of the plan was so ingenious, and the device so cunningly carried out, that it was received with favor by infidels and their dupes every where; and every where the Jesuits began to be confounded at finding themselves equalled at their own cleverness, and thwarted by their own artifices quietly directed against their order. The inventors of this scheme, while hating villainy, had no respect for the dignity of human nature, and had no other idea of government than that of philosophic kings, with large armies and full treasuries. The lower classes of men they despised.

There was no room for the birthplace of our holy religion in a tavern; but, naturally enough, this ingenious parody and infidel rival of our religion, found a a proper place for its origin in Apple Tree Tavern, in London, in the month of June, 1717. From there it rapidly spread all over the world wherever infidelity and dram-drinking had taken root. It claims to be "the most moral institution that ever subsisted," and thus insidiously commended itself to the acceptance of religiously disposed persons who were too pious or too superstitious to suspect a fraud. It was introduced into Boston, Massachusetts, through the agency of an English nobleman, in 1733. The object of sending it to Boston at so early a date probably was to serve as a means of enabling the English colonists in America to contend against the intrigues and machinations of the Jesuits of Canada, of Maryland, of Louisiana and Florida, and also, perhaps, to quell the republicanising enthusiasm of the Puritans. Freemasonry being thus introduced into the colonies, gradually and unsuspectedly extended its leaven until the Revolutionary war broke out, when some of the leading officers, we find, proved to be Freemasons. As Freemansonry is a conspiracy against all Christian forms of religion and government, it was hence found to be a convenient engine for conspiring against the aristocratic government of Great Britain. Thus early this device of the English aristocracy for their support and defence was turned upon themselves; and happy will the aristocracy be if it escapes worse calamities than that from its use! General Washington has been claimed by Freemasons as a member of their fraternity, though a character so noble and elevated could never have given much aid in extending the wicked charlatanism of Voltaire; and in fact, during all his public life he never entered a lodge of Masons more than once or twice. Benedict Arnold, it is believed, was a right worthy Mason, as was also Aaron Burr; and how many others of the American Revolutionary officers, good, bad and indifferent, we know not. We feel assured, however, that none of them could have derived any valuable qualities or aids from Freemasonry. In these later days the list has become greatly enlarged, and it is likely to become more so still, especially among the vicious and depraved, whose purposes it answers well. It now bears the distinguished names of Jackson, Polk, Pierce, Buchanan, Andrew Johnson, Colfax, General Grant and Butler, Secretary Belknap, Breckenridge, Jefferson Davis, in fine almost all the rebel generals, and others, all of whom are classed as secret society men or supporters of the lodge.

After the Revolution English supremacy here in the United States together with all the objectionable instruments for its support, ought to have been done away with; but interested men, and unworthy passions were at work to preserve from destruction this worst instrument of all. Among these interested men was a curious character by the name of Thomas Smith Webb, of Boston, whose Masonic title was that of King or Grand King, a title not less accordant with republican government than is the spirit of the institution under which it is assumed. He seems to have been a person of no especial note, and yet, as the preserver and organizer of Freemasonry in the United States, his agency is having more influence upon our destinies to-day than that of Washington himself, the Father of his Country. Mr. Webb is the first standard author on Freemasonry in the United States; and all that any one can justly say of his work is, that, in order to a thorough detestation of its deceitful sophistry, one need only to read it. Its whole theory, principle and practice, is insidiously subversive of our religion and our republican laws and institutions.

As a result of Mr. Webb's Masonic labors, which drew to a close about the first decade of this century, Freemasonry, rescued from merited oblivion, went on increasing like the growth of weeds of a summer's night, until finally its hostile character first became disclosed to the American public, in the murder of a citizen, an old soldier, by Freemasons, for publishing their secret and pretended holy mysteries. The American people were surprised and astounded to find that there was an institution in their midst that had laws of more binding force than those of the country; and that while the constitution gave every body the right, nay, virtually rendered it every one's duty, to publish valuable information freely and without hindrance, yet this secret organization made such an act a crime, and punished it with death! Here was a wheel within a wheel, an empire within an empire, a double government that some men speak of, with a vengeance. The result of this surprising discovery was, that our free spirited people arose against Freemasonry, and nominated an Anti-masonic candidate for the presidency. But, unfortunately, Freemasonry had become a necessity to the slave States, in order to enable them to resist the pressure of the free States and preserve slavery, and of course, the slave-power of the South, when added to the Masonry of the North, proved too much for the Anti-masons, and their party soon succumbed. Slavery and Democracy, aided by Masonry, carried the day over the Anti-masonic and Whig parties, and finally even the names of these most respectable of all American parties went into disuse.

At length, about the year 1852, in an evil hour for the country, the politicians of the free States instead of trusting to the strength and virtue of our republican institutions, resorted to Freemasonry in order to contend against the wiles and subtleties of the slave-power. This was repeating over again the very fault of the original inventors of Freemasonry, who made use of it to oppose

The Kansas State Convention.

The Kansas Christian Association, opposed to secret societies, met in Topeka, Sept. 30, 1878, at 8 o'clock P. M. Officers elected for the ensuing year: Rev. J. S. T. Milligan, President; Rev. J. T. Kiggins, first Vice President; Rev. Mr. Miller, second Vice President; G. H. Griggs, Recording Secretary; Rev. J. A. Richards, Corresponding Secretary; J. Alexander, Treasurer.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The various secret orders of our country are in the spirit and form of their organizations ungodly, anti-Christian and unscriptural; and

Whereas, they involve in their practice and rules the violation of God-given rules of social, family, national, and ecclesiastical life and duty;

And, inasmuch as their very existence is, as we firmly believe, fraught with danger to our own and our childrens' interests and welfare, the church's and nation's safety;

And, being fully convinced that Masonry and Odd-fellowship are, in their pretendedly benevolent character and workings, a delusion and snare;

That secret temperance organizations are a fraud and failure; and that workingmens' combinations are communistic conspiracies against capital and property, and especially as they have become armed and violent, and are already responsible for lives destroyed, property burned, human rights invaded, and lawful authority resisted; therefore,

Resolved, 1st. That we condemn and resist them in the name of Christ the Saviour and Sovereign, and as Christians and patriots will seek their removal.

2d. That this great and increasing evil makes it necessary that the standard of the Lord through the churches should be raised up against it.

3d. That the effort to correct this giant evil should be united by the maintainance of the National Christian Association and auxiliaries in all the States in which the united power of anti-secret churches can be brought to bear, and by God's blessing made effective.

4th. That we invite and urge the anti-secret churches in this State to send as large delegations as possible from all their congregations to attend the annual convention of this association.

5th. That we declare it to be our profound conviction that no conscientious Christian citizen can vote for any candidate for any office, State or National, who is a member of any secret order, or who is intemperate or irreligious.

6th. That we owe it to the cause of truth and righteousness to keep a State Lecturer employed at least one half of his time in this State.

The officers of this Association were constituted an executive committee to secure such lecturer or lecturers as they deem proper, and to et the time of the next annual meeting.

Invitation to Dr. Cook.

OFFICE ASSOCIATE PRESBYTERIAN, PORTLAND MILLS, Ind., Nov. 29, 1878.

Mr. Editor: SIR:—A letter came to this office from one of your noble army of lecturers against secretism, but having been mislaid, we can't answer directly; and therefore beg leave to state to him through your excellent paper that this is a good point for anti-secret workers to do good. There is here a strong element of opposition to secretism but the subject has not been publicly agitated save in the pulpits of the two congregations whose opposition to secretism is a part of their religious profession. Outside of those two churches there is a strong element of secretism which needs to be assaulted with all the artillery which your lecturer can bring to bear in the way of logic, fact and eloquence. If therefore Mr. Cook (we think that is his name) will correspond with us again we will endeavor to arrange for a series of lectures from him on the important subject to which he is so earnestly devoting himself.

The Anti-Secrecy Reform of Indiana.

A PLAN FOR ORGANIZATION.

The Indiana Association Opposed to Secret Societies has recently held its annual meeting at Spiceland, Henry county. This Association embraces some true and tried men. Among this number are some old veterans in the anti-slavery reform. These venerable men of pure and noble impulses are quite a source of intellectual strength to the cause of truth and righteousness, as advocated by the Association.

Besides these noble men, there are many others of like spirit and character within the State of Indiana, who ought to be mustered into the anti-secrecy ranks at an early day.

There are young men of promise also, who, at the risk of their reputation and property, have given themselves to the Lord to oppose the wrong and to advocate the right. Knowing that the war against secretism is a war against "principalities and powers," and against "spiritual wickedness in high places," the Association is profoundly impressed with the magnitude of the work, and would earnestly appeal to all who are opposed to the manipulating influences of secret societies, to be true to their convictions of right by taking a positive stand against this system of iniquity, which rivals the Christian church, and which seeks to control the government.

Believing that the works of darkness ought to be made manifest, and that this can be accomplished most successfully in an associated capacity, we would earnestly appeal to all who love the truth, and who believe that the truth will make men free, to join with us to oppose this system of lodge teaching, and lodge swearing, which enslaves the souls of men and robs them of their manhood.

The object of the Association is to ventilate this question, by furnishing the people with anti-secrecy, and also with pro-secrecy literature; and by cultivating the lecture field. Dr. S. L. Cook of Albion, Ind., is the authorized State agent and lecturer.

We seek an open and fair discussion of the merits of a question of vital importance to the American people.

The National Christian Association now owns a valuable publishing house in Chicago, and the publishers of its organ, a large weekly, the Christian Cynosure, are also publishing books and tracts extensively in the interest of the reform movement.

Since the organization of the National Association the following States have been organized as auxiliaries, to-wit: Connecticut, New York, New Hampshire, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Minnesota.

The anti-secrecy sentiment of the country is being rapidly developed; but to secure a more systematic and effectual general effort, it is important that there should be thorough work throughout the State, in organizing associations auxiliary to the State Association. These Associations should send delegates to the meetings of the State Association, and keep themselves in correspondence with the general work.

If further information is desired it may be obtained by addressing Dr. S. L. Cook, State Agent, at Albion, Ind., or Dr. G. W. Champ, chairman of the executive committee, at New Lisbon, Ind., or Rev. H. Floyd, president of the Association, at Dublin, Ind.

Let the friends of the reform send in their requests for lectures. You can do a good work by opening the way for lectures. The people need light. Secret societies by an unseen and imperceptible power are controlling the political, religious and commercial interests of America, so that "no man can buy or sell, save he that hath the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."

Let us arise as freemen and strike for our country, and the Gospel of grace and truth.

Will the Christian Ensign and other papers interested in the anti-secrecy work in Indiana please copy?

HALLECK FLOYD.

—Elder J. L. Barlow sends his thanks to R. D. Nichols, of Jonesville, Michigan, and an acknowledgment of the receipt of $2.00, part of the amount voted him by the Michigan State Association.

Correspondence.

Is this like Judas?

ALLEGHENY CITY, Pa., Dec. 4, 1878.

EDITOR CYNOSURE:—There is to be a "mum sociable" this week at the Third U. P. church of Allegheny, where all who do not wish to contribute anything towards the cause of the Master, must be careful not to disclose the fact that God—who takes notice of all such impious pretensions—has endowed him with the power of speech, i. e., you must bet a dime that you can't speak, and if you don't speak you forfeit your right to the tempting supper. It is not the "price of a dog," but of a sandwich that comes into the sanctuary. You are put into a press and the silver juice squeezed out of you, which is expected to run down in streams, gladdening the city. What an elevated and sanctified mode of procuring funds for the extension of Christ's kingdom! "Thy kingdom come;" and then follows "Thy will be done" in this kingdom. Is it God's will that nearly every species of gambling be carried on in this kingdom?

We heard of a recent sociable, the programme of which was announced from the pulpit to contain much conducive to the enjoyment, and especially to the spiritual benefit of the participants, the last act of which was so ridiculous as to preclude the offering of a prayer intended by the pastor. So when a congregation of God's people can meet in a congregational capacity and dismiss without giving thanks—that duty being crowded out by excessive hilarity—with what peace should that shepherd possess his soul in the consciousness of having guided his flock. JOSEPH MCKEE.

Help the Tract Fund.

GENEVA LAKE, Wis., Dec. 2.

EDITOR CHRISTIAN CYNOSURE:—I wish to make a proposition through the Cynosure to all "old subscribers." It is this: Now, as all those who renew their subscriptions before the first of March will save at least 50 cents, and as there is now great need of money for the publication of books and tracts, necessary to help in our great reform, will not every one send with their renewal that 50 cents to the tract fund?

We all feel that "times are hard," but then the more necessity of using what money we can get to the very best advantage. Now, dear friends, think of this matter. If you have never before done anything for this part of the work, you certainly owe —yes, owe—more than 50 cents. Will you not sacrifice something to do your part?

"The Lord loveth the cheerful giver." So saith the Word of God. We have a great work on hand, and each one should be willing, yea, anxious, to help what they can. Dear brother or sister, will you do it?

I would say to those who are canvassing for the Cynosure, Ask every one that is friendly to our work to give something to the tract fund, and very few will refuse to give something; and in this way you will soon get several dollars. Yours for reform, H. W. CLARK.

ENCOURAGING AND OTHERWISE.

Nov. 27, 1878.

Said one, "I am a Freemason and an Odd-fellow, but I have nothing to say for them."

Said a prominent member of the Presbyterian church in this place, "As I was about entering the lodge (going for initiation of course) a Mason placed his hands on my shoulders, and turning me around pointed in another direction. That was enough for me."

I fail to get his subscription for the Cynosure, though asked more than once. I think he has a son who is a Freemason.

"I am afraid he will have to keep them over. Did you see the name on them?" said one man to two others, as they passed on after looking at some bricks exhibited by an Anti-mason at a county fair.

R. D. NICHOLS.

FROM A GREAT TRACT PUBLISHER.

ALTAY, N. Y., Nov. 26.

At our election on the 5th inst., while handing out tracts in a crowd, and being told that Masonry had no such penalties as I stated, I got a man to read its oaths, as legally sworn to in Rhode Island by adhering Masons. A Mr. Horton (a host of his brother Masons around him) owned they did bind the Apprentice to have his throat cut and tongue torn out, "But," said he, "I didn't know their reason for it." I told him it was to secrete their plots and crimes from civil law.

But Masons carried the election in the State. So New York State, as well as the nation, is being run and ruined by the sly servants of Lucifer. I think our loudest call is to enlighten our youth, by showing them just what Masonry is. I believe our next loudest call is to defend the church against its fatal intrusions. I wish the leaflet, "Pungent Questions," were read in every church in Christendom.

OUR MAIL.

Jane Liggett, Mt. Ayr, Ia., writes:

"Like Paul at Athens my spirit is sometimes stirred to see so many given up to the idolatry of the lodge."

J. Bicknell, Stanwix, N. Y., writes:

"Since He who numbers the hairs of our head; who allows no sparrow to fall to the ground without him; who guides all the affairs of the universe, has said: 'All things work together for good to them who love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose,' therefore let saints lift up their heads and rejoice."

James S. Hubbs, Silver City, Idaho Ter., writes:

"This place is very small and secretism prevails."

Mrs. G. W. Hanks, Postville, Iowa, writes:

"I am a constant reader of your valuable paper, and do not know how to do without it; but did not know how to pay for it till I read the number of Oct. 24th. Then I resolved to go to work at once; I distribute my Cynosures as I read them, hoping they will do some good. I wish the cause God speed."

E. S. Livingston, Reynoldsburg, Ohio, writes:

"I am an old Anti-mason and abolitionist. I voted for Birney in 1840, and for Wm. H. Seward, when he was elected governor of the State of New York."

Simeon Badgley, Belleville, Ill., writes:

"I will keep on trying for the cause."

L. B. Lathrop, Hollister, Cal., writes:

"I look upon the spread of the Cynosure as the great opening wedge of this greatly needed reform. * * * I rejoice in the effort to get 10,000 subscribers for the Cynosure, and feel anxious to know how many you have now."

There were 3,366 names on our list when last counted, Nov. 16.

Thomas B. Galloway, Pittsburgh, Ind., writes:

"I am taking four papers and I would give them all up, rather than do without the Cynosure."

B. M. Mason, Moultonborough, N. H., writes:

"I am much pleased with the Cynosure and the fearless and outspoken manner with which it deals with theiniquitous order of Freemasonry. Freemasonry is dead in this community. Our anti-secret meetings the past year have killed it. God is in the work, and the friends of reform are sure to triumph. I could give you some startling facts in regard to a conspiracy of the Freemasons in this county to clear the murderer Buzzell on his first trial, also their efforts to influence the public mind on his last trial, he being a Master Mason. But the evidence was so clear that they failed, and he is now awaiting, as you know, his execution."

S. Bedford, Millview, Pa., writes:

"I have not lost any of my interest in this good cause. I believe that God will open the eyes of good people throughout the world to see the abomination of Freemasonry; to see that its teachings and tendency are antagonistic to the Christian religion. I believe the tendency to liberalism and skepticism is largely owing to the influence of Masonry. Our daily prayer is, God bless the right."

P. P. Chapman, Farmington, Ill., writes:

"Have seen only the report in the daily Inter-ocean of your State meeting at Wheaton, which did not exhibit the fairness usually expected of that paper."

The report in the Tribune was fair and full. A special reporter for that paper attended the meetings regularly. The Inter-ocean had no such facilities for ascertaining the facts.

Elder I. Jackson, writes from Keene, N. H.:

"I went from our National Convention at Worcester, about twelve miles to visit some of our friends, and remained there about two days. When about to come away, I called on the minister to tell him about the convention, Ronayne's expose, etc., in order to spread the news of the Christian Association. He found I knew something about Masonry, and requested me to give the people a talk on the subject offering to take the expense of advertising the meeting upon himself. I consented. We had a good congregation, in which the lodge was well represented. (When I was here five years ago there was only two or three Masons in the place; now the village is full of them.) I commenced by giving them some information about the murder of Morgan, when a prominent Mason wished me to tell what became of Morgan, whereupon I told them the whole story. I then exposed the first three degrees, and told them of these degrees being worked at Worcester. I called Masonry the greatest humbug of the nation, and spoke of the fraud and injustice practiced in our courts, protected by Masonry.

"When I had finished there was an opportunity given to all to speak, or ask questions, and much was brought out that was beneficial to the people. At the close of the meeting they swarmed around me for tracts and supplements. All that the people want is light."

Mrs. A. Lewis, Melvern, Iowa, writes:

"We hope and pray for the cause in which you are engaged."

Aaron Stedman, Taberg, N. Y., writes:

"I have been confined to the house since last June, when I bled almost to death from the nose; and being afflicted with kidney complaints, dyspepsia and old age I think my lease is about out. I am now 79 years old. But I can still read the Cynosure, and lend it out."

L. C. Gaskill, Newark Valley, N. Y., writes:

"Masonry has the people here firmly tied. They say your paper is edited by some demagogue, broken-down politician or some one who has been black-balled in the lodge. We want Ronayne here to cut loose the cable-tow and let the hidden light of Masonry shine. But we are so few in numbers it is almost impossible to make any advance upon the enemy's lines."

Jacob Renbush, Parnassus, Va., writes:

"We love the Cynosure."

Wm. H. Rossetter, Apple River, Ill, sends for Mr. Ronayne's Handbook, and writes:

"I have been a constant reader of your paper and fully endorse its contents. I was with Mr. Ronayne in his lectures three years ago this winter. There are a great many Masons in this place. I have given them some of the signs, so they think I am a good Mason. I want to show them where and how I was made a Mason."

Maria Wood, Fairport, N. Y., writes:

"I like the Cynosure very much. Its interest is constantly increasing. May success follow its efforts."

Enos Mitchell, Pittston, Me. writes:

"I wanted to attend the Convention at Worcester, but was not able. I am glad you have struck into Maine. If I was able I would have Mr. Ronayne or some other good man come here. I believe you are engaged in a good cause, and it must prosper. I do not believe the kingdom of Christ will come till Freemasonry goes. I believe when the candidate goes into the lodge hoodwinked, and led by a cable-tow, and takes that ungodly oath upon himself, that the devil enters into him just as surely as he did into Judas after he received the sop."

News of the Week.

—The colored Odd-fellows held a national meeting in this city last week. They closed with a tramp through the principal streets of the city, and a dance till late at night. They have become very accurate imitators of the follies taught them by white men.

—The Chicago Reform Alliance has been organized to work up public sentiment to the necessity of closing the saloons on Sundays, and the passing of a city ordinance forbidding the sale of liquors to minors and their gaming in saloons. The society has had most flattering success thus far.

—In a quarrel last Friday night over a game of cards a student of the Chicago Medical College shot and killed a saloon-keeper.

—The receipts of hogs at Chicago during last week were 261,107 head —the largest on record.

—The growing prevalence of Sunday amusements and various other methods of desecrating the Sabbath, which have become notorious in Cincinnati for months past, have finally aroused public opinion. A meeting of sixty prominent citizens was held at the Grand Hotel last Tuesday, and a working committee of twenty appointed, who will endeavor to enforce existing laws, and, if additional legislation is needed, direct their efforts toward the securing of it. Their plan of working will be in its essential features, similar to that pursued in New York.

—The last rail was laid Dec. 3 on the Pembina branch of the Canada Pacific Railway, connecting with the Manitoba branch of the St. Paul and Pacific, ten miles north of the international boundary. It gives the province of Manitoba the first railroad communication with the outside world through the completed line from Winnipeg to St. Paul, 487 miles in length.

—Elder Orson Pratt is about starting to England to procure the publication of a new and revised edition of the Book of Mormon.

—A Louisiana paper reports that there are now nearly, if not quite, fifty cases of leprosy in Lafourche, in that State, all originating from one person thus suffering, who, some twenty years ago, settled on Bayou Lafourche. A Legislative inquiry is asked for.

—The New York Tribune says the turn seems to have come in the tide of immigration. For eleven months of the present year the number arriving was 72,147, against 52,009 for she same period last year, and 65,820 for the same period the year before.

—Letters from China state that during the recent famine 7,000,000 people died, 5,000,000 in the single province of Shausi.

—The central column of the English army has gained a considerable victory in Afghanistan. Gen. Roberts telegraphs from Peiwar Khotal, under date of the 3d, as follows: "During the night of December 1st the Afghan position was turned by a flank march over Spenzwai Pass. We surprised the enemy at daybreak of the 2d, when the 72d Highlanders and the 5th Goorkhas gallantly drove the Afghans from several positions. The Afghans endeavored to reach Peiwar Khotal, but the assault could not be delivered on that side. We then threatened the enemy in the rear, and attacked and carried Piewar Khotal about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. The enemy had, on the previous evening, received reinforcements of three regiments. They fought desperately. Their artillery was well served. Their defeat, however, was complete. We captured eighteen guns and a large quantity of ammunition. Our loss was moderate, considering the number of our opponents and the difficult nature of the country."

A Lahore dispatch says it is believed that there is no Afghan force between Dakka and Cabul, and that General Browne will occupy Jellalabad.

—The directors of the West of England and South Wales District Bank issued a circular last Sunday announcing the suspension of the bank, owing to the drain upon its deposits caused by persistent, and often unjustifiable, adverse rumors which have been circulated for weeks past. They say that the books show that the bank is solvent. The directors hope to reconstruct the bank. The utmost consternation prevails in South Wales. The bank had forty-two branches. Its liabilities are $17,500,000. The assets are stated at the same amount, but as they consist of local bills which are not negotiable in London, the Bank of England refused to advance upon them. The run upon the bank for the last few days has been so persistent that the cash in hand is estimated at only $1,250,000. The shareholders number 2,000 and their liability is unlimited.

the Freemasonry of the Jesuits; for Freemasonry is nothing else than Jesuitry. To fight Jesuits with Jesuitry is to become as bad as the Jesuits themselves. The organization of the Know Nothing party was a resort to Masonry by the politicians of the free States, in order to oppose the Masonry of the combined forces of the slave-power and the Democracy. It was a resort to the low arts of secret conspirators, as a means of sustaining a good and legitimate government, rooted in the hearts of the people, and which cannot be sustained by conspiracy. It was like taking a drink of drugged liquor in order to begin a hard day's work. It was beginning a reform by corrupting the people who were to carry out that reform. The overthrow of the slave-power was inevitable. Its defeat lay in its injustice, in its bad agencies, and in the patriotism, the intelligence, and the Christian principle of the American people; and not in the Freemasonry to which politicians resorted for that purpose.

Perhaps no greater mistake is ever made than to make use of a bad thing for a good purpose, especially where there is no necessity for it. It is very difficult to correct the mistakes of statesmen, and almost impossible to recover from those which are made by an entire people. When Masonry was once resorted to by respectable men for a respectable purpose, it immediately became very popular, and received a great and rapid development. Old lodges revived and new ones were established everywhere throughout the land. When soldiers were enlisted to serve the government, interested Masons went among them to reenlist them into the service of the lodge, slyly hinting to them that Masonic arts were an excellent means of preferment and a medium of understanding and safety with the rebels whom it was their duty to fight, and not to connive with. The State of Vermont, which once expelled this new form of Jesuitry from her borders, is now entirely under subjection to its demoralizing influences. Somewhat less than ten thousand Masons so completely control the political affairs and overshadow the religion and society of a State which has a law against Masonry on its statute books, that to sin against the lodge there is treated almost as high treason against the majesty of the State. A people whose constitution assures to every one freedom and independence, is ruled by a secret organization that arrogantly tramples upon law and destroys all freedom and all independence; for no one can be either free or independent who binds himself by an oath to serve the hidden tricksters of the lodge. No one can hold office in Vermont who is not a teol of the lodge, or does not give sufficient security that he will remain a passive agent under its management. But to be true to the lodge, this foreign institution, is to be wholly false to the State, to its laws and its most respectable and cherished antecedents.

With the deliberate introduction of Freemasonry into politics, in the settlement of the slave issue, the lodge has penetrated with a controlling power into every leading interest of the Republic; into our churches, our colleges, our courts, our departments of government, our business affairs, perverting and corrupting all, and demoralizing our society with fearful rapidity. It silences the pulpit, muzzles the press, paralyzes the tongue of the statesman, debauches our courts of justice, and fills our business corporations with rottenness; and all this under the Pharasaic pretences of great sanctity and honor. It is a fearful engine for circumventing law, dealing in bribes, and defeating justice. Its pagan temples, outrivalling those of Christ, are rising up in stupendous proportions all over the land. Every considerable village in the country has one or more subordinate lodges at work neutralizing the moral teachings of the churches there, each lodge serving as an iron link in the great chain that is thus being slowly yet surely wound around the nation's liberty, preparing it for the easy prey of some Grand Master. It sustains its power by bloody, intimidating oaths, the consequences of which in the murder of thousands of our fellow citizens in the South are only too evident. It imposes taxes, or black mail, which its intimidated subjects dare not, on the peril of their business and their good names refuse to contribute. It grants charters which are dangerous, not friendly, to freedom. Its passports are more potent than those of the government. Its militia, officered and drilled, no one knows by what authority, is more powerful than that of the state. It exercises a control which, against the first principle of free government, is as irresponsible as it is secret and formidable. It has not settled the slave issue, but has merely transferred the political power of an oligarchy of half a million of slaveholders into the hands of an equal number of self-seeking, intriguing Freemasons. It suppresses the negro vote in the South by systematic violence and intimidation and claims a skulking merit for covertly, not openly, opposing the vote of foreigners in the North; although a foreign Freemason, be he Jew, Buddhist, Mohammedan or other pagan, would be received into our American lodges with favor and sympathy, while an American Anti-mason would be treated by their minions with freezing coldness and even outrage.

Young Americans are baited into the lodge under the artful insinuations that they can thus perform a patriotic duty to the country by a secret opposition to Jesuitry. But they thus serve the purposes of Jesuitry instead of opposing them, for, by abandoning the open, manly warfare of Puritanism against Jesuitry, and resorting to the tricks and artifices of Freemasonry, they virtually acknowledge that, in their opinion, Puritanism is a failure, which is precisely the confession which the Jesuits would wish to have them make. In New England, where fifty years ago the name of Voltaire would have produced a shudder, as that of the worst enemy of mankind, his name is now effectively worshiped in the temples which are dedicated to his principles, and in the extreme devotion which is paid to this work of his hands. Where the Congregational religion, the inspiration of pristine forests, the indigenous outgrowth of Puritan America, was the main pillar of religion and civil liberty, the Masonic lodge and its counterpart, the Roman confessional, are now the very Jachin and Boaz of the moral edifice. Rivals for power at the public expense, these two pillars nevertheless unite together at the top in a high Jesuitical arch which now forms the main entrance to the temple of New England liberty, such as it is in these modern times. Under their influence impressive pageants, pompous rites and ceremonies, imposing demonstrations with bands of music, and long funeral processions have taken the place of Puritan simplicity and vital religion.

When we undertake to undeceive our young men, and draw them out of the charmed circle the Masonic craft has thrown around them, we find our way blocked by a shackled press and a servile pulpit. The Anti-masonic missionaries or lecturers whom we have sent out, numbering some thirty or more, who take neither purse nor staff with them, are treated as if they were outlaws; and not unfrequently even the pretended minister of the Gospel, perverted by Masonry, receives at his feet the garments of those who throw stones or eggs, or foul words at them. Nay, men claiming to be highly honorable, are not ashamed to exult in high though covert glee over the mean tricks with which their fellow members of the lodge seek to impose moral death and loss of influence upon Anti-masonic opponents. Even that much-boasted creature, the oldest Mason in the country, which would prove useless material even in the hands of a Darwin, would give an inane smile to see American freedom brought down and subjected to the degrading tricks and arts of the lodge. Of the American clergy, who should be the natural protectors of honest freedom in their flocks, more than half, it is supposed, have sold themselves to the lodge, for much less than a mess of pottage. Yes, these "kings and priests of God" that should be, are willing to act as decoys for drawing young unthinking men after them into the servitude of Freemasonry, thus serving a purpose that, in a moral point of view, sinks below even that of a Confucius or a Mohammed. If there is any one principle more clearly pervading the Bible and our original American institutions than any other, it is this, that if a man should gain the whole world by selling himself, he would yet gain nothing, so exceedingly valuable is an immortal soul; and yet these clergymen sell themselves to the lodge, and teach young men so, for the least worthy of all considerations in return, viz., the corrupt favor of a secret collusion.

Alas! what a spectacle do we now behold for the humiliation of human hopes and aspirations! An infidel joke, played off in cynical spleen upon the credulity of mankind, by a Voltaire, is taken up among a nation of intelligent, self-governing freemen, and worshipped as a religion! The polluting morals of Freemasonry have become the education and the religion of our political and our business life; and under its sway the rapid decline of republican vitality is marked by miracles of financial failure, and by inordinate extravagances of unfaithfulness and crime. Agriculture, the basial interest of all well-balanced society is dishonored. The farms of New England are so run down in favor of princely merchants and lordly boss mechanics, with whom Freemasonry is but a machine for controlling employees and driving corrupt bargains, that there are not now many homesteads left which offer a suitable reception for an educated lady. With the decay of agriculture comes the loss of that balance-wheel influence which is exceedingly necessary to our society and to our government. Our American constitution, it must be borne in mind, has none of that balance which is derived from a landed aristocracy, a standing army, and an established church; and those virtues which, in our republican society, should take the place of this balance, are being destroyed by Freemasonry. Our farms nowhere in any part of the country, offer a sufficiency of that conservative influence which is necessary to republican government. The whole conduct of the war was hostile to the farming interests.

Where shall we look for a remedy? Shall we go to the religious press of the country? Your editor of the religious press of the present day sees nothing wrong, nothing alarming in the prevalance of Freemasonry in the country. Like the Know Nothings, and like Mr. Tilden and his coparcerners, he does not know what is going on around him. Those great second temples of Diana, rivaling the first in pagan superstition, which now domineer over the Christian cities of Philadelphia, New York and Boston, costing millions of dollars, the interest of which would be sufficient to meet the running expenses of several State legislatures, or to support many missionary or educational establishments, rise up in aspiring grandeur before his eyes, and yet he does not see them! He has nothing to say in the case and goes on with his business of editing a paying paper, which will not displease the brethren of the "mystic tie" with unfriendly allusions. He is a man of peace, he is, and expects to be blessed for it, with many first class advertisements. It is true he often attempts to go up among the thunders and lightnings of Sinai; but then he seems to forget to come down. He is gone more than forty days, and leaves the people below to feast, to dance, to sing, and to worship around the Masonic lodge at their pleasure.

Leaving then the religious press out of the question, shall we go to the political press of the country, sometimes figuratively called the free press, for help? We get no favor there; for the favor of the lodge has become the very breath of the nostrils of your political editor. His columns are filled with the bombastic letters and stupid notices of Masonic proceedings, and are thus lent to the purposes of deception and double dealing which must entirely unfit the rising generation for perpetuating or even understanding free institutions. Always on the strain after news himself, he finds the lodge a convenient medium for acquiring inside information of outside events which the lodge itself may probably have manufactured. The New York Tribune has exulted very much recently over the exposure made by itself of the Tilden-Marble frauds, which showed that the Democracy were at a reminiscence of their old Masonic game; but the Tribune, by sustaining Freemasonry, gives countenance to such frauds, encourages their perpetration, and renders the exposure of them of but little effect. Freemasonry is an infinitely worse fraud against Christian society than the Tilden-Marble conspiracy was; because the latter is but transient and limited in its effects, while the other is permanent and universal. One was the child, while the other is the fruitful mother of such conspiracies. There is no force or virtue in the partisan of the lodge to effect a reform, especially against conspiracies, for he is a conspirator himself. No lasting reform of any kind can be effected by or through Freemasonry or by any of its inspirations, or by any of its agents. Its god is a very jealous god, and will admit of the worship of no other god. Every man who serves Freemasonry helps to build up falsehood and suppress truth. He is like the sons of Sceva, who, instead of driving out devils, were driven out by them.

Shall we go to American statesmen for relief? That would be seeking the blind to lead the seeing. None so blind as they who will not see. The very word statesman has become a by-word and reproach among us. The late William M. Tweed, a member of three secret societies, Master of a Masonic lodge, and in virtue thereof enabled to plunder a capital city, as if in command of an army of bummers, claimed to be a statesman, and as such co-operated with Mr. Tilden. Our statesmen generally, have become trap-door statesmen, rising into office and public notoriety only through the trap doors, and claptrap contrivances of the lodge. Draw the lid from lodge action at elections, and out jumps your Mason-made statesman, by surprise, like a monkey from the box. He lies hid under the secret counsels of the lodge until the election takes place, and then he comes forth with a bold assurance which astonishes the people as much as it delights the brethren of the craft. There are wires running from the Grand Lodge, with cypher dispatches, understood by none except the initiated, to every subordinate lodge of the country; and our statesmen jump as the wires are touched, not as the interests of the country demand, or the judgment of the people would approve. Your Masonic statesman is usually an easy-going, cheerful-minded man, who takes a rosy view of an order of things that sustains him, and is utterly void of that concern, as well as of those qualities which should characterize intelligent and devoted statesmanship and patriotism.

The chief political issue offered us by these statesmen is what kind of money we shall use, gold or paper; an issue forced upon us by the Masonic shams and shifts resorted to during the war of the rebellion. The question is, Shall we have gold or paper? It is certain that money is power. Paper money is a treacherous, delusive power, while gold is real power; and when some of this real power is in the purse of every American citizen, it is then in the right place to serve the purposes of republican government. I would as soon vote for a despot at once as to entrust our money-making power to the Masonic lodge, or its partisans. Paper money, it is claimed, was a faithful ally of the Republican party in ridding the country of slavery and purifying the Constitution. It was more than this: it was the ally of fraud, corruption, delay, neglect of duty, and Masonic shams. We might as well undertake to purify the Bible by the aid of greenbacks, as to attempt to purify the Constitution by them. They are, and always will be, a source of corruption and fraud rather than of purification. The use of them during the rebellion, together with the use of another foreign ally, Freemasonry, facilitated the expenditure of a thousand millions or more than there was any necessity for, transferring it into the private pockets of partisans of the lodge. Our government before the war was an economical government; a government of great patriotism and small salaries, by which it had been made strong. But under the resort made to paper money and Freemasonry, this store of strength and republican virtue was soon dissipated. These two allies, both foreign to the spirit of the Constitution, which have been almost unnecessarily summoned to our aid, are now threatening to take complete possession of the country, and destroy its liberties. It is true, we have been trying to reduce our standing army, and our paper money, but not a thing have our statesmen done toward getting rid of our worst, most exacting, and most dangerous of all our foreign allies, viz., the Masonic lodge. That foreign ally now garrisons every county of this Union with its organized and disciplined soldiers, who are animated by the most selfish spirit, and with whom blind obedience to lodge orders is reckoned a virtue. It operates the more securely inasmuch as the great mass of the people are still ignorant of its character and its aims. Our statesmen are conniving with it, as a means of perpetuating their own power at the expense of our liberties; and only a feeble voice is yet raised against it. The lavish expenditures of American blood and treasure during the war still cry out against it, but are hardly heeded. So low did our great cause sink under its low and selfish management that during the whole war the name of the government as one of the parties was rarely mentioned, but instead we heard of Republicans, Unionists, Lincolnites, Federalists, Abolitionists; of Confederates, Rebels and Copperheads, etc., while the only two contending forces were the government on the one side, and the rebellion on the other. Was there not a purpose in this?

The question remains then—What are we Anti-masons to do? The only course left open to us, according to my way of thinking, is to oppose all these foreign allies by our votes until we get rid of them. The American man must resume the free and independent exercise of his sovereignty, free from lodge control and from party control, or our republic is lost. The Republican party, largely made up of Democrats and controlled by the Masonic lodge, is no better than the Democratic party. Both are corrupt and unworthy of longer control, however pure some of her members may be. They are so depraved that they lack but a Pompey and Cæsar at their respective heads to plunge the country into civil war. They have ceased to be worthy of the support of honest men. The men who serve them are slaves to corrupt masters. Party is made for man and not man for party. The Masonic lodge was made by knaves, and can serve only the purposes of knavery. It is as much out of place in our political or social system as the old blood-rusted guillotine of the French revolution would be.

Foul diseases often need but simple remedies for a cure. There are two measures which, if religiously followed, might restore to American citizens some of that sovereignty which they have lost, and bring security to the republic. Those measures are—1st. Never pay a cent for the support of Masonic clergymen, and, 2nd. Never vote for a Masonic candidate for office. If we can rally a sufficient number of men to stand firm on this ground, then we may hope that our churches and our constitution may be purified, our liberties restored, and the ship of state be put on an American course for another century. To this end we must appeal to all honest clergymen, to all educators in our public schools, to all farmers, to all "devout and honorable women," and to our courts of law for co-operation and support. Aided by these, we may hope to get rid of the "intolerable anarchy of a double government," and not otherwise.

There are in reality but two parties in the country. On the one side is the Masonic lodge, leading to a military despotism, and on the other the American people. It is usually to the military organization that the people's liberties have fallen a prey, but with us it is secret organizations that threaten our liberties with destruction. They are a standing army of the most dangerous kind, the members of which, under sanctimonious pretences, are ever seeking private gain out of public interests. The true American patriot is ostracised by them; and though living in his own country, to which he may have devoted the services of a life-time, yet so foreign is this Masonic power that rules him, so utterly inimical to the institutions under which he has been reared, that he finds himself, as it were, in a strange land. The organization that makes itself one with pagans, infidels, barbarians and self-seekers, and puts a serious religious face upon the ridiculous, the absurd and the wicked, is no power for governing America. It is a power under which bad men and bad interests thrive better than the good, and by the exercise of which men grow worse instead of better. If we cannot frankly, openly and honestly carry out the institutions which our fathers have established, then our government is a failure. If we were possessed of that independency of character which is necessary for the support of our institutions, then we should hardly have need of an Anti-masonic organization for opposing the encroachments of Freemasonry; for every man of true republican principle would vote against it on all occasions. When thus deprived of the offices and honors on which it feeds, it would soon be covered with that shame which properly belongs to it, and would cease to exist.

My friends: by undertaking to save the liberties of this country from the baneful grasp of the secret empire, we have a great task to perform. Not only have we to loosen the lamb from the jaws of the ravenous tiger, but we have to revolutionize our political affairs and give them a new direction. And not this only, but we must go back a distance; we must reascend the current of events and endeavor to expose and correct great errors in the administration of government. We must stoop to the ungracious and thankless work of overhauling an administration endorsed by a noble purpose and by great popular enthusiasm, and expose its glaring errors, its timid shortcomings, its want of moral conviction, and its criminal neglects. We must show that Lincoln's administration, instead of being inspired by the spirit of the Constitution and the civil institutions of the country, was, on the contrary swayed by the blind counsels of the Masonic lodge; and it is the lodge that has been strengthened by that administration, to the injury of our Constitution, our social respectability our morals and laws.

It is true, we must admit, that a leading member of Mr. Lincoln's Cabinet was at one time professedly one of our number—an Anti-mason; but we must also admit that while seeking during the war to make use of the lodge to carry out national measures, he was, on the contrary, made use of by the lodge to carry out its own views, and that in every respect except profession, his political action was characterized by the very worst and most objectionable traits of Freemasonry itself. We must admit this as a confession of wrong, necessary to begin our reform, or our own professions will not be trusted by thinking, honest men of any party.

Do we fear to tell the truth and assert it? By exposing the faults of a Lincoln's administration (a Seward-Stanton one perhaps it had better be called) do we fear the curse that fell on the indecent Ham for heartlessly pointing out the accidental fault of a care-worn parent? Is it even so? Has Freemasonry the Jesuit power of engaging heaven to blight its adversaries with a curse? Must men who strive for the abolition of slavery, for the extinction of Masonry, and for other reforms, always be hung upon the accursed tree as objects of hate, derision and scorn, while deceivers, plunderers and profligates are feasting ever on the fatted calf of popular indulgence and favor? If we fear the usual consequences attending reforms to those who make them, we ought not to assume the title of Anti-mason or the name of American citizen. It must be remembered that there is a moral world as well as a political one; and if men of strict moral integrity and elevated principle cannot yet receive the approval and favor of political men, then society still remains in a state of barbarism; and republican government is as much of a failure as it was in the pagan days of Augustus Cæsar.

Gentlemen of the National Anti-masonic Association: We need not fear to wrong either persons, or parties, or sections by our Anti-masonic measures, however vigorously pursued. Freemasonry has no rights, either personal or institutional that the American citizen is bound to respect. It is an impudent, graceless aggression upon our civil and religious liberties. It is a covert mob, constantly preparing for future outbreaks against law and order; and has the same objectional character in the body politic that carrying concealed weapons has among persons. It is a fraudulent, secret combination, which exists only in violation of the common law, the guardian of the people's rights and privileges. It robs religion and the laws of their sanctions for the purpose of sanctifying itself; which, however, is of too vile a character to be sanctified or sanctioned by any manner of means. Its pretended sacred landmarks, invented by infidels in a barbarous age, are totally inapplicable to the civilization of the present day, which nevertheless, it aspires to fashion and direct. Let us then be as fearless, as decided and as untiring in our action as our cause is just, and as the danger to the nation is great.

The Christian Cynosure.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY, DEC. 12, 1878.

WHY CALL IT "THE CYNOSURE?"—Thus writes a correspondent, now and then, after all we have said, and after the name has really become popular. We answer:

1st. Because it is a poetic name.

"Where perhaps some beauty lies
The cynosure of neighboring eyes."
—MILTON.

"The lonely Cynosure."—SCOTT.

"Sweet Cynosure! Far-fixed in distant fields Of northern ether, thou hast ever hung."
—BLANCHARD.

2nd. It is an appropriate name. From its home in the constellation it has become the name of the "North Star" or "Pole Star" by which voyagers steer their course and make their port.

3rd. It is a euphonious name, smooth and sweet in the utterance.

4th. It is an original name. "The Star," "The Evening Star," "The Morning Star," "Gettysburgh Star," a whole hemisphere of "stars" but no Cynosure but ours.

And if, along with the crabs, fishes, rams and bulls of the signs of the zodiac, the North Star too has a brutal Greek name, which not one in ten thousand of the common people know or care anything about or ever will, why should the beautiful idea of the Christian's guiding star be given up any more than the symbolic "Star of Bethlehem?"

A MISREPRESENTATION.—We learn that Rev. Dr. Goodwin of the First Congregational church, taking up a collection to build a church in Wheaton, Ill., told his people that the persons asking help had been "driven from the College Chapel, and that he made an appeal in their behalf for sympathy and money." Dr. Goodwin has probably been misled by the misrepresentations of H. W. Cobb and others. If the facts as they exist in Wheaton concerning that church were fairly placed before his congregation, no collection would have been taken, and no such false statement made by himself against the College church.

GEN. J. W. PHELPS, whose paper appears in this present number, was graduated at West Point and has spent most of his active life in the army. While commanding a regiment or two on the Rio Grande before the slavery war, he translated and published a work from the French on secret societies. While commanding troops under Butler at New Orleans he insisted on enlisting the negroes in our service. Butler advised him to set them to chopping wood and turn their labor to his own profit. A difficulty arose out of Phelps' refusal, which led him to resign his commission, and his proclamation concerning the enlistment of the blacks in our service, like that of Fremont, was disapproved by Seward and Stanton; and though Phelps was a brave and able officer, his resignation was accepted at Washington, and he left the service. He had evidently hoped for a different result. It was not long before necessity overruled policy, and the blacks were no longer sent back to their rebel masters to be whipped, but enlisted as they ought to have been long before. Seward was an Anti-mason, but the people of Chicago afterward saw him "swinging around the circle" with Andrew Johnson, a Freemason of twenty-one degrees; when the two, together, laid the corner stone of the Douglas monument. Politics, like misery, "makes strange bedfellows." There are dark whispers that Johnson was cognizant of the murder of Lincoln and the attempt on Seward awhile before. Johnson was certainly on hand to be sworn in as President of the United States before Lincoln's blood was fairly stiff; and Seward's scarred and haggled person was moved around with Johnson to gain Northern votes enough, with the eleven secession States, to control the country in the interest of the ex-slaveholders, Freemasons and secessionists. Prof. Tobey of the Telescope, says of Gen. Phelps' Worcester address, "It is one destined to live." We think it one of the ablest and most truthful we have ever read. Our readers will thank us for giving it to them.

BELLING THE CAT.

The point of the old familiar fable of "belling the cat" is that no one mouse in the whole convention dared to do what was necessary to the welfare of the commonwealth of mice, for fear of being eaten up by the cat, in the attempt to put a bell on her; and so, the work not done, the mice were left unprotected, and the sly, cunning cat remained the terror of their realm.

We learn that the Worcester (Mass.) city pastors, after four successive Monday meetings, discussing Freemasonry, were to select one of their number to preach against the lodge. It is to be hoped that those brethren will all preach against the organized deism of the order without any appointment. If they do this, in the name and fear of Christ, he will sustain them and bring them off "more than conquerors." But if they put forward one minister to do what all ought to do they will expose him to special malignity, and he will feel as though they had bound and loaded him with a burden which they wished to escape, and distrust and misunderstanding will result.

Some ten or fifteen years since Rev. Mr. Dickinson of Foxboro, Massachusetts, now dead, was appointed by his association to read an essay on the secret orders. He complied, and read an able paper. It was of course assailed, and ministers who had put him forward to do it, instead of standing at his back, criticised his performance and left him to the malice of the lodge.

Rev. John P. Gulliver, D. D., lately appointed professor in Andover Theological Seminary, procured the appointment of a committee of the Western College Association to report in a year against college secret orders, which he called "rat-hole societies." I think the committee was appointed at Oberlin. Next year the College Association met at St. Louis, where secret societies govern everything, and no committee was found brave enough enough to "bell the cat," so as to warn college mice of her approach; and secret college fraternities still defy discipline and train young men in trickery, oaths, rowdyism and the idolatrous swindling and horse-play of the lodge.

TO THE WORCESTER (MASS.) CITY PASTORS.

RESPECTED BRETHREN:—My honored teacher in theology, Dr. Calvin E. Stowe, used to say that the pastors of New England churches would "do more things in the course of a year from no motive but duty than any equal number of men on earth." Certainly you have met the discussion of a difficult and embarrassing subject with more Christian candor and manhood than the National Christian Association has often experienced at the hands of bodies of Christian ministers. When we first held our national meeting in Farwell Hall, Chicago, though thirteen Christian denominations were represented, and a United States Senator who used, with your Governor Washburne to attend prayer meeting in the capitol at Washington, addressed us, W. W. Patton, D.D., then editor of the Advance, though within fifty rods of us, took no notice of the meeting!

You have, at least, treated the reform with decency and respect. For four successive weeks you have given your Monday morning meetings to the discussion; and you have heard with candor and patience what our representatives had to say. For this, we thank you. The Hebrew commonwealth had no cavalry for offensive war, and Congregational churches are, in this respect like it. You are of all men or organizations the worst situated for the aggressive movements of reform. If you oppose a popular evil or error, you will be at once persecuted by the bad and criticised by the good.

As I am an older minister than most, if not all of you, will you suffer me to call your attention to some things which years and experience have taught me concerning this movement against the lodge-worships of this country?

It is some ten years since I went to Andover and Professors Park, Phelps, Barrows and Smythe signed a request to the American Tract Society, Boston, to publish a tract to "prevent members of our churches joining secret societies." The tract was written and printed, but not published. It was strangled in the committee; though Nehemiah Adams and G. W. Blagden in prayer-meeting in the "Old South," warmly advocated the tract. About that time I preached in Newburyport, Beverly, Chelsea, Mt. Vernon and Berkley street churches Boston; also in Newton, Brookline, Foxboro, North Wrentham, West and East Medway, Northfield, Northampton, South Hadley Falls and some other Massachusetts churches; and in all these places earnestly urged, in private conversation, the absolute necessity, for the life of the Congregational churches, that something decided should be done to keep out the leprosy of the lodge.

In all these years nothing was said of my "rashness" or "indiscretion." My sermon in Dr. Kirk's church (Mt. Vernon), Boston, was published by the Congregational Publishing Society, and my person and ministry were, so far as I know, popular in the churches where I went. I believed that Mr. Garrison's no-government, no-Sabbath, and other theories, had repelled the Eastern ministers from the anti-slavery reform; and thus aided the Theodore Parker and "come-outer" movement in Massachusetts, and sunk the orthodox churches many degrees in popular estimation. I thought surely if the anti-secrecy reform was kept free from heresies and the spirit of come-outism, good men and ministers would soon see that to reject the Universalist St. John of Worcester from church pulpits, and "brother" with him in the lodge was hypocrisy and sin; and that Congregational ministers must get out of that bald inconsistency or lose the respect of their people. I still cling to the hope of a general rising against the lodge and your recent treatment of the National Christian Association strengthens that hope.

I beseech you then, "suffer a word of exhortation," which is given in all meekness and Christian affection. And I beg to say:

1st. Your chief difficulty and danger lie in worldly and corrupt leaders. Dr. A. H. Quint, of New Bedford, has been stripped and sworn, as you lately saw candidates in Mechanics' Hall stripped and sworn by Mr. Ronayne (who is the John B. Gough of the reform), until his moral nature is completely broken and defiled. He is a Freemason of 32 degrees, a grand chaplain of Masons, and, in the New Bedford Republican Standard, January, 1872 you will find a defiant speech of his in which he said: "I am proud of being the Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge; and anybody who don't like it can help himself." In the same paper, next year, December 18, 1873, you will find a long and able speech of Dr. Quint's at a lodge celebration, in which he repeats the worst heresies and falsehoods of the lodge. Yet this same deceiver, when at Oberlin, starting his "National Congregational Council," convinced the good and simple-hearted missionary, Geo. Thompson, that he was sick of the lodge, and ready to give it up! Dr. Quint voted the pro-slavery ticket through Polk, Pierce, and down to Buchanan, and only turned Abolitionist when Archbishop Hughes of New York hoisted the United States flag. His oaths, now in or upon his conscience, far exceed the number of years he has lived; and he is full brother to the infidels and blacklegs of the lodge, keeping no secrets from them, while he is not even a half-brother to his Congregational brethren. Indeed, the words "brother" and "oath" have no more meaning to him than the words "husband" or "marriage" have to an old adulteress.

I write these things because they are true. Dr. Quint has never injured me in word or deed that I know of. I write to save souls from hell, and the country and the church from sure and certain destruction; and I state only facts already open and patent to the world.

And now, beloved brethren, allow me in the name of Christ our Saviour, to beg you to take no half measures in this business. The young men, sons of the holy men and women who attend your prayer-meetings, and who love and support you, those young men are being stripped, swindled and sworn, as you have lately seen, to conceal the crimes of Masons. To conceal crime is to be accessory to crime; and to swear to conceal crime is to swear to be accessory to crime. The blood of their souls will be on your garments unless they are warned and saved by their spiritual guides and shepherds. The lodge, as you saw, omits Christ from its creed at the door; which is omitting Christianity from all inside. The veil of secrecy is the robe of anti-Christ. The prayers are idolatry and the whole worship abomination. Now if you shall "look one upon another" and allow your young men to go to hell through your neglect, the wrath of God, which has "dried up realms to deserts" where Christ and the apostles once walked and taught, will give New England to Rome, which is the mother and and model of all these abominations, and children's children will rise up and curse your memories as unfaithful shepherds of Christ's flock.

Aid then Rev. Mr. Hinman, who is now laboring in Connecticut, and who is a careful, blameless, orthodox minister of Christ. Encourage your people to subscribe for the Cynosure. Pray for the overthrow of "the unfruitful works of darkness." Endure the "reproach of Christ." Circulate tracts which may be had for a trifling sum of the publishers of this paper, and obtain and read the standard works of the lodge, which will show you that what is said of it is true. And may the "God of light in whom is no darkness," and the Saviour who spake nothing in secret stablish and build you up as faithful ministers of the New Testament. Amen.

MR. DAVID F. NEWTON of Toledo, Ohio, sends us some slips from his writings which we shall insert from time to time, which will interest and profit our readers. It is now some forty years since we knew Mr. Newton in Cincinnati, Ohio. He was then, as he has been since, using his pen for the cause of Christian goodness and reform. He has published books and tracts for nearly half a century, and his zeal and devotedness to Christ seems to increase rather than diminish with years. He is altogether a remarkable man, and when he dies will leave a track of light across the horizon.

—On Sabbath, the 1st inst., Rev. H. H. Hinman preached in the Congregational church at Staffordville, Conn. A violent storm prevented meetings for two or three evenings following, and two evenings he was shut out of a Baptist church by the "selectmen" of the town. He writes on Thursday that a hall had been secured, and the prospect was good for a lecture that evening. The next day he was to start for Westford and Tolland, in the same State. He finds the Masonic obligation superior to every one of honor in controlling halls, etc., though his experience is that there is more candor is discussing Freemasonry at the East than on his former fields.

—Friend Lathrop of Wyanet writes of the exposition by Mr. Ronayne in that place in October. Prejudice against the speaker and ignorance of his subject operated at first against these meetings, but these were no foes to withstand the impetuous logic of the speaker, so that on the third evening the hall holding 500 people could not accommodate the crowd. The Masons were whipped and left for shame when the candidate was led in for the last degree. The effect on the community was good and no two rooms in the place could hold the crowd if Mr. Ronayne should repeat his lectures.

—Past Master Ronayne has put the manuscript of his new work in the hands of the printers. He has entered the names of eighty-six subscribers to the amount of $110. The number of subscribers should be at least five hundred before the work issues from the press; not quite one-third of the present number was raised in a few minutes at a single convention. A synopsis of the contents of the book will appear next week.

—Our readers will be pained to learn with us that Bro. C. T. Webb, formerly of Iowa, is lying very low at No. 518 Park avenue, in this city. Bro. Webb will be remembered by all who attended the National Convention here in 1876, for his clear and artless narrative of his renunciation of Freemasonry. He has been failing for some two years past and his physician announces that he cannot long remain here.

FROM SECRETARY STODDARD.

LIGONIER, Ind.

I have found once again a friendly shelter beneath the hospitable roof of brother and sister Leuty, whose kindness is and I trust will be ever remembered with gratitude. Looking back over the line of march and field of conflict for the past week I can trace the good hand of God in events the most minute and to human seeming unimportant. On the evening of Nov. 28th at 6:30 I stepped from the cars at Rome, N. Y. On the morning of the 29th I walked out a distance of four miles to the house of Moses W. Bicknell, who is four score and one years old and who retains all his faculties in a remarkable degree. On my way from Rome I called on Elder James Bicknell, who is two years the senior of his brother Moses, and who has been for forty-two years pastor of the "Orthodox Baptist church" in Westmoreland, Oneida county, New York. This church was organized as an Anti-masonic church, and has maintained its testimony even to faithful and unflinching dealing with a member of the pastor's own family, who in an evil hour was deceived and led into the lodge; but who by faithful admonition has been won from the snare of Satan. J. G. Stearns and Elder David Bernard often preached in this pulpit and were well known to the old inhabitants of the neighborhood. The widow of the former still lives at Clinton, a few miles away.

On Sabbath morning and afternoon I preached in this old historic church where the minister's feet in the pulpit are elevated some distance above the heads of his tallest hearers in the pews; and in the evening Bro. W. F. Curtis conveyed me to Rome where I met Bro. Winget and preached to a good and attentive audience in his, (the Free Methodist,) church. Arrangements were made and a lecture announced for Tuesday evening at the same place. A lecture had also been announced for the Baptist church at Westmoreland for Monday evening. These were filled as were others subsequently made for Wednesday and Thursday evenings. Each of the meetings were well attended considering the weather and roads; excellent order was observed and close attention given.

At Rome I learned the craft were disturbed, and showed the usual symptoms of moral disease by accustomed methods of denunciation. I believe good was done, and the way opened for a course of lectures and expositions in Rome, where a population of some 12,000 or 13,000 support seventy dramshops, which find shelter and protection in their illegal traffic through their lodge allies in the courts. I shall long cherish the memory of the good people whom I met at Rome and Westmoreland, and hope for the privilege of renewing this pleasant and brief acquaintance.

Leaving Rome on the morning of Dec. 6, I reached Syracuse at 12 M., and was received by Bro. Stratton, and the noble band of Christian workers by whom he is surrounded in a way to make a pilgrim feel that he had gained a friendly port. Bro. Z. Weaver I found full in the faith, and apparently neither older or less zealous than in former years. I regretted not finding Mr. Kirkpatrick, but his genial and truly gentlemanly brother received me so kindly that the disappointment was partially compensated. Taking tea with Bro. Stratton and his most estimable family, I pushed on for the far West, reaching this point at 3:30 P. M., en route for Minnesota, which, D. V., I hope to reach in time for the State meeting. J. P. STODDARD.

—C. H. Howard & Co., publishers of the Advance, begin with the new year the publication of a Sabbath school weekly, the "Sunday School News and Bible Studies." It will contain notes and helps for Bible study and an interesting arrangement of Sabbath school news and suggestions. Price: $1.00 a year; in clubs of ten, 80c.

—The fall term of Western College closed last week very satisfactorily. The winter term opens on the 18th inst., when a good attendance is expected. The well known high moral and religious tone of this institution as well as its public stand on Christian reforms are securing for it increasing patronage and support. The officers express their gratification at the success at Wheaton in removing the debt of that institution.

The Dream of Pilate's Wife.

BY CHARLOTTE BRONTE.

What is this Hebrew Christ? To me unknown
His lineage—doctrine—mission—yet how clear
Is God-like goodness in his actions shown,
How straight and stainless is his life's career.
The day of Deity that rests on him,
In my eyes makes Olympian glory dim.

The world advances; Greek or Roman rite
Suffices not the inquiring mind to stay;
The searching soul demands a purer light
To guide it on its upward, onward way;
Ashamed of sculptured gods, Religion turns
To where the unseen Jehovah's altar burns.

Our faith is rotten—all our rites defiled—
Our temples sullied, and methinks this man
With his new ordinance, so wise and mild,
Is come, even as he says, the chaff to fan
And sever from the wheat; but will his faith
Survive the terrors of to-morrow's death?

Part, clouds and shadows! Glowing sun appear!
Part, mental gloom! Come insight from on high!
Dusk dawn in heaven still strives with day-light clear,
The longing soul doth still uncertain sigh,
O, to behold the truth—that sun divine—
How doth my bosom pant, my spirit shine.

This day time travails with a mighty birth,
This day Truth stoops from heaven and visits earth.

Home Training for Haunts of Vice.

In a sermon on the Sunday theaters of Cincinnati and their vicious accessories Rev. Robert Patterson, of the Central Presbyterian church in that city traces to its source the stream from which these resorts are filled. The following is an extract:

The Christian parents of the city have, in too many cases, sown the seed, the nature of which is seen now in the present condition of our civic affairs. They have sown the wind by their neglect of family rule and culture—the wind is the symbol of emptiness, variableness and unbridled license—by allowing their authority to be disobeyed, by failing to use the opportunities afforded them for instruction in the Word of God, and for proper discipline. Christian fathers and mothers have inspired in their children a contempt for parental authority. Now the family is God's school. God enlists all the father's care and the mother's love in the work of training the children. The place of the family can never be filled by the instruction of the Sabbath school or the secular school. There is no excuse on account of occupations of politics or society, that can relieve the parents from this duty to their children. Has the trust always been fulfilled? Is not the evening worship neglected? Is it not true that many professing Christians fail to exercise proper authority over their households? It is impossible for these things to be taught outside of the family circle. The Sabbath school and the public school are only auxiliaries, which are useful in proportion to the correct training of the children at home. Obedience at home is the beginning of all loyalty and usefulness in the citizen. The man who has never been taught to obey, and to curb his own passions, may form a fit member of a tribe of savages, but he can never be a fit member of a free, enlightened social organization.

With this contempt for parental authority, comes naturally a contempt for God's Word, and the day which he has set apart. The youth are trained to habits of Sabbath desecration not only by occasional picnics and excursions, but by continual violation of the day. This inculcation, by parental carelessness or neglect, of a feeling of disregard for the Sabbath and for the worship of God, is the teaching of a virtual atheism. The outcome of such want of training is the doubt and the dislike of divine things prevalent at the present time, and the result of this practical unbelief is the destruction of free government. There are governments which are maintained by multitudes of armed soldiery; where laws whether just or unjust, are enforced by the bayonet; where batteries masked in barracks and arsenals are at hand to be used in quelling the rebellion of the people; but, in this country, we have only laws that appeal to the conscience of the citizens. Those laws which are repugnant to the public conscience cannot be enforced. I conscience is destroyed no law can be enforced, and you destroy conscience when you teach, or allow to be taught, a contempt of God and his law.

The wind is resistable, and it comes from a certain known direction, but the whirlwind is irresistible, it rises nobody can tell where, and growing in strength as it proceeds, uses everything which it takes up as a weapon against those things which it meets. There is an electric influence in it; the fury of heaven is in alliance with the power of the atmosphere. Similar elements are at work in human affairs. We are astounded when we observe the sudden tempest and the unforeseen stroke of the lightning. Yet we train these elements, as if with care, for the very purpose of blasting our own prosperity. It is only when millions of property are destroyed at Pittsburg or San Francisco that we become aware of the magnitude of the peril. It is only when we behold people engaged in wholesale robbery, arson, and murder, that we perceive the tendency of those elements which we are utterly heedless of in quiet times. Let us not jest, nor affect to despise a timely warning. Let us not delay in the face of an actual peril, because that peril does not seem immediately at our doors. Let us rather turn to the Lord and change our ways while we still live in happiness and safety.

No grandeur can there be in life, no noble prospect can stretch out before us, unless we pitch the tent high, or unless we keep the lofty places of our spiritual estate as peaks of vision for frequent visits.

Knox's Heroism.

Enraged at the perfidy of Queen Mary Stuart the Earl of Argyll and the Prior of St. Andrews, who had hitherto remained with the Queen, joined the Lords of the Congregation, now assembled at St. Andrews. Knox being invited by them to repair to that city, he proceeded thither without delay, preaching in Crail and Anstruther by the way. Having arrived at St. Andrews, he signified his intention of preaching the following day in the cathedral, which, being understood by the Archbishop, he assembled his troops, and informed the heads of the Congregation that if "Knox offered to preach there he should have a warm reception." Afraid of the consequences the Lords advised him to defer preaching that day, especially as the Queen's army was lying at a very short distance. The bold answer of our reformer, which was something like that of Luther when dissuaded from attending the Diet of Worms, at once silenced the remonstrance of his friends. "God is my witness," said he, "that I never preach Christ Jesus in contempt to any man; but to delay preaching to-morrow I cannot; for in this town and church began God first to call me to the dignity of a preacher from the which I was reft by the tyranny of France and procurrent of the bishops, as ye know. Therefore, seeing that God, above the expectation of many, hath brought my body to the same place where first I was called to the office of a preacher, and from which most unjustly I was removed, I beseech your honors not to stop me from presenting myself unto my brethren; and, as for the fear of danger that may come, let no man be solicitous, for my life is in the custody of Him whose glory I seek; and, therefore, I cannot so fear their boast nor tyranny that I will cease from doing my duty, when of his mercy, he offereth me occasion. I desire the hand and weapon of no man to defend me, only do I crave audience, which, if it be denied here unto me at this time, I must seek further where I may have it." And Knox accordingly preached that day, and the three following, without interruption, and with so much success, that the magistrates and inhabitants agreed to embrace the Reformed religion, and to remove every vestige of idolatry from the city. That Sunday the 10th of June, on which Knox first preached in that church after his exile, was doubtless one of the most agitating days of his life. That day he had seen afar off, and prophesied of, even when a slave in the French galleys, fifteen years before. It may not be uninteresting to recall his very words: "And lying betwixt Dundee and St. Andrews, the second time the galleys returned to Scotland; the said John being so extremely sick that few hoped of his life, and said Mr. James willed him to look to the land, and asked if he knew it. He answered, 'Yes, I know it well, for I see the steeple of that place where God first in public opened my mouth to his glory, and I am fully persuaded how weak that ever I now appear, that I shall not depart this life till that my tongue shall glorify his godly name in the same place.' This report the said Master James in presence of many famous witnesses, many years before the said John set foot in Scotland this last time to preach." —Knox and the Reformation Times in Scotland.

Theatres.

A correspondent of the New York Churchman, writing on a controversy which is going on in some of the religious newspapers on the compatibility of Christianity with theatre-going, comes to the following conclusion:

The great majority of operas, plays and farces are licentious, pandering to the worst passions of the idle and corrupt, setting a premium on vice and sneering at virtue, abounding in oaths and indecent jests. There are said to be a few pure plays, but to discern these, and patronize these only, requires an amount of "good taste" (not to say religious sentiment) possessed by very few. The theatre in all ages has been the first lesson learned by the beginners in vice. It stands at the entrance of a way, stations on which are the race course, the liquor saloon, the brothel, the gambling house and the end—death. When a young man sets out to be a rake, he begins first of all with the theatre. The theatre, by exacting large outlays of money and giving little in return, encourages extravagance. It also compels late hours and waste of time. Its surroundings are the resort of the idle and the vicious. Where the theatre is, the bar room and the brothel are usually not far off. Nor am I entirely ignorant of what I am talking of. I have been considered a veteran theatre-goer. During ten years of my life I rarely missed an opportunity of attending the theatre. I have seen all sorts of plays in all sorts of theatres, both "high-toned" and cheap. I have seen every living American actor and actress of note. A few years ago I determined to live a Christian life. Result: I do not go to theatres now, and I try to keep every one else from going. Why? My observation teaches me that religion and the theatre are two conflicting things.

The desire of power in excess caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall; but in charity there is no excess, neither can angels nor man come in danger by it.—Bacon.

Childrens' Corner.

Thankfulness.

In a small attic room, so low that I could stand upright only in the middle of the floor, I found a mother and three little children, the eldest six, and the youngest two years old. A straw bed laid on the floor, filling more than half the room, a broken chair, and an old table with a few cups and plates on it, was all the furniture in the room. The father had been in prison for a year, on charge of stealing money from his employer, and the mother, a small, nervous, energetic woman, had supported her children by washing and scrubbing, till now she was unable to work, from a dreadful abscess in her side, the result, the doctor said, of overwork and lack of food. Her face made my heart ache, it had such a starved look.

I asked her if she could trust God in all her troubles.

"I don't know," she replied, "He must be very angry with me to punish me so long." I had only a little to give, so little that I feared my words of hope and comfort would seem only mockery, but she took it thankfully. "Twenty-five cents, why, that will get the children enough to eat for two or three days!" In a few days I called again, and asked how she was getting on. "Oh, nicely," she said. "I feel so much better I am doing a little scrubbing. God sent you here the other day. Do you remember what you told me; that he was not angry with me, but loved me, and only sent these troubles to make me trust himmore? Well, I keep thinking of that, and now the troubles don't seem half so great, and he has been so good to me; we haven't been hungry once since you were here before. He has sent us something every day. This morning the children ate everything up, and I thought what should we do for dinner; but I kept saying to myself, He loves me, and before noon a lady sent in to see if I could do a little scrubbing for her; so that will get us our dinner, and you have brought rice, and the lady down stairs will let me cook it on her stove. No, I never will think that God is hard and cruel again. He is so good to us."—Selected.

Some Signs.

Solomon said, many centuries ago: "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right."

Some people seem to think that children have no character at all. On the contrary, an observing eye sees in these young creatures the signs of what they are likely to be for life.

When I see a little boy slow to go to school, and glad of every excuse to neglect his book, I think it is a sign that he will be a dunce.

When I see a boy in haste to spend every penny as soon as he gets it, I think it is a sign that he will be a spendthrift.

When I see a boy hoarding up his pennies, and unwilling to part with them for any good purpose, I think it a sign that he will be a miser.

When I see a boy or girl looking out for themselves, and dislike to share good things with others, I think it is a sign that the child will grow up a very selfish person.

When I see boys and girls often quarrelling, I think it a sign that they will be violent and hateful men and women.

When I see a little boy willing to take strong drink, I think it is a sign he will be a drunkard.

When I see a little boy smoking or chewing tobacco, I think it a sign that he will soon be guilty of other filthy habits.

When I see a boy who never prays, I think it is a sign that he will be a profane and profligate man.

When I see a child obedient to its parents, I think it a sign of great future blessings from Almighty God.

When I see a boy fond of the Bible, I think it a sign that he will be a pious and happy man.

And though great changes sometimes take place in the character, yet, as a general rule, these signs do not fail.—Selected.

ANSWERS TO PUZZLES.

Leonard and Perlie Champ, M. J. Thurston and Minnie Gurnea send correct answers. To the enigma Nov. 21st the answer is "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and Him only shalt thou serve." Minnie Gurnea tells us how the grocer's boy measured four quarts from an eight quart jug using a three and five quart measure: "The boy measured the four quarts by filling the five quart measure then filling the three quart from it which left two quarts in the five quart measure; then emptied the two quarts and repeated the operation, which left two also, and he would have the sum of two and two which are four quarts."

LESSON L.—December 22, 1878—THE SAVIOUR'S LAST WORDS.

SCRIPTURE.—Luke 24: 44-53.

44. And he said unto them, These are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled, which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms, concerning me. Mat. 16: 21; 17: 22, 23; 20: 18; Mark 8: 31; Luke 9: 22; 18: 31-33.

45. Then opened he their understanding that they might understand the Scriptures, Acts 16: 14.

46. And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day: Ps. 22; Is 53; Zech. 11: 12, 13.

47. And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem. Ps. 22: 27; Gen. 12: 3; Mal. 1: 11; Micah 4: 2-5; Is. 49: 6, 19 23; Hos. 2: 23; Jer 31: 34.

48. And ye are witnesses of these things. John 15: 27; Acts 1: 8, 22.

49. And, behold, I send the promise of my Father upon you: but tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye be endued with power from on high. Is. 44: 3; Joel 2: 28. Acts 1: 4; 2: 1-21.

50. And he led them out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and blessed them. Acts 1: 12.

51. And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. 2 Kings 2: 11; Mark 16: 19; John 20: 17; Acts 1: 9.

52. And they worshiped him, and returned to Jerusalem with great joy. Mat. 28: 9, 17.

53. And were continually in the temple praising and blessing God. Amen. Acts 2: 46.

GOLDEN TEXT.—"Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen." Mat. 28: 20.

CONNECTION WITH THE LAST LESSON.

Jesus appeared in the midst of the disciples when Thomas was absent, and again when he was present. The disciples go to Galilee, where our Lord is seen by seven of them at the lake of Tiberias, and by about five hundred brethren on a mountain. Then he is seen at Jerusalem by James and all the apostles. See Mat. 28: 16-20; Mark 16: 14-18; Luke 24: 13-43; John 20: 19-25; Acts 1: 3-8; 1 Cor. 15: 5, 6, 17. Parallel with the lesson are Mark 16: 19, 20; Acts 1: 9-12.

[From S. S. Union Advanced Paper.]

POINTS FOR SPECIAL STUDY.

1. The Scripture readings.

2. The report of the two disciples to those at Jerusalem (Luke 24: 33).

3. The appearance of Jesus among them.

4. The Jewish division of the Scriptures (v. 44).

5. The duty of Christians to the missionary work (v. 47).

6. Manifestations of the "power from on high" in the history of the church.

7. Evidences that the early Christians worshiped Christ (v. 52).

8. Ways of obeying his commands to preach the Gospel.

OUTLINE.

1. Looking back. Their Master said in effect, This ought not to startle. It is the very thing predicted. I told you all this beforehand. (See Mark 10: 33). He endorses the Hebrew Bible in its three great divisions: (1) Moses, or the Pentateuch, the first five books of Scripture; (2) the prophets, including the earlier historical books, and all the prophets except Daniel; (3) the Psalms, i. e., the hagiographa (sacred writings), which comprised all the books now arranged between Chronicles and the Song of Solomon inclusive, and also Lamentations and Daniel. These testified of Christ.

2. Their present position. They were witnesses to the fact that Christ had risen from the dead.

3. Their future. They were to receive the Holy Ghost and to carry the Gospel everywhere.

4. Christ's ascension. He went to his God and Father. The disciples worshiped him.

PRACTICAL TEACHINGS.

1. Christ has fulfilled the Scriptures concerning himself.

2. He has made it clear that the Old Testament, as we have it, is inspired and sanctioned by him.

3. He has joined together three things that we must not separate—the Word, the Spirit, and the risen Saviour.

4. He has taught us what to aim at and expect—the preaching of his Gospel to all nations.

5. He has disclosed the secret of the church's power—the Holy Ghost.

6. He has given assurance of the raising to heaven of the human body.

7. He has fixed the duty of his saints—to witness for him.

SCRIPTURE COMMENTARY.

Verse 44. "These are the words." Rev. 21: 5: For these words are true and faithful: Acts 18: 28: For he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publicly, showing by the Scriptures that Jesus was Christ.

"Yet with you." John 16: 4: But these things have I told you, that when the time shall come, ye may remember that I told you of them.

"Must be fulfilled." John 19: 36: For these things were done that the Scripture should be fulfilled. 1 Cor. 15: 3, 4: Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures.

"Concerning me." 2 Thess. 2: 15: Hold the traditions which ye have been taught.

45, 46. "Opened he their understanding." Ps. 119: 18: Open thou mine eyes that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law. Is. 29: 18: And in that day shall the deaf hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind shall see out of obscurity, and out of darkness.

"Behooved Christ to suffer." Is. 53: 5: But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed.

47, 48. "Remission of sins.... preached." Acts 13, 38: Be it known unto you, therefore....that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins. Eph. 1: 7: In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace. Col. 1: 14: In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins. 1 Peter 2: 24: Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye were healed.

"Among all nations." Psa. 67: 2: Thy saving health among all nations. Isa. 49: 6: That thou mayest be my salvation unto the end of the earth.

"Beginning at Jerusalem." Isa. 5: 4: What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?

49. "I send." Isa. 44: 3: For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground; I will pour my Spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring. Joel 2: 28: And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh.

"Tarry ye." Isa. 32: 15: Until the Spirit be poured upon us from on high.

50, 51. "Parted from them." 2 Kings 2: 11: And it came to pass, as they still went on, and talked, that behold, there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven. Mark 16: 19: So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. Eph. 4: 8-10: Wherefore he saith, when he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things.

52, 53. "Worshipped him." Psa. 96: 9. O worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. John 4: 23. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth.

"With great joy." Psa. 30: 11. Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing; thou hast put off my sackcloth and girded me with gladness. 1 Pet. 1: 8. Believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable, and full of glory.

BAPTIST.

—At Preston Center, Wayne Co., Pennsylvania, is a Baptist church which your correspondent served as pastor years ago. Then its members were a unit against the lodge. Some two or three years ago they put on their church book a rule against secret societies. This resolution was not one of absolute disfellowship of the lodge, as it should have been, but a pledge of its members to use their influence against it. . Last summer the church engaged a new pastor, not knowing, as they should have done, his exact position in regard to secret orders. Soon after his settlement there he brought his letters to unite with the Independent Order of Good Templars, and he and his wife joined that church of Masonic origin and type. This fact gave some of the members a degree of anxiety and suspicion. This fall the pastor, assisted by ministers from the surrounding towns, conducted a revival meeting with much seeming success. In the progress of these meetings some lodgites came out (?) and under the influence of such a pastor and his "true yoke-fellow" some of them were taken into the church against the protest of one of the deacons and to the grief of others. The deacon asked one lodge-bound soul if he was willing to submit to the rules of the church. He said, "If you allude to the rule against secret orders, I am not." This took place on Saturday in the experience meeting. On the following Sabbath notice was given that on the next Saturday, November 23d, there would be a church meeting to consider the question of removing the resolution against secret orders out of the way as "a nuisance." An injunction by the pastor was proclaimed that the members should not talk about the matter before the coming church meeting, but keep mum, and the said deacon was entreated not to raise any opposition to the removal of the obnoxious resolution. Like any honest man he told the preacher that he should oppose them in any attempt to meddle with the rules of the church. Yesterday the writer of this article received a written request signed by two of the deacons and other members to be present at the coming church meeting. Despite the injunction of the preachers, to keep still on the pending issue, they themselves were out, it would seem, on an electioneering campaign, yesterday, and met some stubborn "Anti's" in the way. The report is now that said pastor is both a Freemason and Good Templar. We wait the issue praying God to defend that church against the lodge.

—Failing to forward the foregoing as I expected, and more facts turning up in quick succession, I resume my pen to give them to the readers of the Cynosure. The church meeting of the Preston Center Baptist church was to have been on Saturday, Nov. 23; but the time of the meeting for some cause was changed to 1 o'clock P. M. of Thursday, the 21st, two days earlier, with only sixteen hours between the notice and the meeting whose object was to strike off the rule against secret orders, which was by unanimous vote put on the church book years before! This change was, we presume, to forestall the opposition to the measure which the parties expected to encounter if they kept faith with their own previous appointment. They maintained that the rule was illegal because it was voted onto the book without a week's notice; whereas it was put there by more than a month's notice, I am duly informed. After proclaiming this a reason for rescinding the rule they appoint a meeting to remove the obnoxious resolution with less than a week's notice and then cut the time down by re-appointment to about sixteen hours! The result was that no opportunity was left for the anti-secret members, scattered as they were, the weather very unpleasant and the going extremely bad, to combine against the unrighteous measure. Of course they had it their own way. But the end is not yet. On the profession of converting men to Christ, those lodge-bound souls have converted the Preston Center church to the lodge—but not all. Thank God, there are members there who cannot fellowship the lodge. What shall we think of that class of ministers who profess to disapprove of Freemasonry and then do all in their power to get and keep it in the churches? This class of ministers are "legion." They plead for Baal. NATHAN CALLANDER.

—A series of meetings held with Prairie Grove Baptist church, Baker, Mo., place, has just closed (Nov. 26), which resulted in eighteen professing religion and eleven additions to Prairie Grove church, and in a great strengthening of the membership. This church is one of the protesting churches against the evils of secretism in this section. This church has had great trials and opposition on account of her resolution disfellowshiping the "teachings of Freemasonry;" but God has not left her desolate, neither has his grace failed to be sufficient for her. I have had about four years' experience in preaching to churches that are in their membership opposed to secrecy in the churches, and I am satisfied that churches will have more real prosperity and less trouble in discipline by taking a mild but unwavering stand against the secret orders than they will to ignore these things and cater to the teaching of worldly men upon the subject of secretism. A spiritual body influenced in its actions by worldly-mindedness will as assuredly conflict its best interests as suffering follows violation of law. So soon as I can get time I may write you something of our conflicts, persecutions and blessings here in this section of Missouri, growing out of opposition to popular evil. Let none be discouraged, for there is yet a God in Israel.

W. M. LOVE.

PRESBYTERIAN.

—The Presbytery of London held their regular meeting in Clarence St. Presbyterian church yesterday afternoon, Rev. John Sutherland being Moderator, and Rev. G. Cuthbertson as clerk.

A petition was read from the Wardville congregation, asking for the removal of the Rev. Mr. Donaldson, on the grounds of inability to pay his salary, and the feeling of dissatisfaction which existed among the congregation.

Messrs. Barclay (druggist) Young (farmer) and McLean (lumber merchant) appeared on behalf of the congregation, and urged the acceptance of the petition, [all understood to be Masons or "jacks."]

Rev. Mr. Donaldson explained that objection had been raised by the congregation because he had preached a sermon from the text "Peter stood and warmed himself." To this sermon several of the members of the congregation objected on the ground that it had bearings against the Masonic body.

Rev. D. Camelon objected to any references being made to Freemasonry, as the only question before the court was that of Mr. Donaldson's resignation.

The Moderator ruled that Mr. Donaldson had a right to speak upon the matter as it evidently lay at the bottom of the trouble between the pastor and his congregation.

Mr. Donaldson.—If the deputation could prove that there was anything wrong in the sermon he had mentioned, he would resign; but if they could not he would not grant their request. Mr. Cuthbertson (the clerk of presbytery) had told him that all this difficulty could he settled if he (Donaldson) would join the lodge. This he would not do, as it necessitated his denial of Christ, and virtually becoming a deist.

Rev. Mr. Munroe of Kintore, denied a statement which Mr. Donaldson had made some time ago, to the effect that he (Munroe) had promised to watch Donaldson, with the assistance of Mr. Barclay, who was to act as spy. He called on Mr. D. to prove his statement.

Rev. Mr. Donaldson stated that, although he had no witnesses to prove the allegation, he would not repeat the assertion. It had occurred in a dispute regarding Freemasonry.

Mr. Munroe was advised not to continue the discussion and the matter dropped.

Messrs. Camelon, Fraser (both Masons) Milloy and Gordon were then appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Donaldson and report to the presbytery.

The committee appointed to confer with Mr. Donaldson reported that that gentleman would resign should the deputation from Wardsville see fit to promise that the arrears in salary would be paid, and occupation of the manse permitted until the induction of a new minister. The deputation promised to submit the matter to the congregation.

The Presbytery then adjourned until the third Tuesday in December.—From the Daily Free Press, London, Ont.

THE HISTORY OF THIS CASE.

In 1875 the congregation of Wardsville, knowing Mr. Donaldson's Anti-masonic sentiments, called him to be their pastor on the expressed understanding that he would preach the Gospel and let Masonry alone in the pulpit. The Presbytery on p esenting the call declared it to be "a good and regular Gospel call." "Thereupon," Mr. D. said, "I have nothing to do with interposed conditions. These would render the call 'wicked, irregular and worldly.' I shall accept 'a good and regular Gospel call and shall preach a good and regular Gospel call to Wardville sinners,' and strike at the root of this and all other sins."

On the day of his induction, however, he was told by Jno. M. Munroe, then minister of New Glasgow, that if he interfered with Freemasonry he would be turned out of his church, etc., and that on the very day on which he should take public action against Freemasonry, on that day public action should be taken against him to drive him from his church. On the 29th of April, therefore, having gone to Ridgetown to give Elder J. L. Barlow his moral support, James McLean, a manager of the congregration, boldly supplants the pastor, calls all the office-bearers together and commences a series of irregular proceedinge with a view of ejecting their pastor.

These men had obtained Mr. Donaldson's services on false pretenses, promising payment of salary in advance. Instead of doing this they allowed his salary to fall behind $200 in 1876. Thus they attempted to defraud him out of this sum, on the ground that they had paid him all his salary this year from January, and did not owe him anything, whereas they had only been paying up arrears for last year. Now they say they could easily sustain a minister if they had a change. It is not inability to pay, but a conspiracy to ruin a man who will not violate his conscience to please men. It is sad to see lying and fraud combined in the deliberate and studied attempt to injure an innocent man, whose labors God has blessed in building up this weak cause during these last three or four years.

He is therefore called to go out, not knowing what shall befall him, leaving wife and children behind in the care of the Lord, and seek work for the Master in some other part of the vineyard.

His tastes and associations would lead him to seek work rather among the United Presbyterians of the United States than remaining in Canada in the fellowship of a church that will allow no discussion of this great evil, but prefer that their people be left in utter darkness on this great sin, which is slowly but steadily undermining the whole fabric of society, and filling the land with violence and blood.—COM.

UNITED BRETHREN IN CHRIST.

—Bishop Joseph adds his testimony to that of Elder Wardner of the Wesleyan church, and every other sincere worker in the cause of holiness. He says: "The work of the higher life is growing and producing happy results in bringing together the divided parties in the church. In some instances it drives Freemasonry clear out of the people."

—Rev. D. S. Caldwell was one of the preachers in the semi-annual meeting of the Holiness Association of Sandusky Conference, held in the United Brethren church at North Baltimore, Ohio, Nov. 12.

—The Telescope gathers from the church almanac for 1879 the following statistical facts: We have 45 conferences and one mission district; members, 152,231—an increase of 3,468; preachers, 2,152; salary of preachers, $346,415.51—an increase of $11,342.63; collected for ministerial aid, $2,449.93; collected for missions by the conferences, $33,886.96—increase, $238.38; for superintendency, $5,677; church erection, $343.37; local Sabbath-school work, $39,379.36; for general Sabbath-school fund, $1,325.81; church-building and expenses, $186,983.77—less than last year, $20,923.52; for educational fund, $10,254.92; Biblical Seminary, $3,255.37; number of meeting houses, 2,093—increase, 90; parsonages, 308; Sabbath-schools,

3,060—increase, 163; children in Sabbath-schools, 153,159; officers and teachers, 24,158—increase in Sabbath-school officers and scholars, 16,371. Total collection of money, $618,616.21.

There is an increase over the statistics of last year in all the financial showings except church building and educational funds, and a decrease of a few dollars in superindency. The decrease in church building is heavy, causing a decrease in the totals.

ADVENT.

—Rev. A. A. Phelps, who attended the Worcester Convention and acted on the committee on resolutions and address, is editor of the Bible Banner, of Philadelphia, a paper of earnest religious spirit. He is this month making an evangelical tour in Vermont.

—At Hardwick, Vermont, the Advent church, though few in numbers is strong in its anti-lodge faith.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL.

—The address of Rev. Woodruff Post is to be hereafter at Gaines, Tioga county, Pennsylvania. The faith and courage of this good brother are superior to his severe trials and the persecutions of the lodge. His once fine property is foreclosed and gone, yet he is "still standing the storm," and praying for better days.

—A member of the M. E. church, Covington, Kentucky, made a proposition to the Sabbath school to give a Bagster Bible to every scholar who should be present every Sabbath in the year, rain or shine; and a Teacher's Bible to every scholar who should be present every Sabbath save three; and a book to every scholar who should attend every Sabbath save six. At the end of the year his proffer cost him nearly $2,000. Those who failed from any cause to be present every Sabbath could make up for their absence by bringing new scholars.

WESLEYAN.

—Rev. L. N. Stratton visited Maplewood near Boston recently, and passed the Sabbath with the Congregational Methodists, brethren who awhile since left the M. E. church on account of Masonic developments. Bro. S. writes in the Wesleyan:

"The meetings held by these brethren in "their own hired hall" have a history, which in full, it would not be best to give. Most of them were once members of the Methodist Episcopal church. The Episcopal power was keenly felt by them in a serious church trial; and so far as they know, probably a more deeply hidden power, which bind men to each others' help when pressed to an extremity, and which at such a time, will be seized upon with avidity. This monarchical power in a free government like this, was too near Plymouth Rock or Bunker Hill monument, or heaven to stand with them, and they banded themselves together as the Methodist Congregational society, of Maplewood. Their future course is not fully determined upon. It was a pleasure to attend their Sabbath school in the forenoon. One layman in the Bible-class, had a well 'thumbed' Greek English Bible, and another, a Greek English lexicon and concordance. They delve to the bottom of the subjects into which the lesson leads them. In the afternoon one of three leading laymen usually preaches a discourse unto the people. These three laymen are all the preacher they have, and with these two day time services and a Sabbath evening prayer and conference meeting, they seem to be doing well."

GENERAL.

—The sum of $5,640,000 was voluntarily subscribed last year by the Scotch Presbyterian churches.

—Mr. Spurgeon will not marry a person of his congregation to one who is not a professor of religion.

—There are about 400,000 persons connected with the Christian churches in India, China and Japan, besides 200,000 children receiving a Christian education.

—The foundation of the John Knox Memorial Institute, which is to be a high school for primary and secondary education, was recently laid at Haddington, the birthplace of the great Scotch reformer.

—As an indication of the rapidity with which Christianity is making its way in Japan, it is stated that one of the leading printing offices in Tokio has begun the publication of a paper in the interest of the Christian religion as a matter of enterprise. It is solely a native undertaking, none of the missionaries having anything to do with it.

—A Welsh speaker at a recent meeting of the British and Foreign Bible Society declared that there is not a single infidel book in the Welsh language. He said: "Wales is pre-eminently the land of one book. We owe it to the influence of the Bible that we have not a single infidel book in our language, and that popery has failed hitherto to make any progress among the pure Welsh, because they read and know their Bible too well."

MASONIC RELIGIONS.

—Simon Grant has bought a tract of land on the Northern Pacific railroad for the purpose of starting a community. He is a wealthy Scotchman, and will devote his entire fortune to the enterprise, which he has been planning many years; but he intends to be the high priest of the religion—said to be a strange worship of the sun—which is the basis of the movement. Thus far he has only a score or so of followers. He has chosen a place in what is fast becoming a thickly settled farming region, and is confident of success.
